Roosevelt Outlines Plan for Lending Britain Munitions

U. S. Would Take Over British Orders in This Country, President Says--- Will Give Plan to Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt outlined today a possible new plan which he said would aid Britain and at the same time strengthen American defenses—a plan which would involve leasing or mortgaging war equipment to the British.

The President told a press conference that he expected to submit such a plan or a similar one to the new Congress meeting on January 3.

Under it, he asserted, the United States might take over future British orders for armaments in this country, then lease or mortgage those products to Britain on their completion.

Then, after the war ended, Britain would return the war supplies if they were in good shape, or replace them.

Asked whether the program which he outlined in a lengthy press conference would be more likely to involve the United States in Europe's conflict, Mr. Roosevelt replied with a definite negative. He said the United States now was doing all it can to see that Britain gets vital supplies and that the new program would merely be a continuation of that procedure, in a different form.

The President compared the prospective arrangement, which he said still is under study from a legal standpoint, with the aid a person would extend if his neighbor's home caught fire.

If the person had a hose that could be brought into play, Mr. Roosevelt declared he would connect it to his neighbor's hydrant and help put out the fire. He would not say first that the hose cost $15 and he wanted payment for it.

If, after the fire was out, the hose was still in good shape, it would be returned with thanks.

But if it were smashed or received holes in it during the fire, the President continued, the neighbor would be reminded that it could not be used and would offer to replace it.

Leaving Dollar Mark Out.

The President said he was attempting to leave the dollar mark out of efforts to aid the British.

Whether title to planes, guns and ships which might be sent to Britain under the contemplated program would remain with this country or be vested with the British, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, is a legalistic problem.

He indicated that was a detail and merely incidental to the main desire to assure Britain of a continuation of the flow of American goods for conducting war across the Atlantic.

The whole matter would be handled, the President made it clear, on the basis that it is necessary to assist the British in their war as a means of protecting this country.

On the question of speeding up domestic production of arms, Mr. Roosevelt said that British orders were a good means of obtaining the necessary expansion.

He said that there had been no need indicated yet for the Government to exercise its authority to take over plants which are falling behind on production, but that two or three cases were being watched.

While legislation will be necessary, and perhaps several different measures, along with appropriations, the President said that the latest phase of the program to give England all aid short of war did not involve amendment or repeal of the neutrality act.

Has Read a Lot of Nonsense.

In the present world situation, Mr. Roosevelt said, there is, of course, absolutely no doubt in the minds of an overwhelming number of Americans that the best immediate defense of the United States is the assurance of success of Great Britain in defending herself.

Declaring he had read a lot of nonsense recently about such things as financial aid to the British, he said that within the memory of history no major war ever had been won or lost through a lack of money.

He declared that stories and speeches had been going back to the idea that money in the bank was necessary to wi nthis particular war.

There are many ways of doing the same thing, the President asserted, but some people are using a banal type of thinking on the method.

Knox Announces Contracts For 40 More Destroyers

Mark S. Watson reports the army may soon ask Congress for $2,000,000,000 for new purchases.
—Story on Page 9

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—Contracts have been let for forty more destroyers than the navy originally contemplated for its two-ocean fleet, Secretary Knox announced today, swelling the total of such vessels planned to 365.

Contracts for constructing the forty ships and for expansion of facilities to build them totaled $261,684,875.

The navy originally intended to build 325 destroyers. The expansion, officials said, was made possible by utilization of tonnages already authorized by Congress but initially ear-marked for other categories of fighting ships. Details of the tonnage transfers were not disclosed.

No Mention Of British Aid

Although no mention of further aid to Britain was made in Knox's announcement, it was recalled that the British repeatedly have stressed their need for more destroyers in recent discussions of aid from the United States.

Such vessels needed by the British to convoy merchant ships carrying food and munitions range from fifty to 400. The United States already has transferred fifty destroyers to Britain.

Contracts for seven destroyers and two cruisers were transferred from their originally designated builders, Knox said, in order to expedite the work by letting each contractor build duplicate types as far as possible.

Cost Of Destroyers

As a result of that shuffling and the new awards, the secretary said contracts for thirty-seven destroyers were placed with five private shipbuilding concerns and ten destroyers will be built at four navy yards.

Knox placed the estimated cost of the forty additional destroyers at $253,384,875 and said that new facilities required at the private yards to build them would cost an estimated $8,300,000.

New Contract Awards

The new contract awards follow:

Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy, Mass., four destroyers and $800,000 of new facilities.

Bethlehem Steel Company, Staten Island, N. Y., three destroyers and $700,000 in additional facilities.

Bethlehem Steel Company, San Francisco, seven destroyers and $1,500,000 of expanded facilities.

Bethlehem Steel Company, San Pedro, Cal., six destroyers and $1,250,000 of new facilities.

Bath Iron Works, Bath, Maine, six destroyers and $400,000 of new facilities.

Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, Kearny, N. J., six destroyers and $2,250,000 of additional facilities.

Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Company, Seattle, Wash., five destroyers and $1,400,000 of additional facilities.

Destroyers awarded to Government navy yards follow: Boston, four; Philadelphia, two; Norfolk, Va., two, and Charleston, S. C., two.

Contract Transfers

Contracts for two cruisers were transferred from the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company to the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden, N. J.

The seven destroyer contracts canceled had been awarded to the Bethlehem Steel Company's Staten Island, San Francisco and San Pedro plants.

The navy also awarded two contracts totaling $36,250,455 for airplanes and spare parts. They went to the Grumann Aircraft Engineering Corporation of Bethpage, Long Island, N. Y. One was for $30,275,805 for planes and parts and the other, amounting to $5,974,650 for airplanes alone.

The navy did not specify the number of planes involved nor delivery dates.

Morgenthau Bares Report By Phillips

Tells House Group Johnson Act Must Be Modified Before Credit Can Be Given

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP). — Secretary Morgenthau told a House Appropriations subcommittee today that Sir Frederick Phillips, Undersecretary of the British Treasury, had informed him that England could make no more commitments for purchase of war materials in the U. S. unless financial aid were extended.

Committee members who disclosed this testimony, given behind closed doors, added that the Secretary had repeated his statement that he believed that the U. S. could not extend loans or credits unless Congress modified or repealed the Johnson act forbidding loans to debtor nations.

He left his hearers with the impression that whether to make such revision was entirely up to Congress.

Morgenthau was reported to have made a factual analysis of Britain's need for aid from the U. S. without, however, making any recommendations.

[British commitments already made in this country are estimated at $2,500,000,000. Britain is believed to have additional resources of perhaps as much as $1,500,000,000, but this also is believed already to have been allocated in the sense that plans have been made for its expenditure.]

Hull Asks Defense Speed

Secretary Hull, meanwhile, said that on the basis of full information on foreign developments, including the British situation, he was urging all possible speed in defense production.

He told reporters that he was relaying the essential facts about international conditions to the defense commissioners and other officials without attempting to enter into technical production questions.

The Secretary was asked about a report that he had sent word to the National Assn. of Manufacturers that Britain needed immediate additional aid from the U. S. to hold out more than 90 days.

He replied that he would not undertake to confirm that report.

He was said in other quarters, however, to have told Federal officials that Britain probably would face a serious crisis next spring unless the U. S. considerably increased delivery schedules of war supplies.

It was learned that the shipping situation is being examined to determine whether additional merchant ships might be made available for rushing supplies.

The fact that Britain had made a formal request for financial aid was disclosed last night by an authoritative source.

Sen. Austin (Vt.), acting Republican leader, today advocated a readjustment of government contracts to finance a six-day week for defense industries.

Austin said it seemed obvious that industries would have to work longer than the prevailing 40-hour week if they were to overcome certain "bottlenecks" hampering defense production.

British Hope to Resume World War Debt Talks

Note Defaulting on Dec. 15 Payment Made Public

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP).—The State Department today made public a note from the British government saying it could not pay the war debt installment totaling $127,670,765.05 due Dec. 15. The note, signed by Neville Butler, the British Charge d'Affaires, once more reiterated, however, that the British government "will be winning to reopen discussions on the subject whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that a satisfactory result might be reached."

The debt installment due from Great Britain Dec. 15 comprised $42,000,000 in principal, $71,767,500 in semi-annual interest, $4,182,500 in accrued interest and $9,720,765.05 in installment of the annuity due on account of the moratorium agreement of 1932. The State Department announced yesterday that six other nations were in default, Hungary alone making a token payment.

Stark Tells U. S. Strength Alone Assures Peace

Nation Must Absorb Fact, He Warns Pan-American Aviation Day Dinner

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP).—Admiral H. R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, warned the nation tonight that it must "absorb the fact and get it ingrained in our national marrow that if we want peace we must be stronger than those who want war." He addressed a dinner celebrating Pan-American Aviation Day.

Stressing the part aviation plays in naval operations, he declared that the Navy's air corps "is indispensable to the fleet; and in efficiency, I am proud to state, it is not surpassed by any other naval aviation in the world."

Then, reviewing what he described as a "few thoughts which I have often expressed during the last year," Admiral Stark warned:

"We must absorb the fact and get it ingrained in our national marrow that if we want peace we must be stronger than those who want war.

"Potential strength and wishful thinking are not enough.

"We must translate our potential strength into immediate readiness, and once attained—we must stay ready.

"The value of time and timing is more important than ever before.

"Getting ready and keeping ready is a job that devolves upon every citizen of the land."

Admiral Stark discussed briefly the Navy's expanding air-training program in which he said two undertakings "are proceeding almost simultaneously—the procurement of men and the procurement of training planes."

He said that obviously the number of combat planes at the present "does not loom large in our figures of aircraft strength," because "we cannot utilize combatant planes until we have trained men to fly them; but the combat types are proceeding apace—and all phases of the expansion are being synchronized."

Air Lines Get Collier Trophy

The Collier Trophy for the greatest achievement in aviation in the United States during the last year was presented by President Roosevelt today to the commercial air lines serving the country.

The trophy, donated annually since 1911 by "Collier's Magazine," was awarded by the National Aeronautic Association for the record established by the air lines for safe travel.

Special recognition was given to Dr. Walter M. Boothby and Dr. William Randolph Lovelace, 2d, of the Mayo Foundation for Medical Research and Education, and to Capt. Harry C. Armstrong, of the Army Medical Corps at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. The three physicians analyzed "pilot error" resulting at high altitudes from lack of oxygen and developed oxygen masks to correct the condition.

Air-line presidents, officials of the National Aeronautic Association and men prominent in Federal aviation activities, as well as William Chanery, of "Collier's Magazine," were present at the ceremony in Mr. Roosevelt's office.

This is the thirty-seventh anniversary of the first flight by a heavier-than-air motor-driven aircraft by the Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

Planes Salute Wright Memorial

MANTEO, N. C., Dec. 17 (AP).—Army, Marine Corps and Coast Guard airplanes dipped their wings in salute today as they roared over the slender pylon atop wind-swept Kill Devil Hill, site of the first sustained flight of heavier-than-air craft thirty-seven years ago.

Capt. W. J. Tate, of Manteo, who let rooms to Wilbur and Orville Wright while they experimented with a flying ship, told visitors at an anniversary observance that Dec. 17, 1903, was "just such a day as this—clear and cold" when the Dayton, Ohio bicycle makers' motor-driven contraption fluttered aloft and soared for 120 feet.

Brazilian Objects to Fete Marking Wrights' Flight.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—While Pan American Aviation Day was being observed in the United States today in commemoration of the flight of the Wright Brothers at Kitty Hawk on December 17, 1903, the president of the Brazilian Air Club, Col. Ivo Berges, disclosed that he had urged all civilian aviation clubs in Brazil to show their disapproval by keeping their planes grounded all day.

Berges was quoted in the Brazilian press as saying the selection of the day was "in detriment to the glory of Santos-Dumont." The Government's Press and Propaganda Department presented a preview of a movie calling Santos-Dumont the father of aviation.

Alberto Santos-Dumont, Brazilian aeronaut, who died in 1932 at the age of 59, made his first balloon ascent in Paris in 1897, but it was not until 1905, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica that he turned his inventive talents to heavier-than-air machines, and in 1906 built one.

BRITISH ARMY OPENS ASSAULT ON BARDIA

Three Forts in Libya Fall as Italian Port Is Hard Pressed by Mechanized Units, Backed by Infantry.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Reuters, a British news agency, reported tonight that British mechanized units had begun an attack on Bardia, Italian base fifteen miles inside Libya, and that severe fighting was in progress.

The agency reported that British mechanized units were carrying out a formidable attack on the perimeter of Bardia's defenses, with advanced forces of infantry following up and truckloads of supplies and ammunitions bringing up the rear.

CAIRO, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—British armed forces were within striking distance of the important Libyan port of Bardia today after capturing Fort Capuzzo, which gave them a foothold on Italian colonial soil for the first time since the war began.

With the fall of Fort Capuzzo, the British announced recapture of Salum, last Italian stronghold on Egyptian soil.

Fort Capuzzo's capitulation left the British in control of a vital highway terminus twelve miles due south of Bardia and apparently in position for an attempt to outflank that base.

Bardia holds the key to the coastal road leading westward to the big Italian base at Tobruk, approximately seventy miles inside the Libyan border and the springboard from which Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's armies launched their drive into Egypt last September.

The British Navy and air force were reported to be keeping Bardia under heavy bombardment, apparently to soften Italian resistance to attack on the land side.

Little Opposition at Sea.

Military quarters here held that there was little obvious opposition to the British Navy's control of the entire Libyan coast from the Egyptian border to Tripoli, 700 miles to the west.

The communique announcing the fall of Fort Capuzzo and Salum gave no details of the operations except to say a number of Italian aircraft had been seized at Salum.

Military men here pointed out that the capture of Salum, on the coast, about five miles from the Libyan border, would enable the British to move troops and supplies to the front by sea, thereby eliminating a long haul across the desert.

These informants believed it unlikely that lengthening lines of communication would prove enough of an obstacle to prevent Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East commander, from continuing his westward drive.

Sharp Fighting Reported

Reports from the front indicated sharp fighting had preceded the fall of Salum and Fort Capuzzo, which is about three miles inside the Libyan frontier. The Italians, intrenched strongly at both points, were said to have resisted fiercely before they were overwhelmed by British mechanized forces and infantry.

While the battle surged around these two key points, British armored units were reported to have made a series of swift thrusts into the surrounding territory, harassing Italian lines of communication.

The fact that the British reported capturing a number of grounded Italian aircraft at Salum was taken here as an indication that Marshal Graziani's forces were disorganized badly under steady pounding during the last week.

There was no official mention of the capture of additional Italian prisoners to swell the total of about 30,000 the British estimated they had taken from the outset of their offensive through the fall of Sidi Barrani.

Although the Italians were reported to have had about 250,000 men ready for action in Libya, the British believe not more than 100,000 have been involved directly in the current fighting.

British Capture 3 Libyan Forts, Menace Strongly Held Bardia

Mechanized Units Reported Encircling Graziani's Coastal Base While Fleet and R. A. F. Pound It; English Drive Shows No Sign of Flagging

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Dec. 17.—Great Britain's army in North Africa reported today the capture of three more Italian frontier forts and rolled on toward the important Fascist base of Bardia in the counter-invasion of Italian Libya.

[Reuters, British news agency, reported that British mechanized units were attacking Bardia and that heavy fighting was raging about the town.]

The offensive, far from slackening, as had been expected in some quarters with the ejection from Egypt of the last invading Italians, appeared actually to be gathering power. The British command declared "pressure on the enemy is steadily increasing as new forces arrive."

The latest Italian outposts to fall, a communique said, were the forts of Musaid, Sidi Omar and Shefferzen. Their occupation, along with the previously reported seizure of Fort Capuzzo, put the British in control of a substantial segment of the eastern Libyan border area.

The drive upon coastal Bardia—which had been reported under bombardment by the British Mediterranean Fleet and Royal Air Force in an effort to reduce its defenses—threatened an important Fascist line of communication, for that town commands the coastal road westward to Tobruk, the strongest Italian military center in Libya. British sources said they were uncertain whether the Italian communication line had been wholly cut as yet.

An Associated Press correspondent with the British in the field reported that the Italians were understood to have large forces in Bardia, including many survivors of the retreat from Egypt, and apparently were preparing to make a major fight there.

British armored forces sped over the desert in a maneuver to encircle the town, and advanced units reported that considerable numbers of Italian trucks, tractors and tanks had been destroyed by dive bombers.

British communiques during the day made no mention of the number of Italian prisoners now in hand, but The Associated Press correspondent said a recapitulation indicated that, of the five Fascist divisions which invaded Egypt, only one got out entire. Two appeared wholly shattered. Another, he said, withdrew many of its men, but lost most of its equipment. Italian divisions are understood to number as many as 14,000 men.

The British air command reported a continuing bombing campaign against Fascist positions, particularly at Bardia. There, said a Royal Air Force communique, more than a dozen tons of bombs struck the barracks, military buildings generally and the railways, and a train of fires was laid.

Tobruk, some seventy miles within Libya, also was attacked, the British added, and in half a dozen other and less important bases "much damage" was caused.

In a single offensive patrol eleven Italian planes were declared shot down, aside from the capture of fifteen Italian craft reported by the British in the seizure of the frontier Egyptian post of Sollum.

Australian troops were said to have captured Italian trucks and a gun in a moonlit battle last night.

A communique reported renewed offensive patroling "on a considerable scale" on the Kenya frontier in East Africa.

Rome Claims Hit on Warship.

ROME, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Italian torpedo-launching planes hit a 6,000-ton British cruiser with two torpedoes while the warship was shelling Bardia, on the Libyan coast, the Italian High Command reported today.

The exact effect of the claimed hits was not given.

The communique declared that fighting in north Africa was continuing "with ferocity no less than on previous days" and credited the Italian Air Force with striking hard blows at British advance forces in an effort to help the Italian troops.

"British Propaganda"

Rome, Dec. 17 (AP)—Rumors of a smashing Italian victory over the British in Egypt ran wildly through Rome tonight until the press and radio quashed them with the characterization: "British propaganda."

The Italians were lifted from the blues by the rumors which said 170,000 Britons were captured and hundreds of tanks and other equipment seized in a smashing counter-offensive.

Authoritative papers cautioned against such reports, which were described as subtle means of raising enthusiasm in order to dash it more thoroughly later.

'Electric Whiskers' Exhorts Italians

By EDWARD KENNEDY, Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

With The British Forces At Salum, Egypt, Dec. 16 (Delayed)—British armored units were sweeping over the desert west of Bardia today in an attempt to encircle that important Italian base in Libya following the capture of Salum and Fort Capuzzo.

The last remnants of the Italian army have been driven from Egyptian soil. Under heavy British fire the Italians abandoned Salum, seized early in their drive into Egypt, and retired across the frontier into Libya, five miles to the west.

Move Across Border

British troops promptly occupied this westernmost Egyptian port. Then they continued to carry the fight to the Italians, moving across the border to seize Fort Capuzzo, south of Bardia.

The Italians are reported to have large forces at Bardia, on the coast, fifteen miles from the border, including troops which have retreated from Egypt, and apparently are striving to make a stand there.

In the opinion of British officers how long they can hold out will depend largely on whether Italian troops could be rallied after the Egyptian rout.

Bardia already has been bombed heavily from the sea and air. British armored units west of the town reported that they had destroyed Italian trucks, tractors and tanks, but that it was uncertain yet whether they had wholly cut off communications between Bardia and Tobruk, farther west.

These armored units were subjected to dive-bombing attacks by Italian planes.

Italian General Berdi is in command at Bardia and General Bergonzoli, whom the British have dubbed "General Electric Whiskers," also was reported there, exhorting the Fascist troops. Bergonzoli is said to be popular with his men and is known for his ability to rouse them with stirring words.

In their advance toward Libya, British columns moved along a splendid road the Italians built from the Libyan frontier to Sidi Barrani during their three months of occupation.

The "Victory Way"

The Italians named it Via Vittoria—Victory Way—and over it they had hoped to march into all of Egypt. They erected along it several monuments to Mussolini and the triumph of their occupation.

A marker at Sidi Barrani, where the new road joins the road to Alexandria, bears the inscription: "Despite sand and winds and the insidiousness of the enemy, this road linking the sands of Egypt with those of Libya has been constructed."

No Top Surfacing

The road is straight and wide and has an excellent bed of crushed stones, but the Italains did not get around to the top surfacing. With a top surface it probably would be the best highway ever constructed over any desert—a truly Roman road.

The armored brigade which intercepted the Catanzaro division here came across the desert on the escarpment to the south, then cut northward to Buqbuq on the coast.

Thought Desert Was Barrier

It encountered considerable opposition from Italian outposts on the way, but reduced them and got here in two days.

Italian military maps of Egypt, found here charted the topography only ten miles inland from the coast. Apparently the Fascists did not consider the more difficult inland desert as a potential battlefield, which may explain their surprise when the British came from there.

In almost every encounter of the offensive up to now the British were outnumbered at least four to one, British officers said.

But in no cose, the same men said, have the Italians successfully resisted the British. Of the five divisions which invaded Egypt, it appears now that only one got out complete, while another got many of its men out but lost most of its material, British officers said.

Completely shattered and with most members captured were two Libyan divisions, most of the Black Shirts in the Sidi Barrani region, the Cantanzaro division and the crack Maletti group, all at Nibeiwa—in [illegible] perhaps an army of 40,000 [illegible] equipment. The deserted [illegible] indicated the troops [illegible]

In [illegible] jewelry, razors, blankets and letters were left behind, strewn over dugouts and in tents. The desert is littered with abandoned sun helmets, knapsacks and rifles.

Prisoner-Line Mile Long

As we approached Buqbuq three days ago we saw an odd dust cloud in the distance, brightened by rays of the desert sun and moving slowly nearer.

On passing the crest of a hill we saw what was raising the dust—the tramping feet of two columns of men well over a mile long. They were Italian prisoners, about half of the 14,000 taken at Buqbuq, and they were being marched to Sidi Barrani, thirty miles away, for embarkation.

They were mainly members of Gen. Giuseppe Amico's Catanzaro division of the regular Italian Army, intercepted by a British armored unit.

Didn't Expect Offensive

"When we left Libya we didn't dream that any English offensive was coming," an officer told me. "Then we heard there was action, but we thought the front was still forty miles away. Imagine our surprise when the enemy tanks suddenly charged at us."

At Buqbuq, a water hole near the sea which the Italians had made their main food-distributing center for the troops in Egypt, we saw the rest of them encamped around elaborate wells. A water-storage plant had been constructed there in the past three months.

Australian Unit Eager to Open Bardia Attack

Mechanized Troops Rush to Front; Three Reporters Take 20 Italians Prisoner

By Edward Kennedy

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN LIBYA, Dec. 17 (AP).—Fresh Australian troops, charging to get into battle with the Italians, pressed on toward the Libyan base of Bardia today at such a pace that one of their commanders complained: "We can't hold them back."

The Australians form a unit with the British command which followed up the occupation of Solum by hurrying up reinforcements for the advance on Bardia, fifteen miles inside the border of Italian Libya.

"They want to show they can do what their fathers did in the last war," said the Australians' chief.

Completely mechanized, the men from "down under" moved directly from camp to the battlefront. The mechanized units already were operating through the Libyan desert west of Bardia, while others were active to the south, and new infantrymen pushed toward Bardia from the east, in an apparent encircling move against the Italian stronghold.

The Australian vanguard overnight tackled one Italian column, capturing transports and guns.

Italians Quit Solum in Haste

Most of the Italians already left Solum in the direction of Bardia so swiftly that they could not be intercepted. The mop-up squads at Solum found fifteen Italian planes on the ground so badly damaged by British bombs that the Fascisti had not tried to salvage them. The Italians abandoned lower Solum Sunday morning, dynamiting the hairpin-curved road that leads to the upper town.

Sunday night British bombers struck at both upper Solum and Bardia with a series of terrific raids, which this correspondent watched from a promontory along the coast. One squadron after another of British planes swooped to the attack and the resultant explosions and fires as their bombs hit the targets could be observed.

Italian anti-aircraft fire also lit the sky, interspersed with occasional "flaming onions"—great rainbow-hued, fiery projectiles, eight of them chained together and ascending slowly, snaking in the wind. This weapon, of German origin, is designed to tangle about the planes, but so far none in this sector has been brought down by it.

The planes in their turn cast out parachute flares, which gleamed over the desert and sea like great guiding stars.

Two planes crashed down in flames.

British mastery of the air was so overwhelming that there was scarcely a moment of the day or night when a British plane could not be seen or heard, while this writer saw only three Italian craft in the same twenty-four-hour period. It is a common sight at British air fields dotting the desert to see a bomber squadron come in for fuel and bombs, then take off again as soon as the pilots have eaten.

On Saturday night Italian fliers attempted to destroy a big water supply they had established at Bagbag, despite the fact that thousands of Italian prisoners were camped next to it. They missed both water and prisoners by about the same margin—fifty yards.

The staggering task of moving the Italian "army" of 40,000 or more prisoners out of the desert continues. In some cases prisoners are loaded onto captured trucks and drive them to the railroad themselves.

There is only one recorded case of an Italian prisoner trying to escape. A young officer jumped from a train but was recaptured shortly afterward. The round-up of stray Italian soldiers continues, in many cases at their own request.

As a party of newspaper correspondents was breaking camp where this correspondent had spent the night outside Bagbag, three Libyans, one with an eye shot out, appeared and asked us for three things—bread, water, and to be taken prisoner.

Three correspondents attached to the Australian forces and armed with one unloaded rifle soon rounded up and delivered to the military twenty prisoners.

In the past day or two thousands of Italian prisoners could be seen marching to Sidi Barrani along a Roman road that they themselves built and named Via Vittoria—Victory Way. Their dejected columns passed monuments erected to Premier Mussolini and inscribed with such of his maxims as:

"Those who stand still are lost."

These Italians had hoped to march into the valley of the Nile and on to Suez. Instead, the British are using the broad Italian road in their drive against Bardia while the Italians under British guard are using it to head for prison ships bound for internment camps.

Terrain Discourages Escape

Any temptation to escape is discouraged by the terrain. Off the road lie the trackless desert on one side and the sea on the other. Few guards are necessary.

The prisoners seen were mostly from General Amicos Catanzaro's division of the regular Italian Army, which was surprised and overwhelmed by the British in a sweep to Bagbag, a coastal waterhole.

"When we left Libya we did not dream any English offensive was coming," a captured Italian officer asserted. "Then we heard there was action, but we thought the front was still forty miles away. Imagine our surprise when enemy tanks suddenly charged us!"

An order of the day of General Nerdi, now commanding Bardia, was found at Bagbag. It advised Italian troops:

"Surprise is always master of the battlefield."

Most of the men rounded up at Bagbag were in their 30's and 40's, and their chief concern was to get word of their safety back to their families. A few of the younger men, who had been schooled to the "invincibility" of the Italian Army, were stunned by the collapse of the campaign in Egypt.

50,000 Troops Believed Ready To Leave For Africa And Albania

Large Quantities Of Reich Arms Supplies Are Declared Arriving

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 17—Winston Burdett, the Columbia Broadcasting Company's correspondent in Belgrade, reported in a broadcast from there tonight that more than 50,000 German troops have moved quietly into Italy, presumably to embark for Libya and Albania.

Some of the troops were expected to perform "police duties" in Italy in exchange for Italian labor in German factories, he said.

The German movement southward, according to Burdett's sources, began immediately after the resignation December 6 of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Italian chief of staff.

Conferences were held throughthe day, a lively one for the Government, with decisions regarded as important for France's future, and more meetings were expected to last into the night.

Abetz, Adolf Hitler's representative in Paris, left Vichy tonight to return there.

Besides a morning conference with Petain, which Laval later joined, Abetz lunched with Gen. Charles Huntziger, War Minister; Admiral Jean Darlan, Navy Minister, and Paul Baudouin, Secretary of State. Later he visited Laval at his home, Chateau Chateldon, twenty miles from Vichy, and again conferred and dined with Petain.

At German's Request.

BERNE, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—At the behest of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's representative, German Ambassador Otto Abetz, Pierre Laval reappeared suddenly in Vichy today for a lunchtable talk with Abetz and Chief of State Philippe Petain.

It was the first time the ousted Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister had been seen in Vichy since he was expelled from the French Cabinet Friday night and led away under guard.

His reappearance increased the anxiety of many veteran French officials whose usual tranquillity in the face of Government upheavals had been upset by Abetz's own dramatic arrival yesterday with a picked Nazi guard and a German delegation.

Total German occupation of France, some observers said, may be foreshadowed in the Abetz visit—the first to Vichy of any ranking Nazi official since the armistice.

Rumors spread that the Germans want Laval, once the old Marshal's own choice as his successor, back in his job, but reports reaching diplomatic quarters here said it was more likely that Abetz merely wished to hear Laval's side of the story before making any report to Hitler.

Petain Reported Calm.

Petain, according to his aids and those who saw him, remained cool in his talks with Germany's Ambassador.

The chief of Petain's personal office drove out of Vichy early this morning and returned just before noon with Laval seated beside him in an automobile.

As the Petain-Abetz conversation shifted from the chief of state's office to a private dining room in the Hotel du Parc, with Laval as a third conferee, it was reported that a Petain-Hitler meeting might follow if Der Fuehrer's representative and Petain agreed on a future policy of French German collaboration.

If they don't—according to Vichy rumors—anything might happen.

DEC 18 1940

VICHY, Dec. 17 (A.P.).—Pierre Laval, the Vichy government's ousted Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, came back into the picture today as a conferee with Chief of State Marshal Petain and the German Ambassador, Otto Abetz.

[Reports in Berne said that Laval was permitted to return to Vichy at Abetz's request for who informants here said was the man Abetz wanted to talk to most. He was not in Vichy, however, but in North Africa, and he showed every intention of remaining there.

Gen. Weygand, former Allied Generalissimo and now commander of French forces in North Africa, was said to be following Vichy events closely. But if he was in constant touch with Marshall Petain, as diplomatic reports said, there was little external sign of it at Vichy.

Many observers have been comparing Gen. Weygand's present position in North Africa with that of Italy's position of potential menace when France was fighting for her life in Flanders.

The tables, they said, now are turned. Italy's troops are hard-pressed by Greek forces in Albania and by the British along the Egyptian-Libyan border. At Italy's back in Africa stands Gen. Weygand with a strong, well-armed force of French colonial troops untouched by the war.

Military and diplomatic observers, however, considered it unlikely that Gen. Weygand intends to do more than hold tight in France's North African possessions for the present—particularly so long as Marshal Petain rules in Vichy.

Nonetheless, diplomatic reports indicated the French General looms large among the reasons why Berlin may think twice before occupying the rest of France, or forcing Marshal Petain to step down from the post of Chief of State.

Abetz and Petain Talk.

VICHY, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Otto Abetz, German Ambassador to France, talked with Chief of State Philippe Petain for more than an hour and a half today in the first of a series of conferences regarded as important for the future of France.

Strict censorship was placed on details of arrivals at Sevigny Pavillion, Marshal Petain's residence, shortly before 1 P. M.

Abetz was escorted from his hotel to Marshal Petain's residence by French Army motorcyclists, followed by a touring car full of German officers.

The German Ambassador's guard of uniformed German soldiers armed with automatic rifles, which accompanied him to his hotel last night when he reached Vichy, did not go with him today.

Silent, scattered groups of French saw him leave the hotel and watched as his escort passed through the streets.

Abetz left the residence at 1:30 P. M. and went directly to his quarters at the Majestic Hotel. Observers said that Petain left by another door. It was believed he would go to the Parc Hotel, where French guards already had been posted.

French Policy Main Issue.

BERLIN, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Authorized Nazis declared today that Germany's interest in changes in the French government at Vichy centers on the question "does France intend to continue advancing the European policy which recognize the principle of German victory or not."

These persons said Germany was not interested in who supplanted Foreign Minister Pierre Laval, "but whether any change in French policy has taken place."

Until Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's ambassador to Paris, reports from Vichy no information will be divulged concerning Germany's official attitude toward the French upheaval, they said.

"We are continuing our efforts to fathom the motives which led the French Government while still in a state of war supplanted by an armistice with us, to bring about a change in that post which for the purposes of French-German relations is the most important in the French Cabinet, namely that of Foreign Minister."

When asked whether the French Chief of State, Marshal Philippe Petain, in his recent message to Hitler, has explained the motives behind Pierre-Etienne Flandin's appointment to succeed Laval, these informants said:

"Apparently not."

No Concrete Agreement.

They further intimated that since the meeting between Hitler and Petain at Tours—where, it was said, mere principles had been discussed—there had been no concrete agreement on details of relations between Vichy and Berlin.

"German interest in Vichy developments is naturally extraordinarily great," they added.

Recapitulating French-German relations since the defeat of France—which they described as the most complete in modern history—they said Germany wanted a new Europe in which France would have an appropriate place provided only that she undertook certain corrections in her historic attitude, notably that of enmity toward Germany.

France, they said, apparently was animated by the same desire; both countries wanted a new Europe of French-German co-operation.

BERN REPORTS ABETZ TOOK LAVAL TO PARIS

Says Pair Left Together After Mysterious Parley With Petain

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 17—Authoritative sources reported tonight that Pierre Laval was with Otto Abetz, German Ambassador, when the latter left for Paris tonight after a day of mysterious conferences with both Laval and Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, chief of state.

These persons said the deposed Vice-Premier was in one of the automobiles belonging to the Abetz suite when the German envoy, his aides and guards, whirled out of Vichy. Laval's friends said he would accompany Abetz to Paris.

Abetz Drops No Hints

Before he left, Abetz gave no hint of what he would tell Hitler about the Laval ouster. But the fact he took Laval back with him indicated, some observers said, that the little Auvergnat still would play a big part in French-German affairs.

These observers believed Laval might emerge as a "special delegate" of the Petain Government in Paris, charged with talking with the Germans. He is not, however, expected to regain his former high position in the Vichy Government.

On the other hand, other persons believed Laval might have accompanied Abetz to Paris only for the sake of his own personal safety.

Had Been Under Guard

From Friday night until today, he had been under guard in his Chateldon home, twenty miles from Vichy.

The swift-moving events today had even Vichy's rumor-mongers puzzled.

Abetz was believed, however, to hold the fate of the Vichy Government in his hands. Arriving from Paris last night, he began his day late in the morning, leaving the rooms guarded by his German armed escort to go to Marshal Petain's residence.

Then he sent for Laval.

Diplomatic reports from Vichy said Laval was brought, beaming, into Vichy in an automobile by the chief of Marshal Petain's personal staff.

Meet A Second Time

In mid-afternoon, while Petain napped, Laval talked with Abetz again in his Chateldon home and later in the afternoon he was back in Vichy conferring with Petain and Abetz.

Although Laval's successor in the Foreign Ministry, Pierre-Etienne Flandin, was ill, he received Abetz at his bedside, it was reported here.

Few believed Petain would remain as chief of state if Laval again is given anything like the power which he once held.

Flandin also was said to have served notice on both Petain and the Germans that he could not remain in the Cabinet if Laval were to be its chief.

Another estimate of Laval's position was that he was enjoying what may be only a temporary spot in the limelight.

Petain Calls Laval Back For Conference

Vichy, France, Dec. 17 (AP).—Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, chief of state of France, summoned his deposed Vice-Premier, Pierre Laval, back today for long conferences with himself and Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's high envoy.

An official communique, following a hectic and secretive day, said Petain and Laval discussed "the general situation." At least, however, it was clear that Laval's own situation since his ouster from the Government four nights ago was a part of the discussion.

Abetz saw Laval this morning at a conference at Petain's home, and still later in a visit to Laval's chateau at Chateldon, twenty miles from Vichy.

Confers With Petain

Then Abetz conferred at dinner with Petain before leaving tonight for Paris. During the evening Laval was at the Hotel Majestic, where Abetz has been staying since last night. The former Premier was with members of Abetz' suite, but there was no confirmation of a rumor that Laval, too, had gone to Paris.

The comings and goings of the principals in this drama of France in defeat were filtered all day long through a screen of secrecy that cleared a bit only tonight.

First, Abetz met Petain for three and a half hours at the old marshal's Pavilon Sevigne. While they were talking, Laval arrived there accompanied by a member of Petain's staff.

Escorted By French

Abetz was escorted to Petain's home by French motorcyclists and followed by a touring car filled with German officers. Two companies of French infantry and a drum and bugle corps greeted him.

The German envoy also wanted to see Pierre-Etienne Flandin, Laval's successor as Foreign Minister, but Flandin is ill.

Meanwhile, the French Cabinet was meeting, with at least one interruption. Nothing was said about the Ministers' decisions, but after the meeting Petain and Abetz conferred again and had dinner together.

Accompanied By General

When Abetz left for Paris about 8.30 P. M. he was accompanied by the French General Laure, representing the Vichy Government, and his own German staff and guard.

Abetz arrived in Vichy from Paris last night with a guard of three carloads of German soldiers carrying automatic rifles conspicuously.

French Increase Fund To Pay for Nazi Troops

VICHY, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The official journal disclosed today that the Bank of France had increased from 65,000,000,000 to 73,000,000,000 francs a provisional non-interest loan to the French Government to pay the costs of German troops garrisoned in occupied territory.

The franc no longer is quoted in the New York foreign exchange market, but this year before the fall of France it varied from 1¾ cents to 2¼ cents.

STRONG-ARM SQUAD FRENCH MYSTERY

"GP" Appears To Be Gaining Power In Unoccupied Territory

First Seen In Marseille, Aiding Police At Visit By Petain

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 17—France's mysterious new strong-arm clan—the "GP"—is reported spreading its organization throughout the "unoccupied" zone.

Husky members of the "Groupes de Protection," wearing armbands lettered "GP" and leather jackets and helmets similar to those worn by motor cyclists, made their first public appearance on December 3 in Marseille, where they assisted police in controlling the crowds during a visit there by Marshal Petain, Chief of State.

The organization was said to be composed mainly of former mobile guardsmen or the hard-boiled street fighters of ex-Communist leader Jacques Doriot's French Popular party.

Other Units Spring Up

Reports indicated a membership of 1,000 in Marseille, 500 in Lyon, and additional units springing up in other cities in the unoccupied zone following activity by mysterious agents.

Some reports said it was a vigilante group. Others called it a French version of the Nazi party's S. S. Elite Guard. Still others believed it might prove the means for a new dictator to ride to power in France over the heads of the Vichy Government.

There have been rumors from Vichy that the organization was approved by Marcel Peyrouton, Minister of the Interior. There has been no official word from Vichy sanctioning the corps, but Marshal Petain himself saw it in operation in Marseille.

BASLE ATTACK INVESTIGATED

Swiss Seek to Place Blame for Raid on Railway.

GERMANY ACCUSES BRITAIN

Tracks and Cars Damaged and Service Is Interrupted.

BASLE, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Bombs killed four persons, injured many others and caused considerable property damage last night in Basle in an air raid which the Swiss general staff declared was evidently "directed against the railway and buildings east of the Basle central station."

Railway lines east of Basle cross the Rhine River into southwestern Germany.

The Government sought to determine from examination of the bomb fragments the nation responsible for the raid.

President Marcel Pilet-Golaz told the Federal Council at Berne that information received so far indicated the planes were probably British, and said that as soon as this point had been definitely established the council would "make an energetic protest to London asking for reparations."

[In Berlin, authorized persons said the bombs were British and called the bombing a flagrant breach of neutrality to which the Swiss Government would reply with all the means at its disposal].

The Government reported twelve bombs fell in various parts of the city, several of them along the railway line.

Basle has been called the turntable of Switzerland because it is one of the main rail links between German, Alsatian and Swiss rail systems.

One bomb smashed directly on the railway tracks after striking a corner of the main railway station. Long lines of cars were damaged, and service was interrupted. A restaurant inside the station was wrecked.

Bombs also fell near the freight yard of Basle's second railway station on the northern side of the Rhine—the terminus for southwestern German railway systems.

A woman was killed as she ran across Winkelried Square toward an air-raid shelter. Three other persons were killed in the suburb of Dininger.

An alarm sounded soon after the airplane motors were heard. The all-clear did not come for more than an hour.

German anti-aircraft fire from across the Rhine joined in the din.

Swiss to Protest To British Over Basel Bombing

Legation in London Ordered to Ask Reparations After Blame Is Fixed on R.A.F.

BERNE, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Swiss Legation in London was instructed tonight to protest against the bombing of Basel last night by British flyers.

A demand for full reparations and for measures to prevent a repetition was included in the instructions, which followed an examination and identification of the bomb fragments today as British.

Meanwhile, on the theory that the bombs were dropped by flyers who believed they were over Germany, the Council of State of Canton and Republic of Basel City in a telegram to the Federal Council asked removal of the blackout.

The bombs killed four persons and caused considerable damage, particularly in railroad yards and the central station of this border city, which links German, Alsatian and Swiss lines.

Another theory, advanced by the Swiss General Staff, was that Basel's railway center was picked intentionally because it links German and Italian railroads.

The blackout for all Switzerland was imposed Nov. 6 by the government and general staff "in order to avoid facilitating by any means any military operations." Germany had charged that Basel had been a "lighthouse" guiding R. A. F. raiders to Axis objectives.

Baden Sounds Raid Alarm

BASEL, Dec. 17 (AP).—An air-raid alarm sounded tonight over Alsace and Baden, but no planes were heard immediately on the Swiss side of the frontier.

Rome Decrees Death For Food Hoarders

ROME, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Food hoarders will be punished by death in "more serious cases," the Government announced today as Fascist party leaders undertook to keep a strict watch over supplies, rationing and prices.

EGYPT TO RELAX BLACKOUT

Alexandria Plans Change Because Of British Successes

Alexandria, Egypt, Dec. 17 (AP)—Alexandria's total blackout may be relaxed shortly in view of British successes against the Italians.

Navy and R. A. F. shellings and bombings are declared to have caused widespread destruction of Italian airdromes in Libya.

Modification of Cairo's blackout also is under consideration.

Ice Halts Shipments On Danube, Life Line To Nazi Oil Supply

Budapest, Germany, Dec. 17 (AP)—Shipping on the Danube river, Germany's life line to Rumanian oil and Balkan foodstuffs, was ordered halted today because of ice conditions.

Great floes were sweeping downstream. Two days of cold, experts said, would freeze the river tight.

Because of erratic and inadequate rail connections out of Rumania, the Danube is the key route for oil transport.

Dynamite Explosion In Plant Founded By Nobel Injures Over 20

Stockholm, Dec. 17 (AP)—An explosion in the great Bjoerkborn dynamite plant founded by Alfred Bernhard Nobel, of peace prize fame, seriously injured at least twenty persons and shattered many buildings in the southern city of Karlskoga where thousands of inhabitants immediately ran underground into air-raid shelters.

Firemen fought desperately to prevent raging fires from reaching powder magazines. After a five-hour fight the Government defense staff said they had mastered the flames which threatened the extensive munitions and steel works.

It was not immediately determined whether there were any dead.

A great blast knocked out windows, razed some buildings, broke telephone lines and caused general property damage for a distance of a mile from the plant. Part of the city had to be evacuated.

SWEDISH-NAZI PACT

Berlin Expects Accord to Increase 1941 Trade.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—A new German-Swedish commercial pact is expected by Government circles to increase trade between the two countries by about $150,000,000 in 1941.

The agreement, announced last night, calls for a trade overturn of about 2,000,000,000 kronor (approximately $480,000,000) next year. This year's trade will approximate 1,400,000,000 kronor.

Sweden will receive 5,700,000 tons of coal and coke, processed steel and synthetic cloth, and Germany will get much wood pulp and paper.

The coal will be obtained without a price increase, it was stated here.

Trade negotiations with Belgium and the Netherlands are expected soon. A two-month trade agreement with Norway, for approximately 25,000,000 kronor, also was disclosed.

Reich-Holland Customs Barriers Removed

BERLIN, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—In informed quarters it was reported today that customs barriers between Germany and the conquered Netherlands had been removed, and that Dutch goods were flowing freely into the Reich.

German goods will be admitted into the Netherlands duty free in the near future, it was said.

TO GREET POPE PIUS

Cardinals to Have Audience on Christmas Eve.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Vatican City officials announced today that the College of Cardinals would extend personal Christmas greeting to Pope Piux XII at a special audience the morning of December 24.

It was believed the Vatican radio would broadcast a speech by the pontiff in Italian at that time, 3 A. M., Eastern standard time.

Meanwhile, a Vatican news agency said the Pope was trying to evolve a plan to send Christmas greetings and gifts to prisoners of war in Italy and Italian prisoners of war held by the British and Greeks.

The announcement modified Italian reports the Pope would send gifts to all war prisoners through the Nuncios and Apostolic Delegates in various countries. The agency said it was evident such gifts could not be sent to the vast numbers of prisoners throughout Europe and added the plan still awaited a definite decision.

Nazis Ship Yule Trees Into Forested Norway

OSLO, Dec. 17 (AP).—Norway, where the mountains are covered with fir trees, is getting thousands of Christmas trees from Germany.

They are among the items being sent on three ships bringing presents from home to German occupation troops in Norway.

SOVIET GIVES FINNS HINTS ON ELECTION

Press Says to Pick President Friendly to Neighbors.

MOSCOW, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Soviet press gave notice to Finland today to choose a President who "will guarantee normal friendly relations with neighboring countries and avoid the ruinous path of adventures and experiments of any kind for Finland in foreign policy."

Kyosti Kallio, former President, resigned on November 28 because of poor health. No date has been set for the election to name his successor.

The newspapers printed a dispatch of the official Russian agency, Tass, from Helsinki, declaring that Finland was being pushed into an experimental path by "various reactionary business people."

"In progressive circles the present position is being discussed with alarm and some fears have been expressed concerning the possible consequences of the game behind the scenes in the choice of a candidate for the presidency," the dispatch said.

3 THAI TOWNS BOMBED BY INDO-CHINA FLIERS

Hanoi Says It Retaliated for Bombing by Neighbor's Plane

HANOI, French Indo-China, Dec. 17 (AP)—In a fresh flare-up of the undeclared border warfare between Thailand [Siam] and French Indo-China, the French declared today they had dropped three tons of bombs of three Thai towns.

Hanoi officials said that a Thai plane had raided Xiengkhouang, 200 miles southwest of Hanoi, late yesterday and that their craft had retaliated with attacks on Nongkhay, Undorn and Sakolakon, border towns in Northeast Thailand.

Peace overtures were reported meanwhile from both Bangkok and Hanoi, but there was no indication of any progress.

BANGKOK, Thailand, Dec. 17 (AP)—A Thai Government communiqué said today that planes from French Indo-China had bombed Nagron, Panompenh and Muddaharn, Thailand, last night. Nineteen bombs in all were loosed without damage or casualties, it reported.

One plane caught fire and crashed near Thakhek.

Japan Places Limit On Price of Soap

TOKIO, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The maximum price of soap in Japan will be limited to 10 sen (2.34 cents) a cake, beginning Thursday, it was announced today.

The Government set the maximum price in order to conserve the use of vegetable oils and fats. The better qualities of soaps thus will be eliminated.

COLD SPREADS DEATH

Snowstorms Take Great Toll in East Asia.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 17 (A. P.)—Freezing temperatures and snowstorms spread death and suffering today in East Asia as far south as the Yangtze Valley. Many deaths were reported among the tens of thousands of refugees and beggars in Shanghai.

The Shanghai Public Benevolent Cemetery announced today that more than 29,000 bodies had been gathered from the streets of Shanghai in the past eleven and a half months.

It said 20,804 were bodies of children.

Albania's Biggest Base Bombed

R. A. F. Pounds Supply Depot as Greeks Push Twin Drives Toward Port of Valona.

ATHENS, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—A violent R. A. F. attack on Durazzo, Italy's biggest supply base in Albania, was reported today as twin Greek drives were said to be converging on the last mountain defense line guarding the port of Valona on the Adriatic Sea.

The Greeks said a series of seven Italian reserves had failed to halt the tortuous advance over the snow-covered mountain ranges.

"Among other operations carried out by R. A. F. aircraft was another attack on Durazzo, Albania's biggest port," an official communique said.

"During the night a successful raid was made despite most unfavorable weather, bombs being observed causing large explosions in the dock area.

"One large fire and a smaller fire were observed to have started when our aircraft left the targets."

Cold Blocks Fighting.

Fighting today over all fronts was reported mostly of a local nature as a result of the continued cold which made large-scale operations almost impossible.

The only intense actions appeared to be taking place north of Argyrokastron in the region of Tepelini and Klisura. These operations, developing for more than a week, were described as progressing satisfactorily.

In the region beyond Pogradetz, new Greek gains also were reported. An unidentified height and mountain village were said to have been taken this morning against heavy Italian resistance.

Both artillery and infantry moved from hill to hill in the snow-covered mountains and one report said an entire Italian company was destroyed when Greek artillery fired into its ranks as the men were eating breakfast.

A Government spokesman said the Italians had been forced to retreat in the Dvinos Valley and had failed in repeated attempts to oust Greek troops from newly won positions on the Skivovik heights.

Testifying to the ferocity of the fighting, the spokesman said last night the Italians hurled seven counter-attacks against Greek positions on the heights.

In the Dvinos Valley, Italians fell back after suffering heavy losses and leaving 200 soldiers and one senior officer captives of the Greeks, he said.

On the northern front, where the Greeks are driving toward the mid-Albanian base of Elbasani from the mountains near Lake Ochrida on the Yugoslav frontier, Italian positions were being shelled with captured Italian ammunition.

Cold Grips Northern Front.

WITH THE GREEK ARMY ON THE NORTHERN ALBANIAN FRONT, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Fighting on this front was at a virtual standstill today with soldiers of both sides showing the effects of three days of snow and falling temperature. About three out of every four Italian prisoners are being treated for severe frostbite, a Greek army physician asserted, and the Greek troops themselves are suffering from the cold.

Sharp Fighting Reported.

ROME, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command reported today sharp fighting in the southern sector of Albania, where the Eleventh Army is operating. To the north it was said there was quiet.

Assails British Reports.

BERLIN, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—British "propaganda" about developments of the war in Greece and northern Africa was described as foolish today in German quarters, which held the British accounts were completely out of proportion to the "limited military importance of local successes over Italian troops."

Greeks Strafe Italians.

SALONIKA, Greece, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Greek planes flying less than 200 feet above the ground are strafing Italian troops massed in ravines on the northern front in Albania, military dispatches reported today.

One heavy bomb fell on an ammunition dump, the explosion killing many Italians, they said.

Greeks Capture Fort in North, Gain on Coast

Advance on Central Front, Close In on Valona as R. A. F. Batters Durazzo

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, Dec. 17.—A government spokesman announced tonight as "one of the major successes of recent days" the capture by the Greeks of a camouflaged fortified position in the northern sector, which the Italians had held stubbornly with permanent artillery and machine-gun installations. The position was said unofficially to be near the Yugoslav border.

In the coastal sector, the spokesman added, the Greeks had "pressed back" the Fascists. The port of Palermo, he said, was under Greek artillery fire. He said "during the last twenty-four hours wherever the enemy has attempted to do battle he has been defeated."

The Greek command's night communique said that near the center of the front the Italians were retreating "with losses" toward Klisoura, twenty-six miles southeast of Valona, and that fires were observed in that town.

The Italian troops in the heights northeast of Palermo were reported driven back after fierce fighting and heavy losses.

The spokesman said that "more to the eastward" the Greeks had occupied another height, from which a "concentrated and important" Fascist force had been dislodged by Greek fighters who stormed the position with bayonets.

The camouflaged northern position reported fallen to the Greeks was protected, he added, by elaborate barbed-wire barricades, through which Greek infantry burst to take "a number of prisoners, including officers."

Greek soldiers battling through snow-clogged passes were reported closing in from two directions on the last Italian-held mountain stronghold standing between them and the Adriatic port of Valona.

While the Greeks pressed on toward Valona, British bombers were reported to have again battered Durazzo, the biggest port of entry for Italian supplies and men, sixty miles farther up the Albanian coast. Large explosions and fires were reported in Durazzo's dock area.

The main fighting today was north of Argyrokastron, in the region of Kilsoura and Tepelini, road junction seventy-five miles below Tirana, Albanian capital. Here the Greeks said operations were "proceeding satisfactorily."

Fascists Caught Eating

In their advance on the northern front, beyond Pogradetz, the Greeks said an entire Italian company was destroyed by Greek artillery as the Fascists were eating breakfast.

In another engagement, bayonet-charging Greeks routed the Italians, a front-line dispatch said, after a nightlong fight with hand grenades and machine-guns.

For three days snow has been falling on the northern front, accompanied by steadily falling temperatures, and both sides have suffered hardships.

Most Italian Prisoners Frostbitten, Greeks Say

Extreme Cold on North Front Hits Both Armies Hard

ATHENS, Dec. 17 (AP).—A Greek Army doctor said today that 75 per cent of the Italian prisoners taken on the northern front were severely frostbitten. He said the Greeks likewise were hard hit, but that the Italian cases predominated by a ratio of three to one.

Even Mussolini's hardy Alpinists were quoted as saying the Albanian cold was worse than anything they had experienced before.

Italian troops huddled in the mountain ravines were said to have been easy pickings for Greek planes, swooping to within 200 feet of the ground to attack with machine guns.

The job of getting both the Greek and Italian wounded back to ambulance stations was a formidable one. Some have to be carried for miles on hand stretchers and pack mules, taking days to get them to a hospital.

Bordeaux Battered, Travelers Report

Paris (Via Berlin, Delayed, A. P.) Dec. 14—British bombers have been giving the port of Bordeaux a heavy pounding in recent weeks, according to travelers returning to Paris.

Day and night alarms have given Bordeaux residents real war experience, they report, and British planes have appeared sometimes as often as three or four times a day.

Barriers and guards have been placed about dock facilities while repair work goes on.

The city itself also has suffered in raids. Fifteen persons are reported to have been killed.

BITOLJ, YUGOSLAVIA, (ON THE ALBANIAN FRONTIER), DEC. 17-(AP)-BUCKING SNOW IN THE NORTH AND OVERFLOWING RIVERS IN THE SOUTH, GREEK TROOPS WERE REPORTED TONIGHT TO BE PRESSING ATTACKS ON ITALIANS WHO SOUGHT TO ENTRENCH THEMSELVES IN NEW POSITIONS NEAR TEPELENI AND SOUTH OF CHIMARA ALONG THE COASTAL ROAD TO VALONA.

THREE GREEK ASSAULTS ON POSITIONS NEAR TEPELENI WERE SAID TO HAVE RESULTED IN HIGH LOSSES, INCLUDING OFFICERS, FOR THE ITALIANS. THEIR COUNTERATTACK IN DRINOS VALLEY SOUTHEAST OF TEPELENI WAS REPORTED TO HAVE FAILED.

IN THE SOUTHERN AREA, FLOODS WASHED OUT MANY BRIDGES AND OTHERWISE HAMPERED TRANSPORT OF THE GREEKS PRESSING NORTH ALONG THE ADRIATIC SHORE PAST PALERMO.

CASUALTIES PUBLISHED IN GREEK NEWSPAPERS INDICATED GREEKS TOO WERE AMONG VICTIMS OF THE SNOW AND COLD IN THE NORTH, BUT THE ITALIANS WERE SAID TO BE LESS EQUIPPED TO WITHSTAND THE FRIGID WEATHER.

R. A. F. BLASTS MANNHEIM FOR SEVEN HOURS

Gives Nazis A Dose Of Own Medicine At Industrial City

British Also Pound Ludwigshaven And U-Boat Base At Bordeaux

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—Heavy explosions from the direction of the French coast were heard tonight in London, indicating that British bombers were making a heavy attack upon German bases across the Channel.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—Stealing the Nazis' own thunder, British bombers delivered a seven-hour assault upon the German industrial city of Mannheim in the heaviest of a series of overnight raids from western Germany to the submarine base at Bordeaux, France, the Air Ministry announced today.

An airplane factory, a dye plant and other military objectives in the Mannheim area were declared left ablaze from the attack, carried out by the light of a bright moon.

In pouncing upon Mannheim for the second time in five days, the British singled out this chief industrial center of the upper Rhine for a fiery dose of the same medicine the Germans have given some of Britain's own industrial cities.

Ludwigshaven Fired

At Ludwigshaven, suburb of Mannheim, the Air Ministry said an aniline dye factory, "one of the largest in Germany," was fired.

"A particularly violent" explosion was reported at Neckarstadt, another suburb, where returning pilots said "by 3.30 A. M. the whole target area was a mass of flame."

"At Steyer, a town south of Mannheim, aircraft factory buildings were hit and targets at Heilbronn on the Meckar were set on fire," the Air Ministry account went on.

Bordeaux Raided

The Air Ministry news service said coastal command flyers carried out a heavy raid on Bordeaux, base of German U-boats preying upon Britain's Atlantic shipping.

"When one raider came over the docks and let go a salvo of large-caliber bombs a wide column of flame rose to a height of 300 feet," the news service said. "Other bombs fell on a corner of the U-boats' dock basin, followed by an immense flash which produced a bright glow in the sky over Bordeaux."

In addition, the Air Ministry said daylight raids were made upon several airdromes in Nazi-held territory and that one of six merchantmen attacked off the French coast was seen listing and another on fire.

Meanwhile, the Air and Home Security ministries reported "very slight" German daytime air activity over England. They said no bombings were reported from any section of the country during the day, but that one German bomber was shot down by British fighters.

Nazis Say Raid By R.A.F. Killed 10 and Hurt 50

DEC 18 1941

Admit Attack on Mannheim and Assert Reich Planes Blasted Midland Cities

BERLIN, Dec. 17 (AP).—British air raiders killed ten persons, injured fifty and inflicted damage with fire and explosive bombs in attacks on western and southwestern Germany last night, while Nazi bombers heavily blasted two unnamed "important" cities in the British midlands, the Germans reported today.

The high command said Mannheim, inland port on the Rhine, and another undisclosed town bore the brunt of the British attacks. In Mannheim, a castle and a hospital were said to be among the buildings damaged, and at the other place a hospital and two factories were reported hit.

The official account said, however, the production decline in the factories "is immaterial."

One vital factory in the Midlands was reported destroyed by fire in the Nazi raid.

German speed boats fought a short skirmish with a superior force of British destroyers in the western waters of the English Channel Sunday night, informed quarters reported. The skirmish ended when the British vessels drew out of sight of the Nazi craft, which returned to their bases safely, it was said.

German bombers, meanwhile, were reported to have scored a hit on a 2,500-ton ship 300 miles west of Ireland and to have sunk a 3,000-ton vessel seventy miles north of the spot where this attack took place.

The Germans said they had downed two British planes during the last day and night, but had lost none themselves.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, addressing workers of the big Blohm and Voss shipyard at Hamburg, lauded their discipline "despite many nocturnal air alarms," and told them their forging of Germany's sea armor gave the best proof of the failure of the British night raiders to disturb Hamburg's war production even at a single point. (The British have reported repeated crippling raids on Hamburg in general and the sprawling Blohm and Voss shipyard in particular.)

Beaverbrook Warns Britons Of Nazi Invasion in Spring

Declares Germany Is Building Mighty Air Force—Calls England Too Confident —Seeks More American Planes.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, declared over the radio tonight that Germany is making preparations for invasion of England before springtime—by land and sea, but principally by air.

Hitler is making an immense attempt to bring out a huge air force in the early months of next year, Lord Beaverbrook said, and there are signs of a feverish development of production.

"These vast preparations," he added, "are directed at one objective—the invasion of Britain.

"So we are warned. We know that this same measure of preparation was carried out in Germany last winter, with tanks and dive-bombers produced to destroy the French. The same thoroughness will be employed against us when the time comes."

Lord Beaverbrook told Britons that they were much too confident and added that there was no justification for over-confidence now.

"It must be acknowledged that Hitler is still military master of Europe, but not quite so much the master he was," he went on.

Praises American Planes.

American planes are arriving in England "in an increasing flow—very, very many of them," he said. They are fine types of fighting planes, he added, and some of them are equal to the best produced here. He described the Curtiss P-40 Whirlwinds, nor are any permissible.

Lord Beaverbrook said that all aircraft lost by Britain during the four-month battle of Britain had been paid for with public contributions and that "the main flow of money has been from overseas."

The prime need, he said, is for more bombers.

"That's where we want to see new records," he said. "So roll out the bombers."

as the equivalent of the British Spitfire in performance and speed.

By 1942, he declared, 26,000 American-built planes will have reached Britain.

Regarding Britain's own production, he said that in August, September, October and November the output was double that of the same period last year.

New Type of Fighter.

Addition of a new type of fighter plane—the Whirlwind—to Britain's air forces was disclosed by Lord Beaverbrook.

"We have seized control of the air by day with our fighter squadrons of Hurricanes, Spitfires, Defiants and Whirlwinds," he said.

Minister Of Munitions' Party On Western Prince Believed Safe—List Not Announced

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—Charles D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Munitions, was said authoritatively tonight to have arrived safely at a British port after being rescued from the liner Western Prince, torpedoed Saturday 550 miles northwest of Ireland.

It also was said that members of the Howe party were believed safe, but an official announcement was awaited.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—In Ottawa, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King received definite word from London that Howe and three of his department officials were safe.]

With Howe when he sailed from New York December 6 for Britain were E. P. Taylor, of Toronto, and Col. W. C. Woodward, of Vancouver, executive assistants, and Gordon Scott, of Montreal, former Quebec provincial treasurer, Howe's financial adviser.

There was no indication as to how many others of the sixty passengers aboard the 10,926-ton ship were saved. The British said a complete list of rescued persons would be compiled before an announcement was made.

All Reported Safe

Norwalk, Conn., Dec. 17 (A.P.)—Mrs. George Warwick Boxall, of Wilson, received a cablegram today from her sister in London that all passengers aboard the torpedoed British liner Western Prince had been saved. Their mother, Mrs. Louise Birch, a resident of London, who came to the United States recently with several child refugees, was a passenger aboard the ship.

Britain Releases Ex-boxing Champion

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The release of Joe Beckett, former British heavyweight boxing champion, and his wife, detained since last June 3 under defense regulations, was disclosed today. The date of the release, by order of the Home Office, and the specific reason for the detention were not given.

BRITAIN SENTENCES WOMAN SPY TO DIE

Housewife Is Found Guilty —Hollander Executed.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Mrs. Dorothy Pamela O'Grady, a forty-two-year-old housewife, was sentenced to death for treason at the Hampshire Assizes today.

She was convicted under the official secrets acts and defense regulations, it was announced.

Mrs. O'Grady heard the death sentence entirely unmoved.

She was convicted in the Isle of Wight of making a plan likely to give assistance to military operations of the enemy and also to have cut a military telephone wire. The charge further accused her of approaching a prohibited place, making a plan likely to prejudice the defense of the realm, and possessing a document containing information regarding British defense measures.

Meanwhile the Home Office announced that a Hollander had been executed at Pentonville Prison as a spy for Germany.

His name was given as Charles Albert van den Kieboom, and he was said to have been born at Takarumuka, Japan, on September 6, 1914.

The announcement said he was tried at the same time as two others executed as German agents on December 10, and had been associated with them. They were convicted of having used a portable radio transmitter to send messages to Germany.

BRITISH SAY ENEMY SANK 101,190 TONS

Admiralty Reports Losses in Week Ending Dec. 8.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Admiralty reported today that 101,190 tons of British, Allied and neutral merchant shipping were sunk during the week ending December 8.

Nineteen British vessels totaling 86,740 tons, three Allied ships of 12,937 tons and one neutral vessel of 1,513 tons were lost during the period, it said.

An authoritative informant said "one bad day accounted for a good proportion" of the losses.

These losses made the average weekly loss reported since the beginning of the war 63,192 tons, exclusive of vessels lost in the removal of troops from Dunkirk.

The losses reported today were said to have been due to submarines, mines, bombs and surface raiders.

It was claimed that winter weather, with long nights, and the concentration of many British warships in the Mediterranean were favorable to attackers.

BRITISH AIR SIEGE DEATHS AT 19,288

Bombers Took 4588 Lives in November.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Civilian air raid casualties in the United Kingdom in November were 4,588 dead and 6,202 injured, it was announced officially today.

The report for October showed 6,334 dead and 8,695 wounded in the United Kingdom. Today's announcement puts the total casualties since Germany began raids on Britain last June 18 at 19,288 dead and 27,252 wounded.

In November the number of men killed totaled 2,289; the women, 1,806, and children under 16, 493. Of those injured and detained in hospitals 3,493 were men, 2,251 women, and 458, children under 16.

American Eagle Club Opened.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Wade Hampton Hayes, American banker with British financial interests, formally opened today the American Eagle Club which will be used as a center for all Americans serving in the British armed forces.

MORE RAID SHELTERS

Britain Reports Additional Room for 105,000.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, said today additional shelter accommodations for 105,000 persons had been provided since October, and the "worst of overcrowding in big shelters is now a thing of the past."

Mr. Morrison, speaking at the opening of an exhibition of pictures of London life under air raids, said 206,000 bunks had been installed and 200,000 more had been delivered but were not yet installed because of a labor shortage.

Meanwhile, Food Minister Lord Woolton said that only ten cities and towns in Great Britain had provided for communal feeding in event of heavy bombing, and urged others to speed preparations to care for civilians forced to leave damaged homes.

"We have the food in the areas," he said, "We have gone to infinite trouble to see that no place shall starve. All I am asking local authorities to do is to arrange to cook it."

"The experiences of Sheffield, Southampton, Coventry and Birmingham have been unanimous in indicating the ned for community feeding centers," the Minister said.

British Turkeys 57 Cents a Pound

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Food Ministry today fixed the price of undressed Christmas turkeys at two shillings ten pence a pound (about 57 cents) because butchers were raising their prices.

The Ministry's order indicated a change of heart on what was to be regarded as a necessity.

Lord Woolton, the Food Minister, in reply of November 26 to a question whether turkey prices would be controlled, asserted it was not his business to control luxuries.

Lothian's Successor Not Yet Selected

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—An authoritative spokesman said tonight that several days more still might be needed to find and name a man "ideally suited" to succeed the late Lord Lothian as British Ambassador to the United States.

Lloyd George Refuses U. S. Ambassadorship, London Paper Reports

London, Wednesday, Dec. 18 (AP)—The London News Chronicle says that David Lloyd George has declined the ambassadorship to the United States, although pressed strongly by Prime Minister Churchill to accept.

Lloyd George, the paper added, refused the post in consideration of his advanced age—78.

Last night, an authoritative source said several more days might be required to find the "ideally suited" man for the job, which was vacated by the recent death of Lord Lothian.

London Asks Economic Cooperation, Not Help

London, Dec. 17 (AP)—London political circles tonight interpreted the news that Britain has asked the United States for financial aid as "merely pursuing the policy of placing our cards on the table in order to convince the United States their interests are bound up with ours."

The British viewpoint was that "financial aid" was an "unfortunate" choice of phraseology for what really was "economic cooperation between the British Empire and America."

It was suggested that such "co-operation" might take the form of buying from Britain large quantities of rubber and tin and paying for them in advance or granting credits to the Canadian Government.

Ability To Pay Near End

One point on which general agreement was expressed by British sources was that Britain has ordered presumably as much as she can pay for with cash and the ability to "pay across the counter" is reaching a visible end.

The view also was expressed that the stage is being set for a "most interesting and vital discussion when the United States Congress meets." One British expert said "we are making our position clear to Americans and then it will be up to Congress to decide how closely they can collaborate with us in an economic sense in order that democracy be preserved."

Reds Go Underground To Undermine Morale

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—A Scotland Yard report to the Home Office said today alleged communists had posted agents in underground shelters in attempts to undermine British morale.

The report asserted several communists had obtained appointments as shelter marshals. It added that several hundred leaflets attacking the Government had been distributed.

BAN MODIFIED

British to Allow Trading in More American Stocks.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The ban on dealings among British residents in 122 different overseas and dollar stocks and bonds was modified yesterday by the Bank of England.

The bulk of the issues concerned are in safe custody in Canada and trading will be carried on mainly by means of security deposit receipts but the sanction of the Bank of England is necessary in all cases.

The list of issues "unfrozen" includes International Nickel, Grand Trunk Pacific bonds and debentures of a number of Canadian cities and provinces.

The securities concerned are the property of residents of the United Kingdom. After the ban on these dealings ordered in June the owners deposited their securities with banks. They learned in July the securities had been transferred to Canada for safe keeping.

The Financial Times said editorially that the list presented was "a welcome addition" to that issued three weeks ago which "was rather disappointing for its exclusion of the more popular American shares."

The newspapers said it was possible that "a reasonably good American market" would be re-established in the Stock Exchange.

France Forever Group Backs British Blockade

Supporters Of De Gaulle In U. S. Discount Reports Of Scarcity Of Food In Unoccupied Area

New York, Dec. 17 (AP)—Officials of the France Forever Committee in the United States said today they would not seek lifting of the British blockade to allow food shipments to unoccupied France as proposed by former President Hoover.

At a press conference leaders of the committee, which is supporting the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, discounted reports of food scarcity in unoccupied France and asserted that if Britain felt the blockade was a necessary weapon the committee would not oppose the British stand.

Chrysler Gets Canadian Order

OTTAWA, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Department of Munitions and Supply announced today award of a $3,000,000 contract to the Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Windsor, Ont., for military vehicles. The company will make a "large number" of light four-wheel drive trucks, the department said. It added that production schedules to meet the needs of British and Canadian armed forces would keep the automotive industry of Canada at top speed throughout 1941.

300 NAZI SAILORS TO BE MOVED AGAIN

Survivors Of Scuttled Liner Columbus Ordered To New Mexico

Situation Has Caused U. S. Government Some Embarrassment

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—The Government, it was learned today, has directed that 300 Nazi sailors from the scuttled German liner Columbus be transferred from Angel Island, in San Francisco Bay, to an abandoned CCC camp near Fort Stanton, N. M.

The sailors were rescued by an American destroyer several months ago after scuttling their ship to avoid capture by a British man-of-war. The incident occurred off the Atlantic seaboard and the survivors were taken temporarily to Ellis Island.

British Threat Cited

Later, German consular officials obtained permission to transport the men to Angel Island, where they expected to send them home via Japan and Russia.

This plan failed when the British threatened to take the men captives whenever they reached the high seas.

American officials, it was said, decided to transfer the sailors to the New Mexico camp after citizens of San Francisco had complained they had been spreading Nazi propaganda in the city.

The Government believed it advisable, authorities said, to station the German refugees in a less populous area.

Given Special Privileges

The men have special privileges as "distressed seamen." They cannot be deported, officials said, so long as their country is at war. Meantime, the German Government must pay for their support under maritime law.

The situation has caused the United States Government considerable embarrassment. Officials said no American community has been willing to receive them, the State Department has been reluctant to move them about for fear of offending the Nazi Government, and the United States Bureau of Immigration, which has them in charge, has hesitated to expedite their return home for fear of offending the British.

Must Be Protected

This country, authorities said, must offer the men protection because they were picked up in American waters. They cannot be interned as prisoners of war since this is a neutral country, nor can they be handed over to the enemy.

Officials said the men would be quartered in twenty-four buildings formerly used by a CCC soil conservation camp on grounds of the Marine Veterans' Hospital near Fort Stanton.

FRENCH OIL TANKER READIED FOR DASH

Craft At Philadelphia May Join British Or De Gaulle Forces, Report

7,000-Ton Boat Has Tricolor Painted And Spotlighted On Sides

[By the Associated Press]

Philadelphia, Dec. 17—The Tricolor of France freshly painted and spotlighted on her sides, the 7,000-ton French oil tanker Herope was ready to sail tonight, but her plans and destination were a mystery.

The tanker has been laid up here for repairs since November 19. Shipping circles said the ship might be turned over to the British at sea for use as an oil carrier from Mexico. There is an pipe line from near-by Marcus Hook to carry oil to Canada. Another report was that the ship was prepared for a dash across the Atlantic to join the Free French forces of General Charles de Gaulle in Africa.

Delay In Sailing Not Explained

Clearance papers for the vessel, which carries a crew of thirty-seven men, were renewed yesterday after the ship delayed sailing Saturday without explanation.

The United States Coast Guard said the captain of the vessel, Jules Flouri, had obtained Government permission at Washington to sail.

The French Consulate here declared it was not "concerned" with the vessel although officials said they had talked with the captain two days ago. The consulate said Flouri had been in New York since then. The vessel formerly operated out of Marseilles, in African service.

Damage Done To Propellor

The Merope left Tampico June 7, but put into the Marcus Hook anchorage grounds June 21 with a damaged propeller. On November 19 she was moved up the Delaware river to Philadelphia, where she discharged a cargo for the Sun Oil Company.

No new cargo was put aboard here and no actvity was seen aboard the vessel until last week when crew members readied her for the sea.

NO FOREIGN WAR GROUP IS FORMED

Iowa Editor Heads New Peace Body—Investment Banker Is Treasurer

Plans To Offset Work Being Done By William Allen White's Committee

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 17—Verne Marshall, 51-year-old newspaper editor who said he learned to hate war as an ambulance driver at Verdun, has organized a group to "help keep the nation out of war."

A statement issued by the organization, known as the No Foreign War Committee, said the purpose was "to give articulation to the hopes and prayers of . . . millions of Americans who know if they are dragged once again into the economic and political conflicts of the Old World, only complete world chaos can result."

The statement declared that the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies was developing "exactly the same public psychology as that which was carefully created during the war period preceding our declaration of hostilities in April, 1917."

It also claimed that much of the success of the committee, headed by another editor, William Allen White, of Topeka, Kan., was due to lack of opposition to its efforts.

Will Provide Voice

"It is the purpose of the No Foreign War Committee to provide that voice," the statement said.

Marshall, editor of the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette, said: "We start with one hundred groups behind us."

"Eighty-three per cent. of the population is against participation (in the war)," he said, "and we expect to enroll the majority of that percentage.

"This committee is in favor of the present defense measures, only because we may well be the last democracy. Therefore we must be strong . . . but it's pure poppycock to say that if Germany licks Britain they would attack us.

Stand For Neutrality

"As regards our attitude toward aid to Britain, we stand pat on the neutrality law as it exists today. That law was supposed to protect us against all these problems. Now they're trying to repeal it."

Heading the committee, besides Marshall, who is chairman, are O. K. Armstrong, Springfield (Mo.) author, as director of organization, and Robert A. Lancaster, New York investment bank associate, as treasurer. Temporary headquarters were set up here, although permanent headquarters may be established shortly in Washington.

Marshall said that members of the committee were not "appeasers, fifth-columnists, pro-Nazis, pro-British, pro-Fascist, or anything save a group of determined pro-Americans."

Wants Strong Defense

"It was made plain that the No Foreign War campaign will start with the premise that the United States needs and must have an impregnable defense, and that aid to Britain is desirable, but it must not drag this country into war," he added.

Marshall, a Pulitzer Prize winner, enlisted as a private in the French army in 1916 and did first-line work with the American Ambulance Field Service. His ambulance unit evacuated wounded from Dead Man's Hill near Verdun and was cited for valor by the French.

New Peace Group Formed By Students At Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 17 (AP)—A group of Harvard students announced today the formation of a new peace group, the Harvard Committee Against Military Intervention in Europe, and listed Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., son of the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, as one of its members.

In a statement announcing formation of the new organization, the committee said:

"Since contrary to the assertions of the committee for militant aid to Britain, there is every reason to believe that America is not now at war, it is incumbent upon us to consider the possibility of remaining at peace."

Quentin Roosevelt, a grandson of former President Theodore Roosevelt, and Tudor Gardiner, of Gardiner, Maine, son of a former Governor of Maine, also were listed as members.

STEEL FOR DEFENSE WILL BE X-RAYED

Largest Industrial Machine Of Type Makes Photos Through Four Inches

Installed In Schenectady Building Having Walls Three Feet Thick

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 17—The biggest industrial X-ray in the world starts today looking through the steel going into warships and other American military equipment.

The ray takes two minutes to take a picture of a four-inch thickness of steel, against an hour previously required. It takes five-inch depth photos in five minutes, compared with three hours previously.

The rays are produced by a new type X-ray tube of 1,000,000 volts invented by technicians of the General Electric Company. It has been installed in a special building here, with walls three feet thick, to inspect power machinery parts.

Developed First For Medicine

The tube is really a boon to industry from cancer research. It was developed originally at the request of Memorial Hospital, New York, for cancer work. Three were built for hospitals before this industrial eye was made.

The principal new feature of the tube is its comparatively small size. It also delivers higher amperages of X-rays than most giant tubes. In terms of radium, its rays are equivalent to about $90,000,000 worth.

X-ray inspection of machinery is an established industrial process. The method has uncovered interior flaws which otherwise would have gone unnoticed, but the time necessary to take pictures through steel has been a handicap.

Workers Wear Detectors

Workmen around the tube will wear X-ray wrist detectors. These are flat leather straps containing unexposed photographic film. If this film darkens too much, it is a sign that the men have been crowding the limits of safety in exposing themselves to the giant rays. By frequent inspection of the wrist films it is expected to protect the workers.

When the ray is in operation, the operator watches it through a periscope behind a 36-inch wall.

Tells How Chemical Sweeps Fog Away For Plane To Land

M. I. T. Professor Says Sulphur Chloride Spray Enables Descent In "Zero-Zero" Conditions

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 17—Dr. Sverre Petterssen, professor of meteorology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, tonight told how a solution of sulphur chloride sprayed into fog would provide enough clear air for an airplane to land under "zero-zero" conditions.

The sulphur chloride creates an artificial rain through adherence of the fog droplets to the chemical, he said in a lecture before the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences at Columbia University.

Services Cooperate

Dr. Petterssen, former meteorologist for the Norwegian Government, said the United States army, navy and Weather Bureau had cooperated in the experiments.

In experiments conducted by H. G. Houghton and W. H. Radford, of M. I. T., Dr. Petterssen said, a spray of eighty-five gallons of sulphur chloride a minute cleared a path 150 feet wide, 30 feet deep and 1,500 feet long.

In an interview preceding the lecture, an annual event in celebration of the first powered flight by the Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17, 1903, Dr. Petterssen said "the fog-free path would be used in conjunction with radio instruments to permit an airplane to line up with the airport runway."

Produced Commercially

Such radio instruments, giving a pilot both lateral and directional guidance, are now being produced commercially.

"To my knowledge," said Dr. Petterssen, "no large-scale experiments of this nature have taken place abroad."

30,000,000 Aspirin Tablets To Go To China

Part Of $1,000,000 Consignment Of Red Cross Supplies Awaiting Shipment

San Francisco, Dec. 17 (AP)—Thirty million aspirin tablets for the headaches of China, part of a million-dollar consignment of American Red Cross medical supplies and food, are stored in Pacific Coast ports awaiting the next ship for Burma.

The aspirin, along with thirteen tons of sodium bicarbonate, 1,200,000 sulfanilamide tablets and huge quantities of chloroform, ether, iodine and other medical stores, will be sent via the Burma road to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's capital at Chungking.

Reporting on its program for Chinese war relief, the Red Cross said today that $290,000 worth of food, medicine and cloth for garments already had reached China; that more than $700,000 in additional supplies are ready for shipment.

PLAN TO CRIPPLE U. S. LAID TO AXIS

Ickes Cites Sabotage And Creation Of Latin-America Suspicion

Lindbergh Among Americans Secretary Denounces As Appeasers

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 17—Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, charged tonight that the Axis plans to cripple the United States by sabotage, to sap it by propaganda and to drive a wedge of suspicion between this country and Latin-America.

In a speech before the Columbia University Institute of Arts and Science, Ickes also denounced Americans whom he described as appeasers. Among them he named Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whom he called a "peripatetic appeaser who would abjectly surrender his sword even before it is demanded."

Last September, Ickes said, "the Nazis in Los Angeles, at their meeting in the Deutsches Haus, offered their nomination for the Presidency of the United States to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh!

Hitler Honored Lindbergh

"Of course, I do not say that the Colonel accepted or even was consulted about this precious gift. I am merely stating a significant fact. After all, Lindbergh has been the proud possessor of a Hitler decoration for several years and his recent utterances, both at home and abroad, have not been of a tone that would persuade Nazi sympathizers in this country that he would not be susceptible to the flattery of a 'nomination' for President at their hands, however absurd such a gesture might be in the eyes of patriotic Americans."

The Secretary also took Merwin K. Hart, president of the New York State Economic Council, to task on the ground that Hart "misses few occasions to sneer at democracy." During the last campaign, Ickes said, Hart delivered an address before the Union League Club in New York, in which he attacked democracy as a "foreign" importation, a Communist plot.

Axis Plans World-Wide

In another part of his speech, in which he discussed what he termed Axis plans, he said:

"The Axis plans are far-reaching and world-wide. The dictators propose to cripple the United States if they can. One way of doing this would be to damage the Panama Canal.

"If that were done, our fleet would be bottled up in one ocean and one of our coasts would be at the mercy of any enemy. The Axis powers eye the canal with hungry eyes."

"Another way of crippling the United States, particularly in its defense efforts," he said, "is to sabotage our plants, both industrial and military. Recall that most of the Nazi Bund units are located in the vicinity of shipyards, docks and arsenals.

"Despite increased and increasing vigilance on the part of the authorities—the FBI, the local police forces, and the army and navy intelligence—many plants undoubtedly harbor fifth columnists. In time these will be weeded out. But in the meantime they are in position to do considerable damage. . . .

"During the last few weeks the newspapers have carried disturbing stories of deadly explosions in our powder plants. On November 12 alone on less than three such explosions took place. Already there has been considerable loss of life.

"If experience is any guide, more explosions may be exepcted, although some of them will be accidental. However, I recall that, between 1914 and 1916, no fewer than ninety-nine chemical and explosive plants were blown up in this country."

U. S. Workers Send Gift To Aid Coventry Victims

American Viscose Corporation Employes Make Present Of 2,590 Pounds Sterling

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 17 (AP)—The American Viscose Corporation announced today it had sent 2,590 pounds sterling as a Christmas gift to its plant in Coventry, England, to aid bomb victims.

This represented voluntary contributions from the 17,000 employes. While the company approved the project and collection boxes were placed at the entrances to each of the plants, there was no solicitation.

The company has plants at Marcus Hook, Lewistown and Meadville, Pa.; Parkersburg and Nitro, W. Va., and Roanoke and Front Royal, Va.

Windsor Willing To Be Envoy To U.S.

[By the Associated Press]

Miami, Fla., Dec. 17—While thousands waited to wave him a farewell, the Duke of Windsor said today he would accept the post of Ambassador to the United States should it be offered and "if I thought it was in the interest of our two countries."

He made the statement at a press conference aboard Axel Wennergren's yacht Southern Cross, shortly before sailing on the return voyage to Nassau. The yacht brought the Duke and Duchess here just a week ago.

Duchess Fully Recovered

The Duchess, apparently completely recovered from the major dental operation that necessitated their visit here, stood beside the Duke on the deck to acknowledge the parting cheers of a large crowd on the pier.

Both stood erect as the University of Miami bank struck up "God Save the King" and the national anthem just as the sleek yacht slid clear of the landing.

While Edward, with his wife, posed at the rail for last-minute pictures, a spectator shouted:

"We're all with you, Edward. We want to see you go to Washington."

Denies Post Has Been Offered

The Duke smiled and waved.

As the Windsors received the press on the afterdeck, a reporter asked the former King if he had been offered the appointment as British Ambassador to the United States.

"I have not been offered it," he said, "but I would most certainly accept it if I thought it was in the interest of our two countries."

Hints At Another Visit Next Year

The Duke indicated he might make another trip to this country next year, commenting "we have found our way to America and we look forward to an early opportunity for another visit."

Edward said he and the Duchess were "deeply touched" by the expressions of sympathy and good wishes."

The American-born Duchess, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, chatted with those invited aboard the yacht for a parting reception.

Duchess Proud Of "My Country"

Asked about her reaction to the United States after being away for years, the Duchess declared:

"I'm proud of my country."

Later she commented: "Everything is so vital and alive here."

She was dressed in a two-piece white sharkskin suit edged in blue, and wore a navy blue jersey. Her small blue sailor-type hat was pushed well back on her head. Her shoes were white and blue.

As the Southern Cross moved out into the channel, a large blimp circled overhead. It bore a long streamer with the legend: "Bon voyage."

Ace Career Diplomat Holds Argentina Post

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—Norman Armour, ace career diplomat and now United States Ambassador to Argentina, was mentioned in informed circles today for the vacant post of Ambassador to Great Britain. President Roosevelt is expected to name a successor soon to Joseph P. Kennedy, who resigned the London post on November 6.

Some sources hinted that the President already had decided on Armour for the key assignment in the British capital.

Was Born In England

Armour, who was born in England of American parents, has held diplomatic posts in nearly every part of the world, including Japan, Russia and various European countries.

He was in the United States recently, but has returned to Buenos Aires. His service in Argentina, which has important economic ties with Great Britain, was rated as a factor in his favor for the London appointment.

Kennedy, who returned to the United States six weeks ago and has been resting in Florida, came to Washington Sunday to attend the funeral for Lord Lothian. He called at the State Department on routine business yesterday, but declined to discuss his future plans.

He has been mentioned for the chairmanship of the National Defense Commission and other Government positions, but he returned to Florida last night without seeing the President and there were indications that he was severing official connection with the Administration.

Armour Best Qualified

Armour was described by persons familiar with his record as one of the best-qualified diplomats now in the service for the difficult London post.

In more than a quarter of a century of service, he has been Minister to Canada and Haiti and Ambassador to Chile and Argentina, in addition to holding subordinate assignments in Rome, Paris, Tokyo and in Russia before the World War. He married Princess Myra Kaudacheff of Russia in 1919.

He was born at Brighton, England, 57 years ago and was educated at Princeton and Harvard.

NAZI PRINCESS IS ORDERED TO GET OUT OF U. S.

Extension Of Visitor's Permit Denied To Maria Waldenburg

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—The Justice Department denied today the application of Maria Waldenburg, the Princess Hohenlohe of Hungary, for extension of a visitor's permit and ordered her to leave the country by December 21.

At the same time Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General, announced his approval of a recent immigration service order refusing to extend the temporary permit of Karl Scheuring, 18, described as "a citizen of Germany and an avowed Nazi," who is a student at the University of Denver.

Reason Not Disclosed

The department did not make public the reason for the denial of Princess Hohenlohe's request, but officials recalled that Jackson declared several months ago the department would require visitors to show a positive reason why they should be permitted in this country.

It was explained privately that the Princess' presence was considered "inimical" to this country's best interests because of her close association with Nazis.

Princess Hohenlohe was with Capt. Fritz Weidemann, the German consul at San Francisco, the department said, when Federal Bureau of Investigation agents located her to advise her of the decision. She was informed that deportation proceedings would be started unless she left by December 21.

Arrived Last December

The Princess, whose full title is Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe Waldenburg Schillingsfurst, arrived at New York on the steamship Veendam on December 22, 1939, from London, traveling on a Hungarian passport. Her visitor's visa was extended once to November 22, and on November 18 she asked for a second extension.

A Laborite member of the British Parliament last month referred to the Princess as a "notorious member of Hitler's spy organization" and asked why she was permitted to leave England for the United States "to do that sort of work over there." The member's question went unanswered.

Once Sued Rothermere

It was not the first time her name was linked with Hitler's. In November, 1939, she unsuccessfully sued Lord Rothermere, British publisher, for breach of contract, alleging that she was to receive about $20,000 a year special political representative Europe.

Her counsel stated that in 1934 she obtained from Hitler an invitation for Rothermere to visit him in Berlin, and that Rothermere had a "royal reception," telling her later that Hitler would make her a duchess.

During the trial a letter purportedly from Wiedemann to the British publisher was read. In it the Princess was credited with having "laid the groundwork which made the Munich agreement possible." Wiedemann, in San Francisco, said "That as far as I can remember at this time the letter is correct."

Paid Her $250,000

Lord Rothermere testified that he paid her about $250,000 for less than six years' service, and denied that he had promised contractually to pay her £5,000 a year for life.

Princess Hohenlohe was born in Vienna September 16, 1896. On May 12, 1914, she married Prince Francis of Hohenlohe-Waldenburg-Schillingsfurst—a marriage not in conformity with the laws of the house and not recognized by the family.

A son, Prince Francis, was born in Vienna the following December, and in December, 1920, her marriage terminated in a Budapest divorce.

Efforts to locate the Princess last night were unsuccessful.

Discusses Scheuring Case

Discussing the Schuering case, the Immigration Service said that "in times of danger the hospitality of a country ought not to be extended to those who are committed in principle to its abuse. This opinion merely makes explicit the views upon which the service has been acting in similar cases for some time."

The opinion recited that Scheuring came to this country July 20, 1939, with his mother, a native of the United States who lost her citizenship by marrying a German, and who has since returned to Germany.

Young Schuering presented the Nazi viewpoint in a number of speeches around Denver which "aroused some local excitement, both pro and con," the opinion continued.

Brought Protests

The refusal to renew his permit brought protests from "a substantial number of United States citizens," it added. They objected that the youth spoke only on the invitations of Americans and that he had not engaged in subversive activities.

"But this is not the whole story," the opinion said. "We do not know that young Scheuring is not engaged in subversive activities. We only know that we cannot prove the contrary. And we do know that young Germans abroad, if they are good Nazis, do what they are told.

"Much more important, we know that a good Nazi in the event of a crisis will not hesitate to betray the hospitality of a country in which he is a guest. The history of the last two years leaves no room for dispute upon this point. . . .

Hints At Fifth Column

"Starving children, adopted in difficult times after the first World War by kindly Norwegians, returned later to stab in the heart the country of their foster parents. Thousands of tourists in many another unfortunate nation had thrown down their Bædekers and picked up machine guns.

"Karl Scheuring, by his own statement, is a good Nazi. Replying to questions by an immigrant inspector, he was frank. He said that he believed in the aphorism that 'might makes right.' When asked if he was in sympathy with the present Nazi Government, Scheuring answered, 'Yes.' He also boasted: 'I am a subject of Nazi Germany and proud of it.'

"These statements are conclusive as to the proper disposition of the present application."

Willing To Go Back— "If I Can Get There"

Denver, Dec. 17 (AP)—Karl Scheuring, Denver University student given until December 26 to start back to his native Germany under a Department of Justice order, said tonight:

"I would like to complete my studies here, but I have no hesitancy over returning to Germany—if I can get there."

He insisted that the only purpose of his United States visit was to study at the university from which his mother was graduated twenty-eight years ago. Schuering's mother, the former Lily Schlumpf, was born at Russell Gulch in gold rush days. Schuering has lived here with his grandmother, Mrs. Lily Schlumpf.

Schuering said he would talk with immigration officers and with William F. Godel, German consul, tomorrow. He will make any other feasible effort for extension of his permit, he asserted, and failing that will seek to borrow money from Consul Godel for his trip home.

Communiques of Belligerent Powers

British

CAIRO, Dec. 17 (AP).—A British general headquarters communique:

EGYPT: In addition to Sollum and Capuzzo, our troops yesterday captured the enemy frontier forts of Musaid, Sidi Omar and Shefferzen.

Fighting continues in the Bardia area, where pressure on the enemy is steadily increasing as new forces arrive. Last night Australian troops successfully engaged an enemy column by moonlight, capturing transport and a gun.

In the northern frontier district of Kenya the cessation of the rain period has enabled us to recommence offensive patrolling on a considerable scale.

On the Sudan frontier the situation remains unchanged.

A communique of the Royal Air Force Middle East command:

All enemy airdromes between Tobruk and Bardia in the western desert were heavily raided by R. A. F. bombers yesterday while our fighters maintained constant offensive patrols throughout the day.

Bardia was subjected to yet another intensive raid during last night. Weather conditions were excellent and our bombers were able to attack their objectives without difficulty. Altogether more than a dozen tons of bombs fell on barracks, military buildings and railways. Fires were started in native barracks and one particularly fierce blaze caused four loud explosions.

In addition to Tobruk, Bomba, Derna, El Deam, El Gubba and El Gazala were attacked, much damage being caused.

While on offensive patrol, our fighters shot down seven S 79's and one CR 42 (confirmed) and two S 79's (unconfirmed). A further S 79 was destroyed while landing, and a Ghibi Italian general purposes aircraft was also shot down.

These enemy losses do not include ten CR 42's and five S 79's captured by the Army on enemy airdromes near Sollum. The enemy had to abandon these aircraft as they had all been rendered unserviceable by our low-flying attacks earlier in the week.

From all the operations in the western desert our aircraft returned without loss.

In southern Albania, among other operations carried out by our aircraft was a heavy raid on Durazzo. This successful night attack was made despite most unfavorable weather. Bombs were seen to cause large explosions in the docks area.

In Italian East Africa, Gura and Asmara were raided during the night of Dec. 15-16. At Gura direct hits were registered on a building which was demolished by subsequent explosions and a fire was started which was seen fifty miles away. Enemy fighters intercepted our bombers, one of which was damaged but managed to get back to our territory.

Enemy bombers raided Port Sudan four times, but no damage was caused to R. A. F. property or personnel.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique:

A series of concentrated attacks on Germany was continued last night when aircraft of the bomber command subjected targets at Mannheim, the chief industrial center of the upper Rhine, to a sustained attack which lasted seven hours. The weather was good and there was a bright moon. One of the principal factories was repeatedly straddled by bombs.

At Ludwigshaven, a suburb of Mannheim, the aniline dye factory, one of the largest in Germany, was set well alight, the fires being still visible half an hour after the attacking aircraft had left. Bombs also were dropped on the railway yards, the port and along the banks of the Rhine.

A particularly violent explosion was observed at Neckarstadt, another suburb. By 3:30 a. m., the whole target area was a mass of flame.

At Steyer, a town south of Mannheim, aircraft factory buildings were hit, and targets at Heilbroon on the Neckar were set on fire.

Other aircraft dropped heavy bombs on the submarine base at Bordeaux.

The R. A. F. also attacked several airdromes in daylight yesterday and six merchant vessels off the French coast. After the attack, one vessel was observed listing to port and another was on fire.

From all these operations, four of our aircraft are missing.

An Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

During daylight today enemy activity over this country has been very slight. No report of bombing has been received from any part of the country. One enemy bomber was shot down this afternoon by our fighters.

A Home Office communique:

A third enemy alien acting on behalf of Germany was executed at Pentonville Prison today following his conviction at the Central Criminal Court on the 22d of November. His name is Charles Albert van den Kieboom, a Dutch subject born at Takarumuka, Japan, on Sept. 6, 1914.

This agent was tried at the same time as the other two who were executed last week and with whom he was associated. He was similarly equipped with a portable wireless transmitting set.

The date of execution was postponed in Kieboom's case because he gave notice of appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal, but he subsequently withdrew this application.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

For the eighth day, the battle in the desert zone on the Cyrenaican (Libyan) front proceeded with ferocity no less than that on previous days.

Our air force, despite prohibitive weather, was not slowed down in its activity in aiding the resistance of our troops, and strongly wore down the enemy.

At sea, our torpedo-launching planes hit with two torpedoes a 6,000-ton cruiser which had bombarded Bardia. Five of our planes failed to return.

On the Greek front, the sector of the 9th Army was quiet, with bitter fighting in that of the 11th Army. In fighting of the last few days, the Grenadiers Regiment and the Milan Regiment of Lancers particularly distinguished themselves.

In East Africa, on the Sudan front, there was activity of patrols and artillery. An enemy plane which attemped to bomb Diredawa yesterday morning was shot down by our fighters, which took off at the alarm.

Greek

ATHENS, Dec. 17 (AP).—Tonight's Greek communique:

The enemy, pressed, retreated with losses toward Klisoura, where fires were observed. On remaining sectors of the front, operations continued successfully. Prisoners taken included one lieutenant colonel. Considerable quantities of war material were captured.

A Home Security Ministry communique:

No raids on Greece today.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 17 (AP).—The German high command communique:

German speedboats operating in the Channel the night before last encountered a unit of superior enemy destroyers. After a short skirmish, the enemy units went out of sight. Our speedboats returned to their bases safely.

Comdr. Kretschmer, who has just returned with his submarine from a cruise against the enemy, sank 34,935 tons on this cruise, as previously reported. This officer thus has scored a total of 252,100 tons and is the first submarine commander surpassing the 250,000-ton mark. Three enemy auxiliary cruisers and the British destroyer Daring were contained in this total.

The night before last, Sheffield again was attacked by the German air force's fighting units with visible success. Explosions and a large number of fires were observed.

In the course of the day only a few planes operated because of haze and foggy weather. In London and other places we succeeded in scoring several hits on war-vital targets, traffic facilities and a troop camp.

Two enemy merchantmen were bomb-raided 500 kilometers (about 300 miles) west of Ireland. The rudder was damaged on one ship and another was so seriously hit that its loss is probable.

British flights over German territory were limited to western and southwestern Germany last night. At Mannheim, explosives and incendiaries caused damage and fire to buildings.

France's Great Colonial Strength May Be Secret of Petain's Courage

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

Hitler would appear all unexpectedly to have encountered a tartar in the person of France's aged but agile dictator, Marshal Petain, who is trying to lead his people out of the wilderness of defeat.

The supposedly tractable old soldier suddenly has invited German ire by his sudden ousting of Vice-Premier Laval, his right-hand man and heir to his office as Chief of State.

This move is said to have been coincident with a refusal by the marshal to allow troops to pass through French ports to the aid of Mussolini's hard-pressed forces in Libya and Albania. Laval reportedly acted as intermediary for the German request.

Now the Nazi envoy, Otto Abetz, is in Vichy, with a heavy guard of 6-foot soldiers to investigate a still obscure position and find whether Petain's attitude means that he is balking at co-operation with Hitler. Should Abetz discover this to be the case, the Fuehrer's answer to Petain might be the military occupation of all France and the ousting of the Government, since Franco-German peace hasn't yet been concluded, but only the armistice.

But to my mind a matter of far greater importance than what Petain has done is why he did it—what gave him the courage to do it? That I believe must be Abetz's big problem.

Ace Up the Sleeve Perhaps.

I suspect that there's studied method in the old marshal's gamble. There is protruding from his sleeve something which looks suspiciously like an ace. The fact that Hitler is approaching the situation cautiously would indicate that he, too, sees the ace.

Petain's dismissal of Laval isn't surprising. As long ago as last October I reported in this column that Laval was ambitious, and that from personal contact with him I thought he would be a tough opponent in a poker game. That was the time that he arranged the meeting between Petain and Hitler to discuss Franco-German co-operation. In short, Laval is getting the credit in many quarters of hungering after his chief's job.

In this connection it is important to note that Laval has been strong for co-operation with Germany, and that he long has been bitterly anti-British.

Now the moral of the present imbroglio would seem to be that Marshal Petain, while undoubtedly willing to co-operate with Hitler within limits, has no intention of sacrificing his country on the Nazi altar for the sake of placating Germany. Among other things he has indicated that he will not join Nazidom in making war on Britain.

And where does Marshal Petain as leader of a crushed and defeated nation get the pluck to defy the conqueror of most of Europe?

Colonial Strength May Be Factor.

I believe Petain's strength lies in the fact that France's colonial empire is still intact and unconquered.

There is small doubt that this great empire with its wealth of materials and man power could be thrown to the aid of Britain by a mere wave of Petain's hand.

Many of the colonials are strongly pro-British, some already have declared their willingness to fight beside Britain. Mandated Syria, Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, French West Africa and many more—what a team of allies for Britain!

Petain's chief of military and political affairs in Africa is the great Gen. Maxime Weygand. He is a powerful leader and, so far as has appeared, he is a patriot who will follow the orders of his Government. There are many observers who feel that the pro-British sentiment in French Africa is strong enough so that if Weygand gave the word to join the British, the people would follow. But there is no indication that the General will move except under orders from his chief in Vichy.

Hitler knows and Britain knows that should the French colonies swing to the British it would shatter the Axis hopes of gaining control of the all-important Mediterranean area which is one of the principal foundation stones of Britain's imperial might. No wonder then that both Britain and Germany have been straining every nerve to win these French possessions over.

There you have Petain's strength. That's why he has dared so greatly in the face of the great German military machine. He will keep his bond with Hitler so long as Hitler keeps his bond with France, I should say, for that's Petain's code of honor.

We might even see the Marshal patching up his row with Laval and taking him back. But the French Chief of State has demonstrated that he has the courage of his conviction.

Fifty Reported Killed and 120 Captured in Attack on Post in Italian Somaliland

By The Associated Press.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 18—An Italian retreat westward along the Libyan coast toward Derna, 150 miles inside the Italian colony from the Egyptian border, was reported today by Royal Air Force observers while the British Army closed in on the port of Bardia, the easternmost Libyan base left to the Fascisti after their disastrous Egyptian campaign.

Bardia itself appeared to be surrounded and doomed to imminent fall to the British, whose dusty armored cars were reported to have cut communications to the west. East of Bardia thousands of fresh imperial troops brought in from Egyptian desert camps formed the other end of a closing pincer that imperiled several Fascist divisions.

[Two Italian divisions and thousands of Blackshirt militiamen have been bottled up at Bardia, it was reported in a United Press dispatch from London. According to The Associated Press, a Reuters (British news agency) dispatch sent from Cairo to London reported the retreat of part of an Italian division stationed at Bardia before the British attack.]

The British Command used but a single sentence to describe the action: "Operations in the Bardia area continue." The reports of British pilots, however, drew a picture of Fascist flight over a vast area—from Bardia to Tobruk, itself more than seventy miles from the Egyptian frontier and the strongest Italian base in Libya, and on to the west from there toward Derna. The Italian columns were reported to be under machine-gun attack by British planes.

Somaliland Post Attacked

While the offensive in the Western Desert thus proceeded, a British feint into Italian East Africa was reported by general headquarters. British forces operating from the frontier of Kenya Colony were declared to have raided the strongly defended town of El Wak, in Italian Somaliland, killing fifty of the Italian garrison, capturing 120 and seizing war material. Among the men captured was an Italian lieutenant colonel, the British said.

This frontier sortie was supported by the British South African Air Force, which reported that it had dropped two and one-half tons of bombs. It was noted that heavy rains in Northern Kenya had just ceased, enabling the British to resume what was termed "offensive patrolling" over a wide area.

A military informant here asserted that the Italian colonials at El Wak had fought better than the Italians themselves and that the commander of the garrison had fled in a mule cart. One of his officers was represented as having been so disgusted at this defection that when the British entered the town he led them to the hidden Italian stores, including field guns, machine guns, gasoline and food supplies.

In the Libyan battle area the British field army was using squadrons of far-from-sleek tanks that looked to correspondents a little like flat-nosed London taxicabs. Fleets of buses were employed to move the infantry rapidly from one point or action to another.

The British reported that new aerial assaults had been made on both Bardia and Derna. At the former base three fires were set, it was stated, and at Derna bombs were dropped on the airdrome, but damage could not be observed because of bad weather.

Air raids on Italian East Africa also were described and it was said that pamphlets as well as bombs had been dropped—pamphlets in Arabic and Italian that described the fall of Solum, Egypt, and Fort Capuzzo, Libya, to the British.

With the British Forces in Libya, Dec. 18—British land forces advanced today on Bardia in heavy fighting, while the Royal Air Force bombed that Italian stronghold from the air and the fleet shelled it from the Mediterranean.

The ground fighting centered on the strong fortifications five or six miles outside the town which the Italians built long before the war and strengthened in the last year.

Heavy rains turned the desert into mud and handicapped but did not halt the British drive.

British Cutting Off Retreat

British airmen reported some Italian troop movements out of Bardia toward Tobruk, indicating that a way of retreat from the town was partly open. British armored patrols, however, already had established themselves west of Bardia toward Tobruk.

How many Italian troops remained in Bardia was problematical. The normal garrison is one division, but all of the divisions or fractional divisions which had got out of Egypt presumably had entered there.

While there are yet no definite figures, casualties are very low among the British and not high among the Italians for the campaign generally. This is due mainly to the surprise of attacks and the rapidity of the action.

Little Gasoline In Loot

Even British intelligence officers were surprised at the amount of material the Italians had brought into Egypt. Their only serious shortage seemed to be in metals. More than half the Italian soldiers had no steel helmets and half the fortifications had no barbed wire. The Italians had little gasoline—and this was a disappointment to the British—for most of their vehicles run on Diesel oil, of which they abandoned thousands of barrels.

The Italian troops apparently ate very well. They had excellent canned fish and tons of spaghetti. The officers' messes were well stocked with wine and bottled mineral water—luxuries unknown on the British side. The Italian hospital equipment is superior, but not very mobile, and sanitary conditions in their camps are not always good.

Three Factors In Successes

The success of the British to date against forces invariably superior numerically is attributed by them mainly to three factors—the complete and absolute surprise of the offensive to the Italians, the skill with which the campaign was conceived and executed, the apparent superiority of British soldiers over the Italians, especially in fighting at close quarters.

Keeping the carefully considered plans for the offensive secret in a country where thousands of Italians were at large and espionage was extensive was itself a difficult task. The leaves of desert soldiers were canceled a week in advance with the explanation that they were needed for "maneuvers."

Some Fought Valiantly

Medical supplies and other requisites were shipped out by truck at night. In telling correspondents that the drive had begun, Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the British commander, remarked that not more than six of his staff officers then knew about it.

While the Italians fought valiantly in many places—some staying with their machine guns when all hope had gone—they generally broke when the British got close upon them.

Men in the front say Wavell's genius was shown in allowing the greatest initiative all along the line. He approved the general lines of the campaign and then didn't interfere. Many of the most successful operations were improvised in the field. Some Italian posts, in fact, were taken from a different direction than had been planned.

Bayonet Charges Common

Bayonet charges with the protection of tanks and artillery—and sometimes without any protection—are common in this campaign.

At Nibiewa, Egypt, for example, infantrymen hopped out of their busses, formed for the charge, cleaned up the fortress in half an hour's fighting after the artillery had opened the way, and then jumped back into the busses to be driven northward for similar work.

SOMALILAND ZONE RAIDED BY BRITISH

Italians Seized as Strong Force Attacks Base.

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—A strong rBitish force which included armored fighting vehicles and artillery has dashed 35 miles into Italian Somaliland and raided the Italian base at El Wak, killing 50 men and suffering only slight losses, the British command announced today.

A communique issued here said that at least 25 Italians, including several officers, and 50 native troops were captured, along with three guns, some machine guns and large quantities of stores and ammunition.

[A later communique issued by the British Middle East Command in Cairo put the number of prisoners at 120 and guns at fifteen. El Wak is in the Jubaland territory which Britain ceded to Italy in 1925.]

Units drawn from widely separated parts of Britain's [illegible] empire took part in the operation, including land and air detachments from South Africa and black troops from the gold coast in the West. The raid marked resumption of activity in the East African theater made possible by favorable weather. The El Wak raid was launched from northern Kenya.

OUT TO 'WEAR DOWN' BRITISH, ROME EXPLAINS

Italians In Libya Dealing Out 'Ruinous Punishment,' Says Gayda

Declared Still On Feet, Resisting Inch By Inch, Far From Beaten

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 18—Italians were told today that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's forces in Libya had turned to tactics of trying to "wear down" the pursuing British army of the Nile.

The final victory, Virginio Gayda, authoritative editor, assured his readers, won't depend on who occupies the most territory, but on who inflicts the heaviest losses.

The Italians, he said, are dealing out "ruinous punishment" to the British; are still on their feet, resisting inch by inch, and are far from beaten.

British Declared "Worn Down"

Il Popolo Di Roma marked the tenth day of the British offensive with the declaration that Italian artillery and aviation had littered the vast desert battlefield with wrecks of "dozens" of British tanks and armored cars.

The high command, reporting yesterday's operations, saw the British forces as already "worn down" and weakened by losses, and said they had slowed down their pressure.

A communique admitted that Col. Mario Amaru, who flew the Atlantic twice with the late Italo Balbo, was lost in air fighting Monday.

British Cruiser "Seen Sinking"

However, the high command said that a 6,000-ton British cruiser torpedoed off Bardia Monday had been seen sinking.

Among the air raids listed was one on Port Sudan, on the Red Sea. "Great columns of smoke" arose from the bombed air base, harbor and fuel installations and four planes were smashed on the ground, it was stated.

Il Popolo drew a picture of white Italian troops from the mainland, with motorized equipment, fighting "the second phase" of the battle after Libyan infantrymen were overwhelmed in Egypt by the British forces and driven back from Sidi Barrani.

Now Fighting 'Hard And Fiercely'

It estimated at least 800 British tanks and armored cars were used in the first attacks, and these outmaneuvered and outstripped the Libyans in Sidi Barrani and the Egyptian desert zone under cover of sandstorms.

Now, said the paper, the armies are fighting "hard and fiercely" in the triangle between Salum, Bardia and Fort Capuzzo, Libya, and the battle will be decided there.

Gayda On British Casualties

Gayda gave this purported evidence of British casualties: Nine trainloads of wounded hauled into Cairo on the third day of the desert battle; others left dead on the field; still others too badly wounded to be taken back.

At home, the first sentence for listening to a British news broadcast was given to a bar proprietor at Padua—a month in jail and a fine of 500 lire (about $25). A young woman told on him.

Il Messagero asserted an impending decree would authorize execution of food hoarders by firing squads in extreme cases.

Duce's Paper Doubts Aid Can Reach Britain In Time

Milan, Italy, Dec. 18 (AP)—Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, said today "the question for us is not whether the United States can manufacture all the projected armaments" for England—"but when?"

"The arms which America produces after Britain collapses are useless," said the paper. "There is, therefore, a date unpredictable and fatal after which the possession of masses of war material will serve America no better than do the masses of gold in the cellars of Fort Knox. . . .

"The tragedy of the English isle . . . is that of a starving man who sees death approaching, while in a far-off country grain is being ground to save him. Airplanes which don't fly, cannons which don't shoot, because they don't exist, may serve to win an election but not a war."

Il Popolo also predicted the decision in the war would come on English soil.

Berlin Is Silent

Berlin, Dec. 18 (AP)—While the Roosevelt plan to lend war materials to Britain drew no official comment here today one spokesman said: "Silence sometimes may have a significance of its own."

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 18—The British radio in a broadcast heard by CBS announced tonight that British airmen have shot down or put out of action more than one hundred Italian planes during the last seven days in Africa.

The British radio added that British losses were said to be probably "no more than five."

First Italian Jailed For Radio Listening

ROME, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The first punishment of Italians for listening to a British news broadcast was reported today from Padua, where the proprietor of a bar was sentenced to one month in jail and fined 500 lire (about $25).

A young woman who entered the bar at night to use a telephone informed Fascist party officials that she had heard the broadcast and they summoned the police.

Hear Revolt Against Italy Is 'Making Progress,' Says Butler

LONDON, Dec. 18 (AP)—Revolt in Ethiopia against the Italian forces of occupation "appears to be making progress," Richard Austen Butler, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, informed the House of Commons today.

"Information as to conditions in Abyssinia [Ethiopia] is naturally difficult to obtain," said Mr. Butler, "but the movement of revolt against the Italians appears to be making progress.

"It is the policy of His Majesty's government to extend to Emperor Haile Selassie, as well as to all elements within Abyssinia willing to bear arms against the enemy, all possible assistance in their fight for freedom."

Hear Hitler Got Assurances.

BERNE, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—France's elderly Chief of State, Marshal Petain, was today reported to have assured Adolf Hitler that the ousting of Pierre Laval as Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister of France has not affected the French Government's policy of collaboration with Germany.

According to diplomats here, Marshal Petain conveyed this assurance to Der Fuehrer through the German Ambassador, Otto Abetz, who left Vichy for Paris last night after a day of mysterious conferences with both Laval and Marshal Petain.

Petain Scores Too.

Advice here indicated that Marshal Petain and the group of Ministers who ousted Laval from the Cabinet had backed water considerably following the whirlwind visit from Hitler's emissary. At the time of his deposition, the Marshal and his advisers not only made it plain that they wanted no more of him in the Government, but showed every inclination to keep him a prisoner.

Some reports indicated, however, that not all of yesterday's concessions were on the side of Marshal Petain. Advices from close associates of the Marshal said he had remained firm against all suggestions that he take Laval back as his "Crown Prince"—his officially designated successor as Chief of State.

Berlin Hears Crisis Is Passing.

BERLIN, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The German Government, according to authorized spokesmen, is now in full confidential possession of the motives which led to the recent political upheaval at Vichy, but until Ambassador Otto Abetz's full report reaches Berlin no official statement of the Nazi position can be expected.

From the general attitude of German officialdom, however, observers believed that the storm was blowing over, and that Franco-German relations could be resumed where they left off.

Authorized spokesmen declined to confirm or deny reports that Pierre Laval, dismissed as Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister of France, was getting back into grace. They had no official information and knew only what they read in the world press, the spokesmen said. They declined to discuss the motives underlying the French Cabinet upheaval, saying that this was distinctly a matter for the French to handle.

15 French Judges Lose Posts.

VICHY, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Official Government decrees today deprived fifteen judges of their posts under the application of new French laws forbidding Jews from holding Government offices.

Envoy Gets More Authority To Continue Negotiations With Germans

Laval Apparently Restored To Active Role In Franco-Reich Dealings

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, France, Dec. 18—With Pierre Laval apparently restored to an active if unofficial place in French-German dealings, the Petain Government tonight conferred new powers upon Fernand de Brinon, whom Laval has established in Paris as "Ambassador of France" for purposes of collaboration with the conqueror.

Official sources indicated they considered the Laval affair as closed now that Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's envoy, has returned to Paris, taking with him Laval.

Laval's friends thought he actually would resume French-German negotiations in Paris, although Vichy Government sources insisted he had no official mission. In any event, Abetz' visit here seems to have achieved its aim and negotiations with the Germans are expected to start up again.

May Be Special Negotiator

Laval may now become sort of a special negotiator with the Germans, answerable only to Petain, but having no part in the Government.

His position will be clarified by Hitler and Petain, it is expected, although the two probably will not meet. Laval will stay in Paris for several days and Abetz, meanwhile, will report to the Fuhrer.

De Brinon, the permanent contact man in Paris, was appointed "Ambassador of France" in the occupied capital last month, while Laval had full charge of foreign affairs.

Powers Reinforced

He not only remains in office but his offices of "collaboration" with the Germans now are reinforced. Before the war he was known as Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet's "unofficial Ambassador to Germany."

New adjustments may be made in the Vichy Cabinet. Pierre-Etienne Flandin, who succeeded Laval as Foreign Minister, is expected to play only a minor part in the German negotiations—at present, France's most important diplomatic matter.

Relative calm returned to Vichy, but the day brought forth one note of French spirit in foreign affairs, an editorial by the newspaper Le Temps. This, considered officially inspired, said "France will not resign herself to letting her vast empire be carved up," and that those who count on doing so "just because France was beaten on the western battlefields deceive themselves."

The only thing Le Temps mentioned specifically in this connection was the undeclared war on the border of French Indo-China and Thailand.

Nazis Leave Versailles; Petain May Go There

Paris, Dec. 13 (Via Berlin, Delayed, A. P.)—German troops have moved out of Versailles, seat of the Kings of France, apparently in anticipation of the arrival of Chief of State Petain.

No definite announcement has been made concerning Petain's arrival, however.

The army of occupation has put up barriers to all entrances of the city and guards are stationed there. Plans may have been postponed by the upheaval centering around the ouster of Pierre Laval.

FRENCH DEPUTY CLEARED

Dismissal Ordered Of Desertion Charges Against Lieut. Wiltzer

Vichy, France, Dec. 18 (AP)—The military court at Clermont-Ferrand ordered dismissal today of desertion charges against Lieut. Alexis Wiltzer, Deputy from Moselle.

He was among passengers aboard the liner Massilia when it sailed for French Morocco June 21 while French-German armistice negotiations were in progress.

Paris Universities to Open

Nazis to Let Classes, Halted Since Nov. 11, Be Resumed Tomorrow

PARIS, Dec. 13 (Delayed) (Via Berlin) (AP).—The universities of this city, closed after demonstrations by students on Armistice Day, will be reopened Dec. 20, the German military command has announced.

Five of 143 students arrested during the demonstrations in Champs-Elysees will be tried before a military court on charges of "particularly serious acts," the command said. All others have been released and military restrictions imposed at the time have been lifted.

GREEKS REPORT ITALIANS ABOUT TO QUIT KLISURA

Athens Says Fires Indicate Foes Are Burning Their Supplies First.

ATTACKERS IN CLOSE RANGE

Tepeleni and Palermo Are Also Being Surrounded by Advancing Greeks.

ATHENS, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Fires are raging in Klisura, it was officially reported today, leading to a belief that the Italian forces were burning supplies in preparation for abandoning that mountain town on the middle Albanian front.

The Greeks pointed out that such fires were observed before the Italians relinquished Argyrokastron and Porto Edda.

Both Klisura and Tepeleni, farther west, were meanwhile reported within range of Greek machine guns.

Heavy fighting was reported continuing both in the Klisura-Tepeleni sector and in the coastal region to the southwest, and the Greeks already called the contest in the former sector a brilliant victory, likely to have a decisive influence on future operations.

Tanks in Roving Defense.

Klisura, about midway between Premet and Tepeleni on a cross-mountain road, bars an important route to Tepeleni and the lower valley of the Viousa River.

In the valley between Premet and Klisura the Fascists were said to have used fifty tanks in a roving defense of their fortifications while Greek artillery held them under fire.

On the coast the Greeks were said to be well within range of Chimara, which the Italians were reported defending with re-enforcements. Greeks said that they were flanking the port of Palermo. In the northern sector fighting had been slowed down by bad weather, but nevertheless the Greeks continued to report local successes.

British Attack Supply Column.

A motor transport column apparently headed for the coastal front to supply the Italians was bombed yesterday by the British Royal Air Force, according to its communique.

The bombers found the column on a coastal road between Aghisaranda and Valona, it said, and a number of bombs were seen to burst on the roadside. The trucks were also machine-gunned but, the communique said, a fierce snowstorm, which hampered the operations, prevented observation of the full effect of the attack.

All the British planes were reported to have returned safely.

Encircling Palermo.

Palermo and Tepeleni guard the roads leading north along the coast to the important supply port of Valona, and the forts north and west of Pogradetz are sentinels along the road from the Yugoslav frontier to the Albanian capital, Tirana.

The Greek High Command today reported what apparently was a Greek encircling movement around Klisura, while other Greek troops thrust at Tepeleni from the south.

Fifteen miles southwest, where a second road runs along the coast, the Greeks were apparently attempting a similar detour around the town of Palermo, at the same time battering the town with artillery fire.

At the opposite end of the battle-front, where three days of snow have packed down on last week's drifts and temperatures have fallen each day, Italian and Greek forces alike were said to be suffering intensely from the cold.

75 Per Cent Frostbitten.

A Greek Army doctor said that 75 per cent of the Italian prisoners taken in that sector were severely frostbitten. Veterans of Italian Alpine regiments were quoted as saying that the cold was worse than anything they had experienced.

The wounded of both armies have to be carried for miles on hand-borne stretchers and pack mules, taking several days in some cases to get them back to hospitals.

It was from this hardship-ridden front, however, that the Greeks reported "one of the major successes of recent days"—capture of a camouflaged fortified position in which the Italians had held out for days.

The captured stronghold was understood to have been near the Yugoslav frontier, where the Greeks have been mopping up isolated Italian posts, some of them on heights almost impossible to reach because of the deep snow.

Rome Tells of Aerial Attack.

ROME, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command today reported that sharp fighting between Italian and Greek troops was continuing in the southern sector of Albania.

The communique said that Greek troop concentrations were sprayed with machine gun fire by Italian flyers.

Information received here indicated also, they said, that the port of Palermo, southwest of Tepeleni, may already be in Greek hands.

The Greeks were said to have occupied two more hamlets at the northern end of the Albanian battlefront, in the Pogradetz region, despite severe cold and continued snow.

Greeks in Hills Blast at Italians In 2 Key Towns

Klisoura and Tepeleni Are Under Fire From Above; R.A.F. Raids Foe on Coast

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, Dec. 18.—Greek machine gunners were reported raking the Albanian towns of Klisoura and Tepeleni from surrounding mountain peaks tonight in an apparent prelude to a major effort to drive out the Italian defenders.

The Greeks declared that in bringing the two towns under their guns their troops scored a "brilliant victory" likely to have a decisive influence on the Albanian campaign.

Klisoura is in middle Albania on a cross-mountain road leading to Tepeleni, some twelve miles to the west. It also provides an important route to the lower Viosa River valley.

Fires Indicate Retreat

Flames such as those seen before the Italians retreated from Argyrokastron and Porto Edda were said to be licking skyward at Klisoura, indicating Premier Benito Mussolini's forces had fired the city in preparation for withdrawal.

[Unconfirmed reports from Struga, on the Yugoslav frontier, said Klisoura had been taken by the Greeks after heavy fighting, according to The United Press, but a Greek military spokesman in Athens said that neither Klisoura nor Tepeleni had yet fallen.]

In the valley between Klisoura and Premet, to the southeast, artillery was reported to be pounding fifty tanks used by the Italians in a roving defense of their fortifications.

On the Adriatic coast the Greeks were said to have pushed well within range of the port of Khimara. A flanking movement likewise was reported under way around Palermo, another port about six miles below Khimara.

Italian Column Bombed

The Greeks said the Italians had brought up reinforcements in a determined effort to hold Khimara. One motor transport column apparently bringing up fresh troops and supplies was heavily bombed yesterday by R. A. F. planes, the British air command reported.

In the northern sector continued snowstorms slowed down fighting. Nevertheless, Greek advances were reported after local encounters.

The motor transport column bombed by the British was found by the R. A. F. on a coastal road between Aghisaranda and Valona, it was said, and a number of hits were observed on the roadside. The trucks also were machine gunned but, the communique said, a "fierce snowstorm" which hampered the operations prevented observation of the full effect of the attack.

All the British planes were reported to have returned safely.

Mannheim Bombed Again

German City Raided Second Night in a Row —Britain Has Quietest Time in Weeks.

LONDON, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—For the second consecutive night the Royal Air Force attacked industrial targets at Mannheim, Germany, last night and bombed ports and airdromes in the German-occupied coast of the Continent, the Air Ministry announced today.

The attacks were carried out in spite of bad weather.

Explosions from the direction of the French coast were heard in England, indicating that channel ports of occupied France were among the points attacked.

Southwest German cities have been the targets of British planes three times in the last six nights and heavy damage has been reported at Mannheim.

Officials noted today the second consecutive day in which virtually no bombs have fallen on the United Kingdom.

A communique of the Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security said:

"A German bomber was shot down off Dover this afternoon by our fighters without loss to themselves. Otherwise there is nothing to report."

Great Britain passed apparently her quietest night in weeks last night.

Says Army Must Strike.

Meanwhile today Great Britain admitted officially that she cannot win the war until the British Army has "struck and struck deep into the Axis countries."

The Ministry of Information declared that the blockade will weaken Germany and Italy, and that fleet and air actions will shake their confidence, but that the weapon which will ultimately enforce their submission is the army.

The statement said that Britain has about 2,000,000 men in the army and another 1,000,000 in the home guard.

Nazis Admit Raids.

BERLIN, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The German High Command reported today that "British planes dropped bombs in southwest Germany last night, and that slight property damage resulted from the bombing at two places.

Two British planes were shot down in air fights, and a third by anti-aircraft fire, it was asserted.

German air operations yesterday were limited to armed reconnaissance and scattered harassing raids, authoritative spokesmen reported, and there were no air battles, other than those noted by the High Command, and no German losses.

Reveal Raid on Brest.

Brest and German military objectives near this French port were bombarded by the British last night, informed German spokesmen reported, adding that the damage was negligible. Furthermore, they said, British claims or successes against German bases in that region were grossly exaggerated.

LONDON GIVEN SECOND NIGHT WITHOUT RAIDS

Has One Of Longest Periods Free From Alarms Since September

R. A. F. Blasts Nazi Industrial Center Of Mannheim For Second Evening

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 18—Bomb-wise Londoners went into their second successive night without an alert tonight for one of their longest raid-free periods since September.

The British capital had a similar bombless period last week, ending after 43 hours and 51 minutes with a major pounding from the Nazis the night of December 8.

Adding to the mystery of the Luftwaffe's absence was the fact that the Channel was clear of mist for the first time in weeks, although the sky was cloudy.

Mannheim Attacked Again

Keeping up its own air offensive, the R. A. F. roared through last night's rain squalls to blast the German industrial center of Mannheim for the second straight night, the Air Ministry announced. German-held Channel ports and airdromes also were attacked.

An Admiralty communique tonight said British motor torpedo boats sank an armed supply ship of between 6,000 and 7,000 tons off the Belgian coast early today.

Enemy Escort Ship Also Hit

"The enemy supply ship," a communique said, "was seen to break up and sink. Fire was opened with machine guns from the enemy ship just before she sank, but this fire was ineffective.

"An enemy escort ship, a vessel of the trawler type, was then engaged by machine-gun fire from our torpedo boats and hit. A torpedo was fired at the enemy trawler and an explosion was felt by our craft and the enemy ship ceased firing.

"No casualties or damage were sustained by any of our forces."

The Government announced compensation for all adult citizens killed or injured as a result of "enemy action." Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons the plan would apply to injuries already incurred.

WARNED ANEW, BRITAIN GIRDS FOR INVASION

Defense Lines Tightened. 36-Year-Old Class Ordered To Register

Government Admits Army Must Strike On Axis Soil To Win War

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 18—Newly warned against the danger of German invasion, Great Britain has mobilized a million Home Guardsmen and thousands of coast defense and mobile troops in her constant vigil for the approach of Adolf Hitler's threatened armadas.

Moreover, today the Government officially admitted that the empire could not win the war until the British army had "struck—and struck deep—into the Axis countries."

A Ministry of Information spokesman said the British blockade would weaken Germany and Italy, and the navy and air force would shake the confidence of Adolf Hitler and his totalitarian partner, Benito Mussolini.

Army As Decisive Weapon

"But the weapon which ultimately will enforce submission of the enemy is the army," the spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Britons 36 years old were ordered to register January 17-18 for duty with the armed forces.

The new call-up by the Ministry of Labor and National Service is expected to make about 250,000 more men available for Britain's fast-expanding army.

War Office figures said Britain now has about 2,000,000 men doing military service, with another 1,000,000 in the Home Guard. Registration under the Conscription Act begins at the age of 19.

Britain Prepares For "Der Tag"

Truckload after truckload of military supplies speed along coastal highways of this island kingdom, in preparation for Hitler's long-awaited der Tag.

The War Office has issued new restrictions against the wearing of uniforms by unauthorized persons, presumably to guard against fifth-column operations; and the Admiralty called for volunteers for the Marine Corps.

Noting Cabinet Minister Lord Beaverbrook's warning that "the enemy is making preparations for the invasion of Britain even before springtime comes," observers said the new threat is particularly grave because the Germans might attempt either a mass invasion or isolated raids to relieve the pressure on the Italians in Albania and Africa.

Moon And Tides Favor Invasion

The moon and tides will favor invasion or raids from now until Christmas, and attackers would have the benefit of Channel fogs and 16-hour-long nights.

"Naturally we're on the alert," a British spokesman said. "It would be just like Hitler to try to spoil our Christmas or at least try to make us nervous by moving men and boats around on his side of the Channel."

The War Office issued a statement asserting "there is no closed season for invasion."

One patrol of Home Guardsmen noted in a coastal area was armed with American Springfield rifles and Browning [illegible]-shot automatic rifles.

London Finds Help Put on Realistic Basis.

LONDON, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Authoritative circles said today that Britons felt that President Roosevelt's statement yesterday on the subject of aid to this country had put the whole question on a realistic basis.

These persons said that they considered that the President cleared the ground by removing the issue from the realm of dollars and cents, and that it was to the interest of the United States to find ways of putting into Great Britain's hands means of hastening the end of the war.

Land-Plane Flights to Lisbon, Halted Nov. 11, Are Resumed

LONDON, Dec. 18 (AP).—Civil land-plane flights to Lisbon, Portugal, have been resumed after a recent temporary suspension, Capt. Harold H. Balfour, Under Secretary for Air, announced today.

The land-plane service, providing connections for trans-Atlantic Clipper planes and for American steamships calling at Lisbon, was suspended on Nov. 11. Balfour said difficulties which necessitated this action had been surmounted. Flights twice a week by flying boats have continued without interruption.

Says Good Peace Aims Need Good Bomb Aims

LONDON, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Hugh Dalton, the Minister of Economic Warfare, speaking today at a Fabian Society luncheon, declared "we shall attain no good peace aims hereafter unless we have good bomb aims now."

He said that Great Britain would "soon give the world a fresh definition of our war aims."

Red-Organized Women Decry London Milk Prices

"Shame" And "Disgraceful," They Shout At Meeting With Food Ministry Official

London, Dec. 18 (AP)—An angry deputation of women organized by the London district Communist party protested at the Ministry of Food today over the increased price and shortage of milk.

"Shame" and "disgraceful," the women cried throughout a half-hour meeting with Sir Henry French, who received them on behalf of Lord Woolton, Food Minister.

Dr. H. E. Magee, of the Ministry health staff, also was berated when he declined to discuss the question of free distribution of cod liver oil. As he attempted to leave, the women rushed the door to bar the way, but he forced a passage.

Then the women trooped out shouting "we want more and cheaper milk." Police ushered them from the building.

Britain Revamps Raid News Service

LONDON, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Home Security announced today that it had decided to withdraw its representatives from the Ministry of Information.

Spokesmen for the Home Security Ministry at the Information Ministry had answered reporters' questions concerning air raids on Britain. Those inquiries in the future, it was stated, will have to be addressed directly to the Ministry of Home Security.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—P. F. Bennett, Conservative, was elected without opposition today to fill the House of Commons seat of the late Neville Chamberlain.

British Highway Toll Fourth of Air Raids'

LONDON, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—British highway accidents are killing one-fourth as many persons as air raids, it was officially disclosed today.

Frederick Montague, parliamentary secretary of the Transport Ministry, said that 1,146 had died in motor accidents last month, as compared with 4,588 dead in air raids.

A little more than half the total of November victims were killed during air-raid blackouts.

In fifteen months of war, Mr. Montague said, 11,424 persons had been killed on roads, an increase of 3,141 over the fifteen months preceding the war.

Swiss Chase Foreign Planes

BERNE, Switzerland, Thusday, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Swiss High Command this morning reported a new violation of Swiss territory by "foreign warplanes" during the night.

Swiss anti-aircraft batteries were in action and Swiss fighting planes rose into the darkness to pursue the invaders who, the High Command said, "crossed the Jura in a southeasterly direction." This, Swiss pointed out, is the route frequently used in the past by British raiders on their way to Italy.

Western Prince Survivor Tells Of Grim Rescue

James Bone, English Editor, Relates Ordeal in Night; 140 Saved, 17 Missing

(James Bone, London editor of "The Manchester Guardian," who was a passenger on the British liner Western Prince, torpedoed Saturday, cabled "The Baltimore Sun" the following account of the disaster from the British port where survivors were landed.)

A NORTHWESTERN BRITISH PORT, Dec. 18.—One hundred and forty passengers and crew of the liner Western Prince, torpedoed in the Atlantic on Saturday, were landed here today from a cargo steamer which courageously came to their rescue.

Her name cannot be given at present, but it will always be remembered by the rescued so long as they live. Nothing could exceed the skill, resource and complete hospitality which the captain, his officers and crew gave us.

The Western Prince was torpedoed about 6 o'clock in the morning darkness, with strong seas running. The captain drove the engines astern to relieve the pressure on the bulkheads. The torpedo started a red glow, just before the ship plunged. We heard two blasts on the whistle. "That's the old man's (Captain John Reed's) last words. good by to you," said a sailor near me in Lifeboat No. 3.

Lingered for "a Bit of Looting"

Six passengers and eleven of the crew are missing, including Capt. Reed, a Scotsman of fifty-six, heavily built, deliberate, with the look of a man of strong resolution. It's not thought by his colleagues that he intended to go down with the ship, but that events and his own sense of responsibility to others brought that end about.

Capt. Charlton, a former captain of the Furness Withy Line, who played a large part in the conduct of the departure and the rescue, told me Capt. Reed had handed him his overcoat and had told him to have a lifeboat around later. Capt. Charlton thought Capt. Reed's intention was to try for a boat or a raft at the last moment.

The second officer, R. F. White, who remained with Capt. Reed, was rescued from a raft before the rescue ship was boarded. Lifeboat No. 3 tried to rescue White but the rope slipped and he was carried past. The third man who remained aboard the Western Prince was Franks, a steward, who had a personal attachment to the captain. He was seen by one of the last passengers off the ships with the purser's key going down to get the Spitfire fund raised by the crew to bring it to safety.

Another passenger told me that Franks, a taciturn man with dark hair and a grim humor, said when pressed to hurry that he was staying on, that he was going "to do a bit of looting."

Crushed Against Ship's Side

Gordon Scott, financial adviser to the Canadian Ministry of Munitions and Supply, who was one of the four members of their mission on board the Western Prince, is missing, with little hope that he survives. He was in a motor lifeboat which was upset at the side of the rescue ship. He was seen holding on to a rope and being crushed badly between the ship and the boat.

Afterward, without the rope, he was seen drifting away, his head all bloody. Mr. Sprouls, a young nautical-instrument expert born in Alberta and one-time mile champion of western Canada, told me this.

Sprouls lost his wife, who was in the cabin of the motorboat when it was upset, owing to the sudden movement of the occupants to one side as they got a blast from the ship's exhaust.

Scott's heart wasn't strong, and it was courageous of him to come over with the mission; Sir Andrew Duncan particularly desired his presence in London. He selected the motorboat himself, considering it a better risk. C. D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Munitions and Supply; W. C. Woodward, his assistant, and Edward Taylor, Director General of Munitions and Supply, were other members of the Canadian party and they are safe.

All boats were away within half an hour. There was no rush nor shouting. Even the officers gave their orders quietly as the passengers and crew of the liner took their places in the boats. Three babies were carried aboard without excitement and the women, who included a Mother Superior returning with novices after a strange experience in China, took their places with steady steps.

Nerves Kept Under Control

It was a company that recalled Kipling's stories—men from many parts of the Far East and America—experts in many techniques and trades, a major general with many decorations from the last war and a colonel who was one of the heroes of Dunkerque; banking advisers, a Treasury lawyer, a ship-builder, a Labor candidate (husband of Vera Brittain, English pacifist), were among them. Howe, afterwards in the rescue ship, said he had read of passengers fighting for places in a lifeboat but the crew's difficulty that dark morning was to get passengers into boats. "Everything was orderly," said Howe, "and nerves did not react on nerves."

The story of lifeboat No. 3 was much like that of the others. Passengers had prepared and most of them slept in their clothes. When I came on deck the port lifeboats had gone, and the starboard boats were filling. There was a heavy swell and in an effort to keep them off the ship's sides, oars were broken and lifeboat's sides were tested severely. It was a struggle to get away in that strong swell, but we drew away slowly and lay to about 100 yards away.

We saw lights on the ship and rowed back past the stern, looking out for stragglers in the water. The waves were about twenty feet high and when we came on another lifeboat it seemed a miniature thing. One boat covered up its people in a tarpaulin. All the boats used their sea anchors, which helped in the hard job of keeping their heads to wind with heavy oars. Many became sick, including a surprising number of sailors. They fell about, clogging the oarsmen and increasing congestion at the oars.

U-Boat Comes Close By

Newfoundlanders did especially good work at the oars, particularly Basil White, a youth whose talk and glance put new heart into weaker men. R. C. Thompson, head of a Sunderland shipbuilding firm, and J. Tansey, of the Bank of England, were at the oars all eight hours, with occasional rests when the sea anchors were out—a remarkable test of strength and endurance. The boats kept company as the only hope of succor. In No. 3 boat there was much congestion, as so many of the thirty-five occupants were sick. Beside me was Howe, and in front Gen. Macrae, who pushed manfully at an oar the whole time, while different men pulled on the others.

The momentous moment was when we heard the chief officer saying, not loudly: "Keep quiet. Don't show a light."

A shape appeared about twenty yards away on the starboard side of our lifeboat—the tower and part of the deck of the German submarine.

She submerged as she passed by and there was a flash which was thought to mean that photographs of us had been taken.

I watched closely the faces of the sailors and firemen massed in our bows watching the enemy. I saw no fear in their eyes but a terrible tension, like a white sh dow, passed over their faces.

"I thought he was going to give us the machine guns," said one sailor as he relaxed. Two steel helmets had disappeared instantly.

We had been taking in water as the seas broke over our sides and it was discovered that the after plug at the bottom of the boat was missing—probably bumped out as she struck the water.

The first mate did a good bit of work down in the bilge, almost flat on his face and wet through, recovering the plug and fixing it in its place. Fast bailing in cramped positions in a crowded boat followed. The boats still hung together—tiny objects in the high waves, while squalls of rain and hail passed over us.

"Why, There Is a Ship"

About six hours had gone—it seemed like six minutes—and then Warburton, a passenger, said in a conversational tone: "Why, there is a ship; I can see it quite plainly." He pointed without standing up. We had been hoping and praying for that, but there were no shouts.

When an officer was hoisted up, he could not see anything. The passenger was sure and soon we could all see the steamer and its smoke.

There was faster pulling at the oars then, but not much progress. Would she pass us, was the only question now. We fired five of our nine lights from a signal pistol.

It became clear that the ship was approaching, and about one and a half hours later No. 3 boat was in its lee. This freighter's captain maneuvered cleverly to give us shelter, and oil was thrown over to help us.

Just before we came alongside the sun came out—a grim smile as the boat seemed to hurl itself against the ship's side. Roderick Henderson, a two-year-old baby, was hoisted in a basket with a life line round him in case it capsized. The strong and young scurried up a rope ladder on the ship's side. The elderly and the women climbed up with ropes around their waists.

It took some time, and before we were all up the motor lifeboat came alongside and capsized. I saw the men standing on the upturned boat holding on to ropes, and some of them were in water. It seemed like a picture in a 'movie.' I found one's emotional qualities quite dulled and one took everything in a literal way, as by instinct, until it was all over and other boats came up and empty ones were allowed to drift away.

The Mother Superior came up in a basket, but Sister Muldoon, the young Irish novice, came up the ladder herself. Afterward I saw her wearing the overcoat of Capt. Reed, which Capt. Charlton had brought on board, but she did not know that. Sir Cecil Smith, the Treasury lawyer, and his wife climbed the ladder skillfully and Mr. Jick, of the Admiralty, went up and over us as in a drill.

One of the babies was in a case like a dog's box marked "Baby, with care." It came up in a basket and when Capt. Charlton, who had taken a personal interest in its packing, opened the case the infant crowed at him and he said, "Well, you sweet little thing."

The rescue ship, which had Malayans and Maltese in its crew, did wonders in succoring the weaker and ill among us. It was blowing up heavily at night and there would have been little chance of lifeboats riding out in those seas.

The line between wives and widows was a very close one that Saturday.

Howe Greets Officials

A WESTERN BRITISH PORT, Dec. 18 (AP).—A rescue ship today landed survivors of the 10,926-ton torpedoed liner Western Prince, including three babies saved in coal baskets.

At least sixteen persons, ten of them crewmen, aboard the British liner perished during the rescue work following the submarine attack 550 miles off the Irish coast.

A London advertising man, Percy Linden, returning from the United States, found himself a nursemaid shortly after the three infants, the eldest of whom was eighteen months, were hauled aboard the rescue ship in coal baskets.

(Sources in New York said that among the rescued were Mrs. George Alexis Bankhoff, English wife of a Russian-born surgeon, and her baby. Mrs. Bankhoff was reported in a Scottish hospital suffering from exhaustion. Sir Cecil Thomas Carr and Lady Carr have landed safely, friends in New York said.)

Scott Was Well Known Financier

MONTREAL, Dec. 18 (CP).—Gordon Scott, fifty-three years old, was known in Quebec Province as a parliamentarian and a financier. He had been with the Department of Munitions and Supply and its predecessors as a financial adviser since early in the war.

Scott was a member of the Quebec Legislative Council—the provincial upper House—to which he had been twice appointed. He also was a former Quebec provincial treasurer.

He was born in Montreal Oct. 1, 1887, and was educated at Montreal High School. He became associated with the Montreal accounting firm of P. S. Ross & Sons, of which he was a senior partner at the time of his death.

Scott was married in 1914 to Mary Edith Anderson, of Montreal, who survives. They have a daughter, Helen Marjorie.

16 PERSONS DIED IN SEA DISASTER

Western Prince Survivors Arrive in Britain.

HOWE AMONG THOSE RESCUED

But Scott, His Adviser, Perished After Ship Was Torpedoed.

A BRITISH WEST COAST PORT, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Sixteen persons, including six passengers and ten members of the crew, probably perished in the torpedo sinking Saturday of the liner Western Prince, it was disclosed today when the Canadian Minister of Munitions, C. D. Howe and other survivors reached this port.

A rescue ship landed fifty-three passengers of the Western Prince and ninety-nine members of the crew.

Among the known dead were Gordon Scott of Montreal, financial adviser to Mr. Howe, and Capt. John Reed, who stayed with his ship.

"I was in the last boat to get away," Mr. Howe said, "and we stayed around to pick up the captain, who hailed us and said he might need us. Capt. Reed, Second Officer R. F. White and Steward Franks were the last men to remain aboard. White was picked up by a raft, but the captain and Franks were lost."

Except for Mr. Scott, all of Mr. Howe's party were rescued. They included Major-Gen. A. E. Macrae, who did special work in Ottawa for the British Government, and E. P. Taylor of Toronto and Col. W. C. Woodward of Vancouver, executive assistants to the Canadian Minister.

Lifeboat Capsized.

Mr. Scott, former Quebec Provincial Treasurer, and six others were lost when a lifeboat containing twenty-six persons struck the side of a rescue ship and capsized. Mr. Scott fell between the lifeboat and the ship and his body was not recovered.

All the sixty passengers were said to have been in bed when the torpedo struck. The Canadian party had stayed up until after midnight the previous night "to get safely by Friday, the 13th."

Names of the others lost were not imediately available.

The 10,926-ton Western Prince, which sailed from New York on December 6 for England, was torpedoed 550 miles off Irelend.

"Our rescue was a wonderful piece of seamanship," Mr. Howe said. "They did a remarkable job. We're very glad to be here and we're feeling fine."

Mr. Howe, who was born in America, stood on the bridge of the rescue ship in a downpour of rain while a tender with officials and newspaper men pulled alongside. He and the others showed no signs of serious effects from their experience.

Mrs. James Tamblyn of Norfolk, Va., the wife of a Food Ministry employee, was among the survivors reaching this port. It was her third wartime crossing.

She brought along a book in a waterproof bag "just in case I'd be bored in the lifeboat." When she disembarked she kissed the sailors on the rescue ship.

Percy Linden, London advertising man returning from Canada, spent most of his time aboard the rescue vessel pacifying three babies, the oldest 18 months old, who were hauled aboard in coal baskets. They arrived here apparently none the worse for their experience.

London Editor Rescued.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—James Bone, London editor of the Manchester Guardian, who was a passenger on the British liner Western Prince torpedoed Saturday, was reported "safe and well" by the Guardian in a cablegram today.

Capt. Charlton Is Safe.

Mrs. W. A. Charlton received word today at her home at 274 Ancon avenue, Pelham, that her husband, former staff captain and master of the Queen of Bermuda, who was on the Western Prince, had landed safely last night at a Scottish port. Capt. Charlton six months ago was master of the Nerissa, which was in Caribbean service, and was on his way to England presumably for a new assignment.

WITH WESTERN PRINCE

A WESTERN BRITISH PORT, DEC. 18-(AP)-BEFORE CAPTAIN JOHN REED WENT DOWN WITH HIS SHIP, THE TORPEDOED BRITISH LINER MERCHANT PRINCE, HE GAVE THREE BLASTS OF THE WHISTLE AS A FAREWELL TO THE RESCUE SHIP THAT SAVED 152 PASSENGERS AND CREWMEN.

"CAPTAIN REED, SECOND OFFICER R.F.WHITE AND STEWARD FRANKS WERE THE LAST MEN TO REMAIN ABOARD. WHITE WAS PICKED UP BY A RAFT, BUT REED AND FRANKS WERE LOST."

FRANKS, SAFE IN A LIFEBOAT, WENT BACK FOR THE CREW'S CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SPITFIRE (AIRPLANE) FUND, AND RETURNED TOO LATE FOR A LIFEBOAT.

SUPER DEFENSE COUNCIL OF THREE KEY MEN TO BE CREATED BY ROOSEVELT

Knox, Stimson And Knudsen To Be Named To Speed Production

Congress Would Give New Group Authority To Get Job Done

[Special from the New York Times]

Washington, Dec. 18—Agreement in principle on a plan for reorganizing the defense high command was reached today between President Roosevelt, Secretaries Stimson and Knox, James V. Forrestal, Under Secretary of the Navy, and Robert P. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of War.

This agreement was reached with a view to putting the utmost speed into the production of vital war supplies for the United States and Great Britain.

As submitted by these four advisers, and left for the President to fill in the detail, the proposal calls in substance for an overall defense council composed of Secretaries Stimson and Knox and William S. Knudsen, industrial member of the Defense Advisory Commission.

No Other Changes In Setup

No other structural changes would be made in the present setup. Other members of the advisory commission would continue their functions as originally designated by the President. The procurement agencies of the War and Navy departments would proceed under present arrangements, which are products of many years' planning.

But the new "supreme" council would be charged specifically with getting the rearmament job done and, according to the plan as worked out upon request of the President during his absence in the Caribbean, would be clothed by him and Congress with the authority necessary to that end.

Mr. Knudsen might continue as the principal industrial representative of the commission, or he might be supplemented by another, but he would speak for the full commission in the triumvirate. Actually, therefore, he would be considered the day-to-day chairman of the advisory commission.

Work Up To Council.

The President would remain the nation's chief defense officer, even over the three-man council, but the every-day planning and operation of the re-armament program would be the primary responsibility of this body.

Just how much of the above was included in the agreement "in principle" between the President and his advisers could not be learned tonight. The plan was before Mr. Roosevelt, however, and he made known to those who conferred with him his determination to follow its general lines in an attempt to step up the speed of defense.

Suggestions Used

Before he left on his recent trip the President made certain suggestions as to how greater efficiency could be infused into the defense mechanism. Several of these are believed to have been included in the Stimson - Knox - Patterson - Forrestal plan.

One of the President's suggestions was that Knudsen move his desk into the White House and become the President's chief liaison officer on the industrial side of the program. The plan as submitted, however, is understood to include Mr. Knudsen in a more independent status.

Whatever the details, a White House announcement of some form of re-alignment of the defense setup appears to be indicated for some time during the next few days.

Hull Urges Production Of Arms Be Speeded Up

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—While Secretary Hull urged that America's arms production be speeded up toward a wartime basis, Administration aides on Capitol Hill prepared to push for legislation implementing President Roosevelt's plan to lend war supplies to Britain.

One expert estimated that this plan might add about $2,500,000,000 to the $15,000,000,000 authorized and appropriated by the present Congress for United States defense.

How the additional financing would be handled was not officially explained, but Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, already has asked Congress to increase the national debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $60,000,000,000 or $65,000,000,000. The last-named figure, financial experts believed, would boost the Government's borrowing powers enough to cover British war requirements, at least in the near future.

Urges Production Boost

Hull, in disclosing at a press conference that he had been urging that the production of arms, planes, ships and other materials be brought as nearly as possible to a war basis, said that this was in complete harmony with the President's plan.

DEFENSE ORDERS GET RIGHT OF WAY

Roosevelt Widens Power of Priority Board.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt by executive order broadened the powers of the new Priorities Board today to assure a right of way for defense orders over private and export contracts.

He amended a previous executive act applying to munitions orders placed with manufacturers dealing directly with the War and Navy departments. The amendment stipulates that "all other naval and army contracts and orders shall take priority over all deliveries for private account or for export."

Defense commission officials said that the effect of the amendment was to extend the board's authority over sub-contracts for munitions, as well as primary contractors.

British Said to Need $2,500,000,000 in Arms

2 to 3 Billions in Aid After War Held Required

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP).—At least $2,500,000,000 worth of war supplies would be necessary, an authoritative source predicted today, to meet Great Britain's needs under any "lease-lend" program of American assistance. This estimate, he said, was over and above the $2,000,000,000 worth of munitions and material for which Britain has placed orders in this country on a "cash-and-carry" basis.

Britain's military needs, this official said, probably would constitute only one part of the broad question of assistance involvved. Assuming a British victory in the end, he said it was his belief that from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 in addition would be necessary to rehabilitate the besieged, bomb-wrecked country when peace came.

Planned Planes

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 18—Defense officials said today that none of several thousand combat planes ordered by the War Department since last summer under the army's $1,000,000,000 program was expected off the assembly lines until well into the new year.

In some instances the War Department has not yet completed negotiations for increased facilities to manufacture the planes.

Since July 1, the army has ordered 18,641 planes of all types, costing approximately $1,000,000,000, official records showed. Except for training planes of relatively simple design, warplanes of new types require many months for tooling, it was explained. Actual delivery schedules,, however, have been kept confidential.

18,000 Planes Per Year Seen By June

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Aviation Editor

New York, Dec. 18—An output of 1,500 to 1,700 warplanes a month—a rate of 18,000 to 20,000 a year—will be achieved by American factories in the next seven months, reliable sources in the aircraft manufacturing industry estimated today.

Considerably shy of the periodic forecasts of production since last August, these figures are based on the available engines, machine tools, aluminum forgings, magnesium castings and the supply of trained personnel.

Overly Optimistic

This fact can be added to the statement of William S. Knudsen, production chief of the National Defense Commission, last week that aircraft production was thirty per cent. behind schedule—the industry itself appears to have been overly optimistic.

Figures submitted to the Defense Commission by manufacturers last summer, intended to picture the production peak which could be reached in January, included all types of airplanes, private, commercial and military.

That led Knudsen on August 8 to announce that the rate of warplane manufacture was 10,800 a year and would pass the 18,000 mark in January.

The actual production of military aircraft in this calendar year will be slightly in excess of 5,000 machines. The trade press for months has posted a red light on forecasts of mass production until the influence of new engine factories became felt in 1941.

With the more conservative figures as a barometer, warplane output during the coming year takes on a much less dismal appearance than that reflected in the Kundsen statement. The engine problem, probably the worst, has been made more critical by shipments of engines to England.

By midsummer, 1941, on the basis of the industry's own revised figures, about 250,000 workmen will be employed in aircraft and engine plants.

That compares with 400,000 workmen now reported to be employed in German plants and a like number in England. The ultimate goal in domestic plants is between 500,000 and 600,000.

NEW BOMBER READY

Seaplane for Norwegians to Have Test on Coast.

ELSINORE, Cal., Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The first of a fleet of new 24 N-3 Northrup seaplane patrol bombers, completed at the company's Hawthorne factory under a Norwegian order, was ready today for tests on Lake Elsinore.

A company announcement said the craft, and others expected to be finished at the rate of one a week, are "destined for the arm of the Norwegian air force operating from the British Isles." The order was placed before the Nazi invasion of the country calls for twenty-four ships in a $1,500,000 contract.

A 1,200-horse-power Wright cyclone engine powers the craft, which is equipped with extra large pontoons to support a capacity bomb load of 2,000 pounds. The company said its speed, fully loaded, can exceed 235 miles an hour.

It carries a crew of three, mounts six guns, has a forty-nine-foot wingspread, is thirty-eight feet long and fifteen feet high.

Army Ski Units Out In Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The army organized a ski unit at its Alaskan base here today and, with thirteen inches of new snow on the ground, started studying tactics of winter warfare.

While ninety men were mastering ski patrol operations under the instruction of Russell Dow, former Dartmouth University skier, other units were out on the snow with anti-aircraft guns studying the art of camouflage.

British Base in Iceland Hinted

Admiralty's Danger Warning Indicates Fleet Anchorage Is Established There.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—A routine announcement by the navy Hydrographic Office indicated today that the British may have established a fleet anchorage in Iceland, protected by a mine field.

On the basis of a warning published by the British Admiralty, the Hydrographic Office included notice in its daily memorandum to mariners that a dangerous area exists in Hvalfjord, a fjord about fifteen miles north of Reykjavik, the Icelandic capital.

Officials said that they had no information what the danger was, but that "it may be mines."

The location of the dangerous area showed that it stretches across the upper reaches of the fjord in about the area that a mine field would occupy. Behind it lies an expanse of deep water, sixty-six feet deep in some places, which, the authorities said, would make "a splendid fleet anchorage." It is thought possible that British and Canadian naval vessels patrolling the northern ship lanes may be using the fjord as a base. Another suggestion was that the area may have been mined to prevent German naval craft from seizing it.

The Hydrographic Office bulletin also disclosed that the Icelandic Government has issued regulations prohibiting ships from approaching within 200 yards of certain parts of its coastline between sunset and sunrise, although they may enter or leave some of the ports, including Reykjavik, Harnarfjordur and Akranes and the anchorage of Eidisvik.

Small motor fishing craft are exempt from some of the restrictions, but even they are prohibited from proceeding beyond certain specified points.

Ambassador Phillips Is Due ... To Return To Rome Post Soon

Surprise Move Revealed By Hull Seen Possibly Connected With Italian Military Reserves

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 18—In a surprise move possibly connected with Italy's military difficulties, Secretary Hull announced today that Ambassador William Phillips would return to his post in Rome immediately after the holidays.

Phillips, a veteran diplomat, has been seriously ill and there had been indications that he was not likely to go back to Italy for many months, if at all.

Says Envoy Is Ready

Hull said the Ambassador had recovered from the illness, however, and was ready to resume his duties. He has been in the United States about three months.

In view of the Italian military reverses in North Africa and Albania, and hints that these were having an effect upon the morale of the Italian people, the State Department was believed to be eager to make use of Phillips' long diplomatic experience as an observer and interpreter of events in the Mediterranean area.

Leahy Expected To Go

Phillips, as Ambassador, would have access to key Government officials and other sources of information usually closed to diplomats of lesser rank.

Secretary Hull also said Admiral William D. Leahy, new Ambassador to France, probably would leave after the holidays to take up his duties at Vichy.

With France's internal political situation confused by the ouster of Pierre Laval as Vice-Premier, Hull disclosed that Robert D. Murphy, Charge d'Affaires at Vichy, was leaving there to inspect American consular offices in various French colonies.

Called Routine Inspection

The Secretary of State said it was a routine inspection trip and he did not know whether Murphy would meet Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of French African forces.

In some informed quarters, however, the belief was expressed that Murphy's trip was intended also to check on political conditions in the French colonies.

Expects To Leave U. S. Dec. 31, Phillips Says

Boston, Dec. 18 (AP)—Ambassador William Phillips, maintaining silence on the international situation, said tonight he expected to leave the United States for his Rome post by clipper December 31.

Fit and strong after a three-month convalescence at his Beverly and Boston homes from the effects of pneumonia, the Ambassador said he would be "delighted to return to Rome to renew friendships there."

He said, however, that the "sad part of it all" was that he would have to leave his wife and five children in this country.

Japanese Give A 'Last Chance' To Dutch Indies

Second Mission Off to Deal for Oil, With Threat of Force as an Alternative

SHANGHAI, Dec. 18 (AP).—Japan will give the Dutch East Indies a "last chance" to conclude an economic agreement in forthcoming trade negotiations, responsible Japanese sources here indicated today.

A delegation headed by former Japanese Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa is en route to Batavia, Java, and is scheduled to open the negotiations early in January. This will be Japan's second attempt to obtain a favorable economic position in the East Indies, and authoritative Japanese quarters asserted that "it will be the last."

They declined to say what would happen if the new discussions failed, but informed neutral quarters in Tokio have reported direct action might be taken.

Yoshizawa succeeds Ichizo Kobayashi, Japanese Minister of Commerce, who returned to Tokio in November after prolonged talks which he admitted were virtually fruitless.

The main Japanese ambition is to obtain ironbound guaranties for the purchase of oil from the Dutch East Indies.

Reliable informants said Kobayashi had asked for the purchase of the Indies' entire production on long-term credits. The Dutch counter-offer admittedly was unsatisfactory, the quota offered being considered by the Japanese as too small. It was understood that Dutch authorities also flatly refused to discuss credits.

It was reported further that the Batavia government was unwilling to sell crude oil from which the Japanese could extract high-test aviation gasoline.

Besides tha economic phase, Yoshizawa is expected to broach questions designed to give Japan greater political influence in the rich Dutch possessions, in line with Tokio's program for a "Greater East Asia." He is known as a skillful and tenacious negotiator.

It was believed the impending Batavia negotiations would be shorter than the previous ones, regardless of the outcome.

It was recalled that the Tokio newspaper "Asahi" recently pointed to the possibilities of forcible measures. Informed quarters express the belief that this would be Japan's answer should Yoshizawa, like Kobayashi, return empty-handed.

Significantly, the Japanese press lately itemized a series of alleged anti-Japanese incidents throughout the Dutch East Indies, one of which was called "an insult to the Emperor" when a Japanese naval officer was barred from entering Java.

Missionaries May Get U. S. Visas to Free China

Report Chiang Kai-shek Willing to Aid Work in Interior

SHANGHAI, Dec. 18 (AP).—American missionaries here reported today that the American Embassy at Chungking had indicated willingness to grant visas to missionaries desiring to leave Japanese-occupied areas to carry on their work in free China.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government already has offered to pay expenses of those who want to enter unoccupied areas. An obstacle has been encountered heretofore in the fact that the State Department in Washington makes no distinction between occupied territory and free China, and American consuls have refused permits or passport visas for travel into the interior of China.

The missionaries here explained that as a result of the Chungking Embassy's action, it was not now necessary to refer the project for continuation of missionary work in free China to the Missionary Council in New York for handling through the State Department.

The American Consulate-General here said, however, it had received no information thus far on the embassy's reported move.

French Missionary Held On Spy Charge

Japanese Claim Evidence On Father Anatole Huse Connecting Him With Melville James Cox

Kumamoto, Japan, Thursday, Dec. 19 (AP)—The arrest of Father Anatole Huse, 71-year-old French missionary, on September 10 was disclosed today by police who were said to have gathered evidence connecting him with the espionage case involving the late Melville James Cox, British correspondent at Shanghai, and other Britons last July.

Cox, seized in Shanghai simultaneously with the arrest on spy charges of more than a dozen prominent British businessmen in Japan, was reported by the Japanese to have committed suicide by leaping from a window of the building where he was being questioned.

Father Huse was taken three days ago before the district procurator's office for indictment on charges of violating the military resources secrets protection law, the military criminal law, the wireless telephone law and the postal law.

U. S. FILES PROTEST

Jamming of Shanghai Radio Laid to Japanese.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The American Consul-General, Frank P. Lockhart, protested to the Japanese Consul-General here today against the jamming of the American-owned radio station XMHA whenever the station attempted to broadcast.

The station manager, E. L. Healey, told Mr. Lockhart that the interference had been traced to Japanese warships anchored in the Whangpoo River. He asserted that the jamming presumably was carried on in an effort to force the station to reduce its power output and to submit the broadcasts of a news commentator, Carroll Alcott, to the Japanese censor.

Similar occurrences in the last three years have brought numerous American protests to the authorities, but with virtually no results.

Chinese Painting For Roosevelt

Chungking, Dec. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt soon will receive a painting by the noted Chinese artist, Chang Shu-ching, entitled "Doves of Peace" and depicting a hundred doves in various forms and colors. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek inscribed on the painting the Chinese characters for "justice and peace."

Siamese Bomb 7 French Towns In Indo-China

Bangkok Reports Reprisal Raids as Artillery Fire Marks Border Warfare

BANGKOK, Thailand, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Thai (Siamese) Air Force was reported by the high command tonight to have carried out large-scale reprisal raids on seven important towns in French Indo-China. The bombed towns include Thakhek, Savannakhet and Vientiane, capital of the Laos District, which the high command said were attacked with great success.

The Bangkok radio said that in addition to the seven towns named by the high command Battambang, Sisophon and Siemriep, in northwestern Cambodia, were "bombed beyond recognition."

[These three lie near the tremendous ruins of Angkor, some of the most famous archeological relics of Asia, long buried in the jungles, remnants of a lost civilization of nearly a thousand years ago.]

The radio urged the people of Indo-China to look at the newly made ruins if French authorities would permit them to do so.

A communique yesterday described recent French attacks on Thailand as replies to Bangkok's suggestion that a peace delegation be dispatched to Bangkok. It added that French acts of aggression prevented peaceful settlement of the border fighting.

Border Warfare Continues

HANOI, French Indo-China, Dec. 18 (AP).—Warfare along the Indo-Chinese and Thai border, which resumed Monday, is continuing spasmodically, with artillery fire marking the latest battles, the French announced tonight.

The French declared that Thai gunners shelled Savannakhet and Thakhek and that the French replied, centering fire on Thai gunboats in the vicinity of Lakhon on the Mekong River.

Blackout of Lighthouse Reveals Slaying by Reds

HANOI, French Indo-China, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Advices from Pouloobi Island, at the tip of Cochin-China, said today the blackout of a lighthouse there disclosed that the keeper, a Frenchman, had been killed by communists on December 14.

Japanese Ship Reported Sunk

HONG KONG, Thursday, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Chinese Central News Agency reported today that Chinese guns had shelled and sunk a Japanese warship on Dec. 12 in the Yangtze near Anking, the Japanese-occupied capital of Anhwei Province. The type of warship was not stated nor were any other details given.

Japs Can't Shut Door —Grew Answers Tokio

Tokio, Dec. 19 (Thursday) (AP).—Responding to an address in which Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka said Japan desired only to see an end to trouble in China and war in Europe, U. S. Ambassador Joseph C. Grew declared today the United States must consider "not alone expressed intentions" but "facts and actions, too, regardless of the persuasive garb in which they may be dressed."

Both addresses were made at a luncheon of the America-Japan Society.

Matsuoka appealed to "the common sense of our two peoples to maintain calm judgment and quiet self-restraint in the face of an appalling, unprecedented world situation." He said that in East Asia Japan had "shut the door to no one."

Grew replying extemporaneously, stated flatly:

"The door is not to closed anywhere to anyone. The American people are firmly determined in certain matters."

TOKYO, DEC. 19-(THURSDAY)-(AP)-FOREIGN MINISTER YOSUKE MATSUOKA, ADDRESSING A LUNCHEON OF THE AMERICA-JAPAN SOCIETY, APPEALED TODAY TO "THE COMMON SENSE OF OUR TWO PEOPLES TO MAINTAIN CALM JUDGMENT AND QUIET SELF-RESTRAINT IN THE FACE OF AN APPALLING, UNPRECEDENTED WORLD SITUATION."

MATSUOKA DECLARED "I OWE IT TO CANDOR TO ADMIT THAT THE RELATIONS BETWEEN OUR TWO COUNTRIES ARE SEVERELY STRAINED," ADDING THAT HE FELT THE FUNDAMENTAL CAUSE OF THIS WAS "AMERICAN MISAPPREHENSION OF JAPAN'S AIMS AND ASPIRATIONS."

"CONTRARY TO THE IMPRESSIONS CURRENT IN AMERICA AND ELSEWHERE," HE ASSERTED "JAPAN IS NOT WAGING AN IMPERIALIST WAR OF GREED AND AGGRESSION IN CHINA. WE ARE ENGAGED IN A MORAL CRUSADE.

"LAUGH OR SHRUG YOUR SHOULDERS IF YOU LIKE, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, BUT I AM SURE TIME WILL PROVE IT."

THE LUNCHEON, AT WHICH U.S. AMBASSADOR JOSEPH C.GREW PRESIDED, WAS IN HONOR OF ADMIRAL KICHISABURO NOMURA, NEWLY-APPOINTED JAPANESE AMBASSADOR TO THE UNITED STATES.

MATSUOKA DECLARED HE CONSIDERED THE NOMURA APPOINTMENT "AN ELOQUENT INDICATION OF WHAT MY GOVERNMENT HAS IN MIND" REGARDING JAPANESE-AMERICAN RELATIONS, AND DESCRIBED NOMURA AS "A VEHICLE OF INTERNATIONAL TRUST AND CONFIDENCE."

AMBASSADOR GREW, IN INTRODUCING MATSUOKA, SAID HEBELIEVED THAT FROM THE FOREIGN MINISTER'S INTIMATE ASSOCIATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES "HE HAS THE SAME SORT OF PERSONAL AFFECTION FOR OUR COUNTRY AS I HAVE FOR JAPAN."

MENTIONING NO NAMES, MATSUOKA DECLARED:

"IT SEEMS TO ME THAT THIS WORLD IS TOO WIDE POLITICALLY AND TOO NARROW ECONOMICALLY. OUR POLITICAL EFFORTS HAD BETTER BE RESTRICTED ONLY TO THOSE SPHERES IN WHICH WE ARE VITALLY INTERESTED, NOT EXTENDED TO OTHER PEOPLE'S DOMAINS."

OF THE JAPANESE-GERMAN-ITALIAN PACT, HE SAID A SECTION OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE HAD "MISUNDERSTOOD OUR PURPOSE AND ACCUSE JAPAN OF HARBORING HOSTILE INTENTIONS TOWARD AMERICA. THIS IS ABSURD AND UNTRUE."

MATSUOKA SAID JAPAN'S "OLY DESIRE IS TO BE LET ALONE ON THE ONE HAND, AND ON THE OTHER TO SEE THE TROUBLE IN CHINA AND WAR I[illegible] EUROPE BROUGHT SPEEDILY TO AN END WITHOUT ADDING MORE PARTICIPANTS, PARTICULARLY SUCH A POWERFUL ONE AS AMERICA."

AMERICAN PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR, HE SAID, WOULD CAUSE THE WORLD TO FACE "ARMAGEDDON THAT WOULD END IN THE TOTAL DESTRUCTION OF OUR CULTURE AND CIVILIZATION. I BESEECH MY AMERICAN FRIENDS TO THINK TWICE, THRICE, NAY A THOUSAND TIMES, BEFORE THEY TAKE A LEAP THAT MAY PROVE FATAL TO ALL HUMANITY."

Peasants Quartered in Castles During Great Nazi Migration

Hitler Presses History's Most Startling Resettlement Scheme Despite Handicap of the War.

DEC-18—MOVED—DEC-16

By PRESTON GROVER.

BERLIN, Nov. 25 (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—In one of history's most staggering resettlement schemes, nearly 500,000 "Volkdeutsche"—some pleased, some bewildered—are being jammed into a Germany which Adolf Hitler said last week is already compelled to fight for more and richer living space.

Some were rooted up from their homes along the Black Sea; some come from the Sovietized Baltic States, some from Russian-held Poland. Many of these transplanted Germans have been settled in new homes in German-held Poland and East Prussia, but nearly 200,000 more have been crowded into ancient castles and second and third-rate hotels in recent weeks, awaiting the time when homes can be found for them.

This is one of the most difficult tasks undertaken by the Nazi Government. Its stated purpose is to consolidate people of pure German race in one nation and under one leadership.

Peasants Occupy Castles.

This correspondent returned recently from a tour of some of the congested regions of south-central Germany, where these wandering Germans are packed into winter quarters.

It is generally assumed that many will be sent into Lorraine and other parts of conquered France to bolster German control of that territory. Others probably will be sent to the rich farm lands of eastern Germany, where it has been difficult to keep a solid farming population on the land.

Outside Wuerzburg, 2,500 Bessarabian Germans were being quartered in a gigantic sixteenth century castle. Day laborers, peasants, sharecroppers, craftsmen and school teachers milled about in bewildered fashion in the rambling building.

It is an enormous place, but not designed to shelter 2,500 persons. However, it seemed that every effort was made to keep them healthy and comfortable in these temporary quarters.

The castle had its own hospital, a nursery, a corps of Red Cross nurses, schools, a slaughter house, a laundry and a huge general kitchen where most of the food was cooked in pots of field army proportions.

In one old castle, each family had a room. Often, however, walls of rooms were lined almost to the ceiling with bunks. Some of the families had a dozen or more children. One had eighteen.

Confused and Disheartened.

Many persons I saw in the castles and others in smaller groups seemed confused and disheartened by the tremendous migration that had sent them over hundreds of miles of strange territory to a land which their ancestors had left more than a hundred years ago.

For the most part, this group is truly German in origin. They are the great-grandchildren of thousands of Germans who left beaten Germany at the end of the Napoleonic wars and fled eastward to the Black Sea coast.

In the century and a quarter since then, they have mixed to some extent, with Russian, Rumanian and other Black Sea populations. Most of them retained their German characteristics and German speech, however.

While some seemed unhappy and somewhat sick over the long journey behind and the unknown tasks ahead, most of them were docile. Some were even eager to see their new homes.

All were seeking to master the Hitler salute.

Hitler's Reason Stated.

Many said they had lost their farms and been loaded into trucks, ships or wagons for the long journey from the Black Sea coast.

One of the Bessarabians who had been a moderately wealthy landowner said that local laws compelled them to decide whether they would remain Germans or permit their children to be taught Rumanian, Russian or some other tongue.

Moreover, he continued, they were under pressure from Germany, Rumania and other localities to move.

More than a year ago Hitler gave this reason for bringing the German bloc back to the Reich:

"East and southeast Europe is filled with disrelated fragments of German folk. . . . Precisely in these groups lie the causes of disturbances between countries. We have the task in a far-sighted recording of Europe to resettle them in Germany and in this way relieve at least part of the ground for European conflicts."

From Varied Sections.

Some 12,000 persons of German blood have been brought back from Estonia and 51,000 from Lithuania, now occupied by Russia, and an additional 40,000 are expected, probably in the spring, from Lithuania.

From Russian-occupied Poland and sections of Russia east of Poland have come or are coming 160,000 more.

From Bessarabia and Bukovina—parts of Rumania ceded to Russia under German pressure—have come 45,000. Others come from Rumanian Dobruja and the part of Dobruja ceded by Rumania to Bulgaria.

One German official said that prolongation of the war had interfered with quick resettlement. He said it was notable that, despite the war, Germany was going ahead with efforts to settle peacefully the old problem of scattered German minorities.

Germans to Take Over Yugoslav Copper Mines

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The newspaper Vreme said today Germany is planning to take over the French-owned Bor copper mines in eastern Yugoslavia—the largest producers in Europe.

The newspaper said that German banking interests would absorb the majority of shares now held by the Kirabeau Bank in Paris.

20,000 Italians To Be Sent to India

BOMBAY, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Internment camps were reported today to have been prepared in India for at least 20,000 Italian prisoners captured in Egypt.

SPAIN RALLIES SHIPS TO BRING NEEDED GRAIN

Hopes To Obtain Supplies Of Wheat And Corn From Argentina

[By the Associated Press]

Madrid, Dec. 18—A plan to mobilize available Spanish ocean-going steamers and rush them to Argentina for wheat and corn was disclosed today as an urgent step in the Government's effort to cope with the food shortage.

Steamer owners offered all the ships at their disposal.

It is hoped here that the badly needed supplies will begin arriving before January 31.

British Approval Needed

Apart from the question of credits, however, British permission for ships to bring new supplies to Spain was necessary.

The scarcity of wheat has become so acute that a new stringent bread rationing is about to go into effect. Those who can afford other kinds of food would have their small bread apportionments cut so that more can be given to others.

The shortage is ascribed officially to these causes:

The country's reserves were used up in the Civil War and planting was radically reduced during those years.

Unfavorable weather has made crops extremely poor.

The present war has cut Spain off almost entirely from importation.

Qualified sources say 350,000 quintals (about 1,280,000 bushels) of corn has been placed at Spain's disposal. Negotiations are reported under way for 1,000,000 quintals of wheat.

NEW ROLE FOR ANTONESCU

Takes Foreign Portfolio—Bans [illegible]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 18 (AP)—General Ion Antonescu, Rumania's military dictator, Premier and Minister of National Defense, today appointed himself Foreign Minister. He announced that the outgoing Foreign Minister, Prince Luca Sturza, would be appointed to another post later.

Owners Offer Ships to Spain

MADRID, Dec. 18 (AP).—All Spanish owner of ships of 3,000 tons or more capable of making the trip to Argentina met today with the Naval Ministry, which is considering chartering all available vessels for transport of grain from South America. It was said that the ship owners offered use of any or all their vessels.

Gandhi Calls Holiday Truce

BOMBAY, Dec. 18 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, proclaimed a Christmas truce from Dec. 23 to Jan. 4 today in the Congress party's campaign against Indian participation in the war.

CADETS HEAR HITLER

But What Der Fuehrer Said Is Kept a Secret.

BERLIN, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler made an unannounced address at noon today in the Berlin Sports Palace to 5,000 cadets about to receive commissions.

The meeting was closed and Der Fuehrer's remarks were not published, but DNB, the official German news agency, said that he gave the young soldiers "an inspiring address to prepare them for the tack as leaders of the National Socialist army."

Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the army, also spoke.

Mexico Plans to Expand Navy

MEXICO CITY, Dec 18 (AP).—Government sources reported today the budget of the Navy Department might be increased to 40,000,000 pesos (about $8,000,000) for 1941 so that additional warships could be acquired. Persistent reports here said Mexico might obtain four to six destroyers from the United States as part of a mutual defense agreement.

Princess Juliana Notes Lack Of Cupboards At Mt. Vernon

Visits Washington's Home With Mrs. Roosevelt At Outset Of Three-Day Stay At White House

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 18—What especially interested Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands at Mount Vernon today was the lack of cupboard space in George Washington's home.

The Princess, a shy, rather wistful looking young woman but much prettier and slimmer than her pictures indicate, visited Mount Vernon with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the outset of her three-day stay at the White House.

Mrs. Horace M. Towner, resident director, showed Mrs. Roosevelt and the Princess through the main house and outside kitchen. At one door the Princess sought to step aside and let Mrs. Towner, an older woman, enter first.

Given Democratic Welcome

It was in the bedrooms in the main house that the Princess murmured her puzzlement that there seemed "so few cupboards."

The future Queen of the Netherlands, now a refugee in Canada with her two children, received a democratic welcome when she arrived this morning on her first visit to the United States.

She was greeted formally by representatives of the State Department and members of the Netherlands legation in the Presidential room at the Union Station where the King and Queen of England were welcomed on their visit.

Small Crowd There

But there were no red carpets, bands or flags. A small crowd gathered as near the long black White House cars as the police would let them to see what a Princess associated with Dutch dolls and tulips looked like in reality.

They saw a young woman—she is 31—about five feet four inches tall, a substantial sort of person with a ready, friendly smile. She had on a knee-length light sable coat over a black wool frock. Her hat was a black off-the-face model. Her gloves and pouch bag were black antelope. She wore small gold bow-knot earrings with an emerald center.

Onlooker Notes Change

"She doesn't look like the happy, rosy-cheeked girl she was a few years ago," murmured a woman who had seen her at the coronation of King George of England.

With her lady-in-waiting, Baroness De Vos, and the Baron, who is the Princess' chamberlain, the Princess was driven to the White House.

On Sight-Seeing Trip

After lunch and a chance to powder her nose—Juliana wears but little makeup—the Princess started out to go sight-seeing. With Mrs. Roosevelt pointing out the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, the party headed for Mount Vernon.

On the drive back to town they paused in the early dusk beside the Lincoln Memorial to see the famous statue looking broodingly toward the Washington Monument.

The President joined the party for tea at the White House.

After a quiet family dinner, the Princess, the Baron and Baroness were guests of Mrs. Roosevelt in her box at a concert of the National Symphony Orchestra which was conducted by Hans Kindler, a native of Holland.

WINDSOR TO INSIST ON SATISFYING U. S.

To Take Up Selection of New Site for Seaplane Base.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Selecting a seaplane base satisfactory to the United States will be one of the problems facing the Duke of Windsor when he resumes his duties as Governor of the Bahamas after a cordial reception at Miami.

The Duke and the Duchess—who recovered quickly from the major dental operation which necessitated their Florida visit of eight days—were en route here today aboard Axel Wenner-Gren's yacht Southern Cross.

A mission which looked over available sites soon after the United States traded fifty destroyers to Great Britain in return for air and naval bases recommended Mayaguana Island for the seaplane station in the Bahamas, but when President Roosevelt saw the selection last week he found it unsuitable because of a lack of good anchorages.

Meanwhile the Bahamas Legislature had passed a bill perfecting the transfer of the site to the United States and it now awaits action by the Duke. It is not known whether he will be advised to withhold the bill for reference to the King, or sign it and send an amending measure to the next session. A matter once dealt with cannot be brought up again at the same session.

The Duke discussed the base with President Roosevelt when he flew from Miami to visit the President while the latter was cruising in Bahamian waters. At Miami yesterday the Duke said that a base most certainly will be established on a site satisfactory to the United States.

YULE-TREE BULBS MADE IN U. S. NOW

Most Of Them Manufactured In This Country For First Time

40,000,000 Ornaments Already Turned Out This Year In One Plant

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 18—This year, for the first time in history, says a telegram today from the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, most of the Christmas tree ornaments being sold in the United States are American-made.

A 100,000-mile long rivulet of molten glass three inches wide is the source of the greater part of these American baubles. That is the length of glass poured thus far this year on the moving belts of a huge Christmas ornament machine at the Wellsboro (Pa.) plant of the Corning Glass Works.

Process Outlined

As the hot glass moves along the belt, puffs of compressed air convert it into a moving row of hollow globes. These are knocked off the belt by little steel hammers which crack them from the glass still adhering to the belt.

Another belt carries them for a half-hour trip through the heat of an annealing furnace. From there they emerge to ride on still other belts where they jump, turn, glide and do literal somersaults.

Each one of these motions is done while an automatic process daubs or prints a Christmas decoration on the bulb. The somersault is done to receive a coat of inside silvering. While the glass is upside down the silver fills it and as the bulb turns right side up it drains out.

40,000,000 Ornaments Made

This process employs 350 persons who have made 40,000,000 ornaments this year, or more than 100,000 apiece. The Corning Glass Works has spent two years in perfecting the Christmas tree machinery.

Formerly most of the American Christmas tree ornaments were supplied by Germany and Czecho-Slovakia.

"Their manufacture in the United States on a mass-production basis," said Edward J. Detgen, acting chief of the specialties division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, "has not only provided a domestic source, but in doing so has invented machinery and processes which have completely eliminated the tedious handwork."

SON SAYS PRINCESS IS FOND OF MYSTERY

Franz Hohenlohe Not Surprised Mother Has Been Ordered To Leave U. S.

Denies She Ever Acted As Agent For Any Power—Ignorant Of Her Whereabouts

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 18—Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe, ordered to leave the United States by Saturday, was pictured tonight by her son, Franz, as "a completely innocent woman with a foolish fondness for mystery."

Franz, a journalism school graduate looking for a job, said he was not particularly surprised at the Department of Justice decision against his mother, a friend of high Nazis. He said he knew nothing of her whereabouts.

"My mother has always been foolish about things like this," he said. "She never acted as an agent for any power, but always loved to assume an air of mystery, without reason."

Owes $100 For Hats

A penchant for expensive hats added today to the legal problems of the Princess.

The millinery firm of Mme. Suzy, claiming the Princess owed nearly $100 for hats, had a writ of attachment served on the Swiss Bank Corporation—but apparently too late.

F. Chapuisat, agent of the bank, said that the Princess' funds, totaling about $50, had previously been tied up by a lawyer, whom he did not name, in a contract suit for fees allegedly owed by the Princess for legal services.

Secrecy Veils Actions Of Princess Hohenlohe

San Francisco, Dec. 18 (AP)—Secrecy today concealed the movements of the Princess Hohenlohe of Hungary, friend of high Nazis and continental society leader, who received orders here yesterday from the United States Government to leave this country by Saturday.

She vanished last night a few hours after Government agents notified her in the presence of Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, German consul general, of the expulsion order and escorted her to the immigration commissioner's office.

Efforts to find her later failed, and attempts to learn of her plans through Captain Wiedemann also were unsuccessful when Wiedemann himself sought a retreat where he could not be reached.

Three Ships In North Atlantic Are Torpedoed By Nazi Subs

German U-Boats Lurking In British Shipping Lanes Destroy Two Tankers And Freighter

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 18—Submarines lurking in British shipping lanes of the North Atlantic struck at England's oil and food supply today, torpedoing two tankers and a freighter, an indication that another convoy was under fire.

At the same time, New York shipping circles said the Belgian liner Ville d'Arlon, the former American Traveler of the United States Lines, was more than a month unreported and presumed lost. The liner had been ferrying food and war materials from New York to England.

In messages picked up by Mackay Radio during a four-hour period, these ships reported submarine attacks:

Napier Star, 12,196-ton British refrigerator ship used in carrying Australian and New Zealand beef to Britain torpedoed about 675 miles west of Scotland.

Daffonn, Norwegian motor-ship tanker, 9,860 tons "attacked by submarine, 58.27 north, 18.11 west, suspicious tanker flying Dutch flag in the vicinity."

Pendrecht, Dutch tanker, 10,746 tons, completed last year, "torpedoed by sub, position 59.05 north, 17.48 west."

Eighteen minutes later the Pendrecht reported the loss of two lifeboats, said she had only one left and needed immediate aid.

The attacks came as American shipyards were being flooded with rush orders for tankers due to an acute shortage of the vessels.

More than one hundred tankers—British and neutral—have been destroyed in the war. Tanker charter rates in American waters have increased fourfold in recent months because of the shortage.

The Pendrecht and Dalfonn were torpedoed 350 miles off the Hebrides and about sixty miles from where the British passenger liner Western Prince was torpedoed Saturday. Both ships were taken over by Britain after the fall of Holland and Norway. They were believed to be carrying aviation oil and gasoline from Curacao to Britain.

One Of 8 Sold To Belgium

The Ville d'Arlon left New York November 15 for Liverpool, Belfast and Glasgow. She was one of eight liners sold to a Belgian firm after neutrality laws forced American ships from belligerent waters. Five of the vessels have been sunk.

Shipping circles also reported that the 1,258-ton Swedish freighter Gwala was overdue and considered lost.

Cable Service From N. Y. To Martinique Restored

Was Interrupted July 21 By Causes Which Have Not Been Determined

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—All America Cables and Radio, Inc., announced that through cable service from New York to the Island of Martinique was restored today.

The restored cable extends from St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, to Fort de France, Martinique, and connects Martinique with the world cable system.

It was interrupted last July 21 by causes which have not been determined.

Canadian Regrets Lindbergh Speeches

BUFFALO, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—William L. Houck, Member of the Canadian Parliament, said in a speech yesterday that Canadians "think the United States Government is lax" in permitting Col. Charles A. Lindbergh "to go back and forth across the country expressing his opinions."

"We especially regret the sayings and expressions of this man who flew the Atlantic alone because a few years ago in his time of great trouble, Canada offered a haven to him," Mr. Houck of Niagara Falls, Ont., told a luncheon club.

$155,487 Paid, French Ship Leaves New York

Officials Deposit Check Just Before Court Closes, Ending British Libel Action

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—The French freighter Fort de France, 4,279 tons, sailed for Martinique today, despite an attempt by the British Ministry of Shipping to hold her in port.

The Fort de France had been held in port by a Federal writ of attachment granted November 25 pending trial of a $145,000 libel brought by the British for alleged failure of another French merchantman to deliver a British cargo.

Just before court closed, French Line officials deposited a certified check for $155,487, covering libel and litigation charges, and obtained an order vacating the attachment.

In the War Zone

America a Vital Factor in War Crisis Expected in Spring

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

Secretary of State Hull's reported statement that Britain probably will face a serious crisis next spring, unless delivery schedules of American war supplies are considerably increased, could have been made stronger without straining the point.

Ready or not, the British will face a life-or-death crisis in the spring.

If Britain, prepared, doesn't strike at Germany first, then Britain, unprepared, most certainly must expect to defend herself.

Hitler hasn't concealed that he is getting set for a mighty assault on England in another attempt to administer the knockout blow. That likely will come at the latest with the good weather and it will represent his supreme effort.

Into it he will put all he has, figuring that this roll of the dice will determine the winner of the war, even if it doesn't end the conflict immediately. The attack contemplates the invasion which Der Fuehrer is reported to have tried with disastrous results to his forces and equipment last summer.

Hitler Plans Huge Air Fleet.

Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Aircraft Production, declares that Germany "is making preparations for invasion of England before springtime—by land and sea, but principally by air." He says Hitler is making an "immense attempt" to bring out a huge air fleet early next year.

Both nations are working under the handicap of heavy bombing which has its crippling effect on war industries. Details of material destruction are kept secret, but we get a measure of Britain's burden in the official statement that civilian casualties in the United Kingdom in November were 4,588 dead and 6,202 injured, making a total of 19,288 killed and 27,252 wounded in the air siege up to December 1.

Each nation is deprived of many supplies—the Germans because of the strangling British blockade, and the British through the submarines which during the week ended December 8 (the latest figure) took a toll of twenty-three good ships.

In the vital matter of airplanes—which may be the decisive factor—the Germans have a heavy superiority although they do not have supremacy (that is, absolute control) in the air. The strength of the air forces is not revealed, but the numerical superiority of the Germans in effectives may be something like three to two. The British are depending on America to take up the slack in production and put them ahead of Germany.

Britain also suffers in that while Germany is putting her whole energy into getting ready for the big engagement, the Allied forces are trying to knock Italy out of the war. That is calling for a lot of naval vessels which should be employed in defeating the Nazi submarine campaign, and a big fleet of precious airplanes which should be raiding German industries.

British Prepare Offensive.

If Mussolini should be forced out of the war, as is possible, that certainly will relieve the pressure on the British and their allies. However, it won't lessen the force of Hitler's terrific blow.

Britain, of course, also has been looking forward to an offensive against Germany on land in 1941. London officially admitted today that Britain couldn't win the war until the British Army has struck and struck deep into the Axis countries.

A huge army long has been under intensive training. Britain has the troops but not the equipment—that's her problem. There is no doubt that much of the equipment must come from America, especially as regards airplanes, without which the army would be finished before it started.

It's a race against time for Britain, and for Germany as well.

trols they shot down one Macchi 200 and one CR-42 in flames. Another Macchi and a CR-42 were damaged.

Derna was raided during last night, all bombs falling on the airdrome. Owing to bad weather the damage was not observed.

In Albania bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. attacked a motor-transport column on the coastal road between Santi Quaranta (Porto Edda) and Valona. The attack was made in a fierce snowstorm and it was not possible to observe the full effects of the bombing, but a number of bombs were seen to burst on the roadside near enemy transport. In addition, vehicles were machine-gunned.

In Italian East Africa, Assab was twice raided, once during the night of Dec. 16-17, when attacks were made on a large motor-transport yard, all bombs falling well inside the target area. During the second raid yesterday Arabic and Italian pamphlets describing the fall of Sollum and Port Capuzzo were dropped over the town.

Port Sudan was raided by enemy bombers and some damage caused. Our fighters intercepted the enemy, and one S-79 had one engine put out of action by machine-gun fire. The remaining S-79s escaped into the clouds.

From all these operations our aircraft returned safely.

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Dec. 18 (AP).—A British communique:

El Wak was successfully raided yesterday. Our forces included South African and Gold Coast units with armored fighting vehicles and artillery. The South African air force co-operated and dropped two and one-half tons of bombs.

At least twenty-five Italians, including several officers, and fifty Colonial Infantry were captured, with at least three guns, some machine-guns and large quantities of stores and ammunition. Fifty of the enemy were killed. Our casualties were very slight.

An air attack by one aircraft was driven off by our fighters. The enemy plane jettisoned its bombs on sighting the fighters.

Early this morning one Caproni (Italian plane) was brought down by our planes.

ATHENS, Dec. 18 (AP).—A Royal Air Force communique:

During a fierce snowstorm yesterday bomber aircraft of the Royal Air Force attacked a motor-transport column on the coastal road between Aghisaranda and Valona. Owing to weather conditions it was not possible to observe the full effect of the bombing, but a number of bombs were seen to burst on the roadside near the transports and, in addition, vehicles were machine-gunned. From all operations all our aircraft retuned safety.

LONDON, Dec. 18 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

In the early hours of this morning our motor torpedo boats, carrying out offensive patrol off the Belgian coast, made a successful attack on a large armed enemy supply ship of between 6,000 and 7,000 tons. The enemy supply ship was seen to break up and sink. Fire was opened with machine-guns from the enemy ship just before she sank, but this fire was ineffective.

An enemy escort ship, a vessel of the trawler type, was then engaged by machine-gun fire from our MTB's and hit. A torpedo was fired at the enemy trawler and an explosion was felt by our MTB's, and the enemy ship ceased firing.

No casualties or damage were sustained by any of our forces.

Some British planes last night dropped bombs in southwest Germany. At two places slight property and incendiary damage resulted from the bombing.

Night pursuit planes shot down two enemy planes in air fights. One British plane was downed by anti-aircraft fire.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

In the Curenaica (Libya) frontier zone enemy troops, because of wearing down and losses suffered, slowed down their pressure yesterday on the ninth day of the great battle.

Our artillery effectively battered enemy mechanized detachments while our air force bombed armored units farther away.

An enemy cruiser torpedoed off Bardia Harbor, as reported yesterday, was seen to overturn and sink. Torpedo-launching planes which sank her were under the command of Capt. Grossie and Lieut. Barbani, aided by Lieuts. Marazio and Riva as observers.

Our planes bombed English warships which appeared off Bardia Harbor. Enemy fighter planes opposed the action of our bombers, which shot down a Gloster plane. Our fighter formations escorting the bombers engaged in combat with the enemy fighters. A Hurricane was shot down. One of our fighters failed to return.

Of five Italian planes reported lost in yesterday's bulletin two have returned to base. Among three planes which may be considered definitely lost is that of Col. Aramu, an exceptional bomber, who twice flew the Atlantic and was directing the action at the head of his group. Five English fighter planes were shot down Dec. 16.

On the Greek front sharp fighting took place in the sector of the Eleventh Army. Our fighter formations carried out an effective machine-gunning action against enemy troop concentrations.

In the Aegean Sea enemy planes dropped several bombs on Rhodes and Stampalia yesterday morning.

In East Africa our air formations carried out a night action on flying fields at Erkovitz-Sabt and Summit, surprising them in full activity. Shrapnel bombs dropped on some ten planes on the ground.

One of our bomber formations carried out an effective night action on harbor works and fuel oil deposits at Port Sudan. During the return flight one plane was forced by bad weather to land in enemy territory but succeeded in taking off again and returning to its base undamaged. Other bombing actions were carried out by our detachments on the railroad station at Ghedaref and defense works at Otrub and Mount Rejan.

In successive waves, yesterday, bomber formations repeatedly attacked the air base, harbor and fuel oil deposits at Port Sudan. Four enemy planes are known to have been destroyed on the ground. Harbor works and fuel oil deposits were obviously damaged. Great columns of smoke were visible from afar.

One of our air formations was attacked by enemy fighter planes and shot down two of them. One of our planes failed to return.

Our air force dropped explosives and shrapnel bombs on enemy mechanized forces near El Wak. One plane failed to return.

OTHER FRONTS: No change in the situation.

A Royal Air Force Middle East command communique:

Heavy rain in the western desert yesterday restricted air activity considerably. Nevertheless, aircraft of the R. A. F. continued to attack Bardia both during the day and the previous night. Three large fires were started in the encampment. Outside the town a large quantity of motor transport was damaged.

Reconnaissance flights showed the enemy retreating toward Derna. Our fighters machine-gunned the retreating troops between Bardia and Tobruk. During their pa-

A German bomber was shot down off Dover this afternoon by our fighters without loss to themselves. Otherwise there is nothing to report.

An Air Ministry communique:

Last night, in spite of bad weather, a small force of R. A. F. bombers again attacked industrial targets at Mannheim (Germany). Some of the fires started in the raid on Monday night were seen to be still burning, and several fresh fires were caused.

Other aircraft attacked ports and airdromes on the Channel coast.

BERLIN, Dec. 18 (AP).—The German high command communique:

On the night of Dec. 16 German fighting planes attacked and bombed Birmingham, London and other war-vital objectives in the Midlands. At various places fires and explosions could be seen.

Weather yesterday restricted airforce activity to reconnaissance. A whole section of Sheffield was observed still burning as well as other isolated fires.

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON,DEC 18-(AP)-THE STATE DEPARTMENT TONIGHT ANNOUNCED THET APPROXIMATELY 1,000 VISAS HAVE BEEN GRANTED TO POLITICAL REFUGEES IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES DESIRING TO COME TO THE UNITED STATES.

OF 2,000 REFUGEES IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES RECOMMENDED BY VARIOUS COMMITTEES INTERESTED IN THE QUESTION, THE STATE DEPARTMENT SAID THAT "ONLY ABOUT ONE DOZEN WERE FOUND TO BE PERSONS WHOSE PRESENCE HERE WOULD BE PREJUDICIAL TO THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE UNITED STATES."

BESIDES THE 1,000 VISAS GRANTED, VISAS HAVE BEEN AUTHORIZED FOR MOST OF THE OTHER 1,000 REFUGEES INVOLVED BUT "SOME APPLICANTS ARE IN HIDING OR UNDER ASSUMED NAMES FOR THEIR OWN PROTECTION, SOME ARE INACCESSIBLE TO THE CONSULS, AND SOME HAVE REMOVED FROM THE CONSULAR DISTRICT TO ANOTHER DISTRICT AND ARE STILL BEING SOUGHT," THE DEPARTMENT EXPLAINED.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID A NEW INTER-DEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEE COMPOSED OF REPRESENTATIVES FROM THE STATE, JUSTICE, WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENTS HAS BEEN ORGANIZED TO INVESTIGATE AND ACT ON ALL APPLICATIONS "TO FACILITATE THE ORDERLY CONSIDERATION OF CASES OF POLITICAL REFUGEES RECOMMENDED BY ANY COMMITTEES OPERATING IN THIS COUNTRY IN THEIR BEHALF."

DEC 19 1940

IN A LENGTHY REVIEW OF THE POLITICAL REFUGEE PROBLEM AND ACTION NOW BEING TAKEN IN THEIR BEHALF THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID:

"REFUGEES DEVELOPED INTO A DEFINITE PROBLEM AFTER THE INVASION OF FRANCE. MANY PERSONS HAD PREVIOUSLY ARRIVED IN FRANCE TO FIND ASYLUM FROM PERSECUTION AT THE HANDS OF THE TOTALITARIAN STATES. TO THESE WERE ADDED SEVERAL MILLIONS WHO FLED FROM BELGIUM AND HOLLAND.

"THEY ALL BECAME MIGRANTS AGAIN AND THEIR NUMBERS WERE DOUBLED OR TREBLED BY RESIDENTS OF FRANCE--ALL IN FLIGHT BEFORE THE ADVANCING GERMAN ARMIES AND THE GESTAPO WHICH FOLLOWED IN ITS WAKE. MOST OF THESE UNFORTUNATES, PERSONS PERSECUTED BECAUSE OF ADHERENCE TO THEIR POLITICAL OR RELIGIOUS BELIEFS, DESIRED TO COME TO THE UNITED STATES." more

THE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, PRESCRIBE THE NUMBER OF PERSONS TO BE ADMITTED AS IMMIGRANTS, AND APPLICATIONS MADE TO CONSULS IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES ARE FAR IN EXCESS OF THE IMMIGRANT VISAS AVAILABLE.

THE CONSULATES, ESPECIALLY AT BORDEAUX, MARSEILLES AND NICE IN FRANCE, WERE SWAMPED WITH APPLICANTS. BRANCH OFFICES WERE OPENED CLOSER TO THE SPANISH BORDER "AS THE HORDE MOVED SOUTH FRENZIED AT THE NEAR APPROACH OF THE HOSTILE ARMY AND THE AGENTS OF THE GESTAPO."

THEN SPAIN AND PORTUGAL CLOSED THEIR BIRDERS, THE ANNOUNCEMENT EXPLAINED, AND "CONDITIONS WERE IMPOSED UPON TRAVEL, COMMUNICATIONS WERE INTERRUPTED....FEAR, HUNGER, PRIVATION AND OVERCROWDING THREATENED DISASTER."

SOME OF THE REFUGEES ESCAPED TO NORTH AFRICA, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, AND A FEW MORE REACHED SWITZERLAND AND SWEDEN, BUT "MANY THOUSANDS FOUND THEMSELVES CAUGHT IN FRANCE BEHIND THE CLOSED BORDERS, AND MANY FOUND THEMSELVES IN SPAIN."

IT WAS UNDER SUCH CONDITIONS, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, THAT THE STATE DEPARTMENT, ACTING AT THE BEHEST OF AMERICAN COMMITTEES ORGANIZED "TO SAVE THE WORLD THE BRAINS, THE CHARACTER AND THE SPIRIT" OF THE REFUGEES, BEGAN ISSUING VISITORS' AND TRANSIT VISAS, ENABLING MANY TO ESCAPE FROM EUROPE AND ENTER THE UNITED STATES.

"REFUGEES CAN NOW OBTAIN IMMIGRANT VISAS," THE ANNOUNCEMENT REPORTED, "IF THEY WANT TO COME TO AMERICA AND IF THEY ARE ACCEPTABLE UNDER THE LAW. IN EXCEPTIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES VISITORS' VISAS MAY STILL BE USEFUL IN SAVING PERSONS OF EXCEPTIONAL MERIT, THOSE OF SUPERIOR INTELLECTUAL ATTAINMENT, OF INDOMITABLE SPIRIT, EXPERIENCED IN VIGOROUS SUPPORT OF THE PRINCIPLES OF LIBERAL GOVERNMENT AND WHO ARE IN DANGER OF PERSECUTION OR DEATH AT THE HANDS OF AUTOCRACY."

AT THE PRESENT TIME, THE STATE DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCED, THE IMMIGRANT QUOTAS FOR ONLY GERMANY AND POLAND ARE FULL, AND IT IS EXPECTED THAT NATIVES OF THOSE TWO COUNTRIES WILL BE ABLE TO SECURE IMMIGRANT VISAS IN A COMPARATIVELY SHORT TIME, AN ESTIMATED TWO MONTHS.

CLEVELAND, DEC. 18-(AP)-GERMANY HAS MILITARY RESOURCES "FAR TRANSCENDING" ANYTHING GREAT BRITAIN CAN COMMAND, SIR WALTER CITRINE, RANKING BRITISH LABOR LEADER, DECLARED TODAY.

"WE MUST HAVE THE MEANS IN THE NEXT FEW WEEKS OF STRIKING AT GERMANY'S WAR PRODUCTION," HE SAID IN AN ADDRESS BEFORE THE CLEVELAND FOREIGN AFFAIRS COUNCIL AND THE ENGLISH SPEAKING UNION.

HE APPEALED FOR "ALL THE BOMBERS WE CAN POSSIBLY GET FROM THIS COUNTRY AND ALL OTHER TYPES OF SWIFT-STRIKING MACHINES WE CAN GET--NOW."

SIR WALTER, GENERAL SECRETARY OF THE BRITISH TRADES UNION CONGRESS, ASSERTED HE AND WINSTON CHURCHILL STOOD VIRTUALLY ALONE FOUR YEARS AGO IN ADVOCATING REARMAMENT TO MATCH GERMANY'S, WHILE THE NAZIS WERE ARMING AT FIVE OR SIX TIMES THE BRITISH PACE.

"I BEG YOU NOT TO ASSUME THAT IT IS EASY TO CONVERT YOUR GREAT PRODUCTIVE CAPACITY INTO A WAR ECONOMY AND STILL CARRY ON YOUR NORMAL TRADE," HE SAID. "YOU WON'T MAKE THE TIME-TABLE AND NEITHER WILL WE, BUT HITLER WILL.

AMERICAN BOMBERS ARE NEEDED QUICKLY TO ENABLE THE BRITISH AIR FORCE "TO CRIPPLE GERMANY'S AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY BEFORE SPRING," HE ADDED.

SIR WALTER SAID "TIME AND MILEAGE" PREVENT THE BRITISH AIR FORCE FROM RETALIATING AGAINST NAZI BOMBING OF ENGLISH RESIDENTIAL DISTRICTS AND OTHER NON-MILITARY OBJECTIVES.

HE REPORTED A NAZI BOMBER OPERATING FROM THE FRENCH COAST CAN MAKE EIGHT SEPARATE FLIGHTS OVER LONDON IN ONE DAY, WHILE R.A.F. PLANES MUST TRAVEL 620 MILES TO BOMB BERLIN.

"IT IS OBVIOUS WE MUST STRIKE AT THE SOURCES OF GERMANY'S WAR MATERIAL," HE SAID. "AND ONLY IN WINTER, WHEN WEATHER CONDITIONS ARE BAD BUT SERVE AS A SCREEN FOR OUR BOMBERS, CAN WE MOST EFFECTIVELY HIT THE NAZI WAR PRODUCTION."

MOREOVER, HE DECLARED, THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT OPPOSES BOMBING OF NON-MILITARY OBJECTIVES BECAUSE "WE CANNOT CALL THE NAZI PILOTS BARBARIANS AND AT THE SAME TIME ASK THE R.A.F. TO DO WHAT THE GERMANS ARE DOING."

W912PES NM

MORE THAN 100 REPRESENTATIVES OF CLEVELAND LABOR ORGANIZATIONS ADOPTED AND PRESENTED TO SIR WALTER A RESOLUTION PLEDGING ALL POSSIBLE AID TO GREAT BRITAIN.

"WE STAND SHOULDER TO SHOULDER WITH OUR BROTHERS IN THE BRITISH TRADE UNION MOVEMENT," IT SAID, "CONFIDENT IN THEIR ABILITY TO DEFEAT OPPRESSION AND TYRANNY AND EMERGE VICTORIOUS.

"WE PLEDGE EVERY MEANS AT OUR COMMAND TOWARD SECURING ALL AID AND ASSISTANCE NECESSARY TO BRITAIN, TO WHICH END WE PLEDGE OUR SUPPORT TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S PROGRAM AS ENUNCIATED BY HIM IN HIS RECENT MESSAGE TO CONGRESS."

CONTRACTS WITH AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS AND TO LEND THE ARMAMENTS TO BRITAIN.

AT THE SAME TIME, HE ANNOUNCED AT A PRESS CONFERENCE THAT COL. CHARLES A.LINDBERGH HAD PLEDGED HIS COOPERATION TO THE COMMITTEE.

"I'LL DO ANYTHING THIS COMMITTEE WANTS ME TO DO," THE EDITOR OF THE CEDAR RAPIDS, IA., GAZETTE SAID LINDBERGH TOLD HIM RECENTLY.

THE COMMITTEE WAS SET UP, MARSHALL SAID YESTERDAYN TO "HELP KEEP THE NATION OUT OF WAR" AND TO "GIVE ARTICULATION" TO THE "MILLIONS OF AMERICANS" WHO HE SAID OPPOSED PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR.

IN HIS COMMENT ON THE PRESIDENT'S PROPOSAL TO LEND ARMS TO BRITAIN, MARSHALL SAID IN A STATEMENT:

"OF ALL THE FANTASTIC FINANCIAL PROPOSALS MADE THESE LAST SEVERAL YEARS AT WASHINGTON, NONE COMPARES IN ANY DEGREE TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S PLAN THAT WOULD BIND THE AMERICAN PEOPLE TO FINANCE ENGLAND'S WAR OUTRIGHT, FROM THIS POINT ON.

"AND EVEN MORE UNBELIEVABLE IS THE PRESIDENT'S BLAND ASSERTION THAT HIS SCHEME WOULD ENABLE THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA TO FINANCE THE REST OF ENGLAND'S WAR WITHOUT THE REPEAL OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT OR THE JOHNSON ACT.

"X X X WHAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS PROPOSING IS THAT CONGRESS PASS A LAW GIVING ONE MAN--HIMSELF--THE AUTHORITY TO DO SOMETHING WHICH NO OTHER MAN OR WOMAN IN THE UNITED STATES WOULD DARE DO, SO LONG AS THE NEUTRALITY LAW AND THE JOHNSON ACT ARE NOT REPEALED.

"AND MR.ROOSEVELT SAYS HE ISN'T ASKING FOR THEIR REPEAL. WHAT HE REALLY IS ASKING IS ONE-MAN POWER, THE ABSOLUTE AUTHORITY OF A DICTATOR.

"X X X AT LAST ENGLAND AND HER ALLIES IN THE ADMINISTRATION AT WASHINGTON HAVE CONCLUDED THAT IT IS FUTILE FOR ANY EUROPEAN BELLIGERENT TO SEEK LOANS IN THE UNITED STATES. HENCE THIS AMAZING PROPOSAL OF AN OUTRIGHT GIFT OF OUR MONEY, SHIPS, AIRPLANES, FACTORIES, AND, LAST OF ALL, MEN."

CHICAGO, DEC 18-(AP)-WILLIAM J.GRACE, CHAIRMAN OF THE CITIZENS KEEP AMERICA OUT OF WAR COMMITTEE, SAID TONIGHT THAT HIS ORGANIZATION WOULD SPONSOR A CAMPAIGN TO SEND COFFIN NAILS TO CONGRESSMEN TOGETHER WITH PLEAS TO RETAIN THE NEUTRALITY AND JOHNSON ACTS.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT SET FORTH THAT "ACTUAL COFFIN NAILS, OBTAINED FROM A CASKET CONCERN, "WOULD BE AFFIXED TO CARDS WHICH WOULD BE DISTRIBUTED AT A RALLY HERE FRIDAY NIGHT. THE RECIPIENTS, IT ADDED, WOULD BE URGED TO FORWARD THEM TO CONGRESSMEN. THE CARDS BEAR THIS MESSAGE:

"A PRO-WAR VOTE WILL DRIVE A COFFIN NAIL INTO THE COFFIN OF AN AMERICAN BOY DOOMED TO DEATH ON FOREIGN SOIL IF WE BECOME INVOLVED IN TH EUROPEAN WAR. SAVE MILLIONS OF AMERICAN LIVES. I URGE YOU TO VOTE FOR MAINTAINING THE NEUTRALITY ACT, MAINTAINING THE JOHNSON ACT AND ADEQUATE NATIONAL DEFENSE."

NEW YORK, DEC 18-(AP)-A WARNING THAT MORE EXPLOSIONS IN AMERICAN POWDER PLANTS MAY BE EXPECTED AND A HINT TO KEEP A WATCHFUL EYE ON THE PANAMA CANAL WERE VOICED LAST NIGHT BY INTERIOR SECRETARY HAROLD L.ICKES.

IN AN ADDRESS AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, HE ASSERTED THE AXIS DICTATORS

"PROPOSE TO CRIPPLE THE UNITED STATES IF THEY CAN."

"ONE WAY OF DOING THIS WOULD BE TO DAMAGE THE PANAMA CANAL," HE SAID. "THE AXIS POWERS EYE THE CANAL WITH HUNGRY EYES."

SABOTAGE IN INDUSTRIAL AND MILITARY PLANTS WOULD BE ANOTHER WAY, HE SAID, ADDING:

"DURING THE LAST FEW WEEKS, THE NEWSPAPERS HAVE CARRIED DISTURBING STORIES OF DEADLY EXPLOSIONS IN OUR POWDER PLANTS. ON NOV. 12 ALONE, NO LESS THAN THREE SUCH EXPLOSIONS TOOK PLACE.

"IF EXPERIENCE IS ANY GUIDE, MORE EXPLOSIONS MAY BE EXPECTED, ALTHOUGH SOME OF THEM WILL BE ACCIDENTAL. HOWEVER, I RECALL THAT, BETWEEN 1914 AND 1916, NO FEWER THAN 99 CHEMICAL AND EXPLOSIVE PLANTS WERE BLOWN UP IN THIS COUNTRY."

THE SECRETARY DENOUNCED A GROUP OF AMERICANS WHOM HE DESCRIBED AS "APPEASERS IN THE MAKING," AND NAMED, AMONG OTHERS, COL.CHARLES A. LINDBERGH AS "A PERIPATETIC APPEASER WHO WOULD ABJECTLY SURRENDER HIS SWORD EVEN BEFORE IT IS DEMANDED."

(ADVANCE FOR AMS THURSDAY, DEC. 19)

(ADVANCE)--WASHINGTON,DEC 18-(AP)-REORGANIZATION OF THE NATIONAL DEFENSE MACHINERY BY CREATION OF A NEW NATIONAL DEFENSE BOARD AND THE SETTING UP OF EMPLOYER-WORKER COUNCILS TO COORDINATE PRODUCTION FACILITIES WAS PROPOSED TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TODAY BY CIO PRESIDENT PHILIP MURRAY.

IN A MEMORANDUM, MURRAY OUTLINED HIS PLAN FOR SPEEDING ARMS PRODUCTION AND MAINTAINING THE NECESSARY VOLUME OF DOMESTIC, NON-MILITARY GOODS. HE PREFACED HIS PROPOSAL BY SAYING:

"TO AVOID A REPETITION OF THE 1917-18 FAILURE TO PRODUCE ARMAMENTS IN NEEDED QUANTITIES AND ON TIME IT IS NECESSARY, WITHOUT FURTHER DELAY, TO REDEFINE THE AIMS OF THE DEFENSE PROGRAM, BROADEN ITS SCOPE, AND ASSURE ITS EFFECTIVE EXECUTION."

"THE SCOPE OF THE DEFENSE PROGRAM," HE ADDED, "SHOULD BE BROADENED TO ENCOMPASS THE FULL PRODUCTION OF ARMAMENTS FOR THE NEEDS OF THE UNITED STATES, AND ANY EVENTUALITY THAT MAY ARISE, WITHOUT DISTURBING THE ADEQUATE PRODUCTION OF DOMESTIC GOODS."

UNDER THE CIO LEADER'S PLAN, THE PRESIDENT WOULD APPOINT AN EQUAL NUMBER OF EMPLOYER AND LABOR REPRESENTATIVES TO COUNCILS FOR BASIC DEFENSE INDUSTRIES, WITH ONE GOVERNMENT REPRESENTATIVE TO SERVE AS CHAIRMAN.

DEC 19 1941

THE PRESIDENT ALSO WOULD NAME A NEW NATIONAL DEFENSE BOARD MADE UP OF MANAGEMENT AND LABOR REPRESENTATIVES WITH THE PRESIDENT HIMSELF AS CHAIRMAN. SUCH A BOARD WOULD HAVE AUTHORITY TO COORDINATE THE FUNCTIONS OF THE INDUSTRY COUNCILS, SERVE AS AN APPEALS AGENCY FOR COUNCIL PROBLEMS, AND AID IN THE GRANTING AND RE-ALLOCATING OF ARMAMENT ORDERS.

THE OBJECTIVES OF HIS PROPOSAL, JURRAY TOLD THE PRESIDENT, WOULD BE TO GUARANTEE NECESSARY DEFENSE PRODUCTION BY ACHIEVING THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE EFFICIENCY, GUARANTEE PRODUCTION OF DOMESTIC GOODS IN ADEQUATE QUANTITIES, AND PRESERVE FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND ASSEMBLY AND THE RIGHTS OF LABOR TO ORGANIZE AND BARGAIN COLLECTIVELY.

THE PRESIDENT, MURRAY SAID, HAS SUFFICIENT LEGAL POWERS TO CREATE THE ADMINISTRATIVE MACHINERY SUGGESTED.

THE COUNCILS, HE SAID, SHOULD HAVE AUTHORITY TO ASCERTAIN THE DEFENSE NEEDS IN EACH INDUSTRY AND COORDINATE PRODUCTION FACILITIES

TO MEET REQUIREMENTS, EXPANDING THESE FACILITIES WHEREVER NECESSARY. IN ADDITION THEY WOULD STRIVE FOR INDUSTRIAL PEACE THROUGH EXTENSION OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AND EMPLOYER ADHERENCE TO SUCH LABOR LAWS AS THE WAGNER ACT, WAGE-HOUR LAW, SOCIAL SECURITY, AND THE WALSH-HEALTY ACT.

THE PRESENT NATIONAL DEFENSE COMMISSION HAS BUT ONE LABOR MEMBER, AND LEADERS OF BOTH THE CIO AND AFL HAVE BEEN CALLING FOR INCREASED LABOR REPRESENTATION IN DEFENSE COUNCILS.

U. S. AUTHORIZES BRITISH CONTRACTS; THEIR SIGNING WAITS ON CONGRESS

Arms Deals to Be Closed Only After Legislative Action---Orders May Total $3,000,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Roosevelt administration authorized the British Government today to negotiate new contracts for war material at once—possibly totaling $3,000,000,000—and simultaneously considered establishing a high command for the defense program.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, disclosing White House approval of the negotiations, said that no British contracts actually would be signed until Congress could act on President Roosevelt's "lease-lending" plan.

He disclosed, however, that the British were contracting now for sixty merchant ships for which they would pay cash and which would not have to await approval of the presidential program.

From other sources it was learned that the British were seeking contracts for 12,000 additional planes, at a possible cost of $1,125,000,000; 2,000 to 2,500 more tanks, and guns and ammunition costing about $1,700,000,000.

The White House, meanwhile, disclosed that the President had under consideration at least four or five plans for injecting speed into the defense program. One involves a proposal to establish a high command for the program headed by Secretaries Stimson and Knox and William S. Knudsen, industrial production chief of the Defense Commission.

President Discusses Plan.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said this suggestion had been discussed at a White House conference yesterday. Secretaries Stimson and Knox and Assistant Secretary of War Patterson and Under-Secretary of the Navy Forrestal met with the President, and Mr. Early said he assumed that they presented the plan to him.

"They did not leave the plan with him," he added. "As a matter of fact, they put it back, at his request, to work out details. The President has before him and is studying along with this plan four or five other plans in an effort to ascertain what, if any, realignment of defense setup is necessary."

Secretary Morgenthau declined to estimate the amount of the new British contracts, but the figure of $3,000,000,000 was voiced in several capital quarters. He showed reporters a sheaf of documents which he said listed British military requirements and for which he said Mr. Roosevelt had given a "go-ahead."

British Are Silent.

The British Purchasing Commission would not discuss the list, either to give the total cost or to identify any of the individual items.

It was indicated that $50,000,000 would represent part payment for the sixty merchant ships, and that their total cost would be nearly double that figure.

The vessels are to be built at two American plants, one at Portland, Me., and the other on the West Coast, where the actual site has not been selected.

The contracts for the ships, it was asserted on high authority, may materialize before the end of the week.

Mr. Roosevelt called the Cabinet together this afternoon and will meet the Defense Commission tomorrow, reversing the usual order. Mr. Early left the impression with reporters that some announcement might result from the discussions.

When a reporter said he assumed that the army and navy would not be deprived of their contractural powers, Mr. Early said he thought the assumption was well taken.

Stimson Favors Defense Shift.

Secretary Stimson said that the proposal for a three-man group to direct the defense program was "in the President's hands" and indicated that he personally strongly favored further concentration of authority.

As for the British orders which may come under the proposed leasing and mortgaging system, Mr. Early said he did not know what quantity of arms England would need to finish the war or whether she was planning ahead only for a year or so.

"Everybody agrees and admits," he said, "that time is of the essence. Now comes a period when, I take it, the British authorities are worrying about and working upon orders to be made by them and for which they say they will not have cash to pay."

Hope to Save Time.

The President and other officials, Mr. Early said, hope Great Britain will determine her needs so that a minimum of time will be lost between now and the time when Congress is asked to give the President authority for the program which he outlined on Tuesday.

"Instead of stopping motion and losing time," he continued, "they will go ahead and get everything ready for the signing of the contracts."

Secretary Morgenthau declined at a press conference to discuss details of the President's ideas for mortgaging airplanes and other war materials to the British, saying Mr. Roosevelt had given the best possible explanation of it. He added that the President's press conference Tuesday was the first time that the plan was divulged to anyone outside of high American Government quarters, and that not even the British then had been apprised of it.

"The British," Mr. Morgenthau said, "have prepared a list which I received this morning—but which I will not show you—of orders that have been cleared with our army and navy and National Defense Commission.

"I have been authorized by the President to tell them (the British) to go ahead up to the point of signing contracts."

Congress to Study Plan.

Except for the ship order, which the British intend to pay for themselves, Mr. Morgenthau added, "there will be no more British contracts until Congress has a chance to study them."

He explained, however, that he meant congressional study of the President's plan to lend material, and did not mean that individual British contracts necessarily would be submitted to Congress.

The sixty merchant ships were described by the Secretary as 410-foot, 9,300-ton cargo vessels able to make ten to eleven knots. He said he did not know what they would cost eventually, but the British already had set aside $50,000,000 in cash for them.

At one time, he added, he understood the vessels would cost about $1,250,000 each and take about a year to build. Contracts for their construction have yet to be completed, and Mr. Morgenthau referred reporters to the Maritime Commission for further details about them.

Ludlow Quotes Kennedy.

Representative Ludlow, Democrat, of Indiana, told the House that Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to Great Britain, has declared "our production for defense is nowhere near adequate for the protection of our situation, let alone aid to Britain."

Mr. Ludlow said Mr. Kennedy had written him that it "would be suicidal" for the United States to "get into war in our present state of unpreparedness."

"While our own defenses are weak," he quoted Mr. Kennedy, "we are limited to what we can do for Britain, even though we want to. Therefore our first obligation is to speed up defense with all our might."

Senator Johnson, Democrat, of Colorado, suggested today that Senate Naval and Military committees hold a joint inquiry into the progress of national defense.

The investigation is necessary, he wrote Senator Sheppard, chairman of the Senate Military Committee, so that Congress can see the defense program "is carried out without waste, without jockeying and without unreasonable delay."

The proportions of President Roosevelt's plan for unlimited aid to Great Britain in mortgaged materiel strengthened belief today that new tactics were being worked out to push armament industries to peak production as fast as possible.

Approval of the mortgaged materiel plan by the next Congress, officials pointed out, would mean an avalanche of additional military orders for factories now either behind in delivery on present contracts or hard pressed to keep up.

Until new plants and equipment get into service and assume a share of the load, these sources said, existing industries must do the impossible in speeding up to the highest possible peak if munitions are to be ready when needed for national defense purposes, for Great Britain, Greece and China, and for the preparedness programs of Pan-American nations.

In this connection, significance attached to the statement of Secretary Hull that getting production as nearly as possible on a war-time basis was in complete harmony with Mr. Roosevelt's tentative plan for supplying Great Britain on a lease-lend arrangement.

British May Order 2,000 Tanks And 12,000 Planes

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Informed sources today said the expected total of British war orders under President Roosevelt's "lease-lend" program would be $3,000,000,000 and would be divided about as follows:

About 12,000 additional war planes, to cost $1,125,000,000, and 2,000 to 2,500 tanks, guns and ammunition to cost about $1,700,000,000.

Current British contracts are understood to total about $2,500,000,000.

Britain's aircraft contracts in this country would be about doubled by a new order for 12,000 planes. It is understood that present orders total about 14,000 planes.

A Labor Department report today said that United States, British and private contracts already placed with the aircraft industry would require an expansion from 203,600 workers—the total last October—to 455,500 by August, 1941.

British Getting Planes Faster Than U.S. Army

Changes in American Orders for Later Models Allow London Greater Supply

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP).—The pace of United States aid to Great Britain has been stepped up, authoritative sources disclosed today, to the point where Britain for the time being is obtaining many times more fighting planes from American factories than the United States Army is getting.

Britain received probably ten times as many tactical planes—bombers, pursuit ships and certain observation craft—as the Army did during November, it was said. Actual numbers were not disclosed, on the ground that this was valuable military information.

Aside from the Administration's policy of all aid "short of war," one of the reasons the British received such a preponderance of America's warplane production was the Army's action in exchanging current production for later model craft.

Informed persons said the present lop-sided division of American warplane deliveries between Britain and the United States illustrated what President Roosevelt had in mind when, explaining his rule that defense production was to be divided between the two countries on a 50-50 basis, he said this would not be applied in every instance but would be an "over-all" gauge.

The Army has been receiving many more trainers than tactical planes, it was declared.

Garrison For Newfoundland

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 19—An undisclosed number of army units will leave New York for Newfoundland early next month to garrison the northernmost of the Atlantic naval and air bases being acquired from Great Britain.

Announcing this today, the War Department disclosed that the troops would sail for the outpost even before shore accommodations were ready for occupancy.

Until these are completed, the transport which carries the men to Newfoundland will be used as a floating barracks, the department said. This ship is the Edmund B. Alexander, the old coal-burning liner America.

Although the army did not disclose the size of the initial force being sent to Newfoundland, the department said it would be commanded by Col. M. D. Welty, infantry officer now on duty at the War Department.

It will be the first garrison force to be sent to any of the new bases. [Picture of Colonel Welty on Page 12.]

PREMIER SAYS CHRISTMAS CAN BE DANGER TIME

Hopes Nation In '41 Becomes Well Armed With Help Of U. S.

Predicts Year Will Find British Troops Active "In Other Theaters"

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 19—Winston Churchill gave this pre-Christmas warning to the British nation today: "Watch from hour to hour the danger and menace" of German invasion.

"It would be a disaster if anyone supposed that the danger, the supreme danger, the mortal dangers, are passed," he declared to the House of Commons, recessing for these wartime holidays.

"They are not! . . . The winter season offers some advantages to an invader. . . . It would be a very great lack of prudence, a lack of prudence amounting to a crime, if vigilance were relaxed in our armies at home."

Looks For U. S. Help

The Prime Minister used this occasion to express hope that Britain, "still only a half-armed nation fighting a fully-armed nation," would in 1941 become well armed, with the help of America's "great supplies," and to detail the British conquest of the Italian armies of Egypt.

"The British army," he said, "has at last had an opportunity of showing its quality."

The year 1941, he predicted, will see British troops in action "in other theaters on terms of moderate equality in numbers and in equipment, if not in defense of the British Isles themselves."

Warning Not The First

Churchill's warning was not the first of an invasion before spring; his Minister for Aircraft Production, Lord Beaverbrook, and others have foreshadowed it.

Until after Christmas moon, tides and weather in general are favorable for such an attempt; to meet it, Britain has approximately 3,000,000 men under the colors in the United Kingdom, regulars and Home Guardsmen.

In particular, the Prime Minister noted the slackening in German air attacks in the last few days—a slackening which, he said, might easily be in preparation for some other form of activity."

Defense "Complete"

Reassuringly, Churchill asserted "our defense of the beaches is complete. From the north of Scotland round the island, enormous masses of guns, machine guns, fortified posts and every device of defense have been erected and they are guarded by large numbers of well-trained men."

But, he said, England will not sit complacently behind this fortified line of beaches as France sat behind the Maginot Line.

Again, he warned: "Hitler—I should certainly deprecate any comparison between Hitler and Napoleon, I do not want to insult the dead—wields gigantic power and is capable of wielding it in a ruthless manner. . . . He has great need of doing something now, or at any rate in the next two months."

Prime Minister Cheered

Churchill was cheered repeatedly.

In Egypt and Libya, he said, the British armies, contending with odds as high as five to one, have lost less than 1,000 dead and wounded of all categories, compared to the figure for Italian prisoners alone of over 30,000.

He spoke of the capture of a "hundred serviceable guns and fifty tanks together with great quantities of invaluable stores" the imprisonment of 800 men in a battery of artillery at Sidi Omar Tuesday and the charge, "sword in hand," of an Australian cavalry squadron which "gathered both guns and transport as its trophies."

Chides Italians

"One cannot say," he added drily, "that the Italians have shown high fighting spirit of quality in this battle . . . we have seen at least one whole division laying down its arms intact to a far inferior force."

Churchill again spoke soberly of the "disquieting" sinkings of British ships by U-boats in the Atlantic and said "we must regard the keeping open of this channel to the world against the submarines and the long-distance aircraft which are now attacking it as the first of the military tasks which lie before us at the present time."

Resistance Power Greater

"Our power of resistance has grown," he said, "and we have preserved ourselves secure in our island home and have reached out long and strong hands across the seas to discharge the obligations we have taken to the countries that have put their faith in us."

Sharing briefly the Commons floor, the World War Premier, David Lloyd George, called fiercely for Britain to "press on against the Italians" and said he hoped, the next time Commons met, that he would be able to congratulate Churchill on "having eliminated the more squalid of his opponents."

Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, said some "exceedingly small" time had been lost in munitions factories because of labor disputes. Asked about "these Communist efforts to let down our fighting men," Bevin said he did not wish to ruin the voluntary discipline of organized labor by applying "legal repressions too readily."

Text of Churchill Report

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP).—The text of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's report to the House of Commons today follows:

I should like to put frankly a difficulty I feel about frequent statements. As Prime Minister and Minister of Defense, there is a danger that if one gives full and frank and frequent statements, revealing one's own point of view or that of the government or of those charged with strategic and practical decisions, the enemy may gain an advantage.

Certainly, it would be very convenient if Herr Hitler or the important chiefs in Germany were to give us every fortnight or so an "honest to God" statement—if they were capable of it. We should immediately set a dozen active intelligence officers to study not only what was said but what was not said, and to read between the lines and collate any stray words which, with the other information, might afford a clew.

Therefore, I hope the House will be indulgent to me if I choose the occasions somewhat rarely, and in the event of their desiring information which I did not feel was convenient, they would allow me to impart it to them in secret session.

A the opening of the session, speaking on the reply to the King's speech, I said we wanted deeds, not words; I think we have not wholly failed to make that good. The battle of the Libyan desert is still proceeding. I have no later news than that contained in the public press at the moment. We are attacking the fort and town of Bardia with strong and increasing forces. The situation there is not such that I can make any decided statement, but I will go so far as to say that I have every reason to believe that it is developing favorably.

This memorable battle, spread over a vast extent of desert; these swiftly moving mechanized columns, circling in and out of the mass of the enemy and posts of the enemy, means that fighting is taking place over an area as large as Yorkshire. It is not possible to give all the details at present.

I am sure the figure of 30,000 prisoners is even, up to the present moment, a considerable understatement. A hundred serviceable guns and fifty tanks, together with great quantities of invaluable stores, already have been gathered by our troops. Fighting at Sidi Omar day before yesterday resulted in another 800 prisoners, a battery of artillery being captured, and on the same day, there in the Jarabub Oasis west of the Siwa Oasis and very important on the desert flank, an Australian cavalry squadron charged, sword in hand, and gathered both guns and transport as its trophy.

One cannot say Italians have shown high fighting spirit or quality in this battle. At other periods of Italian history they have shown great courage and I am not going to frame a charge of a lack of military quality against the people with whom, up to this time (and God knows we never sought it) we have had no quarrel, but only sympathy.

Loss Less Than 1,000

But perhaps their hearts are not in their work. Perhaps they have been so long disciplined and ruled and relieved of all share of the government of their own country that they have not felt those virile emotions which are the foundation of the actions of brave armies, and which are best furnished by discipline imposed on freedom. We have seen at least one whole division laying down its arms intact to a far inferior force. Our force has been contending at odds of three, four or five to one and contending with continued success.

Up to the night of Dec. 16, the latest return I have, the British Army, a very considerable army who moved rapidly in the desert, fighting continuously for the whole week, lost less than 1,000 killed and wounded of all ranks, British, Indian and Imperial. There have, no doubt, been other losses.

We must regard this event as highly satisfactory and its reactions in other directions will be favorable and should permit us to take bolder views than those open to us before. This is a case where risks have been well run; the risk in the desert was considerable; movement of this large force across seventy or eighty miles of desert was open to very considerable hazards, and the assault on Sidi Barani had this cause anxiety, that petrol and water were strictly limited to our attacking force and that failure or delay would have entailed considerable curtainment of our operations.

But these risks have been run and surmounted by the great skill of Gen. Wilson, reputed to be one of our finest tacticians, and Gen. Wavell, whose figure grows upon the Eastern horizon. Air Marshal Longmore, at the most critical moment in the preparations, had a very large part of his force taken away from him for Greece; nevertheless he persevered, running additional risks, and his handling of the situation deserves highest praise. When I was at the Admiralty, in 1912, forming the Royal Naval Air Service, Longmore was one of the first few flyers there and in those days of very dubious machines he several times used to fly me about.

I hope the House will be contented by the present position and by the results achieved by this offensive. It is not by any means at an end, but I think it would be better to let the future unfold without attempting to forecast how the play may run.

Risks were also well run here by the general staff and the war committee and the staffs who studied this matter. It was not easy in July and August to send precious tanks of the best quality and cannon, of which we were then so short, on that long journey 'round the Cape of Good Hope, to enable us first to defend ourselves and later to resume the offensive. These were hard decisions to take. The Secretary of State for War, (Anthony Eden) and I had many anxious days in coming to these conclusions. But you will not bridge this war, or emerge from it successfully unless risks are run and risks do imply that the House will stand by the government and military commands.

The British Army has at last had an opportunity of showing its quality. We have had hard and unfortunate experiences in this war but in the fighting around Dunkerque all the divisions engaged had the consciousness that they were fully a match for their German opponents. Several battles fought on the front of one or two divisions show that we had no reason to shrink from contact on anything like equal terms. Now we have seen in Libya that our military science and staff officers are capable of planning and executing extremely complex and daring operations with efficiency. It is not only there that we have such officers.

Building Army at Home

Therefore, I renew my advice to the House to do all possible to develop the strength and efficiency of the great British Army now building up at home. The army will give its help in any air-raid emergency, but we must have an army here on a large scale—I carefully avoid saying what its numbers should be—not only to defend this island but for action in other theaters. We must have a large army, well found, equipped with the very best weapons.

This is a wise provision for the year 1941 in which, no doubt, we shall find opportunities of using our forces, if not in defense of this island, in other theaters on terms of moderate equality in numbers and in equipment. This is the first time in the desert that we have had equal equipment and we are still only a half-armed nation fighting a fully armed nation, a nation which already has passed the saturation point in its armaments. But in 1941 we shall become a well-armed nation, too, and that a well armed nation, too, and that not been open up to the present.

It takes three to four years to put the industries of a country on a war basis; the Germans reached the culminating point at the end of last year, and when we ourselves were still only in the second year, but by efforts now being made and by the great supplies which are reaching and will reach us from the United States, we hope we shall become well armed during 1941.

It is essential that every effort should be made in the armament factories to improve the supply not only of the air force but of the army, and every risk run there under the fire of the enemy and every loyal endeavor which our united nation can procure from the workmen to accelerate production will be a step toward victory and toward an earlier victory.

We are not content with the results of production, but they are certainly on a very great and substantial scale. We must never be content; we must continue to strive to place in the hands of our men weapons worthy of the task they are to perform and of their sacrifices. This applies with equal force to food production.

When I spoke the other day of the years 1943 and 1944, I did not mean I believed that the war would go on until then, but in agriculture and shipbuilding you have got to look ahead. Anything that can be done to increase the volume of our food production will be the wisest insurance, assuming the war should be prolonged for such a period, which is by no means impossible.

We are separating for a short recess, and will go with some sense of compromise, and even satisfaction, at the progress made.

But it would be a disaster if any one supposed that the danger, that the supreme danger—the mortal dangers—are past. They are not. There are the dangers of a prolonged deadlock, but there may also be more immediate dangers.

Notes Invasion Peril.

The winter season offers some advantages to an invader to counterbalance those of the summer season. It would be a very great lack of prudence—a lack of prudence amounting to a crime—if vigilance were relaxed in our armies at home.

Careful preparations must continue. Although it has been possible to give a proportion of leave to troops, that should not in any way be taken as the slightest justification for supposing that we need not watch from hour to hour the danger and the menace which still exists in full force so short a distance away.

Our defense of the beaches is complete. From the north of Scotland around the island, enormous masses of guns, machine guns, fortified posts and every device of defense have been erected and are guarded by large numbers of well trained men.

But we are not making the mistake which was made by the French general staff, when they thought that the holding of the Maginot Line was all that was necessary.

I remember going over to Paris at that dark moment and asking what they were going to do with their general reserve. With the greatest sorrow, I learned that the general reserve did not exist. It had to be drawn from the different parts of the line.

We have now got a very large army here capable of moving to any place with great rapidity and going into action in the strongest counter offensive, and therefore one may have good confidence in our power to beat our enemy, if he set foot in any strength on these shores.

Nevertheless the watchword must be unceasing vigilance. Hitler—I should certainly deprecate any comparison between Hitler and Napoleon, I do not want to insult the dead—wields gigantic power and is capable of wielding it in a ruthless manner.

He has great need of doing something now or, at any rate, in the next two months.

When war began he had his plans ready for Poland and doubted whether Britain and France would come in. They came in, and when he had beaten Poland he found himself faced with Britain and France.

He waited a long time, in complete quiescence, it seemed, and then he struck the most terrible series of blows which shattered France.

Then he thought, I suppose, that in the fall of France would be involved the fall of Britain. It turned out differently, and we must suppose that he is making other plans particularly directed to our address.

Therefore, I urge increasing effort by all. We are not afraid of any blow that may be struck at us, but we must make unceasing preparation.

The attacks in the air have slackened somewhat, I suppose because of the weather, but they might easily have slackened in preparation for some other form of activity.

Night Raids Still Puzzle

Every method of dealing with air fighting by night is being studied with passion and zeal by a very large number of extremely able and brilliant scientists and officers, but so far we have not been any more successful in stopping the German night raiders than the Germans have been successful in stopping our airplanes when they range freely over Germany.

We have struck heavy blows. The blows at Mannheim appear to be very heavy. The enemy have not found any means of preventing that.

So far we have not reached any satisfactory remedy, although we have noticed considerable improvements in various directions. We must expect a continuance of these attacks. We must bear them. The organization of shelters, the improvement of sanitation, the endeavor to mitigate the painful conditions under which many people sleep is a first task of the government at home. The Air Raid Precaution Services, the Home Office, the Ministry of Health, are as much in the front line as the armored columns chasing the Italians about the Libyan desert. I hope and trust we shall succeed in mitigating increasingly the conditions in the shelters. It will not be for want of trying. It will not be because money or trouble is grudged.

The only other point I would mention is that of the (ship) sinkings in the Atlantic. They still continue at a very disquieting level. It is not so much as in the critical period of 1917, but still we must recognize the recrudescence of a danger that a year ago we seemed to have mastered.

From now on we shall steadily increase our resources in flotillas and other methods of defense, but we must regard the keeping open of this channel to the world against the submarines and long-distance aircraft which are now attacking it as the first of the military tasks which lie before us at the present time.

We may be thankful that we have been preserved so far and made progress after a moment when many in the world, including our best friends abroad, despaired of our continued power of resistance. Our power of resistance has grown and we have preserved ourselves secure in our island home and have reached out long and strong hands across the seas to discharge the obligations we have undertaken to countries that have put their faith in us.

Mannheim Raided for Third Night in Row—Genoa and Milan Also Attacked.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Three straight nights of R. A. F. bombardment of Mannheim, southwestern German industrial, commercial and communications center, were described today in well-informed quarters as part of a British move to smash communications between Germany and Italy.

Linked with the third attack last night was an RAF smash at Italy—a factory in Milan, piers in Genoa and an airdrome in northern Italy, according to the Air Ministry's announcement.

In informed quarters the Mannheim raids were stressed, however, as an attempt to smash communication links between the Axis Powers while British troops continued their pressure against Italian forces in Libya and British air and sea forces helped the Greek fight Italy in Albania.

In the darkness last night RAF bombers planted bombs amid the smoke of previous bombardments of Mannheim, the Air Ministry said. Mannheim, at the juncture of the Rhine and Neckar rivers, is one of the key junctions of river-rail routes to Italy from the Ruhr Valley, with its heavy industries, and from the Saar which produces coal which Italy needs.

Bombed 31 Times.

By British count, Mannheim has been bombed thirty-one times since the war started. Aside from its importance in Axis communication, the city factories make submarine engines and provide other finished products needed by warring Germany.

Still another motive in the Mannheim attack, it is believed, is the British wish to give successive regions of Germany a taste of heavy raiding something like the Nazi air force has been giving to various sections of England.

The Air Ministry said that four large new fires were started in Mannheim, "where smoke from fires of previous raids" still could be seen.

"At Milan," a communique said, "a large area was seen to be blazing furiously."

The submarine base at Lorient, in Nazi-occupied France, also was attacked, the Ministry said.

The British lost no planes in the night's raiding.

London Night Raids Resumed.

Londoners heard air raid sirens shrilling early this evening for the first time in three nights. Tuesday and Wednesday nights were quiet.

Officials had noted, just before the warning sounded, that this was the third consecutive day in which virtually no bombs fell on Britain. Immediately after the alarms sounded, gunfire was heard in the outskirts of the capital.

The warning ended a quiet period of about sixty-eight hours, the longest since the intensive Nazi raids started in September.

The all-clear signal in London sounded about two and one-half hours later.

An East Anglican town also reported that Nazi planes were overhead.

The Ministry of Information said that a German bomber had been shot down off the southwest coast this morning by British fighting planes.

Three German warplanes attacked a convoy off England's southeast coast today but watchers along the seaside cliffs reported that the Nazi bombs fell harmlessly into the water.

Reports One Killed in Milan.

ROME, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command acknowledged today that British planes last night again bombed cities in northern Italy, causing damage at Milan and Genoa and near Vercelli.

One person was reported killed and several were injured in Milan, it was stated.

Vercelli is about forty miles southwest of Milan.

Nazis Admit Bombing.

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced today that British planes dropped a number of bombs in southwestern Germany last night, but caused "only restricted damage." One civilian was killed, the communique declared.

It was also stated that because of poor weather conditions the German air force was restricted mainly to armed reconnaissance flights yesterday.

A merchantman in the English Channel was directly hit in the engine-room and severely damaged, while another ship was hit forward by a bomb of heavy caliber, the communique said. The High Command did not claim the sinking of either vessel, however, though it said that the crew of one took to their boats.

DNB, the German official news agency, reported that British planes bombed Le Verdon, the French port near Bordeaux, on Monday night, and that several French civilians were killed. It said that no military objectives were damaged, but that several private dwellings were hit.

Planes Over Switzerland.

BERNE, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Swiss High Command today reported a new violation of Swiss territory by foreign airplanes which "crossed the Juras in a southeasterly direction"—the route frequently followed in the past by British flyers raiding Italy.

BRITISH UNEASY DESPITE LETUP IN BOMB RAIDS

Fear Nazis Are Storing Air Power For Pre-Invasion Blow At Ports

Quiet Over London And Midlands Broken By Light Forays

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 19—Amid sporadic and light air raids tonight Britain's military chiefs prepared to resist a German invasion attempt they believe might come from a half dozen points.

The recent lull in bombing, partly attributable to unfavorable weather, has not lessened anxiety of military circles who point out that one night of "Coventry" raids at a half dozen small ports like Brighton and Torquay on the Channel could so disorganize them that they would be open to the landing of troops.

"Suppose," they say, "Coventry had been a seaport, what would have happened if Germany had invaded that port the following dawn?"

New Technique Cited

It is the consensus in air circles that Germany's technique now is to husband her air forces for obliterating blows against single o[bjectives].

Because she still ha[s] [many] planes—latest estimates here o[f] [her] plane production is 2,000 a [month], military circles believe she must strike quickly before American help begins to balance the present disparity in air forces.

The quiet over London and the Midlands was broken tonight by the return of raiders who were met by terrific anti-aircraft barrages.

All-Clear Sounds

The capital's "all-clear" sounded by 9.30 P. M. after flares, futile in the heavy fog, and a few bombs were dropped in one section of the city. The grounds of a nurses' home were reported hit but no casualties resulted.

On the southeast coast, incendiaries dropped by about a dozen planes flying in thick weather caused some fires. These were quickly put out, it was said.

Liverpool and towns in west and northwest England also reported raiders, but no bombing.

Basis For Anxiety

The forays reminded the public, jubilant over victories of the British forces in Africa, that the United Kingdom itself remained under fire.

To those who scoff at militarists' anxiety that an invasion may be attempted any time in the next two months, a responsible source asserted: Africa is only a sideline to Germany.

Britain is the keystone of resistance to the Axis. Let the swastika fly over Buckingham Palace and resistance to the Axis in Greece, Africa and the occupied countries will collapse.

Germany cannot afford to allow Britain to rearm at her leisure with American aid. If the Nazis invade now and are repulsed, Britain still would lack resources for a counter-blow on the Continent, but if Germany waits until May and is thrown back Britain could hurl the weight of a greatly increased air force into an offensive across the Channel.

Time Britain's Ally

Time, this source pointed out, thus has returned as an ally of Britain. Two other factors declared to be indispensable are good weather and complete local control of the air.

The Nazis would need at least seventy-two hours of clear weather and a calm Channel to land any sizable force.

On the other side of the picture, the British have progressed far since last June when the inadequacy of their army was pitiful. The army has been reequipped and tested in the tactics that won the battle of France for Germany.

Other considerations are the inability of Germany to land sizable tanks in any great number by sea or air; the staggering problem of supplies, and Britain's control of the sea to the East.

Italian Submarines Reported Ordered To Sink Spanish Ships

Instructions Declared Found By British On Fascist Submersible—London Releases Photostatic Copy

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 19—The Admiralty declared tonight that a document found by British seamen in an Italian submarine instructed Italian submarine commanders to attack "certain Spanish merchant ships without warning."

The Admiralty released what it described as a photograph of the original document to the press. It was addressed to the commandant of an Italian submarine group.

The purported order was signed by Mario Falangola, vice-admiral commanding submarines, and the Admiralty offered the following translation:

"Inform the units under your command that ships flying the Spanish flag belonging to the Ybarra and the Pinillos shipping companies leaving or coming from Casablanca (Morocco) and sailing toward Lisbon must be attacked without warning.

"The steamers of the Ybarra company have a black funnel with the letters 'A' and 'V' interlaced in white. The house flag is blue and bears the same monogram in white.

"The Pinillos company has not any particular markings. It appears to own the ships S[illegible] Ario, Celta of 2,500, 800 and 1,200 tons, respectively."

U. S. Hailed as British War Ally

London Newspapers Use Phrase In Praising Proposal to Lend Armaments.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—News of the arms speedup in America, and of President Roosevelt's proposal to lend aid to Britain, crowded the front pages of the London newspapers today, and some sections of the press described the United States as a full-fledged ally in the war against Germany and Italy.

Writers acclaimed the President's proposals as having wiped out Britain's war-debt default and her current credit dilemma.

"America is our ally in the struggle," the Daily Sketch proclaimed while deploring the necessity of such expedients as arms loans, and asserting that they arose from "the fiction that America is not in the war as much as we."

"America is as much a belligerent as Britain—the only difference being that we are in the front line," this paper declared.

Calls Roosevelt a Genius.

The Daily Mail assured its readers that Secretary of State Hull and William S. Knudsen of the National Defense Advisory Committee had, by their declarations, finally shocked Americans out of the slumber in which they "tried to have their guns and candy, too," by maintaining the production of peacetime production.

"But America isn't living in peacetime," wrote Don Iddon, the Mail's New York correspondent. "She is the non-belligerent ally of Great Britain. She is Britain's supply base and plane and ship provider.

"It isn't a role that can be filled if all old hours and old wages are not to be given up."

The London Times declared that "no one on this side of the Atlantic imagined the United States would let us lose the war by withholding, over any question of dollars, such arms as she was able to supply."

The News Chronicle declared that President Roosevelt's arms lease proposal was a stroke of political genius, in which he showed "the logic and genius that make him the practical leader of the world democracy."

Called No Longer Neutral.

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Official Germany remained silent today in regard to President Roosevelt's plan for aiding Britain, but it was evident that some reaction would not be delayed long.

Authorized spokesmen said they saw "progressive development in a certain direction" (obviously meaning increased aid by the United States to Britain), "but when and in what form the German press will take up this whole tendency, cannot be forecast at present."

"The time may come when we must express our opinion," they added, however.

Privately and unofficially, one hears this sort of comment from persons usually in the know: "The American President's proposal may be technically within the neutrality act, but obviously it is no longer neutral."

Another comment often heard is: "How come that Mr. Roosevelt claims England defends the United States? Who has been violating the American neutrality by belligerent acts within the Pan-American safety zone by seizing mail and other acts? What evidence has Mr. Roosevelt that Germany is threatening the United States?"

It seems safe to predict that German-inspired comment, once its publication is decided upon, will be along those lines.

2 British Ships Reported Bombed by Nazi Planes

Berlin Presumes One Sunk; Southwest Reich Raided

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (AP).—German bombers scored hits on two merchantmen of about 3,000 tons each in operations against the British yesterday, authoritative sources said today, with one of the vessels presumed sunk and the other badly damaged.

The one believed sunk was struck amidships, it was said, while the other was badly damaged forward and forced to halt.

Slight British air action over southwestern Germany was reported. There were no details, although the high command in its daily communique said one civilian was killed.

The high command also announced the bombing of the two merchantmen but failed to report the sinking of either, though it said the crew of one took to boats.

Of Germany's air war on the British Isles the communique merely said: "Because of poor weather conditions the German air force yesterday carried out mainly armed reconnaissance flights."

Nazis and British Plan Prisoners' Relief Ship

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (AP).—Authorized sources announced today that negotiations are under way through the German and British Red Cross to have a ship travel between England and France or Portugal to expedite delivery of prisoners' mail and possibly exchange seriously wounded prisoners.

Under the plan, both sides would recognize the ship and assure its safe travel.

Reich Lifts Dancing Ban For the Holiday Season

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 19 — Germany, which forbids dancing when war calls for the exertion of the nation's fullest energies, today lifted the ban that has been in effect since the drive into the Low Countries and France last Spring.

Germans may dance every day between Christmas and New Year's and three times a week otherwise.

On New Year's Eve, however, Berlin's night spots must close at 11 P. M., the usual hour.

British Given Mobile Canteens

London, Dec. 19 (AP)—Food Minister Lord Woolton accepted today part of a fleet of 100 mobile canteens presented by the American Allied Relief Fund.

"We defeat the enemy as much by maintaining our health and morale through good and suitable food provided at the right time as we do by victory in the air, on the sea or on the battlefield," he said.

Galway And Sligo Put Under Military Control

Special Irish Coastal Defense Measures In Operation Since Fall Of France

Dublin, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Defense Ministry today placed the ports of Galway and Sligo under military control, a further step in the prepared-ness policy.

Since July the ports of Dublin, Cork, Kingstown, Bantry Bay and Lough Swilly have been under total military direction. Special coastal defense measures have been in operation since the fall of France.

Bread Subsidy Set Up in Britain

LONDON, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Government announced today the establishment of a bread subsidy, effective for three months beginning December 1, which it estimated would cost £750,000 (about $3,000,000.)

The subsidy will permit bakers to sell a four-pound loaf for about 17 cents, the Food Ministry said.

PROF. CATLIN SAFE

Additional Western Prince Survivors Listed.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—George Edward Catlin, who directed the Rockefeller Foundation's investigation of the Eighteenth Amendment in 1926, was among the survivors of the British liner Western Prince, it was announced today.

The Western Prince was torpedoed on Saturday with a loss of eighteen lives and Mr. and Mrs. John Allen of Norfolk, Va., were among those lost, the Furness-Withy Steamship Company announced today.

Four other passengers lost were given as Gordon Scott, financial adviser to the Canadian Munitions Ministry, and Mrs. D. Sproule, Mrs. Eric J. W. Broughton and Mrs. Frank E. Bougall, addresses unknown.

Prof. George Edward Gordon Catlin was born in Liverpool in 1896, and was educated at New College, Oxford, and at Cornell University, where he took his doctorate in philosophy. He came to the United States in 1923 to teach politics at Cornell, where he attained the rank of professor in 1928.

In 1925 he married Vera Brittain, the author, whose works include "Testament of Youth." They have a son and daughter.

The rescue of Sir Cecil Thomas Carr and Lady Carr, also passengers on the Western Prince, was announced today by Prof. Lindsay Rogers of Columbia University. A cable received told of their rescue and arrival in Glasgow.

GREEK FORCES DRIVE ITALIANS FROM PALERMO

Two Other Towns Under Fire As Athenians Push Coastal Advance

Papagos Calls On Men To Fight Until Foe Is "Thrown Into Sea"

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 19—A Government spokesman announced tonight that the Italians had abandoned Palermo Bay, on which Porto Palermo is situated, in retreating toward Chimara.

The Fascist-held town of Klisura was under fire, he added, and the Italians also were pushed back to the outskirts of Tepelini.

During the night, Gen. Alexander Papagos, Greek commander in chief, told his army in a general order that a large part of the Italian forces had been "almost disbanded and demoralized," and appealed to the Greeks to persist until they "throw the enemy into the sea."

"All Greece Is Proud"

Referring to his first general order exhorting Greeks at the outset of the war to fight with "stubbornness and unlimited endurance," General Papagos said:

"This you have done throughout. All Greece is proud and the whole world is following with admiration your victory.

"Neither sacrifices nor privations nor pain nor even winter prevented us from repelling the invader, overthrowing him from strong positions and facing him fearlessly and relentlessly.

"Your blows placed him in a very difficult position. A large part of his forces are almost disbanded and without morale. . . . Our enemy is shaken on front before you and in Africa before the English and he is shaken internally. Winter is accelerating his disintegration.

"Throw Him Into Sea"

"Persist in your efforts that we may crush him completely and throw him into the sea.

"Victory will then be ours, the best victory in our history and it will be due to you."

The Greek command's nightly communique reported that over the whole fighting area an aggregate of more than 600 prisoners had been taken.

It said:

"Fighting continued successfully. The enemy, despite stiff resistance, was dislodged by bayonets from his positions, leaving in our hands more than 600 prisoners and a large number of automatic weapons and other materials.

Hospitals Attacked

"The activity of enemy aviation was directed today even against hospital installations despite conspicuous Red Cross signs. Our aviation was active on military objectives."

The spokesman said that at one point along the central front, two officers and sixty men were captured and at another in the north one officer and 150 men were seized.

In some areas where they had constructed artillery emplacements, the Italians offered energetic resistance, the spokesman said. He remarked that in some sections the snow was four to five feet deep.

"Despite these difficult conditions," he continued, "reports which we are receiving say our army is maintaining the initiative and that its morale remains high beyond praise."

Italian counter-attacks failed, the spokesman added, despite the arrival of fresh troops even during the operations.

Enemy Losses Laid To Cold

"Our advance is being pursued despite enemy defense of snow covered positions."

Italian losses were described as extremely heavy, partly because of the severe cold.

"Villages we captured in heights surrounding Klisura were full of Italian dead."

More to the north, the spokesman claimed a small Greek patrol captured an Italian detachment number 151 men, ten times the size of the capturing force.

Nazis Reported Flying Italians Over Adriatic

Struga, Yugoslavia, (at the Albanian frontier), Dec. 19 (AP)—Military sources reported tonight that fleets of German-piloted Junkers air transports were ferrying Italian reinforcements across the Adriatic to the Albanian battlefront as Germany's aid to her hard-pressed ally.

Concurrently, Greek forces, fighting in cold so fierce that hundreds of their Fascist foemen were reported frozen to death, were said by front dispatches to have forced Italian withdrawal from the strategic Albanian towns of Klisura, Tepeleni and Palermo.

Follow Usual Tactics

The same advices said, however, that the Greeks followed their customary tactics of delaying occupation until dominating heights near-by had been mopped up, lest the Italian rearguard entrap them.

The assignment of German transports to carry troops to Albania—if true—would represent an application of the now familiar Blitzkrieg technique of troop movement, worked so successfully in Poland, Denmark, Norway and the Low Countries.

[A Swiss newspaper, Le Democrat, of Delemont, reported "from a good source at Zurich" that commercial freight and civilian passenger traffic had been suspended on the Brenner railway line, which connects Germany and Italy, to permit passage of German divisions en route to Italy.]

Providing Only Planes

The report of Junkers transports in Italy's service indicated that Germany was providing only the planes and the pilots. These were said to have gone to Italy in response to urgent pleas from Premier Mussolini. Italian Alpini made up the bulk of the air-borne reinforcements, it was understood.

Military sources said that each Junkers carried twenty fully-equipped men on the short hop across the Adriatic to near the battle lines and that each could cross several times a day.

In the Norwegian campaign, under similar weather and terrain conditions, the Nazi transports utilized frozen lakes for landing fields.

The Greek drive has left only Valona and Durazzo as ports capable of handling large-scale, sea-borne reinforcements for the battered Fascists.

Valona and Durazzo frequently are bombed by the British Royal Air Force in cooperation with the Greeks.

On Albania's peaks the temperature ranged as low as twenty-two below zero. Greek sentries were ordered changed every half hour to keep them from freezing to death.

The Greeks, like other modern soldiers engaged in war against the white background of snow, wore sheets for camouflage.

Advance Continues

"Despite bad weather," said one front dispatch, "Greek columns are continuing their advance, especially in the central sector where, after heavy artillery fire, they reached Klisura.

"The Italians abandoned their positions, where they had been fighting for three days, and left in the hands of the Greek troops abundant war material and quite a few prisoners."

But at Klisura as well as at Tepeleni the Greeks refrained from entering the reportedly abandoned towns. Instead, Greek army chieftains massed their heavy artillery and poured shells over the towns into hastily entrenched Italian positions in the background hills.

Drive Across Ridges

Greek infantrymen moved over ridges on either side of the valleys in which Tepeleni and Klisura are situated and were reported converging slowly on the Italian positions under cover of intense barrages.

Tepeleni and Klisura are on the middle of the front which, roughly, runs one hundred miles from the southwest, on the Adriatic coast, to the northeast, along the Yugoslav border.

On the coastal extreme of the line, the Greeks were said to be driving a long wedge northward and to the east of Palermo, flanking Chimara, intending ultimately to swing left to the coast, cutting off thousands of Italians reported streaming northward after enduring terrific shelling in the Palermo area.

Raid "Most Successful"

Athens dispatches quoted the British Royal Air Force account of a "most successful" raid yesterday on Valona, in the path of the Greek coastal drive, which, despite a twenty-minute air battle with Italian fighters, resulted in hits on the seaplane base, docks and warehouses.

One Italian plane was believed to have been downed and one British plane made a forced landing on its return flight.

From the northeastern extreme of the Albanian front there were no new reports.

Shelled by Warships.

ROME, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Reporting on the Italo-Greek war along the Albanian front, the Italian High Command said today that Italian warships shelled the Greek gun emplacements in the Lukova zone, north of Porto Edda, while Fascist planes bombed Greek troop concentrations in the vicinity of Argyrokastron, Morgoni and Kolonia.

Artillery activity was reported on the north Albanian battlefront.

Meanwhile today Stefani, the official Italian news agency, scoffed at British claims that Rhodes and other Italian Islands in the east Mediterranean were in difficulties as a result of a blockade carried on from bases on Greek islands. The agency said that with the help of food rationing the islands would be able to carry on for a long time independently.

As an indication that there was no serious food shortage, Stefani declared that the Italians had been feeding about 516 shipwrecked Jewish refugees on one of the Dodecanese Islands for the past three months. Several hundred Greeks interned in the Dodecanese were also said to be receiving regular, normal meals.

BRITISH BRING UP NEW TROOPS TO TAKE BARDIA

Fascist Wing There Declared Facing Quick Capture Or Annihilation

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 19—The British brought up new troops before Bardia today for a last heavy blow in that Libyan sector, and declared officially that the rear wing of the Italian army entrapped there was facing imminent capture or annihilation.

The road of Fascist exit to the west toward the important base of Tobruk—the next objective of the desert offensive and lying eighty miles west of the Egyptian frontier—was under intermittent bomb fire, and in the Mediterranean the guns of the British fleet commanded the route of retreat.

The Italian position in the whole area was termed "precarious" by the British command.

2 Divisions May Be Cut Off

How many Italians were cut off about Bardia was not stated officially, save that their forces were described in a British communique as "numerically superior" to the lengthening columns which had boxed them in, and were believed by some to be perhaps two divisions.

Lengthening, too, was the British list of Italian captives. Those sorted, counted and in hand as permanent prisoners of war numbered 31,546, said General Headquarters here, and to this number will be added the "several thousand" still being brought forth from the battle areas. Total British losses—killed, wounded and missing—were officially put at less than 1,000.

Flight To Tobruk Thins Out

Royal Air Force reports indicated that the earlier heavy Italian flight observed toward Tobruk had thinned out. There were some indications that a gradual retreat from Tobruk, similar to that from Bardia, was the Italian plan. A withdrawal toward Derna, 175 miles within Libya, had been reported by British pilots earlier in the week.

Inside and about the perimeter of Bardia heavy fighting went on during the day. The Fascists were known to have plentiful supplies and British military sources suggested that the operation might require some time, although they expressed no doubt about the ultimate issue.

In the vanguard of troops surrounding the town were a contingent of "Free French" forces and detachments of Australians.

R. A. F. Bombs Airdromes

The Royal Air Force backed up the land-and-sea assault upon Bardia by bombing Italian airdromes to the rear of it protecting the British troops moving steadily across the Libyan plateau to the attack.

These operations included one of the heaviest raids of the war in the western desert. The airdrome at Benina was the target—the largest in Libya save at nearby Bengasi. It houses many Italian planes kept in reserve and at least eighteen of these were destroyed by "tons" of bombs, the British announced. They attacked in waves and as the last lot left practically the whole airdrome was declared ablaze.

On other African fronts, new British harassing activity was reported. British patrols operating from the Sudan frontier were declared to have inflicted "a number" of casualties in raids in areas facing Italian Eritrea and Ethiopia.

Sudan Posts Are Bombed

ROME, Dec. 19 (AP)—In raids in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, the Italians said today, Fascist planes bombed the station and air field at Gedaref, where large fires were said to have been started; the flying field at Roseires and Port Sudan. During an air battle over Port Sudan one British plane was said to have been shot down.

EDEN HAILS AFRICAN VICTORY

Tells of Small British Losses in Wavell's 'Brilliant' Stroke

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP)—Anthony Eden, Secretary for War, announced today that up to Dec. 16 British forces in the Western Desert had taken 30,000 Italian prisoners, "at a conservative estimate," against the loss of only 1,000 British troops—killed, wounded and missing. He made his announcement at a luncheon.

Lord Croft, parliamentary secretary in the War Office, told the House of Lords that British casualties in Egypt and Libya up to Dec. 16 were seventy-two killed and 738 wounded.

Mr. Eden said that the casualty figures were for "all imperial forces engaged." Speaking of the British campaign, he asserted that "there can be few parallels for such an achievement in the whole history of war."

Mr. Eden declared the "recent brilliant victory" by General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Britain's commander in the Middle East, was a "simple lesson" that, "given equipment and training, there are no troops anywhere in the world superior to those of the British Commonwealth."

The war secretary made an inspection tour of General Wavell's command a few weeks before the drive began.

BRITISH CUT OFF ITALIAN TROOPS IN BARDIA TRAP

Royal Air Force Heavily Bombs Road Leading West to Tobruk.

ATTACK ON THAT PORT NEXT

Cairo Reports 31,566 Prisoners Taken in Libyan Drive—18 Planes Destroyed.

CAIRO, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Italian rearguard forces left to defend Bardia, Libya's principal base in the frontier region, have been trapped and their sole way of escape to Tobruk is under aerial bombardment, British war communiques declared tonight.

"Advanced elements of our troops which have successfully contained numerically superior enemy forces in Bardia are being steadily re-enforced and the position of the remnants of the beaten Italian Army in that area can now be regarded as precarious," said a British General Headquarters communique.

The Royal Air Force, recounting raids and reconnaissance which took British planes over the western desert battle zone and also over the frontiers with Italian East Africa, reported:

"The Bardia-Tobruk Road was also bombed but little movement was seen."

In Ethiopia and Eritrea.

Linked with aerial operations against Italian-occupied Ethiopia and Eritrea were British land patrol operations.

"On the Sudan frontier our patrols were again active in the Kassala and Gallabat areas (facing Eritrea and Ethiopia, respectively), inflicting a number of casualties on the enemy," said the GHQ communique.

General headquarters said that 31,546 Italian prisoners, including 1,626 officers, had been counted already as the haul of the Libyan offensive and that several thousand more were being removed from battle areas.

Bardia, less than ten air line miles northwest of the junction of the Libyan-Egyptian frontiers, was an important Italian supply base and port. The normal population is 2,370.

The R. A. F. fanned wide in its offensive.

It made a "wave" attack two nights ago on Benina airdrome which its communique described as "one of the heaviest raids of the war in the western desert," destroying eighteen Italian planes and firing the airdrome.

A Rhodesian squadron raided Italian flying fields and troops in the Metemma area of the Ethiopian-Sudan borderland, while others struck at Jebel Serpbatib, in the Sudan-Eritrea region.

Earlier today it was stated that the British land, sea and air forces had joined in a concerted drive to pinch off Bardia and throw open the way for an attack upon Tobruk, toward which the battered Italian Army was then reported to be retreating under harassing fire.

With the fall of Bardia apparently imminent, there were indications that the Italians were also making preparations to abandon Tobruk, which is seventy miles to the west.

The British said that their reconnaissance planes had observed troop movements in the direction of Derna on the seacoast, eighty miles to the west of Tobruk.

How many Italian troops still lay within the net the British were attempting to tighten around Bardia was not known here for certain. The normal garrison, however, was said to be one division, and it was believed that this number had been augmented by remnants of the forces driven out of Sidi Barrani and Salum.

No Sign of British Slackening.

Although the advance British forces are now operating 150 miles from their nearest railhead at Matruh, Egypt, there was no indication of any slackening of the westward drive launched by Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell ten days ago. Heavy rains were said to have handicapped but not halted the British mechanized units, and the Royal Air Force was said to be playing a major role in the advance despite adverse weather.

[At London today Prime Minister Churchill announced that in ten days' fighting in North Africa the British had suffered a total loss of fewer than 1,000 men killed, wounded and missing.]

Early this evening the Royal Air Force announced in a communique that at least eighteen Italian planes were destroyed in a raid on Benina Airdrome in the Libyan war theater on Tuesday night. The communique described the raid as one of the heaviest in the African campaign.

The British were said to be putting to good use the great quantities of stores they captured in driving the Italians out of Egypt.

An Associated Press correspondent at the front said that British intelligence officers were surprised at the amount of material the Italians had carted into Egypt in preparation for their widely heralded drive toward the Suez Canal. The Italians' only serious shortage appeared to be in metals. Many of the troops had no steel helmets, and many of their fortifications had no barbed wire. The Italians also had little gasoline, for most of their vehicles operate on oil, which was a disappointment to the British.

Alexandria Raided.

ALEXANDRIA, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Italian planes bombed the Alexandria area early today, but, according to the official announcement, there were no casualties or damage.

Alexandria is the site of a British naval base guarding the Suez Canal and the eastern Mediterranean.

Rome Admits Assault on Bardia.

ROME, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Fighting on the Libyan battlefront was reported by the Italian High Command today to be centered around the port of Bardia, where the Italians were said to have attacked a large concentration of British mechanized forces yesterday.

This reference constituted the first official acknowledgment here that the British westward drive had carried as far as Bardia.

The communique said that Italian planes had effectively bombed the British mechanized units in the battle there, but gave no other indication of how the fight was going.

In East Africa, the Italians said, their planes bombed numerous objectives, including the station and airfield at Ghedaref, where large fires were said to have been started; the flying field at Roseires and Port Sudan.

During an air battle which developed over Port Sudan one British plane was said to have been shot down. The Italians said they suffered no plane losses.

British planes were reported to have bombed Metemma and Avgheisa on the East African front without results.

120 Prisoners Taken in East.

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Dec. 18 (Delayed) (A. P.).—British headquarters announced today that patrols which were reported yesterday to have raided El Wak, in Italian Somaliland, had returned across the Kenya border with about 120 prisoners after setting fire to buildings and supply depots.

The British also brought back as booty thirteen small guns, two large cannon, two light machine-guns and a quantity of amunition, the bulletin said.

The Italiain dead were estimated at fifty. The British casualties were listed as two killed and twelve wounded.

British Claim Air Victory.

In a broadcast picked up at New York by the Columbia Broadcasting System, the British radio declared last night that British airmen had shot down or put out of action more than 100 Italian planes during the last seven days while probably losing no more than five craft themselves.

NAZIS DEMAND SHAKEUP IN VICHY REGIME

'Firm' Request For 'Radical' Change Reported Made To Petain

Laval's Political Foes Expected To Be Among Those Losing Jobs

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 19—Fernand de Brinon, representative of the French Government in German-occupied Paris, brought today to Marshal Henri Philippi Petain in Vichy what diplomatic sources here described as "firm" Nazi demands for "radical" changes in the Governments' personnel.

The Vichy Cabinet meeting decided during the day, these sources said, that certain Cabinet changes would be made to meet the German demands.

Laval's Foes Face Ouster

The ousted Vice-Premier Pierre Laval, they added, probably would not figure by name among the successors of those to be ousted.

However, those losing their posts are expected to include some known as Laval's political enemies.

Petain, it was said, would announce the changes in a broadcast speech to the nation, probably Saturday. Further Cabinet meetings are to be held tomorrow and Saturday.

Crisis "Coming To Head"

The British wireless, in a broadcast heard in New York by CBS, declared De Brinon's visit to Vichy indicated "the crisis started in Vichy by the ouster of Laval is rapidly coming to a head."

De Brinon, the broadcast continued, spent six hours conferring with the Cabinet which met at the home of Pierre-Etienne Flandin, successor to Laval as Foreign Minister.

"The diplomatic activities surrounding the release and eventual comeback of Laval are not yet an end," the broadcast added.

"According to the Berlin correspondent of the paper La Suisse, it is quite possible that Laval may return into the Government as Minister of Interior; that is to say, he will replace one of the ministers who, according to not-yet-confirmed rumors, has most violently opposed his comeback."

HEADS FRENCH LINE

Cangardel Made President Under Reorganization.

Vichy, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Henri Cangardel was appointed president of the French Line today under a reorganization directed by the Vichy Government.

Vice-Admiral de Penfentenyo de Kerverguin was made vice-president.

The French Line operated north Atlantic liners before the war ended its service.

M. Cangardel was made director-general of the French Line in 1931 after a distinguished career in maritime and Government affairs. He was in the French Navy for fifteen years and during the first world war was an officer of the Naval General Staff in Morocco. At the close of that war he became a director of the Tardieu commission and thereafter he was made Director of the Ministry of Merchant Marine.

On his arrival in the United States in October, 1931, he said that an era of closer commercial and financial co-operation between France and the United States was heralded by the visit of Pierre Laval, who then was Premier of France.

20-franc Bills Circulated in France

VICHY, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Bank of France announced today that a new twenty-franc bill has been put in circulation.

This is the third small-denomination banknote issued since the beginning of the war when five and ten-franc notes were put out.

Twenty francs is the equivalent of about 45 cents under the official French exchange rate.

The franc has not been quoted in the New York foreign exchange market since France's downfall.

Swiss Yule Celebration

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 19 (AP)—Generalissimo Henri Guisan announced today that Switzerland will not be blacked out Christmas Eve and expressed the hope that "our air space will not be violated."

The blackout will be resumed Christmas night.

Finns Elect Ryti President

War-time Prime Minister Is Chosen to Take Place of Dr. Kallio.

HELSINKI, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Risto Ryti, acting President of Finland since last summer, was today elected President of the republic in succession to Kyosti Kallio, resigned, receiving 280 votes of an Electoral College total of 300.

Dr. Ryti, who was Prime Minister during the Russo-Finnish war of last winter, and who ranks among Europe's leading financiers, had exercised the functions of the presidency since Dr. Kallio became ill in the summer.

He was formally named acting President on November 29 when Dr. Kallio resigned on account of ill health.

Dr. Ryti, who is 51 years old, became Prime Minister on December 1, 1939, the day after the Russo-Finnish war began. He has been one of the strong men of the Finnish republic for almost twenty years, as head of the Bank of Finland, Minister of Finance, Prime Minister and then acting President.

Studied Law in London.

Appointed head of the Bank of Finland in 1923, he became a financial figure of international note, credited with stabilizing Finland's currency and establishing Finnish banks as among the most secure in the whole world.

He also is credited with being the man most responsible for the regular payments made by Finland on her war debt to the United States.

Dr. Ryti was born on February 3, 1889, was graduated from the Helsinki University Law School at the age of 20 and in 1914 continued his studies in London.

Out of Politics Ten Years.

After practicing law for several years he made his political debut as a Member of Parliament in 1919 and became the Minister of Finance two years later. He held that post until 1924.

He retired from Parliament in 1929 and turned his back on politics until, ten years later, he was called to the post of Prime Minister on the outbreak of the war with Russia.

In 1933 he had served as vice-chairman of the World Economic Conference in London.

Advice Heard from Moscow.

The Soviet press pointedly advised Finland on Tuesday to choose a President who "will guarantee normal friendly relations with neighboring countries and to avoid for Finland the ruinous path of adventures and experiments of any kind in foreign policy."

KYOSTI KALLIO, EX-PRESIDENT OF FINNS, DIES

Succumbs To Heart Attack At Helsinki Station In Arms Of Mannerheim

Death Comes Few Hours After Risto Ryti Had Been Elected

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Finland, Dec. 19—Kyosti Kallio, who broke his health in leading Finland's lost cause against the Russians in 1939, died tonight of a heart attack in the arms of the country's greatest military leader, Baron Gustaf Mannerheim, just as he was saying farewell to Helsinki and to public life.

A few hours beforehand, Risto Ryti had been elected his successor as President, and Kallio, ill and tired at 67, had been driven to the railway station with his wife through streets ringing with the cries of godspeed from tens of thousands. He was going home to the country.

On the platform a company of soldiers was drawn up in his honor.

He paced smartly to the end of the line in the last act of what Helsinki had planned as its good-by to him.

Caught By Mannerheim

He smiled, said "Good-by, thanks for everything." Then he gasped, thrust a hand to his breast and tottered.

Baron Mannerheim caught his sagging body.

Mrs. Kallio already was in the waiting train. A group of officers took in her husband's body and the crowd was hushed.

It had been a moving and exhausting day for Kallio. After the formalities of Ryti's election there had been a reception at the Presidential palace at which Kallio had appeared animated and happy at the prospect of quiet farm life.

Cheered Through Streets

It seemed that at least half of Helsinki's population of 330,000 stood on the streets to cheer the little caravan as Kallio rode to the station. Some held flaming torches; the bands played the "Port March," the Finnish national song, and that melody resounded in the railway station as Kallio died.

He had stood with a quiet firmness through all the crises that beset his land, and he suffered his first serious attack last August. Some months later, he returned to work, but on November 29 he resigned after it became clear that his health was permanently impaired.

Ryti, who became Prime Minister on December 1, 1939, was chosen to fill Kallio's unexpired term and now, by vote of 288 of the 300 cast in the electoral college, assumes a full term.

Stabilized Currency

He is 51. He is credited with stabilizing Finland's currency and establishing her banks as among the world's most secure during his Presidency of the Bank of Finland and as Finance Minister.

He was largely responsible, too, for Finland's regular payments on her war debt to the United States.

Ryti tonight appointed as acting Premier Rudolf Valden, who was Minister of Defense and senior member of the Kallio Cabinet. Negotiations for formation of a new administration are to be started Friday.

Finnish historians liked to compare Kallio to Abraham Lincoln for "his plainness of character and natural intelligence."

Always a member of the Agrarian party, it was largely through his untiring efforts on behalf of his fellow farmers that he climbed through the political ranks to Cabinet member, Prime Minister and finally the Presidency.

Grateful To America

He was especially grateful to American relief and sympathy during the dark days of the war with Russia. He was a friend of former President Herbert Hoover of the United States and was keenly appreciative of the effort made by him to aid the Finnish people.

In the midst of the pressing problems of war, when funds were desperately needed, President Kallio insisted that the instalments of Finland's World War debt to the United States be paid.

His greatest interest was centered on his program for the farmers who were given new homes, to replace those wrecked in the war, and in aiding in the cultivation of new broken soil.

Preferred Farm To School

His father operated a small farm. He attended school at Oulu (Uleaborg) under the care of his aunt. But school work irked him and he went back to his father's farm, doing various chores.

His aunt, who was possessed of some means, helped him to buy land that started him on his way. Having attained popularity with the peasants through his organization of a juvenile society for farm youth, he was elected to Parliament in 1904.

He fought successfully against an act of conscription, decreed by the Czarist Russian Government and strongly advocated the right to vote for women. This right was granted in 1906.

He was active in 1906-07 in furthering Parliamentary reform which the Czar was compelled to grant because Russia was weakened after its unsuccessful war with Japan.

Organized Agrarian Party

A single chamber with representatives elected by equal, universal suffrage was the result, replacing the former system of estates, under which the nobles, the clergy, the townsmen and peasants were represented separately.

Between 1906 and 1917, he turned his attention to organizing a strong Agrarian party, gradually winning more freedom of action and equal rights before the law with landlords and tenants.

His political posts included that of agricultural secretary in cabinets between 1917 and 1922. In the latter year he formed his own government. This Cabinet lasted until 1925 when he became Minister of Communications. He was serving in his fourth Cabinet when he was elected President in 1936 for a six-year term. He held a parliamentary seat through all sessions from 1907 until his Presidential term started.

His wife, Mrs. Kaisa Kallio, profitably managed her husband's farm during the years he was in politics. She was dazed when he was elected President and at first announced that she would not live in the Presidential Palace, but eventually yielded and moved into the palace. She was held in este[illegible] for her quiet dignity.

Grew Publicly Rebukes Japan On U. S. Attitude to China

Tokio Foreign Minister's Address Brings Retort by Ambassador That Question Is One of American Rights.

TOKIO, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Japanese Foreign Minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, pleaded with the United States today to stay out of the war lest the world face Armageddon, and then heard the American Ambassador, Joseph C. Grew, take quick exception to his statement that the "fate of China is largely a question of sentiment to Americans."

The Ambassador made several points in remarks he delivered after listening attentively to Mr. Matsuoka's address before the America-Japanese Society at a farewell luncheon honoring Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the new Japanese Ambassador to the United States.

Referring to Mr. Matsuoka's assertion, "The fate of China is largely a question of sentiment to Americans; to us it is a truly vital issue affecting the very existence of our empire," Mr. Grew declared:

"I think I must relieve the Minister of his misapprehension that the interest of Americans in China is largely sentimental."

Says U. S. Stands for Its Rights.

At another point in his speech the Foreign Minister said: "We believe we have a great mission as a civilizing and stabilizing force, and we stand for peace and order. We shut the door to none. Any nation that desires to take a hand in this task is welcome."

"I am glad to learn that in the Japanese program the door is to be shut nowhere and to none," Mr. Grew remarked, "and that this program envisages no conquest, no oppression, no exploitation. . . .

"The Foreign Minister knows that the American people stand for certain things, among which, on the one hand, are their obligations, and on the other, their rights."

The United States must consider not only "expressed intentions," Mr. Grew continued, but "facts and actions, too, regardless of the persuasive garb in which they may be dressed."

[It was before the America-Japanees Society that Mr. Drew delivered his famous "horse's mouth" speech on October 19, 1939, in which he bluntly declared that the American people "regard with growing seriousness the violation of, and interference with, American rights by the Japanese armed forces in China in disregard of treaties and agreements. . .." As he had just returned from a trip to the United States and a talk with President Roosevelt, he said his talk came straight from the horse's mouth.]

Admits Severe Strain.

Mr. Grew, presiding at the luncheon, introduced Mr. Matsuoka by saying that he believed that the Foreign Minister, from his intimate associations with the United States, "has the same sort of personal affection for our country as I have for Japan."

"I owe it to candor," Mr. Matsuoka said in his address, "to admit that relations between our two countries are severely strained."

He felt that the fundamental cause "is American misapprehension of Japan's aims and aspirations," he continued, adding:

"Contrary to impressions current in America and elsewhere, Japan is not waging an imperialistic war of greed and aggression in China. We are engaged in a moral crusade.

"Laugh or shrug your shoulders if you like, ladies and gentlemen, but I am sure that time will prove it.

Proclaims Aim Is Peace.

"We are not fighting for destruction, but construction, and endeavoring to initiate an era of enduring peace and prosperity based on justice, equality and mutuality in greater East Asia.

He said he felt that the world was "too wide politically, and too narrow economically," and suggested that "our political efforts had better be restricted only to those spheres in which we are vitally interested and not extended to other peoples' domains."

Japan, Mr. Matsuoka continued, had no desire to antagonize the United States or any nation, but had only one desire: "To be left alone, on the one hand, and on the other hand, to see the trouble in China and the war in Europe brought speedily to an end without adding more participants, particularly such a powerful one as America."

Mr. Matsuoka said that he feared that the entry of the United States into war would bring the world to "Armageddon that would end in the total destruction of our culture and civilization."

"I beseech my American friends to think twice, thrice, nay a thousand times, before they take the leap that may prove fatal to all humanity," he cried.

Nomura Also Pleads for Peace.

Admiral Nomura also expressed a desire for peace and for "drastically improving the relations between Japan and America which have deteriorated so much of late."

"The light has gone out in Europe, where nations have been thrown into the fearful vortex of a great war," he said. "Let us in Japan and America guard the peace of the Pacific, the only bright light of hope now left to mankind."

Admiral Nomura is slated to leave shortly for Manchoukuo, Peiping, Nanking, Shanghai and various army field headquarters in China to procure first-hand information on the current situation before taking up his new duties in Washington.

Matsuoka's reiteration of loyalty to the tripartite pact was emphasized by a Domei report that Lieut. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, ardent advocate of German-Japanese collaboration, would return to Berlin as Ambassador, replacing Saburo Kurusu.

NANKING DECREES BANK

New 'Central Reserve' Institution for China to Open Jan. 6

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Japanese-sponsored government at Nanking authorized today establishment of a "Central Reserve Bank," which Japanese sources here said would issue its own currency and "ultimately unify" regular Chinese currency and various Japanese issues. The institution will be inaugurated at Nanking on Jan. 6.

The announced purpose of the bank is to extend the authority of the Nanking government over currency throughout the areas it controls. Wang Ching-wei's Finance Minister, Chou Fu-hai, was named governor of the new bank.

Japanese took control Nov. 9 of the Central Bank of China, established almost a decade ago by the Chinese Government now stationed at Chungking. Dollars of the Chungking government have slightly declined in recent days because of the prospective establishment of the opposition bank.

Several announcements since early November of the projected Control Bank of the Nanking regime have all originated apparently in Japanese sources at Shanghai.

Japanese Naval Leaders Meet.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Conferences of Japanese naval leaders from various parts of China were reliably reported under way here today, principally to discuss the question of reopening the Yangtze River to foreign shipping as far as Nanking.

The conferences, it was said, are connected with the impending visit of Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the New Japanese Ambassador to the United States, to the Yangtze area.

Two heavy cruisers, one from North and one from South China, in addition to a number of smaller warships arrived with high ranking officers.

It was said the success or failure of Admiral Nomura's efforts in Washington may be influenced considerably by these conferences, which also are considering the entire question of Japanese-American relations.

Army Against Reopening.

Informed persons said that older Japanese naval officers favor a partial reopening of the Yangtze both as a gesture of friendship for the United States and as a matter of the navy's honor, since Admiral Nomura himself promised the reopening last December. He was Foreign Minister at that time, but Japanese militarists refused to sanction the move.

This group was glad to believe that such a gesture would send the Admiral off to a favorable start in Washington and would tend to influence American public opinion against further economic moves affecting Japan.

However, young naval officers and all army commanders were said to be strongly opposed to any action which might be interpreted as appeasement on Japan's part.

American Missionaries.

Meanwhile today it was disclosed here that the Church of the Brethern Mission of American Baptists has closed its four missions and two hospitals in Shansi province becaues the missionaries feared for their own safety.

Japanese troops in the province reecntly executed thirteen Chinese Christian leaders of the mission and then shot several Chinese commissioners on charges that they aided Chinese Communist groups.

The Americans said they then decided to withdraw from the province where their missions were established in 1908 and have been operated almost continuously since.

U. S. S. Tuscaloosa To Take Admiral Leahy To Lisbon

From Portugal "I May Walk Or Ride A Mule," Says New Ambassador To France

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 19—The United States cruiser Tuscaloosa, on which President Roosevelt made his recent Caribbean cruise, was assigned by the Chief Executive today to the mission of carrying Admiral William D. Leahy part of the way to his new post as Ambassador to France.

The cruiser will leave Norfolk, Va., next Monday with Admiral and Mrs. Leahy as the only passengers, taking them to Lisbon, Portugal. The ship then will return directly to Norfolk, officials said.

Confers With President

Admiral Leahy made the announcement of the cruiser assignment as he left the White House after conferring with the President on his new duties in France, now in the midst of political confusion over the ouster of Pierre Laval as Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister.

The cruiser was put at his disposal, the admiral said, because it was desired that he reach his post as soon as possible and he could not have left on an American merchant ship until a week later.

He said it had no particular significance except that the President "thought it was a good idea" and would speed up his arrival in France.

Good-Will Gesture

In informed quarters, however, it was indicated that the President chose this method of showing the importance he attached to Leahy's mission in France and of making a personal "good-will" gesture to Marshal Petain, head of the Vichy Government.

It was recalled that before Leahy's appointment the President offered the Vichy post to Gen. John J. Pershing, a World War associate and personal friend of Marshal Petain. General Pershing was forced to decline the offer because of his health.

May "Ride A Mule"

Leahy, who succeeds William C. Bullitt, did not say how he would complete the trip from Lisbon, although he might travel by train or automobile.

"I may walk or ride a mule," he said.

Lisbon is the most accessible point to which the cruiser could take him without entering the European combat zone. While the admiral might have gone by transatlantic clipper to Lisbon, it was understood that he planned to take a large amount of luggage and also that both he and Mrs. Leahy preferred to travel by ship.

"I'm not unaccustomed to traveling on navy ships, you know," the admiral remarked.

They moved into the official residence, renovated Government House, for the first time today.

Italian Part In War Important, Nazis Say

German Radio Says Troops And Ships Have Been Kept Occupied In Mediterranean

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The German radio, in a broadcast picked up tonigh by NBC, commented that British belittlement of Italy was misleading, because Italy's participation in the war as a whole was of great strategic importance.

"The Italian troops ever since the outbreak of the war have kept millions of French and British troops in Europe and Africa occupied and aloof," the German broadcast stated.

"Another important factor in the present situation is that Britain has sent her last crack divisions, the magnificent Colonial troops, to the battlefield near the Nile, and the greater part of Britain's modern warships are concentrated or, as Russian experts express it, locked up in the eastern half of the Mediterranean."

Nazis Say Liner 'Went On Fire'

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The German radio reported today the 19,118-ton British passenger liner Arundel Castle "suddenly went on fire" a mile from Barvun Reef, off the coast of New South Wales, and was abandoned by passengers and crew. The broadcast said the ship "must be considered a total loss."

Nazis Deny U. S. Plan To Shift Columbus Crew

Embassy In Washington Says Negotiations On Question Are Still In Progress

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The German Embassy tonight denied arrangements had been made with American authorities to transfer 300 sailors from the scuttled German liner Columbus from Angel Island in San Francisco Bay to an abandoned CCC camp near Fort Stanton, New Mexico.

The Embassy statement said negotiations on the question were still in progress with the State Department and no final decision had been reached. The State Department confirmed this although yesterday other United States officials said the transfer had been decided upon.

The Embassy also denied the sailors had engaged in Nazi propaganda and asserted "the attitude and discipline of the crew have at all times been characterized as exemplary by both Federal and local authorities."

Simon Lake Suggests 100 Cargo Submarines To Run Nazi Blockade

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Simon Lake, veteran designer of submarines, said today that a fleet of one hundred cargo submarines could land 9,000,000 tons of goods in England each year—and foil the German U-boat raiders.

Nine million tons, he said, was "just twice as much as all the supplies shipped from the United States to the British Isles in 1938."

Votes For Ouster Of Diplomats Or Consuls Engaging In Anti-Democratic Activities

Havana, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Cuban Senate in a secret meeting tonight voted to ask the Government to declare persona non-grata any foreign diplomatic and consular representatives engaged in anti-democratic propaganda in Cuba.

The action followed debate on a resolution by Senator Agustin Cruz, in which he demanded that Genaro Riestra, new Spanish Consul General here, be declared persona non-grata for anti-democratic activities in Cuba and Mexico.

It is understood that a petition to have Consul Riestra removed will be submitted to the Minister of State.

Her blond bobbed hair was waved back from her forehead without a part and was combed into small rolls at the nape of the neck. Her jewels consisted of platinum and blue star sapphire pennant earrings, a bracelet to match and small silver or platinum clips on her dress.

Communiques of Belligerent Powers

British

CAIRO, Dec. 19 (AP).—A British general headquarters communique:

EGYPT: Advanced elements of our troops which have successfully contained numerically superior enemy forces in Bardia are being steadily reinforced, and the position of the remnants of the beaten Italian Army in that area can now be regarded as precarious.

The number of prisoners taken is mounting. So far 31,546, including 1,626 Italian officers, have actually been counted into permanent prisoners - of - war accommodations, while several thousand are still in process of evacuation from the battle areas.

On the Sudan frontier our patrols were again active in the Kassala and Gallabat areas, inflicting a number of casualties on the enemy.

In Kenya, following our successful action on Dec. 16, the situation remains unchanged.

A Royal Air Force communique:

Throughout the night of Dec. 17-18, R. A. F. bombers carried out one of the heaviest raids of the war in the Western Desert on Benina airdrome. Many tons of bombs were dropped and great damage was caused, both to dispersed aircraft and buildings. The attack was carried out in waves, and fires were started by the first flight and were increased by each subsequent attack. Numerous explosions occurred and at least eighteen aircraft were destroyed. When the last aircraft left the target, the conflagration was general and dense volumes of smoke covered the whole airdrome.

The Bardia-Tobruk road was also bombed, but little movement was seen.

Our fighters continued to patrol and co-operate with our ground forces, and one S-79 (Italian bomber) was shot down in flames.

Our Rhodesian squadron raided enemy aircraft and troops in the Metemma area, while other aircraft attacked Jebel Serobatib, thirty miles north of East Kassala. A hut was hit and fire started.

In south Albania, Valona was again raided by our aircraft and bombs were dropped on a seaplane hangar and in the surrounding area. One warehouse was set on fire. Strong fighter opposition was encountered, resulting in an engagement which lasted twenty minutes. One CR 42 (Italian fighter) was probably shot down and one of our bombers failed to return to its base.

From all other operations, our aircraft returned without loss.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

The following message has been sent to the Commander in Chief of the Mediterranean by the First Lord of the Admiralty and the First Sea Lord:

"The great work accomplished by your command, including the fleet air arm, in co-operating with the Army and the Royal Air Force in the heavy defeat inflicted on the enemy in Egypt is very much appreciated. Please convey our congratulations to all concerned. Good luck to you in the rest of the operations."

From the naval point of view the operations off the Egyptian and Libyan coast began on Dec. 8. During that night the enemy's base camp at Maktila was successfully bombarded by both heavy and light units of the Mediterranean fleet. During the same night Sidi Barrani was successfully bombarded by other units of the Mediterranean fleet. These bombardments were carried out with the co-operation of naval aircraft and the Royal Air Force. The aircraft reported that all salvos fell in the target area.

Maktila camp and Sidi Barrani were again heavily bombarded by naval units during the night of Dec. 9-10.

By Dec. 10, the enemy was in full retreat and naval units played an important part in harassing the enemy's retreat, bombarding enemy columns on the roads in the vicinity of Sollum throughout the night of Dec. 10-11. Sollum itself was bombarded by both heavy and light units. They were firing practically continuously, and the range was frequently closed so that pompoms could be used when the enemy personnel abandoned their armored vehicles.

All our ships were fired on by short batteries, but no hits were sustained by any of our units.

During the day of Dec. 12 low visibility curtailed the naval bombardment, but many naval units were engaged in the vital task of supplying our forward troops and evacuating prisoners. These tasks called for a high degree of seamanship owing to the strong westerly wind.

During the day of Dec. 13 no naval bombardments were carried out, since the exceedingly rapid advance of our troops had led to some degree of uncertainty as to the military situation.

During the night of Dec. 13-14 a successful bombardment of Bardia was carried out by a heavy unit of the Mediterranean fleet. The bombarding ship was unsuccessfully attacked by "E" boats (Italian motor speed boats) which were driven off.

During the same night Swordfish aircraft (torpedo-carrying planes) of the fleet air arm, carried out a heavy attack on the enemy harbor of Tripoli. Four tons of bombs were dropped during this attack. Three direct hits were scored on supply ships lying alongside the jetty. Serious damage was also done to warehouses and enemy supply dumps, and fires and explosions were caused. Ships lying an anchor in the harbor were also well bombed. One Swordfish was lost during this operation.

On Dec. 14 the Italian submarine Naiade, which attempted to interfere with our operations, was sunk by our forces.

On Dec. 15 Bardia was heavily bombed by Swordfish aircraft of the fleet air arm. This attack was carried out in conjunction with a heavy bombardment from the sea of the Italian position at Bardia.

Throughout the whole operation aircraft of the fleet air arm co-operated with great success both with the Royal Air Force and with our bombarding forces.

Naval operations in support of the Army are continuing.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Dec. 19 (AP).—A British communique:

Enemy aircraft dropped bombs in the Alexandria area in the early hours this morning. There were no casualties and no damage.

NAIROBI, Kenya, Dec. 18 (delayed) (AP).—A British communique:

Having destroyed all stores and materials which were of no use and burned all buildings, our troops returned unmolested from El Wak to their normal locations today (Wednesday).

The following additional information regarding the raid has been received:

The Italian commander at El Wak, learning Dec. 15 that an attack was possible, fled by mule cart, causing despondency among those remaining. Some Banda (native units) courageously attempted to continue after the collapse and flight of the Italians.

Material captured includes thirteen small guns, two heavy guns and two light machine guns at large quantities of ammunition.

Enemy casualties were reported to be fifty dead. There were twenty Italian prisoners, including one lieutenant colonel, and 100 native prisoners. Our casualties were two killed and twelve wounded.

ATHENS, Dec. 19 (AP).—A Royal Air Force communique:

A most successful attack was carried out yesterday by aircraft of the R. A. F. against the seaplane base, docks and warehouses at Valona. All bombs fell on the targets and a warehouse was seen to be on fire. There was strong fighter opposition and a running fight lasted twenty minutes. It is believed that one enemy fighter was shot down. One of our aircraft made a forced landing on the return flight. All others returned safely to base.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique:

Last night the R. A. F. once again attacked Mannheim. Smoke from fires of previous raids was still hanging over the town. Four large new fires were started.

Other aircraft bombed a factory in Milan, the docks of Genoa and an airdrome in northern Italy. At Milan a large area was seen to be blazing furiously.

The submarine base at Lorient was also attacked.

None of our aircraft is missing.

ROME, Dec. 19 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

In North Africa the battle is continuing in the Bardia zone, where notable concentrations of enemy mechanized forces are reported. Some of the formations which attempted to approach the city were counter-attacked with success. Our air formations effectively bombed enemy mechanized equipment.

On the Greek front there was artillery activity in the sector of the 9th Army.

Our naval units yesterday effectively bombarded enemy emplacements in the Lukova zone. Our air formations bombed enemy concentrations in the Argyrokastron zone and the zones of Morgoni and Kolonia.

In East Africa our air formations bombed the following: Station, airfield and entrenched camp at Ghedaref, causing large fires; the flying field at Roseires, destroying an electrical signaling device and starting a violent fire, and Port Sudan, in successive waves.

Over Port Sudan English Gloster and Blenheim planes attacked our formations. One Gloster was shot down. All our planes returned.

Enemy planes dropped bombs on Metemma and Argheisa without result.

In northern Italy enemy planes dropped bombs near Vercelli, causing light damage to four houses; Milan, causing damage to some buildings, killing one and injuring several, and Genoa, causing damage without casualties.

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (AP).—The German high command communique:

Because of poor weather conditions the German air force yesterday carried out mainly armed reconnaissance flights.

A merchantman in the north part of the Channel was directly hit in the engine room and severely damaged. Another ship was severely hit forward by a bomb of heavy caliber. The crew took to boats.

British planes in the night of Dec. 19 dropped a number of bombs in southwestern Germany which resulted in only restricted damage. One civilian was killed.

King, Peace Leader, Leads Canada In War

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Dec. 19 — Ironically, the climax of Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King's long career as an advocate of social and international peace through better understanding finds him leading his country in war.

No doubt, few of the statesmen thrust into new prominence by the conflict, which began last year, ever hankered to make history at the cost of war, but it would be hard to name one who hated the prospect more than Mackenzie King. In fact, some Canadians predicted that if war came in Europe, Mackenzie King would resign rather than take his country into it.

"Sheer Madness"

Only a few months before the conflict he had said in Parliament that "the idea that every twenty years this country should automatically and as a matter of course take part in a war overseas for democracy and the self-determination of other small nations; that a country which has all it can do to run itself should feel called upon to save, periodically, a continent that cannot run itself, and to these ends risk the lives of its people, risk bankruptcy and political disunion, seems to many a nightmare and sheer madness."

When the showdown came, however, and Canada had to choose, her choice under the leadership of Prime Minister King was for war at the side of Britain.

Not A Crusader

But while he shouldered the responsibilities of war leadership, he did not seek then, and has not sought since then, to picture the nation's war effort as anything but a grim and dangerous duty to be done.

He has shown none of the impetuousness of the crusader. He would have been glaringly out of character if he had; for his whole career has been one long effort to understand problems and then to work toward their solution with the mind, not the emotions.

Consequently, the problem of making Canada's support of Great Britain as effective as possible has been approached by Mr. King as a technical task to be tackled with utmost industry, skill, cool calculation and cooperation with the United Kingdom Government, and as little oratory as possible.

Answered Hecklers

In Parliament, during the recent debate on Canada's war effort, the Prime Minister consistently maintained this practical, here-is-a-job-to-be-done attitude toward questions, complaints and proposals bearing on the war effort. Even questions obviously intended primarily to heckle the Government and only incidentally to extract information were conscientiously answered point by point.

Mr. King's manner on such occasions is something like that of the patient professor conscientiously trying to clarify some point which a student has raised, without trying to pass judgment on the motive or mentality of the questioner.

But he can press home his points with great force and earnestness when aroused.

He has been forceful several times lately in his appeals to members of Parliament not to "make a bad situation worse" with impulsive remarks about this or that country and its policies.

"I do not think that we can be too careful in this House of Commons," he said on one occasion, "about what any of us say with regard to other countries and their part at this time in the matter of war. We cannot be too careful what we say about Japan."

Urging members to use restraint in discussing the status of defeated France, he appealed to them to let "no word from Canadian lips add to the agony of her open wounds. Let us inflict no new pain."

Collaborates With U. S.

Canada's relations with the United States have become much closer under the pressure of war developments and the tendency of both President Roosevelt and Prime Minister King to seek new opportunities for Canadian-American collaboration.

Even during the last war, Mr. King was laying foundations for Canadian-American collaboration, although at that time he was not in office. Already an authority on labor problems before his election to Parliament in 1908, he became Minister of Labor in the Laurier Cabinet in 1909, but went out of office with the defeat of the Liberals in 1911.

When war came in 1914 he was hard at work in the specialized field of industrial relations, investigating labor problems under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation.

As the conflict widened he played an increasingly important role assisting key industries in the United States to maintain a continuous maximum output of essential war materials.

So when he returned to political life after the war (he became leader of the Liberal party in 1919 and Prime Minister in 1921), it was with a new background of experience in the United States. He had become accustomed to viewing North American problems as a whole, instead of from the viewpoint of one country.

When the time came to him to collaborate as Prime Minister with the President of the United States in problems of North American defense, he was peculiarly fitted to function as Canada's chief advocate of collaboration.

Mr. King has not escaped vigorous criticism of his administration of Canada's war effort, but where Canadian-United States relations are concerned his leadership is recognized even in political quarters fighting him tooth and nail on other issues.

This was vividly demonstrated in Parliament on one occasion when the subject of Canadian-United States collaboration came up.

When an opposition speaker started an oblique attack by suggesting that Mr. King was "taking to himself the credit" for closer relations with the United States, his remark set off a storm of applause for the Prime Minister which came from opposition as well as Government benches.

Several Reasons Are Advanced Why Hitler Does Not Help Duce

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

"Why is it," demands my morning mail, "that Hitler doesn't rush help to Mussolini in Albania and Libya?"

With that comes the query:

"Is it really true that Der Fuehrer wants to see Italy crushed so that he can take over the country?"

Well, there are a lot of reasons why the Nazi chief hasn't intervened to aid his ally—but to my mind a desire to see Italy knocked out isn't one of them. The value of the Fascists in keeping Britain on guard in the Mediterranean is too great fo rthat. If Hitler has any designs on Italy, he is smart enough to hold her fate in abeyance until he has settled his argument with England.

Anyway, the fact that Nazidom hasn't jumped to Mussolini's aid doesn't necessarily mean that it won't do so. I don't believe Hitler will deliberately allow his partner to go under—there are too many arguments against it. As for Il Duce being allowed to fight a lone and losing battle thus far, the explanation seems to me to be this:

First off, the direct intervention of Germany to save the Fascist Dictator would have been a terrible blow to Mussolini's prestige, both at home and abroad, and consequently to the prestige of the Berlin-Rome Axis. Both partners would want to avoid this, but had Hitler foreseen the extent of the Italian debacle, he undoubtedly would have tried to forestall it.

Support Has Been Indirect.

Actually, Der Fuehrer has been giving Mussolini a vast amount of support indirectly in the intensified bombing of England and the submarine campaign. This has compelled Britain to withhold warships and planes from the Mediterranean area in order to protect the homeland and the trade routes.

Another prime reason why Hitler hasn't wanted to extend his military commitments to the Mediterranean zone is because he is preparing for another great attempt at invasion of England, by spring or maybe sooner. Into that preparation he is putting every ounce of his strength.

Had it not been for this we probably should have seen the German Air Force going to Mussolini's help. It wouldn't be surprising to see this happen yet.

As for the use of German troops, there has been no way to send them to Libya, because the British blockade has virtually severad communication with Africa. Mussolini can't send reinforcements or even a keg of drinking water, except by air.

The position in Greece and Albania has been different but in no wise better. There are only two ways to get Nazi troops and equipment into the mountainous region of Mussolini's disaster.

Danger to M...

One way is to send them through Italy, but this couldn't be done secretly and might raise hob with the morale of the Italian population. If this method is employed it will represent an extreme emergency.

The other way is to move them through the neutral States of Bulgaria or Yugoslavia. Such a step in all probability would precipitate another war in the Balkans—something which Hitler wishes to avoid at al hazards at this time. He doesn't want war on two fronts at once.

Another reason for Hitler's reserve has just been seen in the French political upheaval, which was in the nature of a defiance of Nazidom by Marshal Petain. There is danger for the Germans in the growing anti-Nazi, pro-British attitude of the French population. There is still greater danger in the increasing pro-British atitude of the vast and unconquered French colonies.

Hitler can't afford to see them throw their weight to Britain while he is engaged in a life or death struggle.

And finally, a tiny dispatch from London yesterday gave another cogent reason whl Hitler must devote his attention to smashing Britain. This said the Ministry of Economic Warfare had received information that over 850,000 children had been removed from Berlin, Hamburg and the Ruhr district to southern and eastern Germany because of the intensity of British bombing.

CHICAGO,DEC 19-(AP)-AN INVESTIGATOR ON THE STATE'S ATTORNEY'S STAFF REPORTED TODAY THAT A BOOK SEIZED IN THE CHICAGO HEADQUARTERS OF THE GERMAN-AMERICAN BUND INDICATED THAT BETWEEN 1,500 AND 2,000 MEMBERS WERE IN U.S.MILITARY OR NAVAL SERVICE.

THE BOOK WAS EXAMINED BY FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION AGENTS WHO DID NOT COMMENT AND THERE WAS NO DEFINITE WORD AS TO WHETHER THE MEN LISTED WERE NOW IN ANY BRANCH OF THIS NATION'S ARMED FORCES, OR HAD SERVED AT SOME PREVIOUS TIME.

THE QUESTION AROSE IN ARGUMENTS ON LITIGATION TO DETERMINE WHO IS SUBJECT TO PUNISHMENT UNDER FEDERAL ANTI-SPY LAWS.

THE TWO WERE: HAFIS SALICH, RUSSIAN-BORN NATURALIZED AMERICAN EMPLOYED BY NAVAL INTELLIGENCE AT SAN PEDRO, CALIF., AND MIKHAIL NICHOLAS GORIN, A SOVIET CITIZEN WORKING FOR A LOS ANGELES TOURIST COMPANY.

SALICH WAS ALLEGED TO HAVE SUPPLIED GORIN DATA FROM NAVAL INTELLIGENCE FILES IN 1938 CONCERNING "JAPANESE ACTIVITIES X X X FOR USE IN THE EVENT OF TROUBLE BETWEEN JAPAN AND RUSSIA."

THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT CONTENDED IN ITS BRIEF THAT ANYONE WHO OBTAINED OR REVEALED SECRET INFORMATION OF A MILITARY NATURE WITH A "CONSCIOUS DESIRE OR WITH A REASONABLE EXPECTATION OF CAUSING INJURY TO THE UNITED STATES OR ADVANTAGE TO A FOREIGN NATION" WAS GUILTY OF VIOLATING THE ESPIONAGE ACT.

COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENDANTS CONTENDED THAT THE "INFORMATION REVEALED" WAS "INNOCUOUS" AND THAT IF THE STATUTE WERE INTERPRETED TO APPLY TO IT, THE LEGISLATION WOULD BE UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

"THERE IS HARDLY A PHASE OF BUSINESS, COMMERCE, OR THE LIFE OF OUR PEOPLE AS A WHOLE," THEY SAID, "WHICH IS NOT IMPRESSED WITH SOME RELATION TO NATIONAL DEFENSE. X X X

President Pushes New Defense Program With Four-Member Super-Commission; British Fleet Raids Adriatic, Shells Valona

PRESIDENT SETS UP AUTHORITY ON PRODUCTION

Knudsen Will Head It—Associates to Be Knox, Stimson, Hillman.

GROUP CAN MAKE DECISIONS

Roosevelt, Revealing Change, Says Status of NDAC Itself Will Not Be Altered.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—President Roosevelt announced today the formation of a new office on production management for defense to head up the enormous program of rearming the nation while producing arms for Britain.

He called in reporters to say that the office would be directed by William S. Knudsen, production chief of the Defense Commission. The associate director will be Sidney Hillman, Defense Commission member handling labor problems. The Secretaries of War and Navy—Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox—will comprise the other two members of the four-man agency.

Change May Take 10 Days.

At a special press conference called late in the day, just after a conference with the Defense Commission, the President said that commission would remain exactly as it is, but he implied that it would be superseded in many of its functions by the new office.

The long-expected adjustment of the defense setup will not become effective, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, until executive orders can be drafted—a task that may require ten days.

In setting up the new office of production management, Mr. Roosevelt acted under authority granted him in a law authorizing reorganization of executive agencies.

The President said that while he can delegate only a certain amount of responsibility because of constitutional restrictions, the new office would have full power to make its own decisions.

These decisions, Mr. Roosevelt said, would be reached unanimously without resorting to votes. Asked whether he thought the latest defense plan would result in a material speeding up of the rearmament program, Mr. Roosevelt said he would not say that because that program has been gaining speed every twenty-four hours.

Empowered to Act by New Law.

A clause of this act empowered him to create an office of emergency management within the White House. The new office for production management will be established under that authority.

The final decision on the new arrangement was reached at the conference with the defense commission and at a meeting with Secretaries Knox and Stimson and their undersecretaries.

The personnel of the new office, Mr. Roosevelt explained, represents three essential elements—management as centered in Mr. Knudsen, labor as signified by Mr. Hillman and the buyer and user as epitomized by the War and Navy secretaries.

Under the four directors of the office, the President added, will be three principal subdivisions.

The first will take charge of the actual production of raw munitions and it may break down into one, two or perhaps three subordinate bureaus. As contemplated at the present time, he said, it might include Edward R. Stettinius and John Biggers of the Defense Commission.

Nelson Director of Purchase.

The second subdivision will be headed by Donald Nelson as director of defense purchasing, serving in the capacity he now does in the defense commission.

The third subdivision would consist of a defense priorities board, whose personnel may shift from time to time, but as now in prospect, would be comprised of Messrs. Knudsen, Hillman, Stettinius, Nelson, and Leon Henderson, another defense commissioner.

Should any clash arise over the order in which various items are to be delivered, Mr. Roosevelt said the priorities board would thrash out the matter and then tell the administrator of the production management office how the material ought to be delivered. The President called the new arrangement a simple evolution of the defense program and said he would receive thanks from any one who had seen the maze of suggestions that had been made to him.

Silent on Danish Ship Story.

At the morning press conference the President, when asked by a reporter about stories that approximately thirty Danish ships tied up in American waters would be taken over by this Government and turned over to Great Britain, Mr. Roosevelt said it was a new one on him.

To an inquiry as to whether he intended to ask the new Congress for more money for the RFC to finance the construction of munitions factories, Mr. Roosevelt said he was under the impression that there already was enough money.

He was informed that some persons had said his new, tentative plan for a lease and lend system of supplying Britain with arms would require repeal of the Johnson act, which forbids loans to nations in default on their last world war debts to the United States.

The President repeated what he had said last Tuesday—that congressional action would be needed, but that he did not believe repeal of the Johnson law would be necessary.

Discusses New Bases.

While the President, on his cruise to Caribbean and Atlantic defense base sites had described Mayaguana Island in the Bahamas as not entirely satisfactory, a reporter told him that the Duke of Windsor had signed a bill permitting establishment of a base there. The President remarked that an awful lot of ninsense had been written about the bases and that decisions were being delayed on only three out of eight.

The three are at Trinidad, which he said was a big island with many sites, Bermuda, where the biggest problem is interfering the least with the sleep and happiness of American tourists, and Mayaguana. At the latter, he said there was a very excellent lagoon that could be used for seaplanes, but that anchorage for ships was poor.

Recalling that on the cruise the cruiser Tuscaloosa and her escort destroyers had reached Mayaguana about sundown, the President said they had tried three separate times to find a place where their anchors would reach bottom and the ships would not blow ashore. Under the water, he explained, there is a cliff. Outside of it, he said, are thousands of feet of water, and if the anchor is dropped on the cliff, vessels are too close to shore when there is a wind. The Tuscaloosa and the destroyers, he said, had to steam up and down the island all night because they could not anchor.

While he saw several islands in the Bahamas, no conclusions were reached about them, the President said, and it may be necessary to go back to Mayaguana.

Roosevelt and Rayburn Confer.

After his press conference, the President discussed the defense program with Speaker Rayburn, House majority leader, McCormack and Representative Lyndon Johnson, Democrat, of Texas. Mr. Rayburn said they had talked over the program "up one side and down the other," taking up such matters as the amount of money needed and the legislation "it is going to take to carry on the defense program."

"We were hearing what suggestions he's got," the Speaker said. "If he has made up his mind on what he is going to recommend to Congress, he did not say so. He is just exploring the field."

Mr. Roosevelt asked Secretaries Stimson and Knox to confer with him at the White House, along with Under-Secretary Patterson of the War Department and Under-Secretary Forrestal of the navy. It was with this group that he talked over Wednesday the possibilities of realigning the defense set up.

BRITAIN'S FLEET RAIDS ADRIATIC; SHELLS VALONA

Battleships Bombard Port in Albania While Other Craft Seek Ships.

NO ITALIAN WARSHIPS SEEN

R. A. F. Planes Join in Attack on Key Harbor and Also Raid Krionero.

LONDON, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—British sea power consisting of battleships, a cruiser and destroyers has swept the lower Adriatic and the battleships poured nearly 100 tons of high explosive shells into the Albanian port of Valona, the Admiralty announced today.

The raid, through the fifty-mile-wide strait of Otranto, at the heel of the Italian boot, was not challenged by the Italian Navy and no Italian shipping was found, the Admiralty said. Valona is a vital supply port for Italian forces in southern Albania.

British commentators pounced on the failure of the Italians to engage the warships as indication that British domination of the Mediterranean had been extended to the Adriatic, although the British penetrated only the lower part, as far north as Durazzo on the Albanian side and Bari on the Italian.

Force Enters Bardia

New evidence of British control of the Mediterranean itself was found in the intermittent, five-day bombardment of Italy's beleaguered Libyan base of Bardia, where the Admiralty announced, three supply ships were sunk in a light force's penetration of the inner harbor on Tuesday.

The Admiralty itself drew no conclusions from the Adriatic and Bardia operations, but the naval correspondent of the British Press Association declared:

"It would seem that the Italians, driven from Taranto and hounded again by the R. A. F. at Naples, have sought fresh bases where they hope their fleet will keep out of the way of our Mediterranean fleet.

Sees Developments

"With the Adriatic Sea now open to us, important developments may be expected."

Another Admiralty announcement said that a British submarine has sunk a heavil, laden Italian supply ship and a large Italian tanker south of Italy during the last week.

An Admiralty communique said:

"His Majesty's submarine Truant (Lieut. Com. H. A. V. Haggard) has been operating with great success against the Italian sea communications off the south of Italy.

Convoy Attacked

"During the night of December 13-14 H. M. S. Truant attacked an escorted convoy of heavily-laden supply ships off Cape Spartivento.

"One of the enemy supply ships was sunk and a second possibly sunk.

"During the night of December 15-16 H. M. S. Truant torpedoed and sunk a large Italian tanker off the Calabrian coast. The tanker was deeply laden and steering south."

Is Of Triton Class

The Truant is one of fifteen seagoing submarines of the Triton class. It is of 1,090 tons, is armed with ten torpedo tubes, one four-inch gun and two smaller weapons and carries a normal complement of fifty-three men.

(The Admiralty's reports would tend to bear out reports that fleets of German Junkers transport planes are ferrying Italian troops to the Albanian battle front, where they had been taken hitherto by sea.)

The Adriatic raid was staged the night of December 18 and the sinking of the supply ships at Bardia early the day before, according to admiralty communiques.

Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, commander in chief of the British Mediterranean fleet, commanded the battleship oFrce in the Adriatic raid, and Vice-Admiral M. D. Pridham Wippel, veteran of World War operations in the Adriatic, the other warships. There were two phases of the raid.

While a cruiser and a screening destroyer force swept the lower sea, looking fruitlessly for Italian shipping, the battleships—how many was not disclosed—ploughed toward Valona.

The extent of damage at that Albanian port was not disclosed, but commentators declared that the "nearly 100 tons of high-explosive shells," referred to by the Admiralty, could make debris of docking facilities.

Durazzo, Albanian port to the north of Valona, has considerably inferior facilities and even these have been subjected to repeated R. A. F. bombardment.

"Fascists Dunkirk"

London sources expressed belief that Italian forces in Albania were threatened with isolation worse than the encirclement of the British and French at Dunkirk because of Italy's naval failure to command the lower Adriatic.

First Known Penetration.

This was the first known penetration of the Adriatic by British battleships in the present war, although on the night of November 11-12, while British naval planes were pounding Italian warships at anchor in the battle of Taranto, a squadron of light forces was reported to have attacked an Italian convoy off Valona.

Of the four supply ships, escorted by two destroyers, one was sunk outright, two were "set seriously afire and almost certainly sunk" and the fourth, with the destroyers, escaped in the protection of a smoke screen, although one of the destroyers had been damaged, according to the admiralty account.

Naval operations in support of the British offensive into Libya are continuing, the admiralty said, with the fleet air arm co-operating with the R. A. F.

"Extensive fires" have been burning in Bardia since the afternoon of December 15, the Admiralty said. The fires were described as having "assumed very large proportions on December 17."

Choosing that day for a close-range attack on the port, after days of long-range bombardment, "light units"--presumably destroyers--drove into the inner harbor of Bardia "under heavy machine-gun fire" and destroyed three supply ships, according to the Admiralty.

Italian batteries on the African shore "repeatedly engaged" British warships and on the afternoon of Dec. 16 Italian torpedo planes "unsuccessfully attacked," the Admiralty communique said, adding, however:

"No hits were sustained by any of our forces."

The Admiralty emphasized that throughout the Adriatic penetration, as far north as the line between Bari and Durazzo, "no opposition from the enemy was encountered."

Bari is an important base in Italy, while Durazzo is Albania's main port, directly west of Tirana, Albanian capital, and the key center for Italian supplies at the present time.

Valona, a city with a normal population of 9,100, is at the narrowest part of the Adriatic, only 60 miles across the sea from Otranto, on the heel of the Italian boot, and 80 miles east of Brindisi, Italy.

The port, reported bombed heavily in recent weeks by the Royal Air Force and by Greek flyers, has become the target of the current Greek drive in Southern Albania and the Greek forces are fighting toward it from two directions—up the coastal road from Greek-held Porto Edda toward Chimara and westward from the mountains around Klisura and Tepeleni.

Reconnaissance pilots reported December 12 that the port facilities at Valona had been rendered virtually useless by air bombardments.

Durazzo, which has a normal population of 8,739, is about 60 miles north of Valona and about 150 miles across the Adriatic from Bari.

NIGHT LEAD BRITISH NAVAL (BUDGET)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, DEC.20--BRITISH WARSHIPS ENTERING THROUGH THE 50-MILE-WIDE STRAIT OF OTRANTO OFF THE SOUTHEASTERN ITALIAN COAST HAVE SWEPT THE LOWER ADRIATIC WITHOUT BEING CHALLENGED BY A SINGLE ITALIAN FIGHTING SHIP OR ENCOUNTERING A SINGLE ITALIAN COMMERCIAL VESSEL, THE ADMIRALTY DECLARED TODAY.

DEC. 21 1940

THIS FORAY, SAID UNOFFICIALLY TO INDICATE THAT THE FASCISTS HAD BEEN RUN TO COVER IN THE LOWER ADRIATIC AS WELL AS THE MEDITERRANEAN AND PUT IN GREAT PERIL IN ALBANIA, WAS ROUNDED OFF IN A HEAVY ASSAULT BY A SEPARATE FORCE OF BATTLESHIPS ON THE VITAL ITALIAN SUPPLY PORT OF VALONA IN SOUTHERN ALBANIA.

IN THE BOMBARDMENT, THE ADMIRALTY SAID, NEARLY A HUNDRED TONS OF HIGH EXPLOSIVE SHELLS WERE HURLED AT THE PORT AND IN THE WHOLE OPERATION "NO OPPOSITION FROM THE ENEMY WAS ENCOUNTERED."

THE ADMIRALTY'S COMMUNIQUE, WHICH WAS CHARACTERISTICALLY SPARING OF LANGUAGE, DID NOT MENTION THE DAMAGE TO VALONA, BUT OTHER BRITISH SOURCES POINTED OUT THAT SUCH A HEAVY SHELLING COULD MAKE RUBBLE OF THE PORT FACILITIES.

THE NAVAL CORRESPONDENT OF THE AUTHORITATIVE BRITISH PRESS ASSOCIATION OBSERVED WITHOUT AMPLIFICATION:

"IT WOULD SEEM THAT THE ITALIANS, DRIVEN FROM TARANTO (A MAJOR BASE IN THE INSTEP OF THE ITALIAN BOOT) AND HOUNDED AGAIN BY THE ROYAL AIR FORCE AT NAPLES, HAVE SOUGHT FRESH BASES WHERE THEY HOPE THEIR FLEET WILL KEEP OUT OF THE WAY OF THE (BRITISH) MEDITERRANEAN FLEET.

"WITH THE ADRIATIC SEA NOW OPEN TO US, IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS MAY BE EXPECTED."

THE BRITISH MANEUVER, AS THE ADMIRALTY DESCRIBED IT, WAS IN TWO COORDINATED SECTIONS.

A CRUISER AND DESTROYER FORCE, WHOSE PRIMARY PURPOSE WAS TO HARASS ITALIAN SEA COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE ALBANIAN BATTLEFRONT, STEAMED UP THE ADRIATIC AS FAR NORTH AS BARI, ITALY, AND DURAZZO, ALBANIA, WHILE TO THE SOUTH THE BATTLESHIP FORMATION FELL UPON VALONA.

ALL THIS TIED IN WITH OTHER FLEET OPERATIONS IN WHICH THE BRITISH ARE STRIKING AT THE ITALIANS ON BOTH THEIR ALBANIAN AND LIBYAN SEA FLANKS--PARTICULARLY ON THE LIBYAN SIDE WHERE EVEN NOW, THE ADMIRALTY REMARKED LACONICALLY, "NAVAL OPERATIONS IN SUPPORT OF OUR ARMY ARE CONTINUING."

BARDIA, THE FASCIST BASE IN LIBYA, HAS BEEN AFLAME SINCE DEC. 15, THE ADMIRALTY SAID, AND IN THE INTERMITTENT BOMBARDMENTS THAT HAVE FOLLOWED BRITISH WARSHIPS HAVE GONE UNTOUCHED THROUGH "REPEATED" ATTACKS BY ITALIAN SHORE BATTERIES AND TORPEDO PLANES.

LIGHT BRITISH UNITS WERE DECLARED TO HAVE RUN IN VERY CLOSE--INTO THE INNER HARBOR UNDER HEAVY FIRE--AND TO HAVE SUNK THREE ITALIAN SUPPLY SHIPS IN A SINGLE DAY.

A SINGLE PROWLING BRITISH SUBMARINE, THE ADMIRALTY SAID, SANK A HEAVILY LADEN SUPPLY SHIP AND A BIG ITALIAN SHIP SOUTH OF ITALY DURING THE LAST WEEK.

SOME PERSONS HERE EXPRESSED THE BELIEF THAT THE ITALIANS IN ALBANIA NOW FACE AN ENCIRCLEMENT MORE FATAL THAN THE ALLIES FOUND IN DUNKERQUE IN THE APPARENT BRITISH SEIZURE OF CONTROL OF THE WHOLE LOWER ADRIATIC.

IT IS THE ADRIATIC, TOO, OVER WHICH IT HAS BEEN RUMORED THAT GERMAN JUNKERS TRANSPORT PLANES ARE FLYING ITALIAN TROOPS TO THE

THE ITALIAN-HELD ALBANIAN PORT OF KRIONERO ALSO WAS REPORTED

Valona Bombardment As Seen From Warship

Eyewitness Describes British Gunners' Thunderous "Little Christmas Present For Italy"

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press Correspondent

With the British Battle Fleet that Attacked Valona, Dec. 20—From the deck of one of Britain's mighty floating fortresses early Thursday morning I watched one-ton shells rocket into the heart of Valona, Italy's main Albanian naval base, to cause destructive fires that bathed 2,000-foot mountain peaks with their light.

"A little Christmas present for Italy," the sweating gunners said.

The warship on which I rode and others swept up the mine-laden Adriatic Sea between Italy and Albania in a daring raid in which one hundred shells were loosed against Valona in terrific broadsides.

Surprise, Then Bedlam

The sleeping Italians apparently were completely surprised and the warships moved close enough to shore to see a lone light shining in Valona's harbor. Then bedlam broke.

One-ton shells that rumbled through the night with a noise like a roaring subway express train exploded with tremendous force against docks, ships, warehouses, supply bases and military encampments.

The heavy bombardment was designed to give support to Greek land armies increasing their pressure on il Duce's battered Albanian legions.

Through Mine-Studded Straits

A wide path of flaming destruction was apparent. A reddish glow crept over the tops of 2,000-feet-high mountains showing the caliber of the raging fires started by the big naval guns.

The British ships moved through the mine-studded Straits of Otranto between Italy's "heel" and the Albanian coastline like huge shadows. Keeping the Albanian coast in sight, the ships swept into broadside firing positions off Valona.

At this time, early Thursday morning, shivering with cold, I clambered up the steel ladders from the battleship's wardroom to the control tower.

Muzzles Rear Skyward

Through narrow slits in the steel tower, I saw the long, massive gray barrels of the 15-inch guns slowly rear their muzzles skyward from the giant turrets.

The commander, through a speaking tube, gave final instructions, saying the guns were to open fire in ten minutes.

Those minutes ticked off like eternity. Looking across the barrels of the guns that were less than fifteen feet away and poised for action, I mentally girded myself for the tremendous concussion that I knew must come with detonation of the first ton of "bricks."

Terrific Burst Of Fire

White and red lights flashed on the fire control indicator, designating the turrets that were to open the bombardment.

Then came the signal: "Open fire!" A bell sounded lightly.

I grasped a rung of a steel ladder, took a deep breath, and ducked below the level of the vision slits.

A second later there was a terrific burst of fire. Sheets of yellow flame licked back from the muzzles of the guns and seemed to pour through the slits in the tower.

Again the bell sounded. Again I ducked, and two guns fired almost simultaneously. The blinding glare and clouds of yellowish smoke swept into my face. The rapid succession of the blasts made me feel as if my head hung by a thread.

Guns Of Other Units Roar

Guns of other battle fleet units roared with great flashes of fire, wiping everything else from my vision. Even the Albanian coast disappeared in the burst of fire.

Swiftly, scores of shells hurtled through the air, each carrying more than 2,000 pounds of destruction into Valona's naval and military concentrations.

The Italian shore batteries of 12-inch guns remained silent during the bombardment, leading to the belief the Italians had been taken so by surprise that they could not fire, possibly not being able even to determine the ships' positions.

12 Minutes Of Gunfire

For twelve minutes the battle fleet pumped out shells with a Niagara-like roar that reverberated for miles along the Albanian coast.

Then, over the speaking tube, came a voice like that of a railroad conductor—unintelligible but it meant "cease firing."

The big guns were lowered but the crews of the 6-inch guns stood by, waiting tensely for any reply from the Italians ashore so they could answer in turn.

The British ships, like huge black floating islands, moved slowly southward.

Then the Italian shore batteries fired a few star shells, vainly trying to locate their attackers. The long-burning shells, bursting high in the sky, drifted lazily to the surface of the sea hundreds of yards away from the ships.

The Italians fired several more rounds, which came closer, but all were too distant to illuminate the battle fleet.

Midshipman Sings

As the reddish glow of the fires which had been started at Valona crept over the snow-capped Albanian mountains, a youthful midshipman in the battleship's top control tower happily caroled "One Night of Love."

The battle fleet cruised southward out of the Straits of Otranto and into the Ioanian Sea. Not even an Italian bombing plane appeared to attempt attack.

The battleship commander, before the bombardment, posted a bulletin with the notation: "The objective—to discomfort the Italians."

BRITISH MEET FIERCE BATTLE AROUND BARDIA

Italians Throw Heavy Shells On Slowly Advancing Mechanized Units

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 20—The British army of the Nile had completely surrounded Bardia tonight and was moving up reinforcements for a final assault on the Libyan port.

Trapped within the Italian base, thirty miles inside the Libyan border, were an estimated 20,000 Italians behind a seventeen-mile perimeter of concrete pill boxes, artillery batteries, machine-gun nests and tank pits.

British advance forces were reported to be engaged in a fierce struggle with the Italians, who were pouring heavy artillery shells on the slowly advancing tank and motorized units.

Resembles Siege

The encirclement of Bardia resembled a siege, with British batteries firmly established at all points around the town shelling its defenses almost continuously, while the R. A. F. flyers bombed the garrison repeatedly and warships pounded away at the waterfront.

Other British forces mopping up in the desert area fought to oust an Italian garrison from the oasis of Giarabub, 130 miles south of the coast and about twenty miles west of the Egyptian frontier.

Tough colonial cavalrymen from Australia engaged the Italians near the oasis for three days, it was revealed, taking some prisoners and equipment.

The rest of the Italians escaped, holed up and tonight were reported still holding out against heavy British pressure.

Sacred To Senussi Sect

The oasis contains buildings and monuments sacred to the Senussi sect and the British were said to have refrained from bombing the place for this reason.

Only a small force was holding the oasis, but there were indications of reinforcements from outlying posts. Nevertheless, the garrison's line of retreat will be cut off, military sources said, if the British continue their advance along the coast.

West of Bardia to Derna, 175 miles inside Libya, British air and naval units pounded the Italian line of retreat.

Derna Left In Flames

Derna, an R. A. F. communique said, was left practically in flames by bombers which made direct hits on barracks, motor transport parks, and police headquarters last night.

In the naval operations, light units of the fleet were said by an admiralty communique to have fought their way past roaring shore batteries to pound the garrison at Bardia. The shelling was said to have started a number of fires which "assumed very large proportions" yesterday.

At least five Italian supply ships, including a heavily laden tanker, were sunk, the admiralty said.

Whole Camp Ablaze.

"When our last aircraft left the scene practically the whole of the camp was ablaze," the communique declared. "Similar raids were carried out on enemy troop concentrations and motor transports to the northwest of Bardia, all our bombs falling within the target area."

In fierce air fighting yesterday, the British said, R. A. F. planes shot down five Italian planes without the loss of a single British craft.

Conclusive Test Shaping.

British officials said that the Italians in Bardia were protected by a cunningly concealed network of tank traps, land mines and machine gun emplacements.

They hinted it may take some time now to overrun the positions, but expressed no doubt about the final victory, which the British High Command was attempting to speed up by hastening more men and equipment to the front.

Military spokesmen here said that the stiff resistance encountered at Bardia was not likely to lessen the activity of British tanks and Bren gun carriers in mopping up the road leading westward to Tobruk, the vital Italian naval base eighty miles from the Egyptian frontier.

Graziana May Seek Test.

Reports from Rome indicated that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, commander of Italy's North African armies, might select Tobruk as the site for a conclusive test of strength with Gen. Archibald P. Wavell's army of the Nile.

Bardia Facing Final Assault

British Entirely Surround Libyan Port as Garrison Battles to Escape.

CAIRO, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—British troops have completely surrounded the Libyan port of Bardia and are preparing for a final assault on the Italian-held town, it was reported here tonight.

British forces were said already to have engaged the Italians at some points and to have thrust them back in heavy fighting.

By land, sea and air, the British reported, their forces kept up a remorseless pounding of Bardia today, with Italians battling fiercely to break through their blocked line of retreat to the west.

Supporting the forces encircling Bardia, where the British estimate 20,000 Italians are holding out, the Royal Air Force blasted the Libyan coast westward to Derna, 175 miles from the Egyptian frontier. Practically the entire Fascist military at Camp Derna was declared left in flames.

Heavily raiding Derna simultaneously with a similar assault on Bardia, the R. A. F. Command reported its planes last night set off fires and explosions with direct hits on barracks, police headquarters, motor transport parks and garages at the former Fascist base.

There was no indication here that the British intended to avoid such a reckoning or to permit Marshal Graziana to reinforce his position at Tobruk.

The British Navy was reported keeping the Libyan coast under bombardment from the Egyptian frontier to Bengasi, well to the west of Tobruk, while the Royal Air Force blasted at Derna and Benina.

Troops Still Moving West.

Indications here of heavy British troop movements to the west gave emphasis to Prime Minister Winston Churchill's statement before the House of Commons in London yesterday that "the offensive is by no means at an end."

The task of maintaining steadily lengthening lines of communication was regarded here as one of the chief problems facing the British in continuing their drive into Libya. Losses in man power apparently constituted a negligible factor, for official figures yesterday put British casualties at less than 1,000.

Convoys of Italian prisoners con-

(Britain's naval and air strength are military secrets, but her Mediterranean fleet is known to be large and powerful and, at the start of the 12-day-old campaign in the western desert, it was said that shifts of some warplanes from Egypt to Greece had not impaired the R. A. F.'s power in North Africa.)

Use of German Troops Denied.

Informed sources declared that German troops were not in Italy, were not en route to any Italian front and would not be sent to any.

(There have been reports of German troops entering Italy through the Brenner Pass and it was said yesterday at Struga, Yugoslavia, that big German transports were being used to fly Italian reinforcements to Albania.)

The bulletin, issued through Stefani, the official Italian news agency, cited British Prime Minister Churchill's statement to the House of Commons yesterday as an illustration of the "proportions of the enemy effort which our soldiers bravely are facing these days on all fronts of our war."

It quoted Mr. Churchill as saying that arms for Britain's forces in Africa had been going directly from Britain since last summer and included armored cars of the best quality and modern guns.

Heavy artillery exchanges on the Bardia battlefront in Libya, during which Italian guns effectively pounded British batteries and mechanized forces, were reported earlier by the Italian high command.

"Sharp Fighting" in Albania.

"Sharp fighting" was reported on the southern flank of the Albanian battlefront, where the Italian 11th army is engaging Greek forces north of Argirocastro.

Extensive air activity was reported on various parts of the Mediterranean front.

The communique acknowledged the British had bombed the Italian Adriatic port of Brindisi four times yesterday, but said only that five persons were wounded.

Italian dive-bombers sank a steamer off Greece, the high command claimed.

A "furious" air battle was reported over Libya.

Two British Hurricanes and one Italian plane were reported downed in this encounter.

Three British bombers were said to have been shot down yesterday during an attempted attack on Valona, vital Italian supply port in Albania, and three British Gloster planes were reported shot down in flames over the Greek lines.

Ground operations on the Sudanese border in East Africa were limited to "patrol and artillery activity," the high command said while Italian planes carried out bombing attacks on several British troop concentrations and railway junctions.

Italy Confirms Air Aid.

ROME, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—German transport planes and German dive-bombers—the latter with Italian flyers—are serving Italy's forces in Albania, an informed source said today.

The transports, such as those the Nazis used to convey troops and equipment to Norway, now are ferrying Italian re-inforcements across the Adriatic, this source said.

[This dispatch serves to confirm in part reports yesterday from Yugoslavia, which added that German troops were entering Italy through the Brenner Pass.]

The presence of German flyers, he said, is believed to have caused reports abroad that German troops are in Italy, but they apparently are unfounded.

Italian-flown stukas were said already to be participating in attacks against the Greeks.

70 Camels Captured By British in Kenya

CAIRO, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Seventy camels were captured from the Italians in a thwarted Fascist raid on a village in the northern frontier zone of Kenya colony, the British High Command reported today.

Two of the Italians were killed, the British said, when East African troops pounced on the raiding party.

Britain's African Force Is Set at 425,000 By Italians

Fascists 'Gallantly Face' 1,500 Planes, Strong Fleet, Rome Claims

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 20.—A semi-official bulletin, issued here today to show the size of the British forces which, it said, Italian troops are "gallantly facing," put them at 1,500 airplanes, 425,000 troops and 500,000 tons of warships.

It described Britain's forces as crack troops, recruited in England, Australia, New Zealand and elsewhere in the British Empire.

(British sources have indicated that British Army strength in Africa is between 250,000 and 300,000 men, although British leaders have referred recently to considerable reinforcements.

BLAZE IN SHIPYARD

Italian Torpedo Boat Works Badly Damaged.

ROME, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The Baglietto shipyard at Varazze, where small, fast torpedo boats are built, was reported today to have suffered heavy damage from flames, which started in the woodworking department and spread to the machine shop. Boats on the ways escaped damage.

Varazze is on the coast southwest of Genoa.

GREEKS SEIZE ITALIAN POSTS IN MOUNTAINS

Fascist Positions Behind Tepeleni Reported Falling One By One

Athenians Are Mopping Up Outposts Before Trying To Capture Towns

By MAX HARRELSON

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 20—Italian positions in the mountains behind Tepeleni and Klisura were reported falling "one after another" to bayonet-charging Greeks today and a general retreat from the entire sector was declared imminent.

The Greeks said their troops were proceeding methodically in cleaning up Italian resistance in these remaining outposts before making any attempt to occupy the two towns, which guard an important highway leading into eastern Albania. Artillery hauled into mountain emplacements through waist-deep snow was said to be continually pounding the Fascists.

With another Greek force battling up the Adriatic coast toward Chimara, the R. A. F. command announced its bombers again blasted Valona, Italian port of entry farther up the coast. Military barracks, a gasoline dump and a transport park were declared reduced to flaming ruins.

Krionera Area Raided

Coupled with this raid, carried out yesterday, the British reported another squadron raided the Krionero area, scoring direct hits and starting fires among numerous buildings.

On the northern front, where six days of raging snowstorms have put a crimp in operations, the Greeks said the Fascists attempted counter-attacks, only to be repulsed with the loss of more of Premier Mussolini's men and war materials.

The Greek high command said a lieutenant colonel was among the latest group of Italian prisoners, and that much war material, including two batteries of artillery, was taken by the Greeks.

Advices from the front said the Greeks made considerable progress beyond the Ostravitza mountain range where the Italians were said to be making a determined stand with a number of mortars.

Weather Bitterly Cold

The sun came out over the Klisura-Tepeleni sector today for the first time in days, military dispatches said, but the weather continued bitterly cold.

"Especially fierce fighting progressed around Klisura, where the enemy, realizing the colossal strategic importance of this region, is fighting desperately," one report said.

"However, his efforts have proved unsuccessful, despite the bad weather which favored him. All important enemy positions are being captured one after another by our troops storming the Italians with bayonets. The number of prisoners is increasing steadily and huge war stores are falling into our hands."

2 Fascist Ports Fired

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 20—Blazing ruins were left in new assaults on the Albanian ports of Valona and Krionero, the R. A. F. command announced today, while Greek troops were reported battling up the coast from Palermo Bay toward Chimara and tightening their lines around the inland towns of Klisura and Tepeleni.

At Valona, the R. A. F. command reported, military barracks, a gasoline dump, a motor transport park and buildings north of the town were hit in the raid made yesterday. Great columns of smoke rose from the vicinity of the barracks and the gasoline stores, British pilots reported.

Direct Hits Made

Direct hits were declared to have been made on buildings in the Krionero area, and fires were seen raging after the attack.

Greek troops continued their drive to dislodge the Italians from strategic positions which must be taken before Tepeleni and Klisura can be occupied.

Resistance Strong

Although Italian resistance is strong, reports from the front said Fascist forces are expected to withdraw any moment from hills behind the towns.

On the Albanian front generally, fighting has been slowed down by snowstorms which have been raging for six days.

The Italians tried a series of counter-attacks on the northern front despite the bad weather, but, dispatches from that zone said, all were unsuccessful and more prisoners and material fell to the Greeks.

A Government spokesman said last night that Fascist forces had abandoned Palermo Bay, on which the town of Palermo is situated, in their withdrawal toward Chimara, ten miles up the coast.

Towns Being Abandoned

(Reports reaching Struga, Yugoslavia, on the Albanian border, said Tepeleni and Klisura, under withering fire from Greek artillery pulled into position on sledges over snow up to five feet deep, were being abandoned by the Italians.)

Greek Commander's Message.

The Greek commander-in-chief, Gen. Alexander Papagos, had informed his fighting men in a general order that "your blows have placed him (the enemy) in a very difficult position. A large part of his forces are almost disbanded and without morale.

". . . Our enemy is shaken on the front before you and in Africa before the English. He is shaken internally. Winter is accelerating his disintegration.

"Persist in your efforts that we may crush him completely and throw him into the sea. Victory will then be ours, the best victory in our history, and it will be due to you."

The Greek High Command acknowledged stiff Italian resistance in the snow-covered mountains, but said that 600 prisoners were captured and added that "the enemy . . . was dislodged by bayonets from his positions." The positions, however, were not located.

Italian losses were described by the spokesman as "extremely heavy," partly because of the severe cold. In one part of the Klisura region, he said, "a village and surrounding heights which we captured were full of Italian dead."

He also related, as "quite characteristic," the exploit of a "small Greek reconnaissance patrol which captured a detachment ten times stronger, consisting of one officer and more than 150 men" in the north. On the central front, he added, two officers and sixty men were captured.

Foes in Albania Entrenched in Icy Mountains

Reporter With Greeks Sees Italian Sentry on Duty as Armies Trade Shells

By J. Wes Gallagher

WITH THE GREEK ARMY ON THE NORTHERN ALBANIAN FRONT, Dec. 19 (AP).—A shivering Italian sentry of bersaglieri crept furtively about an icy ledge as a zero wind whipped his coat about his legs.

"We could kill him if we wished," a Greek officer at my elbow observed.

I turned away from my peephole in the observation post in one of the advanced trenches on this front. In this sector the fighting has reverted for the time being to World War type trench warfare because of the terrific cold and the heavy snows. A short distance ahead of me was a mountain where thousands of Italians are intrenched with a big assortment of artillery. Behind me was a shell-riddled village; on the right a wind-swept lake; on the left, the mountains held by the Greeks. The sky was lead gray, flecked with snow flurries. Trench mortar bombs thudded wickedly. Overhead was the crack of shrapnel shells. Occasionally our post shook from the burst of six-inch shells near by.

The Italian sentry was a joke to the Greeks. He moved carefully. A burst from a Greek rifle would have finished him.

"There is no use killing him," the Greek officer, tall and tanned, explained. "He cannot see anything, and every time one of our men feels cold all he has to do for comfort is look at the Italian sentry."

But from their trenches, several hundred feet above the virtually deserted village, the Italians were shooting at everything that moved in the little valley in the daylight. They were using machine guns and the six-inch shells. The fact that they were dug in higher than the Greeks made it colder for them.

The Greeks were surprised when newspaper men showed up. They had not seen any.

As the ancient station wagon drove out of the mountain path leading to the village a soldier said the valley road was under fire.

When the valley floor was reached, the driver went sixty miles an hour and raced down the shell-pitted road until stopped at a Greek outpost.

Here a young officer guided the party to the front line, 200 yards beyond the post.

He insisted that the group march Indian file, twenty yards apart, across 100 yards of open field to reach the village itself.

The precaution seemed silly until the officer turned and said the entire field was within easy rifle shot of the Italians on the mountain.

Real Activity at Night

"It must have been too cold for them to shoot you," he added nonchalantly.

Despite the shelling, the officers explained, they sleep during the day because the real activity begins at night. Then, Greek and Italian patrols clash in the frosty darkness.

The commanding officer pointed to a young subaltern, just out of the Greek equivalent of West Point.

"He and his patrol crept up within fifty yards of the Italian lines the other night and set up a defense work successfully," he said. The slightest noise would have meant death."

The young officer flushed, embarrassed by the praise.

The party stayed in the shelter at the front until after dark, drinking Greek mountain tea with the officers and exchanging bits of news with the soldiers. A steady rain from the trench mortars and light cannon bespoke the Italians' proximity.

When dark came, the commanding officer put on a tin hat and started a tour of trench inspection. Other officers equipped themselves similarly for patrol duty.

They joked and laughed about it.

Outside the skies were alight with ashes of artillery fire, in the mountains to the south and the north.

We went back in the same manner by which we arrived. When we got to the top of the mountain pass a big Albanian wolf walked across the snowy road, disdainful of our car and the war beneath him.

Britain Casts Covetous Eye On Enemy Ships in America

Cross Also Would Like More U. S. Vessels Assigned to English Service—Danes Aroused by Seizure Proposal.

LONDON, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Ronald Cross, the British Minister of Shipping, cast today what he called a "covetous eye" on "a certain number of enemy ships in the United States" and declared that assignment of these and United States ships to the British service "are the only ways I can see for replenishments of any consequence."

Observing that supplies of old American ships were nearly exhausted and that it would be a year before new shipbuilding in America could reach substantial levels, he said:

"Perhaps the United States can spare us something from her existing ordinary services. Also there are a certain number of enemy ships in the United States. I naturally cast a covetous eye on those vessels."

'Real Struggle' in 1941.

Mr. Cross declared that Britain's "real struggle" with Germany would come in 1941. The statements came in an interview with the American press.

He pictured the submarine menace as still the greatest threat to British lifelines and said that it could be overcome only by increasing numbers of destroyers and by new shipping which Britain now is turning out at her virtual maximum of production.

"One naturally hopes that the United States will be able to see her way to help us in the coming year," Mr. Cross said.

"I am extremely grateful for what we have got already. A large amount has already been supplied and we have to thank the good will of the administration."

Cites Need for Destroyers.

Speaking of Britain's need for destroyers, Mr. Cross said:

"We obviously can do with a great deal more destroyers. We know how to master the submarine, given equipment to do it, but we cannot expect to get the submarine menace so far subdued that it will not require an enormous amount of new construction to maintain the war effort at full blast."

He pointed out that shipping losses during the world war continued heavy to the end, but toward the close were being more than offset by tremendous building in the United States, which produced more than 3,000,000 tons in 1918 as against 898,000 tons in 1917.

"Only the United States can supply the enormous new construction we need," he said. "Consequently we very much hope that the United States will embark on a shipbuilding program on a gigantic scale similar to the last war.

"Given that and our own steady accretion of strength, I have not the slightest doubt we can maintain our war effort at full strength."

Danish Press Is Aroused.

The Scandinavian wireless broadcast an Oslo dispatch telling of "excitement" caused in Denmark by the possibility the United States might seize Danish ships, and quoting the Danish press in protest.

"What right has the United States as a neutral country to seize ships of another neutral country?" asked the Boersen.

The Berlingske Tidende said that the measure would be a severe blow to Denmark's already weakened merchant navy, and Politiken said that such action by the United States would be unprecedented and "in absolute contradiction of international law."

Faedrelandet said it would be a "cheap method" of United States aid to Britain.

Germany has two vessels tied up in the United States—the 4,733-ton tanker Pauline Friederich at Boston and the 4,352-ton Arauca at Port Everglades, Fla.

The Arauca took refuge a year ago when the British cruiser Orion intercepted her while she was trying to reach Germany from Vera Cruz.

Italy has twenty-seven vessels tied up on both coasts and Denmark has thirty-seven ships laid up in this country's ports.

Britain held that Danish ships acquired "an enemy character" when Germany invaded Denmark and Danish ship operators refused to turn their vessels over to the English on a charter basis after a long and bitter controversy.

President Roosevelt said in Washington today that a plan to take over the Danish vessels and turn them over to Britain was new to him.

Nazi Prize Court Acts.

The German radio announced today that the Hamburg Prize Court "for the first time . . . has taken a decision with regard to French ships which had been captured by the German armed forces when they occupied French ports."

"The decision applied to nine French ships," said the broadcast, recorded here at the Columbia Broadcasting System's short-wave listening station. "They had a total tonnage of 20,000 tons."

Although the German announcer did not specify, the decisions presumably awarded the ships to Germany.

U. S. Surveying Tonnage.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Government officials were said today to be making an intensive study of the American shipping situation to find more merchant tonnage to release to Great Britain.

Officials were known to be considering the question of thirty-seven Danish and more than a hundred other foreign ships tied up in American ports, with a view to determining whether there was any way that some of them might be acquired to add to Britain's merchant fleet.

The purchase this week by British interests of sixteen merchant vessels from the Maritime Commission left relatively few to be obtained from this source.

The government's laid-up fleet was expected to be further depleted with the sale of twenty-four vessels for which the Maritime Commission has asked for bids on January 7. British interests were expected to be the successful bidder on these, as they have been on other ships offered in recent months.

Todd to Build 60 Ships.

Meanwhile two affiliates of the Todd Shipyards Corporation of New York today began construction of new shipyards, in which will be built sixty big cargo ships for the British Purchasing Commission.

Contracts for the freighters, which will cost a total of almost $100,000,000, were signed last night at the office of the Todd company, 1 Broadway. This is the first order from the British Government for ships to be built here since world war days, and it is believed to be the largest order in the history of American shipbuilding, at a time when this country was not at war.

The two new affiliates of the Todd concern are the Todd-California Shipbuilding Corporation of Richmond, Cal., and the Todd-Bath Iron Shipbuilding Corporation of Portland, Me. Each will build thirty of the $1,600,000 vessels.

The new ships will replace those lost by Great Britain as a result of sinkings by submarines, mine and aircraft. They are expected to be used to carry war materials and food from the United States and Canada to England.

Roosevelt Arms Plan Hailed by Bevin as Blow at Speculation

Sees 'Goods for Goods' Trade Contributions to Post-War Stabilization

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin declared today that "President Roosevelt's great idea of paying for goods by goods will not only help to win the war, but take us out of the hands of speculators at the end of the war."

This refernce to the President's plan to lend arms to Britain was made in a luncheon address to the Foreign Press Association. Mr. Bevin added:

"It is an indication that the President accepts the view that the greatest contribution to international stabilization at the end of the war is labor and effort and not speculation and manipulation of currency."

Mr. Bevin often is called the "strong man" of the British Labor party and has been mentioned as a possible successor to Prime Minister Churchill whenever one has to be chosen.

Among other things, Mr. Bevin said the British Navy now is doing work which five navies did in the World War and that "every one has now to be on one side or the other" in the conflict.

"At this moment, Britain and her allies are in the front line fighting this battle," he said.

"But we are only the front line. Every one in the world is involved on one side or the other * * * there can be no neutrality between right and wrong.

"Great Britain is fighting for a principle which, when established finally, will govern the conduct of humanity for generations to come.

"The commonwealth idea on the basis of equality must be the basic principle of future security and prosperity in the world."

NIGHT LEAD SHIPS-AMERICAN (BJT)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS By William W. White

LONDON, DEC.20--BRITAIN'S YOUNG MINISTER OF SHIPPING, RONALD CROSS, MADE A FRANK BID TODAY FOR AXIS SHIPS NOW IN AMERICAN HARBORS AND FOR VESSELS FROM "THE EXISTING ORDINARY SERVICES" OF THE UNITED STATES.

IN AN INTERVIEW WITH THE AMERICAN PRESS, THE SHARP-FACED, 44-YEAR-OLD CROSS SAID THAT SUPPLIES OF OLD AMERICAN SHIPS WERE ALMOST EXHAUSTED, THAT IT WOULD TAKE A YEAR FOR AMERICAN SHIPBUILDING TO BE SUBSTANTIALLY OF HELP TO BRITAIN, AND ADDED:

"PERHAPS THE UNITED STATES CAN SPARE US SOMETHING FROM HER EXISTING ORDINARY SERVICES. ALSO THERE ARE A NUMBER OF ENEMY SHIPS IN THE UNITED STATES. I NATURALLY CAST A COVETOUS EYE ON THOSE VESSELS. THESE ARE THE ONLY WAYS I CAN SEE FOR REPLENISHMENTS OF ANY CONSEQUENCE."

ALL THIS WAS PART OF A DISCUSSION OF THE INROADS OF THE SUBMARINE AND LONG-DISTANCE PLANE ON BRITISH SHIPPING. THIS, SAID CROSS, STILL WAS THE GREATEST THREAT TO BRITISH LIFE-BLOOD, AND IT CAN BE OVERCOME ONLY BY INCREASING THE NUMBERS OF DESTROYERS ON CONVOY AND PATROL DUTY AND BY NEW SHIPPING.

CROSS DID NOT GO INTO THE LEGALISTIC ASPECTS OF OBTAINING SUCH SHIPS OF GERMANY AND ITALY WHICH ARE REFUGED IN THE UNITED STATES, A MATTER WHICH NATURALLY AFFECTS AMERICAN NEUTRALITY.

(THERE ARE TWO GERMAN VESSELS, 27 ITALIAN SHIPS AND 37 OF DANISH REGISTRY TIED UP IN UNITED STATES PORTS. BRITAIN HOLDS THAT THE DANISH SHIPS ARE OF "ENEMY CHARACTER"; DANISH SHIP OPERATORS HAVE REFUSED TO TURN THEM OVER TO THE BRITISH ON A CHARTER BASIS).

LIKE OTHER BRITISH LEADERS, CROSS SAID THE "REAL STRUGGLE" WITH GERMANY WOULD COME IN 1941. HE EXPRESSED GRATITUDE FOR AMERICAN HELP ALREADY RECEIVED AND HOPE THAT THERE WILL BE MORE.

"WE OBVIOUSLY CAN DO WITH A GREAT MANY MORE DESTROYERS," HE SAID. "WE KNOW HOW TO MASTER THE SUBMARINE, GIVEN THE EQUIPMENT TO DO IT, BUT WE CANNOT EXPECT TO GET THE SUBMARINE MENACE SO FAR SUBDUED THAT IT WILL NOT REQUIRE AN ENORMOUS AMOUNT OF NEW CONSTRUCTION TO MAINTAIN THE WAR EFFORT AT FULL BLAST.

DEC 21 1940

"ONLY THE UNITED STATES CAN SUPPLY THE ENORMOUS NEW CONSTRUCTION WE NEED. CONSEQUENTLY WE HOPE VERY MUCH THAT THE UNITED STATES WILL EMBARK ON A SHIPBUILDING PROGRAM ON A GIGANTIC SCALE, SIMILAR TO THAT OF THE LAST WAR."

HE RECALLED THAT AMERICA PRODUCED THREE MILLION GROSS TONS OF SHIPPING IN 1918, OFFSETTING THE HEAVY ALLIED SHIP LOSSES OF 1917.

IN THIS WAR, CROSS WENT ON, LOSSES OF BRITISH-CONTROLLED SHIPPING HAVE TREBLED SINCE JULY AND NOW AVERAGE MORE THAN 60,000 TONS WEEKLY.

WHILE CROSS TALKED TO THE AMERICAN REPORTERS, ERNEST BEVIN, THE MINISTER FOR LABOR, TOLD A FOREIGN PRESS ASSOCIATION LUNCHEON AUDIENCE THAT "PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S GREAT IDEA OF PAYING FOR GOODS BY GOODS WILL NOT ONLY HELP TO WIN THE WAR BUT WILL TAKE US OUT OF THE HANDS OF SPECULATORS AT THE END OF THE WAR."

NAZIS UNLEASH FURY IN REGION OF LIVERPOOL

Merseyside Area Gets Its Worst Overnight Pounding Of War

BY AL WALL

[By the Associated Press]

London, Saturday, Dec. 21 — Germany's Luftwaffe fury gave the Merseyside area around Liverpool its worst pounding of the war last night and early today.

A record number of night bombers were blasting the district and incessant roar of anti-aircraft guns could be heard heaviest in the industrial areas.

One town was reported by the British Press Association to be suffering indiscriminate bombing while at Liverpool a hotel was struck and several persons in the dining room were injured.

Digging Victims Out Of Ruins

While early estimates of casualties were low, they did not include possible victims being dug out of the ruins of a line of wrecked homes.

Commercial buildings in Liverpool were struck, and broken glass strewed streets over a wide area.

Earlier last night bombs fell over wide areas of Britain, including the east coast, inland, North Wales and Western Scotland. In at least one coastal sector, anti-aircraft fire was so intense it shook houses.

Two Hospitals Reported Hit

Two hospitals, one in an east Midlands area and another in a northwest town, were reported hit, but no casualties resulted.

The all-clear signal came to London shortly before 3.30 A. M., after a night of intermittent raids.

By early night, raiders were reported over at least eleven provincial towns, but few incidents were reported. The British Press Association said the Nazis apparently were renewing the "nuisance raid" tactics they employed repeatedly several weeks ago.

The ground fire of defense guns was particularly heavy in the area of three towns in the northeast.

These night assaults followed a day of light attacks in which an unoccupied air-raid shelter was bombed in London.

Once during the day a twin-engined Nazi bomber dived to within 150 feet of the ground and machine-gunned pedestrians on London's outskirts. The heavy barrage that rose at once appeared to have crippled the plane.

The Air Ministry reported a violent bombing campaign in the British counter-offensive.

Bergen-Oslo Railroad Bombed

In overnight raids, it declared, British bombers hit the Bergen-Oslo railroad in Norway, often used by the Germans for military purposes; and a series of oil plants, storage facilities and power stations in the Ruhr.

Among objectives reported hit was the railway junction at Essen, Germany, site of the Krupp armament works. Four heavy explosions were declared to have resulted.

Synthetic Oil Plants Fired

Two big fires, the British said, were set off in an attack on synthetic oil plants at Gelsenkirchen, Germany.

For these raids to the east, the Air Ministry said, the weather was so dirty that it would have "baffled any navigators but those of the R. A. F. . . . If our aircraft had not been built to stand every test it would have been impossible to attempt any raid at all."

Night Alarm Follows Day Jabs At London

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—Air-raid sirens sent London's millions to shelter again tonight after a day of "lone wolf" attacks, which the Government said resulted in a small number of casualties and damage to buildings.

It was the second succesive night of alarm after a lapse of almost three days. In the daylight attacks there was "some slight activity," a communique said.

While guns boomed in London, night raiders also were reported over Liverpool, a town in the East Midlands, another in the West Midlands, northwest England, two towns in the north, over Wales and a town in East Anglia.

In the daylight operations, a twin-engined bomber dived within 150 feet of the ground, machine-guns blazing, over the outskirts of London. No one was injured and the attacker met with such intense anti-aircraft fire that after a second dive and a climb for altitude, observers said, the plane appeared to have been hit and to be losing height.

One stick of bombs fell on an air raid shelter usually occupied during alerts but it was empty because no alarm had sounded.

Alarm After 68 Hours.

During the brief London air alarm last night, the capital's first in 68 hours, sounds of gunfire were heard from the suburbs and a few bombs were dropped in one section. Grounds of a nurses' home were reported hit without causing casualties.

Raiders likewise were reported over Liverpool and cities in the west and northwest.

Coincident with the raid renewals, the Admiralty made public what it claimed was a document found in an Italian submarine allegedly instructing Italian submarine captains to attack "certain Spanish merchant ships without warning."

The purported order, allegedly signed by Mario Falangola, vice admiral commanding submarines, directed the submarines to "attack without warning" Spanish ships belonging to the Ybarra and the Pinillos shipping companies leaving Casablanca, Morocco, and sailing toward Lisbon.

Oslo Rail Line Hit

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—British bombers hit the Bergen-Oslo Railroad in Norway, much used by the Germans for military purposes, in an overnight air raid, the Air Ministry reported today.

Attacks on "several targets in the Ruhr and western Germany" also were reported by the Air Ministry, which said the R. A. F. bucked bad weather last night to concentrate on oil plants and storage facilities.

The Norwegian raid was made by planes of the coastal command, the Ministry said, and "bombs were seen to burst directly on the line at several points."

Krupp Plant Bombed

The Ministry communique said that the targets also included power stations, a railway junction and Essen, site of the great Krupp armament works. Four explosions from heavy bombs were reported in the Essen assault.

A low level attack on the Rhine city of Bonn caused "one very large fire."

"In the Duisburg area two large fires were observed and oil targets near Cologne were set ablaze," said the communique. "At Dusseldorf several large fires were caused and an anti-aircraft position was bombed."

TWO BOMBS HIT DUBLIN SUBURB, 3 CASUALTIES

Unidentified Raider Also Drops Explosives In County Monaghan

Foray Sends Wave Of Excitement Through Neutral Eire's Capital

BY JIM YARBROUGH

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, Dec. 20—Two bombs from a single unidentified, raiding plane fell within seven miles of neutral, brilliantly lighted Dublin tonight, injuring three persons and damaging several houses in the suburb of Dun Laoghaire (formerly Kingstown).

The town is in Dublin county, seven miles from the city itself, and is a mail-packet station for communication with Liverpool and Holyhead.

Bombs also fell in Monaghan county, which is near the frontier of belligerent northern Ireland.

Excitement In Dublin

The bombs—the first of the war anywhere near neutral Eire's capital—sent a wave of excitement through gayly decorated Dublin, where a round of holiday parties was about to begin.

The suburban incident occurred about 7.30 P. M. and about half an hour later the same plane or another loosed two bombs in the rural district of County Monaghan, injuring a farmer and damaging two farmhouses.

The Dun Laoghaire plane flew in low from the harbor and dropped a flare. Then the first bomb crashed into a busy thoroughfare and blasted out a crater 15 feet deep and 30 feet wide. A smaller bomb fell in the back garden of a home about forty yards away from the road.

Some Narrow Escapes

There were remarkable escapes among pedestrians. One man standing twenty yards away from the point of impact of the first bomb was flung across the street and covered with debris.

The official statement issued by the Government's information bureau gave brief details of the incidents, but there was no official indication as to whether a protest would be made, or to whom.

Previous Nazi Apologies

Although this is the first instance of bombs falling in the Dublin area, both explosive and incendiary missiles have landed in neutral Eire during the Battle of Britain.

For each previous bombing, one of which proved fatal to three girls, the German Government has apologized.

Although it has mobilized reserves and is guarding ports, Eire refuses to permit British use of her harbors as bases.

Dive Bombers Blast Town.

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—DNB, the official German news agency, reported tonight that German planes had dive-bombed a factory district on the north side of Chelmsford, seat of Essex county, northeast of London.

Ship Sunk by Plane Off Isle of Wight, Nazis Claim

Light Bomber Forces Reported Active Over London During Night

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—DNB, official German news agency, reported today that a Nazi reconnaissance plane had sunk a 1,200-ton merchant ship south of the Isle of Wight off Britain's south coast yesterday.

The news agency said the plane made a dive attack and dropped one bomb which struck squarely amidships, tearing the craft apart.

The same source reported that the 5,225-ton Belgian passenger ship Macedonier was mysteriously missing. The ship formerly traveled between Belgium and the Congo.

DNB also said the 3,660-ton British freighter Amicus had been torpedoed and sunk in the North Atlantic west of Ireland.

Light formations of German bombing planes were active over London last night, informed sources reported, but clouds prevented exact observations on their results.

The British carried out minor aerial operations over Western Germany, these sources said. No plane losses were recorded on either side.

The high command said the British raids on Germany had caused "only slight damage to buildings" and killed two civilians outside an air raid shelter.

A Nazi submarine commanded by Lt. Comdr. Schepke was credited officially with sinking its 40th merchant ship, bringing its total tonnage sunk to 208,975 tons.

Churchill Vows Sharing Of Privileges After War

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 20—Prime Minister Winston Churchill was disclosed today to have pledged that when the war was over "advantages and privileges which hitherto have been enjoyed only by the few shall be far more widely shared."

3924-6521

The promise was made at Harrow, exclusive school where Churchill spoke Wednesday.

The Prime Minister quoted Adolf Hitler as saying December 10 that "Eton College and the Hitler schools are two different worlds," and declared the Führer had "overlooked the vast majority of the youth of this country who have never had the advantage of attending such schools as Eton and Harrow but who by their skill and prowess have won the admiration of the whole world."

"When this war is won, as it surely will be," Churchill declared, "it must be one of our aims to establish a state of society where the advantages and privileges which hitherto have been enjoyed by only the few shall be far more widely shared by the men and youth of the nation as a whole."

AXIS TRIO ACT TO IMPLEMENT THEIR ALLIANCE

Step Viewed As Reminder To U. S. Of Hazards Of Aid To Britain

America Warned By Nazi Press Of Danger Of A "Two-Front" Conflict

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 20—The establishment of military and economic commissions to implement the German-Italian-Japanese alliance was agreed upon today and the action was regarded in some political quarters as a reminder to the United States of the hazards of giving limitless aid to Britain.

No authorized spokesman would say that formation of the commissions at this time was in answer to President Roosevelt's suggestion that materials be lent to Britain, but informally it was said "it is an action that speaks for itself."

Timing Regarded Significant

The timing was interpreted by some as a reminder of the pact's existence at the moment when the United States appears contemplating a great extension of aid to Britain. The German press started speaking of its favorite theme—friction between the United States and Japan.

The influential Hamburger Fremdenblatt recalled that according to the terms of the three-power pact, war with one partner means war with all and went so far as to counsel the United States against the dangers of a "two-front" conflict.

Japanese Persuasion And U. S.

"Japan," said the paper, "sees its natural aspirations in the Pacific frustrated by the imperial demands of the United States. So Japan seeks, while there is still a chance, to persuade her potential adversary to take a reasonable attitude.

"It almost seems that the tragic history of Germany's futile effort to win English understanding in the years before this war will repeat itself with a Japanese background in the Pacific."

The Fremdenblatt observed that the American public realizes the possibilities and "appreciates the risk of a two-front war on the present state of its defenses."

The German, Italian and Japanese missions will be mutual and will function in Berlin, Rome and Tokyo.

Awaits Petain's Speech

These sources also were expected today or tomorrow to release concrete news "on further consolidation within the French Government."

It was intimated that the German comment would become available after French Chief of State Petain delivered a radio address which he has promised his nation.

The pact was an implicit warning to the United States.

Berlin's announcement now that an "interesting prospect of further developments" comes with discussion in Washington of possible raising of financial barriers in order to increase the flow of American goods for Britain and of new pressure to step up the pace of the United States' armaments output.

Laval Believed "Used"

The French Chief of State, Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain, it is argued in well-informed circles in Berlin, has about him a group of men who used M. Laval because they knew him to be acceptable to Germany. As the German-Italian onward rush continued, they contended, M. Laval seemed very useful in paving the way toward a French-German peace.

But, so the story goes, no sooner did the Italians suffer reverses than the forces around Marshal Pétain, which still nurse their old enmity toward Germany, thought their opportunity had come.

The former Allied generalissimo, Maxime Weygand, was dispatched to North Africa in the knowledge that he could hold the French African empire together and possibly even act independently of Vichy, should the "Putsch" fail, it was said. Germany would be in no position to object to M. Laval's removal from power at this time for fear of what General Weygand might do, this thesis holds.

The unofficial German comment runs, however, that these sources forget that France is a defeated nation that still must take cognizance of the victor's wishes. To the German Government it seemed indefensible that a man with whom Herr Hitler had negotiated should be ousted from office and detained without Germany being even so much as informed.

Hence the German Ambassador in Paris, Otto Abetz, accompanied by German generals and Schutzstaffel [Nazi Elite Guard] officials, hasten to Vichy to obtain clarification. There seems little doubt that M. Laval owes his liberation to German efforts.

Flandin Held Tricked

Meanwhile Pierre-Etienne Flandin, who is regarded as acceptable to both the Axis on one hand and Great Britain and the United States on the other, was asked to take over M. Laval's duties as Foreign Minister. Not knowing what the men around Marshal Pétain were doing, so runs the story here, he agreed.

Neither M. Flandin nor Marshal Pétain, who, well-informed Germans said, wrote "a very fine letter" to Herr Hitler, are blamed here for the "Putsch of Vichy." Marshal Pétain is regarded as too old to be expected to follow politics in all its vagaries, and M. Flandin is regarded as having been drawn in innocently.

Herr Abetz was reported to have insisted that M. Laval must somehow be reinstated as a Cabinet member. Germans said they recognized that Marshal Pétain could not very well throw M. Flandin out of the Foreign Ministry and reinstate M. Laval. M. Laval, for his part, was said to want the Ministry of Interior, which commands the entire civil administration. That, however, would mean putting

HALIFAX EMERGES AS ENVOY CHOICE

London, Dec. 21 (Saturday) (AP).—An official announcement of the appointment of Lord Halifax as Ambassador to the United States is expected shortly, according to the parliamentary correspondent of the authoritative British Press Association.

The Daily Mail declared today that Lord Halifax' name already had been submitted to President Roosevelt for approval as successor to the late Lord Lothian.

Halifax, Foreign Minister under both the late Neville Chamberlain and Winston Churchill, will be succeeded in that post by War Minister Anthony Eden, the paper added.

Halifax has been repeatedly attacked in some sections of the press for his handling of the Foreign Office, principally because of his coolness toward Soviet Russia.

Cabinet changes involved would include a post for David Lloyd George, World War Prime Minister, the paper said.

His specific job, it was added, would be to spur the war effort at home.

Halifax succeeded Eden as Foreign Secretary after the latter quit Chamberlain's Cabinet on Feb. 20, 1938, in disagreement over appeasement of Italy and Germany.

Inter-Axis Boards Appointed

Germany, Italy and Japan Act to Put Teeth in Military Aid Pact

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Germany, Italy and Japan put teeth into their pact of military collaboration against any new enemy in the European or Asiatic wars by establishing tonight mutual military, economic and general commissions which will function in Berlin, Rome and Tokio.

Announcement of the naming of the commissions, following an earlier disclosure that the three Powers had agreed to put this provision of the three-power pact into effect, was made tonight by DNB, official German news agency.

DNB said the commissions would bring the pact into operation, and in informed quarters it was declared that the action made the treaty "a living organism."

The official announcement said: "The three-power pact among Japan, Italy and Germany provided for the founding of mixed technical commissions to have the tasks of bringing the pact into operation. The three governments have agreed to found in the three capitals general as well as military and economic commissions. After mutual preparations have been made these commissions will take up their duties."

This was the action that authorized persons had earlier predicted could present an "interesting prospect of further development of co-operation between the nations united in the three-Power pact."

1. Announcement that a Japanese military mission will leave soon for a first-hand study of the Axis' war tactics.

2. Reappointment yesterday of Lieut. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima as Japanese Ambassador to Germany.

Oshima, strong advocate of Japan's adherence to the Rome-Berlin Axis, was displaced as Ambassador to Berlin in the fall of 1939. It was an open secret in Berlin diplomatic circles then that Japan's leaders were disturbed by Germany's non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia, signed that August. Now the clock has come around again.

Warning To United States

Last September 27, Germany, Italy and Japan signed at Berlin a ten-year treaty welding them into a totalitarian bloc pledged one-for-all and all-for-one against any new enemy entering either the European or Chinese wars. It was a political, military and economic accord.

Straws Appear In Japanese Capital

Two developments in Tokyo, tending to put Japan in closer liaison with Germany and Italy, provided hints of what the "further developments" in the three-power pact collaboration may be. They were:

AFFAIR A LESSON TO NAZIS

They Say They Have Learned Some French Officials Seek to Scuttle Collaboration

By Louis Lochner

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (AP)—The French Cabinet shake-up of last week, known here as "the Putsch of Vichy," has taught the German Government one great lesson, men in the know here say.

That lesson, they assert, is that there is an influential group at work within the French Government to scuttle, if possible, attempts at a French-German rapprochement such as that planned between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and the French former Vice Premier, Pierre Laval.

German Government circles, they reported, long had suspected that not all who were giving lip service to the plan for a "new order in Europe" under German leadership were sincere about it. M. Laval's sudden removal uncovered the hands of these counterforces, it is said here. There is no longer even the slightest doubt that the Wilhelmstrasse was completely surprised by the Vichy upheaval.

Official sources were also expected to disclose today or tomorrow news of "further consolidation within the French Government," possibly after a radio address French Chief of State Marshal Phillippe Petain has promised his nation.

the police power into his hands, and conceivably he might then arrest the men around Marshal Pétain who brought about his downfall. Besides, the present Minister of the Interior, Marcel B. Peyrouton, is one of the chief powers in present-day France.

Hence the problem at the moment as seen here is just where to fit M. Laval into the scheme of things.

MILITARY HELP TO ALLY HINTED BY NAZI PRESS

Would Draw Attention From Italian Reverses In Greece, Africa

Possibilities Of Action In Gibraltar, Suez Or Balkans Considered

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Dec. 20—Enough evidence of concern over stumbling Italian military operations in Greece and Africa appeared here tonight to give some support to widely heard reports that Germany has decided to crutch up her ailing ally.

Any news of actual military plans could not be reported even if known.

But occasional chuckles once heard over Italian reverses in Greece were reported in private quarters to have disappeared since the British naval air force launched its smashing attack on the Italian navy at Taranto and British forces compelled a somewhat precipitous withdrawal of Fascist forces from North Africa.

[An informed Rome source confirmed today a report that German transport planes are carrying Italian troops to Albania and said Italian-flown Stuka dive bombers are in Italian service.]

No Compromise, Say Papers

For several days Berlin papers have carried lead articles emphasizing that the Italian reverses merely are casual instances in the course of a war which has gone steadily in favor of the Reich from the beginning.

Semi-official German news agencies assert that, contrary to foreign reports, there isn't the slightest change in the German-Italian decision to carry the war to uncompromising victory.

With the possible view to drawing attention away from Italian reverses, Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter declared that, after all, the war was going to be won in the zone of the British isles and not elsewhere.

Thrust Elsewhere Suggested

From time to time before previous campaigns were launched just such leads were put out by Berlin papers. For instance, immediately prior to the launching of the air attacks against England, the Berlin papers were hammering home how vitally England would be hit if Germany would choose such a time to cut the empire lifeline through the Mediterranean.

Is this new emphasis in the direction of England—heightened by heavier sea and air attacks against British shipping—such a lead as might presage operations in one of several other probable directions which might have the immediate effect of bolstering the Italian ally?

Actually, Hitler has a fistful of possibilities for lending aid to Italy. He could attempt the long-discussed attack against Gibraltar. He could strike southeastward toward Suez. Or he could move directly against Greece if he cares to run the risk—which German leaders contend is nil—upsetting the quiet of the Balkans.

Air Aid To Italy Considered

Finally, he could lend real air aid to Italy directly or launch the long-expected attack against England in a smashing bid to close the war before American aid makes it more difficult.

The growing Italian difficulties in Albania and Africa the past week have prompted some neutral observers to look for some startling development even before the Christmas trees are tossed into the back yard.

Certainly no German these days is looking too calmly on recent American developments. It can be taken for granted that in no event is Germany likely to withhold any effort to bolster Axis morale against such blows as delivered by President Roosevelt's suggestion for underwriting British war costs from the United States Treasury.

Mutual Commissions Set Up

Meanwhile, in the midst of this speculation, Italy and Japan put teeth into their three-power pact today with the establishment of mutual military, economic and general commissions. They will begin to function in Berlin, Rome and Tokyo.

Informed quarters said the action made a "living organism" of the pact, which pledges the signatories to collaboration against any new enemy in the European or Asiatic wars.

TOKIO, Dec. 20 (AP).—The War Office announced today that a Japanese military mission will depart soon for Germany and Italy on invitations from Berlin and Rome to study the war tactics of the Axis powers at first hand.

Simultaneously the cabinet information bureau announced that agreement had been reached on establishment of technical commissions under the Rome-Berlin-Tokio pact. Observers assumed that the military mission was designated in connection with this agreement.

Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, inspector general of the air corps, was named to head the military mission. The date of departure was not stated.

Lieut. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, reappointed Japan's Ambassador to Germany in a formal palace ceremony today, is scheduled to leave here in January for Berlin, where he was ambassador in 1938-39 until supplanted because of Tokio's disapproval of his advocacy of an alliance with the Rome-Berlin Axis.

His reappointment was reported in the newspaper "Asahi" to have been decided upon by Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka with a view to contributing further to the promotion of German-Japanese relations in "an epoch-making way."

Japan Reported Sending Army Mission To Europe

New York, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Japanese news service Domei announced tonight in a wireless dispatch from Tokyo that the Japanese army was sending a military mission to Europe "upon invitation by Germany and Italy."

Its task, said the announcement, will be to study "the experiences taught by the present European war at the places of actual events."

The Domei wireless also announced that the newspaper Miyako Shimbun had attacked the United States editorially, calling her "a peace disturber," and adding:

"Should the United States continue to maintain the strict hostility which she is presently assuming, both Europe and Asia would end by being her perpetual enemies."

French Shakeup?

By CHARLES FOLTZ
[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 20—French Chief of State Petain was reported in diplomatic circles here today to be considering sacrificing part of his Cabinet in an effort to "soothe" German ire over his ouster of Pierre Laval as Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister.

Forecasts of another purge, possibly over this week end, came from Vichy after Fernand de Brinon, representative of the French Government in German-occupied Paris and an intimate friend of Laval's, was reported to have given to the Petain Government the German Government's views on Laval's removal.

De Brinon returned to Paris, taking with him, it was said here, the outlines of Marshal Petain's appeasement offer, suggesting the elimination of some of Laval's enemies from his Cabinet.

Scheduled for Expulsion.

Those expected to figure in a shake-up included:

Raphael Alibert, Minister of Justice, described as the leading critic of Franco-German collaboration plans and a bitter opponent of Laval;

Rene Belin, Minister of Industrial Production; and Pierre Caziot, Minister of Agriculture.

Diplomatic advices said it was still not clear whether those expected to be pushed out would include the present strong man of the Cabinet, Marcel Peyrouton, Minister of the Interior.

German officials were said here not only to be anxious to get him out, but also to give his job to Laval.

Peyrouton in Strong Position.

M. Peyrouton, however, was believed to stand in an exceedingly strong position at Vichy, not only as a friend of Marshal Petain, but as one close to Gen. Maxine Weygand and Gen. Charles Hunziger, the Minister of War.

Informed spokesmen here said they regarded it as certain that Laval, despite apparent German approval of him as Vice-Premier, would never get that job back again as long as Marshal Petain remained the Chief of State.

It was said here that even if Laval—with German help—returned to some official post he would not wield the power he once held.

At a Cabinet meting at Vichy yesterday the ministers were said to have received and discussed the report which De Brinon brought from Paris.

If Vichy's new proposals are still unsatisfactory to the Germans, it was believed here, a shakeup of the Cabinet may be postponed, but diplomatic observers reported that Berlin, like Vichy, wants quick action after last week's purge and may be satisfied with a compromise.

One thing which stood out in the advices reaching here from Vichy was that the Germans apparently emphasized the need for a purge of elements which they considered to be against Franco-German collaboration rather than the reinstatement of Laval.

Nazis Cool To France

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, France, Dec. 20—While the Petain Government continued Cabinet meetings expected to result in changes in Cabinet personnel, French officials indicated today that the German attitude toward collaboration had cooled since the ousting of Pierre Laval from the Government.

(At this point seven lines were censored.)

It is believed here that important decisions will be taken by the Petain Government this weekend in an attempt to restore negotiations with Germany which now apparently are at a standstill.

Laval's Return Unlikely

It is considered unlikely, however, that Laval will return to the Government, although it is considered by some that such action would restore German cordiality.

A Government spokesman, asked for comment on border warfare between French Indo-China and Thailand (Siam), remarked that except for "dissidence" in certain parts of Africa the entire Government is grouped behind the Petain Government.

Roosevelt Sending New Personal Message To Vichy By Leahy

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Dec. 20—Gen. Auguste Nogues, Governor of France's North African colonies, and Georges Scapini, blind deputy who has been negotiating for the release of French war prisoners, arrived here tonight for conferences with Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, chief of state.

Nogues flew here from Morocco, after the old marshal had spent the day in long and earnest talks with members of his Cabinet in an effort to put German-French relations back on their feet.

(Most of this dispatch was stopped by censor.)

[Nogues has had recent conferences with Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of the French African forces, whose continued stay in Africa has led to speculation that he is opposed to the German-French collaboration sponsored by the ousted Vice-Premier, Pierre Laval.]

French officials frankly admitted that the Nazi attitude toward collaboration had cooled since Laval's departure from the Cabinet. Important decisions by the Vichy Government were expected tomorrow in an effort to regain German cordiality.

[Men in the know in Berlin, where Laval's ouster is known as the "putsch of Vichy," said Germany had learned one great lesson from the dismissal of the Vice Premier and Foreign Minister of Petain's regime: that there exists an influential group at work within the French Government to scuttle, if possible, attempts at French-German rapprochement.]

Though the return of Laval to the Petain Government was considered by some observers as a means of restoring the stalmated German-French negotiations, it was believed unlikely that the Chief of State would favor this.

Roosevelt Sends Petain Message Through Leahy

President Commends Envoy to Marshal as Man Who Speaks Same Language

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP).—In an apparent effort to encourage an independent policy by the Vichy government in its relations with the Axis, President Roosevelt disclosed today that he was sending another personal message to Marshal Henri Petain by Admiral William D. Leahy, new American Ambassador to France.

The President said this message, the second from him to the aged chief of the French state in recent months, commended Admiral Leahy as an old friend of the Chief Executive who, in Navy parlance, spoke the same language as Marshal Petain. The plain-speaking admiral, who once created a diplomatic incident by calling the Russian people "virtually slaves," was expected to use his characteristic frankness in interpreting American policy to Petain.

Admiral Leahy, with his wife, will sail for his post next Monday from Norfolk, Va., on the cruiser Tuscaloosa, which will take them as far as Lisbon, Portugal.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, said that the plight of children in unoccupied France concerned officials in their study of possible European relief measures. The question of sending condensed milk was being studied, he said, along with that of supplying some food for Spain.

President Roosevelt's first message to Marshal Petain was sent in October at the beginning of the talks between Petain, Laval and German leaders on French collaboration in the "new order."

The text of the message and Marshal Petain's reply were never made public but the President was believed to have emphasized his concern over French policy generally and especially over the future of France's New World possessions, African bases and fleet.

Marshal Petain's reply was understood to have assured the President of his intention to protect these from the Axis or any other quarter.

Admiral Leahy, who will be able to converse with Marshal Petain in French, was expected to talk as one military man to another in discussing Franco-American relations.

The incident over Admiral Leahy's reference to Russians occurred in 1937 when he was chief of naval operations.

He was addressing Army Industrial College graduates on a subject now more than ever in the forefront of government problems—the importance of industry in defense preparedness.

Discussing methods of industrial control adopted in various countries, Admiral Leahy declared that Russia had carried regimentation of national forces and control over the industrial output and daily life of her people to the point that "they appear to be virtually slaves of the central organization."

After informal representations from the Soviet Embassy, Secretary Hull transmitted to the embassy an apology from Admiral Leahy in which he expressed his "very sincere regret" that his remarks had been construed as a reflection on the Soviet government or the Russian people.

British Broadcast From Front-Line Troops And Home Defenders To Blanket Globe

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—British officials expect 300,000,000 persons to hear a "Christmas-under-fire" program which will be divided into three parts—Christmas with the forces, in the British Isles and in London itself.

King George may open the program.

Informal broadcasts from a Royal Air Force crew in the air, from a minesweeper in the North Sea and from the army in Africa will be given in the section devoted to the forces.

Talks from a cathedral in the "front line," from a home guard observation post, and a carol party in a village will headline the contribution of the British Isles.

In London the British Broadcasting Company will attend an underground shelter party, listen in on the conversation of a family at home and present an on-the-spot program from firemen or home guards.

An arrangement with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and with the National Broadcasting Company in the United States will allow evacuee children to talk to their parents at home.

The program is to be relayed by chains in the United States, Canada, Australia, India, South Africa and New Zealand. It will last ninety minutes—from 2 P. M. (8 A. M. E.S.T.). At 9 P. M. (3 P. M. E.S.T.) it will be rebroadcast to America.

The party was sponsored by the National Broadcasting Company. The children, all save the representative of the United States, were sons and daughters of the diplomatic corps. They were in the costumes of their native lands.

In the audience were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black and Mrs. Black, whose 7-year-old daughter, Josephine, represented the United States.

It will be administered by a Secretary of State for Information, who will have under him a Director-General heading two councils, one to advise on national and international policy and one on administration and finances.

The new organization will be financed by receipts from associated foreign agencies, the sale of news to private institutions and "other annual receipts."

It was announced that separate rules would be made for controlling news used by French newspapers and that sent by foreign correspondents.

POLISH MARSHAL'S ESCAPE REPORTED

Smigly-Rydz Declared To Have Fled From Prison Camp In Rumania

Number Of High-Ranking Officers Said To Have Gotten Away At Same Time

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Rumania, Dec. 20—Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, of Poland, who fled to Rumania eighteen days after the German army invaded his homeland in September, 1939, was reported in flight again tonight, this time after a daring escape from the Dragoslav prison camp.

An undetermined number of high-ranking Polish officers who were imprisoned with him were reported to have fled at the same time, but no details were available.

[Diplomatic reports reaching Budapest, Hungary, said Smigly-Rydz had been smuggled aboard a Black Sea steamer bound for Turkey.]

Jailed Two Months Ago

The 54-year-old marshal, once commander in chief of all the forces of Poland and hailed as Pilsudski's heir, was imprisoned two months ago by Rumanian authorities investigating charges of espionage and sabotage allegedly directed against the Rumanian oil fields by British agents.

The former Polish Foreign Minister, Joseph Beck, and a number of refugee Polish officers were reported seized at the same time.

The Dragoslav prison is north of the oil fields in the heart of the country.

Raced Across Border

Smigly-Rydz was reported on September 18, 1939, to have quarreled with Beck and raced across the border to Rumania while the Germans were crushing the resistance of his army in the field.

Rumania promptly interned him, but gave him the freedom of a large estate.

Following a reported attack on him by an enraged Polish officer who felt he had left his troops and country in time of need, Smigly-Rydz was described as a saddened, broken man, old before his time. He was said to have made several previous attempts to leave Rumania.

The Marshal, whose arrest by Rumanian authorities investigating espionage and sabotage was announced on October 24, was said to have been smuggled aboard a coastwise ship headed for Turkey. He had made several previous attempts to leave Rumania.

Smigly-Rydz had been interned along with Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck and other Polish Government officials who fled before the Germans.

ALL OF FINLAND MOURNS KALLIO

War President Was Leader of Agrarian Party.

HELSINKI, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—All Finland went into mourning today for peasant-born Kyosti Kallio who became president of the republic.

Flags were at half-staff and public dancing, singing and other entertainments were banned as a mark of respect for Dr. Kallio who died of a heart attack at a railway station yesterday as he was preparing to leave for the peace and quiet of his country estate.

Dr. Kallio, whose illness forced him to step down from the presidency on November 29 after he had led Finland through the war with Russia, was present yesterday when Prime Minister Risto Ryti was elected to fill out his unexpired term ending in 1943. Cheered by thousands, he then went to the station, collapsed and died almost at once. His friends said that the excitement and physical strain incident to his departure were contributing causes of his death. He was 67 years old.

His widow, his sculptor son Kalewo and two married daughters survive.

Kyosti Kallio was Finland's fourth President. He assumed the presidency on March 1, 1937, the first farmer to do so, at which time he was known throughout his country not only as leader of the Agrarian party but as the grand old man of the Finnish Diet. He had served his country for thirty-three years in the Legislature—first in the Parliament of the semi-independent Grand Duchy of Finland, under Russian rule, and later in that of the Finnish republic. He was a leader in the fight for Finnish independence and four times had been Prime Minister. His devotion to democracy and constitutional rule was unwavering.

One of his chief interests was land reform and the promotion of scientific agriculture, and probably his most outstanding achievement was the Lex Kallio, which nearly twenty years ago broke up the estates and divided them among the land-starved peasantry.

Last August President Kallio suffered a heart attack and Premier Ryti had to take over most of the presidential duties at that time.

Youngster Likes Air Cowboys

Five-year-old New Yorker Returning From Wars Can Distinguish Planes by Sound.

LISBON, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Five-year-old Axel Gorm Andersen of New York, homeward bound from the wars, thinks of British and German airmen as "air cowboys."

2 Ships Attacked by U-boats

New Raid on British Convoy Seen as Vessels Call for Aid 450 Miles West of Ireland.

Two ships were attacked by submarines about 450 miles west of the Irish coast today in what appeared to be the second attack on a convoy in three days.

Word of the attack was heard by Mackay Radio which picked up these messages from the vessels. Both gave positions in the same area—the area that in recent months has become the graveyard of British ships carrying war materials to the beleaguered English Isles, the Associated Press reported.

The first report today came from the British steamship Carleton. At 7:30 A. M., New York time, she radioed that a submarine had crossed her bow and then launched a torpedo.

Thirty-six minutes later came a second report, this time from a ship which did not immediately identify itself.

Former American Ship.

Later, the vessel was identified by Mackay as the 2,842-ton Norwegian freighter Varangberg, out of Oslo, a former Great Lakes craft built in 1915 at Ashtabula, Ohio. The Varangberg, which also has carried the names of Morris Adler, Jotunfjell and Varangfjell, had been trading recently between Tampa, Fla., and Hull, England.

"Being attacked by submarine. 55:31 north lat., 19:25 west lon." said her message.

The 5,162-ton Carlton, which was built in 1924, is owned by R. Chapman & Sons and operated out of Newcastle.

Scores of British-controlled ships have been attacked by U-boats in the same general area since Germany stepped up its campaign against shipping. The last assault bearing the marks of an attack against a convoy was reported Wednesday when two tankers and a freighter reported within four hours that they had been torpedoed.

These ships, the 12,196-ton British Napier Star, the 9,860-ton Norwegian Dalfonn and the 10,746-ton Dutch Pendrecht, the latter two tankers, placed themselves somewhat north of the scene of today's attacks.

Meanwhile the German radio said in a broadcast heard here by the National Broadcasting Company that the French steamship Cuba was intercepted by the British while en route from Martinique to Casablanca, Morocco, and taken to Tristan, British island in the South Atlantic Ocean.

Lloyd's register lists the Cuba as a vessel of 11,337 tons.

Seven Norwegian Ships Lost

According to The Associated Press, it was reported in Oslo yesterday that seven vessels under the Norwegian flag had been listed as lost, with eight men killed. They were the tanker Beaufort, 5,053 gross tons; the freighter Balzac, 962 tons; the Stalheim, 1,298 tons; the Svein Jarl, 1,908 tons; the Kanghalfdan, 2,000 tons; the Tres, 946 tons, and the Gallus, 338 tons. These vessels, including harbor and coastal craft, may have been included in former loss capitulations.

ITALY DENIES SHIP ORDER

Calls British Report of Design on Spanish Vessels False

Columbia Broadcasting System's short-wave listening station last night recorded this statement from the Italian Government wireless:

"Rome, through authorized circles, denies allegations from British sources that Italian submarines have been ordered to attack Spanish ships. In view of the freindship between Italy and Spain, this British report should open the eyes of many listeners who remember methods used by British propaganda in an attempt to sow discord in Spain."

The British Admiralty yesterday released what is described as a photograph of an order found in an Italian submarine(designating certain Spanish ships that "must be attacked without warning."

French Report Defeat Of Indo-China 'Rebels'

Natives Armed By Japanese Declared To Have Been Dispersed Near Langson

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Dec. 20 (AP)—French officials said today that Japanese-armed native "rebels" in the vicinity of Langson, on the northeast border, had been dispersed by aerial and ground attacks of French colonial troops.

A remnant of 400 was reported under French fire in the mountains thirty-five miles north of Haiphong.

The French said the "rebels" were led by a native, formerly a member of the Japanese forces in South China, and were armed with Japanese guns and French guns taken from Langson during the Japanese occupation of that town in September.

Hongkong, Dec. 20 (AP)—Central News, official agency of the Chungking Government, said today it was estimated officially that more than thirty Japanese vessels had been sunk or damaged in the Yangtze river in southern Anhwei province by mobile artillery in recent months.

Mexico And Britain May Resume Relations

Newspaper Says Talks Now Are Being Carried On At Foreign Office

Mexico City, Dec. 20 (AP)—The newspaper Ultimas Noticias said today it understood the Foreign Office is now conducting preliminary conversations with two British Government representatives regarding renewal of diplomatic relations between Mexico and Great Britain.

Resumption of relations, suspended at the time of the oil expropriation act here in 1938, long has been predicted by informed sources.

Plans for strengthening relations with Canada and various Latin-American nations by appointment of full ambassadors to replace consular officials now representing this country are also being made, the newspaper added.

NO STRIKE IN CUBA

Naval Base Work Goes on as Killing Is Investigated.

HAVANA, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Contractors in charge of work on new projects at the United States naval base at Guantanamo said today that the 1,800 Cuban workers engaged there went to work as usual today and that there was no sign of a strike as reported in unconfirmed advices reaching here last night.

Last night's reports said the workers had walked out in protest over the death of a fellow worker, allegedly beaten and thrown overboard from a United States Navy launch. Guantanamo advices today said the worker's death was under investigation by the American naval authorities.

WINDSOR APPROVES SEABASE TRANSFER

Signs Bill but Declares New Site May Be Chosen.

NASSAU, BAHAMAS, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The Duke of Windsor signed a bill last night paving the way for the transfer to the United States of land on Mayaguana Island, but told the Legislature that there was some doubt that the area would be chosen ultimately as a defense site.

The Royal Governor said that President Roosevelt told him last week that the President and his naval advisers, through personal investigation, had discovered possible geographical defects in Abraham's Bay, at Mayaguana, as an all-weather seaplane landing.

Mr. Roosevelt, the Duke said, declared that a Bahamian base would definitely be required, but that technical experts would investigate further before making a final selection.

The Duke signed the Mayaguana bill, nevertheless, authorizing the purchase of private lands by the Government.

The Duchess, fatigued by her trip home after undergoing a dental operation in Miami, did not attend the legislative session. The Windsors moved into their permanent residence, renovated Government House, for the first time on their return to Nassau yesterday.

War Communiques

•British

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

Light and heavy units of the Mediterranean fleet have recently been operating in the Adriatic Sea in order to harass the Italian sea communications with Albania.

The commander in chief of the Mediterranean (Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham) has reported that on the night of Dec. 18 a cruiser and destroyer force under the command of Vice-Admiral H. D. Pridham-Wippell swept the Adriatic Sea as far north as Bari and Durazzo. No enemy shipping was encountered.

During the same night a force of battleships under the command of the commander in chief passed through the Straits of Otranto and carried out a heavy bombardment of Valona, the vital supply port of the Italian force in southern Albania. Nearly one hundred tons of high explosive shells were fired.

Throughout these operations no opposition from the enemy was encountered.

Another Admiralty communique:

His majesty's submarine Truant (Lieut. Comdr. H. A. V. Haggard) has been operating with great success against the Italian sea communications off the south of Italy.

During the night of Dec. 13-14 H. M. S. Truant attacked an escorted convoy of heavily laden supply ships off Cape Spartivento. One of the enemy supply ships was sunk and a second possibly sunk.

During the night of Dec. 15-16 H. M. S. Truant torpedoed and sank a large Italian tanker off the Calabrian coast. The tanker was deeply laden and steering south.

A third Admiralty communique:

The communique issued yesterday afternoon gave an account of the naval operations in co-operation with our victorious army in the western desert up to Dec. 15. Reports since received make it possible to carry the account some days further.

Some heavy and light forces of the Mediterranean fleet carried out bombardments in the Bardia area at frequent intervals from the evening of Dec. 13 to noon on Dec. 18. These bombardments played an important part in harassing the enemy and containing the defeated troops in the Bardia area.

On the afternoon of Dec. 16 one heavy bombarding unit was unsuccessfully attacked by enemy torpedo-carrying aircraft. During the whole period our units were repeatedly engaged by the enemy shore batteries. No hits were sustained by any of our forces.

Extensive fires have been burning in Bardia since the afternoon of Dec. 15, and these assumed very large proportions on Dec. 17.

In the early hours of that day one of our light units carried out a very close-range attack on the Port of Bardia, penetrating into the inner harbor under heavy machine-gun fire and sinking three supply ships.

The task of evacuating prisoners from the battle zone has been continuing, and aircraft of the fleet air arm have continued to co-operate successfully with the R. [illegible] F. and with our bombarding forces.

CAIRO, Dec. 20 (UP).—A British headquarters communique:

Around Bardia, there has been no change in the situation.

In Kenya, an enemy party which raided the Village of Boran in the northern frontier district was overtaken by a party of East African troops and two raiders were killed. Seventy camels and equipment were captured, without loss to ourselves.

CAIRO, Dec. 20 (AP).—A Royal Air Force communique:

During the night of Dec. 18-19, Bardia and Derna were both heavily raided by R. A. F. bombers. Great damage was done at Derna. Military buildings were set on fire, violent explosions occurred and direct hits were registered on barracks, police headquarters, motor transport parks and garages. When our last aircraft left the scene, practically the whole of the camp was ablaze.

Similar raids were carried out on enemy troop concentrations and motor transports to the northwest of Bardia. All bombs fell within the target area, but the full extent of the damage could not be observed.

Our fighters continued to maintain their offensive patrols over advanced areas, and in one engagement between Sollum and Gambut one squadron of eight-gun fighter aircraft shot down three S89's and two CR42's. Two enemy aircraft broke formation in difficulty, but were not actually seen to crash.

In southern Albania, the ports of Valona and Krionero were raided. At Valona military barracks, petrol (gasoline) dumps, a motor transport park and building to the north of the town were hit. Columns of smoke were rising from the vicinity of the barracks and petrol dumps when our aircraft left. Direct hits were registered on buildings at Krionero, causing fires. Enemy fighters and anti-aircraft were active.

An enemy aircraft attempted to raid Aden on the night of Dec. 18-19. No damage or casualties were caused.

A raid on Malta the same night was similarly unsuccessful. One of our eight-gun fighter aircraft intercepted and shot down an S79 into the sea in flames, all the crew being lost.

From all operations under review our aircraft returned safely.

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique:

Last night in bad weather the Royal Air Force attacked several targets in the Ruhr and western Germany. These included synthetic oil plants, power stations and a railway junction. In the Duisburg area two large fires were observed, and oil targets near Cologne were set ablaze. At Duesseldorf several large fires were caused and an anti-aircraft position was bombed. At Essen heavy bombs were dropped and four explosions were caused. Targets at Bonn were also attacked from a low level and one very large fire was observed.

From all these operations our aircraft returned safely.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

In the Cyrenaican (Libyan) frontier zone our artillery has shelled successfully enemy artillery and mechanized forces in the Bardia sector.

During machine-gunning and bombing attacks our air formations were assailed by groups of enemy planes. Our formations reacted, undergoing a furious battle. Two Hurricanes were shot down and one of our fighters failed to return.

Alexandria was bombed the night of Dec. 18.

On the Greek front in the sector of the 11th Army sharp fighting still is under way. Enemy troop concentrations in various localities were intensely bombed yesterday. During one of these actions one of our bombing formations was attacked by four Glosters. Three enemy planes were shot down in flames.

Our dive bombers attacked and sank a steamship and bombed and machine-gunned concentrations of motor trucks for supply columns.

During an attempted enemy attack on Valona on Dec. 18, three Blenheim planes were shot down by our fighters.

In East Africa there was activity by patrols and artillery on the Sudanese border. Enemy defense works and supply dumps near Metemma were hit on Dec. 19. Our planes on Dec. 18 dropped explosives and shrapnel bombs on troops at North Eriba and the station and railroad crossing at Haiya Junction (Anglo-Egyptian Sudan), scoring direct hits.

Enemy planes in four successive waves dropped bombs on Brindisi.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (AP).—The German high command communique:

A submarine reports sinking its fortieth enemy merchantman. Thus the commander of this boat, Lieut. Com. Schepke, has sunk a total of 208,975 tons and is the third submarine commander to pass the 200,000-ton mark.

During a torpedo attack by enemy planes on a German patrol boat, the latter opened fire and scored several hits on the enemy planes, while enemy torpedoes missed the target.

The air force yesterday made reconnaissance flights over Great Britain.

In the St. George Channel, south of Carnsore Point, we succeeded in sinking a 1,200-ton ship by a direct hit amidship.

Last night combat planes successfully bombarded war-vital targets in the center of London.

British planes last night caused only slight damage to buildings in western Germany. Two civilians outside a raid shelter were killed.

Greek

ATHENS, Dec. 20 (AP).—Tonight's Greek high command communique:

New positions were occupied after successful engagements. Some soldiers and officers, among whom was one lieutenant colonel, were taken prisoner and much war materiel, including two batteries of artillery, fell into our hands.

A Greek air force communique:

Enemy aviation bombed Lefka (on the Island of Cyprus) today. There were no casualties.

Italian Losses Weaken Hitler In His Plan to Invade England

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The allied victories over Mussolini in the Mediterranean theater should prove a godsend to Britain as defensive preparation for the expected Nazi attempt to invade England.

This threat of invasion is described by British Premier Churchill as his country's supreme danger. There can be no doubt on the accuracy of that characterization.

Britain probably is facing her greatest trial since the war began. German success could mean little less than the death of England and the establishment of Hitler's German-ruled new order.

The Italian debacles in the Egyptian and Greco-Albanian fighting, however, have strengthened Britain's hand. Hitler has been deprived of any worthwhile support from Mussolini. By that same token the British will be able to withdraw warships and war planes from the Mediterranean if necessary.

Hitler Needs All His Strength.

Help which Hitler is reported today to be giving his partner in the Albanian mess can hardly alter the position greatly before the time of the expected invasion. And the more aid the Nazi chief gives his unhappy colleague, the better for Britain, since Der Fuehrer will need every ounce of strength he can muster.

The collapse of the Italian offensive must be a grievous blow to Hitler. Without doube he had been banking that while he was making his effort to hurl an army onto English soil, Il Duce would be tying the British in knots in the Mediterranean area.

Pending the assault on England, the allies will continue their effort to knock Mussolini clean out of the war. Complete defeat of Italy isn't impossible, though the time is short before Hitler will strike, and he may be expected to hurry his drive in order to divert the allies from the chase.

The anglo-allied position now is excellent to crack all Italy's African possessions wide open. The British have the perfect strategic naval and air base at Crete—handed them as a gift through Mussolini's invasion of Greece; the main Fascist army in Africa (that of Marshal Graziani in Libya) already is terribly crippled and is fighting a losing battle; the British blockade has virtually severed water communications between Italy and all her colonies.

Larger Operations Probable.

Indications are that the Allies intend to take full advantage of this situation. British raids into Italy's East African territory quite likely are feelers in preparation for larger operations.

The Fascist forces, cut off from reinforcements and supplies, are in an unenviable position. In this connection a British communique reports: "The Italian commander at El Wak, learning December 15 that an attack was possible, fled by mule cart, causing despondency among those remaining."

An important and dramatic feature of the whole situation is that at last little Emperor Haile Selassie has a rebellion started in his Ethiopian kingdom against his Italian masters. The frail monarch is said to be leading the revolt himself in an effort to retrieve the throne which Mussolini tore from him in 1936.

The British are aiding him and say that the revolution appears to be making progress. Success would rock Mussolini's African empire.

One shudders to think of the revenge which may be exacted on the Italian troops if the wild tribesmen o fthe mountains win. Retribution in Ethiopia can take very terrible forms.

INDIA WAR EFFORT CURBED BY SPLITS

Could Be Largest Reservoir Of Fighting Men In Empire

Independence Plea Complicated By Dispute Of Moslems And Hindus

[By the Associated Press]

Bombay, India, Dec. 19—Despite a superficial appearance of calm, India—largest reservoir of fighting men in the British Empire—is shaken by political disputes which whittle her potentially vast war effort in the hour of Britain's need.

The main conflict between the British Government in India and the natives of all creeds and classes—with the exception of princes—concerns the future status of India, but there are three other current disputes, all bound up with the larger issue.

This revolves presently around an offer made by the British Viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, on behalf of his Government, that India attain "free and equal partnership" in the British Commonwealth at the conclusion of the war and that formation of the Indian state "would be the responsibility of the Indians themselves."

Point Had Split India

A war advisory council, with representatives of the various races and creeds, was envisaged.

But the offer contains a point which has split India and which apparently has made its acceptance impossible to Indians. It is this: "His Majesty's Government could not contemplate the transfer of their present responsibilities for the peace and welfare of India to any system of government whose authority was directly denied by large and powerful elements in India's national life."

The All-India Congress, Nationalist party of Mohandas K. Gandhi, called this clause an open appeal to the Moslems to continue to stand against the Hindus and accused Britain of fostering the policy of "divide and rule." The clause, the Congress said, would give the Moslems, heavily outnumbered by the Hindus, the power of veto over proposals for independent government.

Calls For Independent Status

The Congress reiterated its statement that India cannot function "within the orbit of an imperial power" and must attain the status of a free and independent nation.

The Congress admitted that such status would not prevent close association with other nations. This was taken as an indication that a free India willingly would join the Commonwealth.

The conclusion reached by the Congress party was that British policy in India was opposed to the principle of democracy and ran counter to the best interests of India.

A Sikh member of the Congress declared that if Britain would offer India independence, a "million Sikhs" would form an army to fight for her.

Favors Separate States

The powerful Moslem League, chief minority faction, concluded that the offer had, on the whole, met the league's demands for clear assurance that no constitution would be adopted without its consent and approval.

But the league also indicated it was not ready to drop its proposals for establishing separate Moslem and Hindu states.

These reactions indicated there would be no immediate acceptance of the offer, although behind the political demands of the Congress party runs the obvious unwillingness to embarrass Britain in the midst of a desperate war.

Three Political Struggles

Discussion of the British offer leads directly to the three smaller but no less important struggles in Indian politics. They are:

1. Between Gandhi and his closest followers and the British Government over Gandhi's right to preach pacificism in India.
2. Between the Moslem League and the Congress over independence. The league demands a separate Moslem state—an Indian "Ulster." The Congress wants an independent, united India without a Moslem veto.
3. Between Gandhi and a section of the Congress party which calls the Mahatma's policy weak, and declares independence, not freedom to preach anti-war views, is the real issue.

The Mahatma's argument to Lord Linlithgow was that if the British Government was fighting for freedom and democracy, it could not logically or morally prevent its subjects under the British crown from saying what they wished.

Liberals Seek Compromise

Thus India's major forces, in the second winter of war, are still divided. Yet the agency for union may be at hand in a growing body of liberal Indian opinion which subscribes to neither Congress nor the Moslem league.

Headed by men like Sir Tej Bahadar Spru, Hirdayanath Kunzru and Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, three prominent members of the Indian National Liberal Federation, this body argues that the most important thing is to win he war.

It is trying to bridge the gulf between Congress and the Moslem League, if only temporarily, in order to secure India's fuller cooperation with the war effort. It points out that if Britain is defeaed, India's dream of independence is shattered.

This group trusts India's own strength, industrial and political, together with favorable world opinion, especially American, to obtain what India demands when the war is over.

BRITAIN PINS HOPE ON INDIAN LEADERS

Government Waits For Them To Settle Differences Over Proposals Last August

Opposing Views Are Expressed By Britons On Handling Of Situation

The British Government hopes for a compromise between conflicting groups in India which would permit a greater war effort by that teeming land. This second of two articles gives the differing British views on handling of the Indian situation.

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Dec. 20—The British Government, pinning its faith in the ability of Indian leaders to settle differences, is waiting patiently for India to adopt proposals made August 8, 1940, for the future Indian state and for fuller native participation in the war effort.

The Government's patience, it might be noted, far exceeds that of the man in the street who, living in constant fear of being blown to bits, doesn't give a fig for India's freedom. Even labor, which once brooded over its Indian brethren, pays little attention to the present situation.

The Government offers India a "free and equal partnership" in the British Commonwealth at the end of the war, but would leave formation of the Indian state to the Indians themselves—the unreconciled Hindus and Moslems.

Between Two Extreme Views

The policy of the Government steers between two extremist views on India.

On one hand are reactionaries, military, political and industrial leaders, who advocate a "strong hand" in India. This would mean a larger garrison than at present, rigid censorship and probably conscription of labor for war industries.

Liberal Britain, speaking through the New Statesman and Nation, bewails the present state of affairs and presents a four-point plan to replace the August, 1940, proposals which it calls "sincere but clumsy."

This weekly demands the release of "many thousands" imprisoned in India because the police viewed them with "suspicion or disapproval."

The prisoners, it says, include Pandit Jawaharalal Nehru, former president of the nationalist party, the All-India Congress, and six Prime Ministers of provincial governments, including another former head of the Congress, C. R. Rajagopalachari, who for a time replaced Mohandas K. Gandhi as leader of the Congress party.

Authority Challenged

The liberal organ admits the prisoners "challenged authority by delivering anti-war speeches" but declares "we shall soon have in prison cells all the men who ruled over eight of the eleven provinces of India and it may be assumed that in opposing us today they still have behind them the electorate which gave them a majority three years ago."

Three other steps of the liberal weekly's "Indian platform" follow:

1. Accept the offer of moderate leaders Sir Tej Bahadar Sapru and M. R. Jayakar to mediate between the Hindus and Moslems, admitting representatives of the less advanced Moslem organizations to balance Mohammed Ali Jinnah's Moslem League, which wants a separate Moslem state, and selecting new representatives with a fresh viewpoint from the Congress Party.
2. Instruct the Viceroy of India to reorganize collective responsibility of Indian members of an enlarged executive council, making it in effect a cabinet responsible to the legislative assembly.
3. Embody a pledge to grant Indians the right to determine their own constitution immediately after the war, in Parliamentary resolutions. The resolutions should stipulate that all Indian creeds are entitled to equal rights, but must not arm the minority with the right of veto.

Should Have Dominion Rights

In the meantime, the weekly holds, India through a national government should enjoy all rights and dignities of a dominion, leaving to the future the elaboration of a constitution.

There are almost as many solutions to the Indian problem offered in Britain as in India. The Government, rebuffed by the Indians' failure to agree, nevertheless is laboring hard for a vital preliminary agreement between Indian politicos.

L. S. Amery, Secretary for India, is convinced "the final word has not yet been said" on Britain's offer and that there is a sufficient number of people in India "endowed with the spirit of patience, tolerance and compromise" to create "what both countries desire—a new constitution for India."

It is evident that Jinnah's plan for a separate Moslem state now meets with little favor at the India office.

Viceroy's Offer Still Open

"Britain has given India a strong administration and a just legal system," Amery said recently. "Beginnings of unity thus created must be maintained, for it would be disastrous if there were any relapse toward an India of separate entities and contending states. The Viceroy's offer still is open."

Sapru and other moderates continue to urge reconstruction of the central Indian Government on the understanding its members remain responsible to the Crown throughout the war. They advocate an Indian in charge of national defense, revival of popular Government in the provinces and creation of a separate war board.

Desires One Which Will Explode On Striking Ship's Wing

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 20—The army was reported authoritatively today to be making progress in efforts to perfect shells for small warplane cannon sensitive enough to explode on striking the wing of an enemy plane, but safe to handle.

Experiments to perfect 20-millimeter and 37-millimeter shells have been intensified, ordnance experts said, since German fighting planes won triumphs with such weapons in the European war.

Follow Germany's Lead

Both the United States and Great Britain have followed the Nazi's lead in reenforcing the armament of newer fighting planes. Older models were equipped only with machine guns.

Tests Being Made

War Department officials said all these weapons were included with others in tests which are being carried on virtually continuously, but withheld details.

The War Department received a $14,000,000 appropriation last summer for two large plants to be devoted exclusively to the manufacture of aircraft cannon. Congress was told then the army had no 20-millimeter guns such as used by the Nazi Luftwaffe, but had conducted extensive tests with 37-millimeter aircraft guns.

Speed Creates Difficulties

The latter, it has been reported, are being installed as tail guns of the newest large bombers being manufactured for the United States and Great Britain.

Experts said the great speed of modern warplanes created the difficulties in the way of a shell timed by by a mechanical fuse mechanism to explode at a fixed distance, rather than on contact. Planes heading toward each other at 400 miles an hour speeds are nearing each other at the rate of 800 miles an hour, it was noted.

An estimated $20,000,000 worth of initial educational orders, decided upon by the War Department and Defense Commission, was expected to familiarize automobile plant managers with the manufacture of the intricate parts they will be called upon to supply.

As presently visualized, motor car plants will be geared to help produce annually some 3,600 two and four motor bombers, costing at current prices nearly $1,000,000,000.

Mass orders must await perfection of production methods which will have to be worked out largely without guiding precedent. Another prerequisite is assurance of an adequate supply of motors.

Possibly fifteen months, by official estimates, will be required to put into full operation the plan to employ the automobile industry to supplement the conventional aircraft factories in expanding the output of planes for the United States and Great Britain.

Current negotiations with the Buick and Studebaker companies for the manufacture of engines were said to be a part of the scheme to assure a future aerial striking force for this country and presumably Great Britain as well.

Four large assembly plants have been projected, west of the Mississippi, to be operated by experienced aircraft manufacturers.

Schedules call for a monthly output of 100 two-motor bombers in each of two plants, and fifty four-motor craft each in the others.

Technical studies enforced scaling down the original proposal advanced in October by William S. Knudsen, defense commission production chief, for the automobile industry to help produce 12,000 bombers a year.

Not more than 40 per cent of the man hours of work involved in the construction of an average plane of the type can be undertaken in motor car plants, experts decided.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE SITUATION, TO THE THINKING OF BRITONS AND INDIANS, IS THAT A RECONCILED INDIA WOULD ENABLE THE WAR OFFICE TO BRING FRESH DIVISIONS OF BRITISH AND INDIAN TROOPS INTO AFRICA TO FIGHT ITALY.

RAJAGOPALACHARI HAS DECLARED THAT IF BRITAIN GRANTS INDIA A "NATIONAL GOVERNMENT," INDIA "WILL MAKE GOOD TO BRITAIN WHAT SHE LOST BY THE DEFECTION OF FRANCE."

PROGRESS ON PLANE SHELLS REPORTED

Army Seeks Sensitive Ammunition That Also Is Safe To Handle

Shells so sensitive they explode on striking paper already have been developed, but they have the disadvantage of being dangerous to handle. Great difficulties, experts said, complicated perfection of aircraft ammunition which could be exploded by fuses at set distances.

The army's experiments with aircraft weapons of this caliber has accompanied other tests with larger guns, including a 75 millimeter artillery piece such as used by ground troops. These have been fired successfully from large bombers.

Congressional Inquiry On Defense Lag Urged

Dirksen Charges Confusion Is Rampant in Washington

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP).—Representative Everett M. Dirksen, Republican, of Illinois, said in a sharply-worded statement today that the new Congress should select a joint Senate-House committee to investigate the national "defense lag" and "see what's wrong."

Asserting that the "bogging down and utter confusion" needed strong language and stronger action, Mr. Dirksen, House Appropriations Committeeman, said:

"If there be any doubt about the confusion, bewilderment, chaos, misdirection, discordance, inefficaciousness and mysticism which now besets this program one need only visit the defense establishments in Washington and get an indelible picture of rampant confusion."

IMPORT CONTROL BY U. S. STUDIED

Col. Maxwell Hints at New Federal Action.

JAPAN TRADE WOULD BE HIT

Some Experts Regard Problem of Regulation as Major One.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The possibiilty of import control by the United States—a hitherto unlooked for step in foreign trade regulation — aroused considerable speculation today.

The first guarded hint that any such idea was under consideration came from Col. Rusell L. Maxwell, administrator of export control, during a review of the work done by his six-months old agency in preventing vital defense materials from being shipped out of the country.

"Many students of the situation, experts in their fie lds, have pointed out," he said, "that the control of imports as well as exports, is a major problem requiring early solution."

This bare one-sentence reference to the subject occurred at the end of the 2,000-word progress report he delivered last night. There was no amplification and, with one exception, available Government officials professed lack of knowledge on any plans to impose import control.

Subject Is Being Studied.

One informant, however, said that the matter was receiving serious study and that, while action should not be considered imminent, something might be done in the future.

He was asked what purpose would be served by such a move, inasmuch as the United States, unlike warring nations today, was not under pressure to conserve dollar exchange, or to discourage the purchase of so-called luxury goods from other nations.

The reply was that imposition of an import control system would provide the United States with another economic weapon which could be employed if events dictated.

This raised the point whether it was not unlikely that such a sanction would be invoked against members of the British Commonwealth, Pan-American nations, or Dutch colonial possessions—countries which now supply the bulk of American imports.

The official said that was unlikely under the present circumstances, but added that the list mentioned was not all-inclusive.

May Hit Japanese Silk.

A subsequent check of trade records indicated that among major import items was close to $100,000,000 worth of raw silk annually from Japan. These shipments have been an important source of foreign exchange for the Tokio Government whose financial reserves have been depleted by the long drain of the China war.

Col. Maxwell, in his review last night, reported that the export control administration since mid-summer had prevented the shipment to foreign countries of more than $112,000,000 worth of vital defense materials.

Naturalization as Shield For Nazis Is Investigated

Names of New Citizens Sought on Bund Membership List

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP).—Attorney General Robert H. Jackson ordered an investigation today to determine whether the naturalization process might have been used to bolster the German-American Bund membership.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service was told to examine an alleged Bund membership list seized yesterday by Chicago police, to determine whether it contained names of newly enrolled citizens.

Appearance in the Bund of persons only recently naturalized, Justice Department officials said, would bring an exhaustive study to determine whether they might have become citizens primarily to gain eligibility for the Bund, which accepts only citizens, and to shield their true reason for being in this country.

If that should be established, it was explained, steps might be taken to revoke citizenship on the ground that the oath of allegiance was taken insincerely or with mental reservation.

The Chicago records were taken in connection with evidence being gathered for a delinquent-tax suit against the Bund. An investigator for the State's Attorney's office said the records indicated 1,500 to 2,000 Bund members were in the United States Army, Navy, Air Force or Marines.

Two days ago Mr. Jackson refused to extend the visitor's permit of the Princess Hohenlohe of Hungary, who was said to have been closely associated with prominent Nazi sympathizers since she came here from England a year ago. On the same day, he affirmed the denial of a similar extension for Karl Scheuring, described as "an avowed Nazi," who is a student at the University of Denver.

President Roosevelt described as very interesting news stories about the seizure of a ledger of the Bund. He made the remark in a press conference discussion, but said the matter had not been brought to his attention otherwise.

No Plea for Sailing Permit

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20 (AP).—If Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe intends to leave this country by tomorrow night, she apparently is delaying essential arrangements until the last minute.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue said she had not applied for a sailing permit—necessary if she is to leave on the Asama Maru tomorrow noon—and the Mexican Consulate said there had been no application for a visa to permit her to enter Mexico by plane or car. The possibility remained, however, that she might depart from some other port, perhaps from the east coast to Portugal.

"Stop Hitler" Slogan Is Urged For America

New York, Dec. 20 (AP)—Dr. William Jay Schieffelin, president of the Citizens' Union of the City of New York, said tonight the United States should "disregard that slogan 'short of war,'" and declared that "we must stop Hitler, short of nothing."

Schieffelin, a former colonel in the Fifteenth New York Infantry, told a massmeeting of "France Forever" that the slogan was "put into political platforms to placate isolationists and pacifists."

Emphasizing that he spoke "only for myself," Schieffelin declared that "short of war" was "a cowardly slogan, encouraging Hitler and Japan, saying we will not stand up like men and fight even if our national safety and our most cherished beliefs are threatened."

"We in the United States," he said, "are partly responsible for this war; we were guilty of national irresponsibility, we chose isolation; we kept aloof from the League of Nations and the World Court. We have left undone the things we ought to have done."

Juliana In New York For Three-Day Visit

"Very Happy To Be Here," She Asserts—Was Guest Of President And Mrs. Roosevelt

New York, Dec. 20 (AP)—Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands arrived today for a three-day stay in New York saying, "I am very happy to be here. I have always wished to come."

She came by special railroad car from Washington after a visit with President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. An automobile sped her to the Waldorf-Astoria.

She will spend Christmas with her two small children in Ottawa, where they will have a small tree and simple presents, she said.

Expel All Nazi Officials, Says Son Of Ex-German Aide

Young Hanfstaengl, Harvard Student, Urges America To Wake Up To Urgency Of Times

[By the Associated Press]

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 20—Egon L. F. Hanfstaengl, son of Ernest F. S. (Putzi) Hanfstaengl, who once was a friend of Adolf Hitler, declared today that America should "wake up to the urgency of the times" and expel all Nazi officials from this country.

Young Hanfstaengl, who spent several years in German youth camps, told the Foreign Relations Club of Harvard that he believed the "fifth column" was a "real menace in the United States."

"It is time they (Americans) woke up to the urgency of the times," declared the young Harvard student, whose father, a former high Nazi official, is now in a Canadian concentration camp.

"I do not think that the explosions in American powder plants are mere coincidences," he added.

"Certainly," he asserted, "These Bund movements all over the country and the over-enlarged consular staffs are not accidents. It has been suggested that America should expel all Nazi officials in this country. I see no reason why they should not be expelled and every reason why they should be kicked out."

GET SAILING ORDERS

U. S. Soldiers Are Going to Newfoundland Soon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—A detachment of United States soldiers had orders today to sail for Newfoundland early in January to garrison the nation's newly acquired North Atlantic outpost.

Since barracks ashore are incomplete, the men will have to live for awhile on the ship that carrie them north.

The transport vessel, the U. S. S Edmund B. Alexander, presumably will be anchored near St. Johns, the capital of Newfoundland. A United States naval and air base is to be constructed near that city, with other facilities to be established near little Placentia harbor, farthur south.

The War Department announced that the army detachment would be commanded by Col. M. D. Welty, an infantry officer.

Tunney Commissioned Lieutenant Commander In U. S. Naval Reserve

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Gene Tunney, the former heavyweight boxing champion who has been a Marine Corps private, lecturer on Shakespeare at Yale, official of a bank, and chairman of the board of American Distilling Company, is now an officer of the navy.

In a brief ceremony today, Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz administered the oath to defend the Constitution against enemies "foreign and domestic," and Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, presented the commission which made the ex-champion Lieut. Com. James Joseph Tunney, United States Naval Reserve.

He was informed that he would be called to active duty immediately as physical director and coordinator of physical education at the navy's aviation training stations at Jacksonville and Pensacola, Fla., and Corpus Christi, Texas. Tunney was welcomed into the navy by Knox as an "old, old, friend."

NEW RAIDER SCARE

Greek Ship Cancels S O S Off Brazilian Coast.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The American freighter Flying Fish reported today that she had picked up a signal cancelling an S O S from the Greek freighter Potaro.

The cancellation apparently was flashed within an hour after the distress call was sent off the Brazilian coast. In the meantime, the Potaro had not been heard from.

[In Buenos Aires, belief had been expressed that the S O S might mean that a German raider was operating again in the South Atlantic. Lloyds registry of shipping lists no Greek freighter Potaro, but shows a new one of 5,390 tons of British registry.]

The S O S was unexplained.

NAZIS THREATEN SPLIT WITH U. S. ON WAR AID

Warn Yielding of 'Enemy' Ships Here Would Be Act of Hostility --Assail 'Moral Aggression'

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

DEC 22 1940

Berlin, Dec. 21 (A.P.)—The question of continued peaceable relations between Germany and the United States hangs in the balance as the German Government awaits reaction to the Cross shipping proposal, an official Foreign Office Spokesman intimated today in a solemn press conference.

(Ronald H. Cross, British Minister of Shipping, said yesterday in London that the assignment of "a certain number of enemy ships in the United States" and addition of United States ships to the British service "are the only ways I can see for replenishments of any consequence.")

"The entire attention of the German Government is centered upon the American reaction to the Cross proposal," the spokesman asserted.

"That proposal is nothing other than inciting America to commit a warlike act," he said. "I speak with tremendous earnestness in my capacity as your official informant and spokesman."

"Our interest is extraordinary," he continued, "because in an increasing manner one nation (meaning Germany) has shown restraint to the point of self-effacement, while on the other side there has been a systematic policy of pin-pricks, challenges, humiliations and even moral aggression.

"The Reich's government is, therefore, centering its entire attention upon this problem."

The conference was one of the most serious ever held by the spokesman.

(In Washington, Secretary Hull declined to comment on statements made in Berlin to the effect that Germany would consider it an unfriendly act if the United States requisitioned foreign flag ships now in American ports and sold them to the British Government. Asked if he would give the views of the American Government on the question, he replied in the negative.)

Cites England's 'Death Struggle'

Cross was speaking, he said, at the moment when "Great Britain is in a death struggle."

The German Government for some time has become accustomed to formulations by American officialdom which "are guided by certain rabulistic characteristics," the spokesman said.

[Webster defines rabulistic as "characterized by railing." The German word "rabulisterei" means pettifogging, and a "rabulist" is a pettifogging lawyer.]

"Demands and interpretations are launched as though actions contemplated did not fall within the scope of practices defined by international law."

The English-American discussions over the United States assistance to Great Britain have become increasingly interesting, the German spokesman added, because it is unbearable for Germany to let things drift further.

The importance of the Wilhelmstrasse spokesman's utterances may be gauged by the fact that there are several rumors in press circles that Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop himself was originally intended to come before the foreign press to give the German reaction to the Cross proposal.

REICH LABELS U. S. POLICY "PINPRICK"

Air Is Tense As Nazis Warn Of Any "Warlike" Move Against Axis Ships Here

Removal Of 3 Members Of Paris Embassy Staff Is Asked—Hull To Comply

DEC 22 1940

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Dec. 21—An official spokesman of the German Foreign Office charged today that Britain's Minister of Shipping was "inciting America to commit a warlike act" against the Axis and, in carefully chosen words, added that the United States' reaction "is being awaited by Germany with extraordinary interest."

The occasion for this solemn and emotional statement was a press conference weighted with gravity; the reason, an interview given the American press in London yesterday by Ronald Cross, the British Shipping Minister, who suggested assignment to the British of the German and Italian ships which are tied up in United States harbors.

Attention Centered On U. S.

The German spokesman, in an aside, added:

"The Reichs government is therefore centering its entire attention upon this (United States) reaction."

[Informed but unofficial political sources in Rome said delivery of Axis ships to Britain by the United States would be "unfriendly" and "unneutral" and expressed confidence it would not happen.]

Nearly coinciding with the Foreign Office conference, it was announced officially that the German Government has asked the United States State Department to recall three members of the staff of the United States Embassy in Paris on charges that they helped a British officer to escape.

Request Acceded To

These three are:

MRS. ELIZABETH DEEGAN, formerly of Asheville, N. C., a receptionist who recently was detained for several days by German military occupation authorities in Paris.

CECIL M. P. CROSS, first secretary and consul at the embassy.

LEIGH W. HUNT, a second secretary and consul.

The State Department acceded to the request.

The German announcement said that Mrs. Deegan had supported the unidentified British officer and helped him flee the country; that the two embassy officials were involved in this and that, furthermore, Cross concealed a British secret agent in the embassy for months.

This man, it was stated, later was arrested outside the building and confessed to espionage.

Charges "Pinprick" Policy

At the press conference the Foreign Office spokesman charged that United States foreign policy was one of "pinpricks, injury, challenge and moral aggression" against Germany.

On the other hand, he said, the Reich has "exercised restraint to the point of self-effacement" in its dealings with Washington.

In other words, the British Minister of Shipping succeeded in breaking down Wilhelmstrasse reticence and restraint and opened the lips of officials.

Sought Official Opinion

Ever since the reelection of President Roosevelt, foreign correspondents have been soliciting expressions of official opinion on various phases of American foreign policy, as it affects the Reich.

But the Government spokesman, until today, had declined to comment. Even the President's mention of ways for further aiding Britain has drawn only newspaper and unofficial comments.

Today one simple question provoked a dramatic situation.

Voice Vibrant With Emotion

To the question, "Any comment on the British Minister Cross's statement?" one of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's closest collaborators replied in a voice vibrant with emotion, its pitch raised progressively and his voice increasing in volume as he reached the charge of American "pinprick" policy.

In fact, this unusual statement of policy, coming at this time, seemed so fraught with potentialities that this correspondent requested, as an unusual favor, to be permitted to keep a copy of the official stenographic transcript.

Spokesman's Statement

This speaks for itself. It reads as follows:

"The British Blockade Minister, according to reports received here, said among other things: 'Possibly the United States can spare some ships for us of those used for normal existing services. Also a certain number of enemy ships are lying at anchor in the United States and, of course, I am eager for these.

" 'These constitute the only possibility of a reasonably effective replenishment of our tonnage so far as I can see.'

[The Associated Press report of the Cross interview quoted him as saying: "I naturally cast a covetous eye on those vessels."]

"This statement by Cross to American press representatives means nothing other than an incitement to America to commit a warlike act which, naturally, can also be called merely 'support of England.'

"Extremely Curious"

"We are extremely curious to know how America will reply to this brazen request for a warlike action.

"We have got used in recent times to the fact that certain circles in the United States, in formulating action that from the viewpoint of international law can have but one meaning, are being guided by rabulistic reasoning, according to which in formulating their actions they try to give a slant to them which is calculated to inculcate the impression that they are a measure solely of a kind that is beyond criticism from the viewpoint of international law.

[Webster defines "rabulistic" as "characterized by railing." The German word "rabulisterei" means pettifogging, and a "rabulist" is a pettifogging lawyer.]

"It will be extraordinarily interesting to us to observe the reaction on the part of the United States to this unmistakable demand by the English Blockade Minister.

"Interest Is Increasing"

"The argument which is in progress between England and America concerning support on the part of the United States for an England that is breaking down more and more constantly evokes interest in an increasing manner.

"Our interest is increasing because it is not tenable in the long run that in a discussion—be it in only the press—concerning questions which are of vital significance for political relations between two nations, that one nation continually observe a restraint onto self-effacement while the other permits a policy from morn until night of pinpricks, injury, insult, challenge and moral aggression.

Von Ribbentrop Absent

"I say with all the earnestness that is proper before this group, as your informer, that this demand by the English Minister draws our attention to the manner by which England is to be supported in its death struggle."

The spokesman also drew attention to the Paris embassy case, but declined any comment beyond that in the official statement distributed by DNB.

The seriousness which official Germany attached to the conference may be gauged by advance reports that von Ribbentrop himself considered appearing before it. He did not appear, however.

U. S. Views Of Warning

DEC 22 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 21—Secretary of State Cordell Hull declined today to comment on statements made in Berlin to the effect that Germany would consider it an unfriendly act if the United States requisitioned foreign-flag ships now in American ports and sold them to the British Government.

The secretary was asked at his press conference if he would give this Government's views of the question and replied in the negative.

Capper Opposes Seizures

Senator Arthur Capper (Rep., Kan.), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he would not favor American seizure of Danish, German or other vessels now anchored in American harbors.

"That would be going too far," he asserted, adding:

"Legislation would be necessary before any such step could be taken, and I do not believe Congress would enact it."

Senator Clyde M. Reed (Rep., Kan.): "Before we do anything like that (seize ships), I would want to examine it carefully. I want to examine every step we take to be sure that it won't lead us into war."

Senator William H. King (Dem., Utah): "I doubt whether we ought to seize those ships in the present state of our relations with Germany. I would rather build ships here as rapidly as possible and lease them to Great Britain. I don't wan't to take any course that would give a semi-excuse to Germany to declare a state of war against us."

CONGRESSMEN AGAINST PLAN TO SEIZE SHIPS

Capper, Adams, Bulow and Fish Oppose Proposal to Give Vessels to Britain

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP).—Congressional reaction to the idea that Axis ships in American ports be turned over to Great Britain indicated today that any formal proposal of that nature would encounter determined opposition.

Ronald H. Cross, British Minister of Shipping, advanced the suggestion yesterday in London, asserting he saw no hope of immediate replenishments to the British merchant marine except by action of this nature or addition of United States ships to the British service.

United States officials are known to be studying the possibility of acquiring some of the 140 foreign flag vessels tied up in American ports, although no definite announcement has been made. Among such vessels are two German and 27 Italian.

PLAN CRITICIZED.

At the Capitol, many immediately criticized Cross' proposal, which was denounced in Berlin as "inciting America to commit a warlike act."

Senator Capper (R., Kans.), said "legislation would be necessary before any such step could be taken, and I do not believe Congress would enact it."

Senator Adams (D., Colo.), said "we haven't any right to take foreign ships in time of peace for our own or anybody else's use. I don't think we ought to become pirates and confiscate ships of friendly nations."

STEP NEARER WAR.

Senator Bulow (D., S. D.), said "at first blush I think it would lead us two steps near war instead of one."

Representative Fish (R., N. Y.) said he thought Congress woud be unwilling "to destroy the last vestiges of international law by seizing either German or Italian vessels in the United States and selling them to a belligerent nation while we are at peace."

"The Norwegian, Danish, Dutch and Belgian merchant ships," he added in a statement, "come under a different category, and we might be able to buy these ships and release them to the British."

Rome Sees U. S. Balking

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 21—Political circles expressed confidence today that the United States would refrain from delivering German or Italian merchant ships to Great Britain, as suggested by British Minister of Shipping Ronald H. Cross, and said such action would be "unfriendly" toward the Axis powers and "unneutral."

The Cross suggestion caused "no real surprise" in Italy, it was said, "because it is too well known that Great Britain is doing everything possible to involve the United States in the war."

"We feel confident the United States will make no such gesture as proposed by Cross," one high Fascist said. Official comment was not available.

Italian newspapers headlined the Cross statements on British shipping needs as "a desperate appeal to the United States" which showed that the British were worried.

CALLS ROOSEVELT PLAN CAPITALISTIC

DEC 22 1940

Soviet Paper Comments on British Aid Idea.

MOSCOW, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The Soviet Army newspaper Red Star said today that President Roosevelt's new plan to aid Great Britain was designed to guarantee the interests of American capitalism.

"Under the banner of 'Help England,' " the paper said, "the White House has designed a whole system of combined measures directed at consolidating the position of the United States in the struggle of the imperialistic Powers for a share of the world."

The article called the present help to England substantially different from the measures in the first war in 1914-1918, when, it said, the principal aim was credit, which permitted a division of profits between American and British business men.

"Now Roosevelt wants the whole income from production of war materials to remain in the hands of American capital," the Red Star continued.

"England is to receive arms she so badly needs on the lease basis. The United States Government guarantees English orders by American firms, freeing American capitalists of any risk. Under these conditions the new Roosevelt plan promises tremendous profits to American capitalists.

"It may be expected that so favorable a plan for American manufacturers and financiers will hardly cause strong opposition in Congress."

Reich Demands U. S. Recall 3 Embassy Aides

Holds Woman, 2 Men Helped in Escape Of British Officer

Berlin, Dec. 21 (AP)—The German Government requested the State Department in Washington today to recall Cecil M. P. Cross and Leigh W. Hunt, secretaries in the United States Embassy in Paris, and Mrs. Elizabeth Deegan, embassy employe, on the ground they helped an unnamed British officer who escaped.

An official announcement stated that the United States Government had heeded the German request and had informed the Reichs Government that it had started investigations.

[In Washington, Secretary of State Hull said Germany had a perfect right to request the withdrawal of three members of the American Embassy in Paris and that they will be withdrawn, the United Press reported.]

Say 2 Others Were Involved

The announcement said Mrs. Deegan supported the English officer in an effort to enable him to flee. German authorities' investigations in Paris disclosed that Cross and Hunt also were involved, the announcement asserted.

Furthermore, Cross was charged with having hidden for months in the Embassy building an unnamed English citizen in the employ of the Secret Service. The agent finally was arrested outside the building, the announcement declared, and confessed espionage against Germany while in the Embassy hideout.

charge of conniving to help British officers escape. She was a receptionist at the Paris Embassy. The United States protested. She was released Dec. 14.

Cross, appointed to the Consular service from Rhode Island, was assigned to his post in Paris as a first secretary and Consul Feb. 14, 1940.

Hunt, a second secretary and Consul, was assigned to Paris Dec. 29, 1939. He was appointed from the District of Columbia.

U. S. Will Transfer Three

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP).—The State Department, officials said tonight, will transfer to Lisbon, Portugal, the three members of the American Embassy staff in Paris charged by Germany with assisting a British officer to escape from German-occupied France.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull emphasized that withdrawal of the three staff members—Cross, Hunt and Mrs. Leegan—from Paris in compliance with the German request in no way implied admission of guilt.

On the contrary, Secretary Hull said, a preliminary examination of the facts available disclosed the three were not implicated in any wrongful act, and a detailed investigation would be made. Any government had the right, Mr. Hull said, to request the withdrawal of officials of another government without submitting any reason for the demand.

Cross, Hunt and Mrs. Deegan are expected to be assigned temporarily to Lisbon, with the possibility they will later be sent to other posts abroad or recalled to Washington. Mrs. Deegan was a receptionist at the embassy, and since the American Embassy looks after British interests in France, her duties made it necessary for her to come in contact with all British subjects who came to the embassy.

Hitler's Grapevine

DEC 22 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 21—In eight days Adolf Hitler can explain to his people such a thing as his present reasons for being nice to Russia—and he can smell the first smoke of unrest or serious discontent in a matter of hours.

It is all a matter of party organization, worked out to the last detail. In the breadth of its scope it has the American style of sentiment poll backed to the wall.

For instance, it was necessary to help the German people understand why it was important to have Russia as an ally or at least a friend who would not strike in the back. It seems that the pact came first, then the people were told why it was necessary.

The full public explanation was not given to the people through newspapers. Instead, it was passed down through the chain of party leadership to the final row of block leaders. It was their job to explain it to party members and non-party members living in their blocks.

How System Works

The explanation seemed to have been accepted, even though it was a sharp change of front for a régime which had been hammering against the Communists.

Here is how the system works:

Germany is divided into forty districts. Each district is divided into "circles," each of which in turn is divided into towns. The towns, of course, are the towns or cities with the "circle." The towns are divided into "cells," and these are subdivided into city blocks.

Over each district, circle, town, cell and block is a leader responsible for reporting or "informing" the territory under his jurisdiction.

If the job is to "inform" the public in a quiet way why the once-hated Russians must be considered respected colleagues, for instance, the district leaders are called to Berlin, all forty of them.

There they hear talks by party leaders, historians and military men. They are given a complete fill-in of what the German leadership wants them to take back to their subordinates.

Doled Out To Public

They fly back and call meetings of circle leaders, who in turn get the official explanation. Thus it is passed on down to the block leaders through a series of conferences. To the block leaders falls the job of doling out the information to the public.

Often enough the explanations never reach the papers. The public knows the Führer's reasons for an action taken—or in some instances to be taken, without its ever having been made a "public" matter. The process explains some of the countless "rumors" forever coming to the ears of foreigners.

In turn, the system permits the Führer to sample the public morale at any time, and, more particularly, to learn how it will accept some proposed new decree. It has been tried repeatedly in the cases of tax matters.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that the Führer lodges in the hands of another man a certain amount of veto power over decrees. That is Rudolf Hess, head of the party and stand-in for the Führer in party matters.

Detecting Discontent

Suppose a new tax is proposed, of doubtful popularity. The district leaders may be called to Berlin to get an earful of it, or they may simply get a letter explaining what it is. Then they are asked to report how the public will accept it.

The block leaders start knocking at doors to discuss taxes with the householders to get their sentiment. When he gets it, he passes it up to his cell chief, who, in turn, sets it along the channel to Hess.

If the reports indicate there will be a heap of discontent, he is empowered to veto the decree—unless the Führer holds the thing to be one of the irremovable necessities.

One notable rearrangement of taxes recently abolishes the tax on money gained from overtime work. There had been complaints from workmen that so much of the money they earned by overtime labor was taken by taxes that they gained little from it.

LIVERPOOL PUT UNDER WORST ATTACK SO FAR

Dead and Injured Still Being Found in Wreckage of Large Shelter.

OTHER PARTS OF BRITAIN HIT

London Is Raided Off and On—Bombs Fall in Two Places in Ireland.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Wave after wave of German raiders bombed Liverpool throughout the night in the heaviest attack of the war on this heart of British overseas commerce.

German reconnaissance planes flew over the Merseyside district after daybreak to survey the damage, but rescue workers digging through wreckage and rubble for victims hardly spared the scouting planes overhead a glance.

The raid started so early last night that crowds of Christmas shoppers were caught in the streets. They filled shelters and basements in the business district and were forced to remain there throughout the night.

Fire Truck Wrecked.

A greater use of incendiary bombs than in any previous raid on Liverpool caused many fires, lighted targets, and guided wave after wave of bombers over the industrial areas.

There were relatively few casualties, however, and transport facilities were operating almost normally today.

During the height of the raid a fire truck ran into a bomb crater in a downtown street, injuring two firemen.

Explosive and fire bombs started many fires as the raiders swept down in a concentrated attack despite an intense anti-aircraft barrage.

A large hotel was damaged and a famous Church was hit. One large shelter was hit by a heavy bomb and just before noon rescue parties were still bringing out the dead and injured. A number of firemen were killed and injured.

Bombs Fall on London.

LONDON, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—London was bombed intermittently from dusk until 3:30 A. M. today when the all clear sounded.

During the daylight hours today isolated visits of German planes were recorded at a few points. London had a brief alert with the appearance of a single German plane, pursued by British fighters; aerial scouts flew over Liverpool and incendiary bombs were dropped in East Anglia.

The customary nightly air raid alarm was sounded in London early tonight, about the time that the Air and Home Security Ministries announced that a small number of casualties had occurred when bombs struck a London apartment house this afternoon. Two German planes were reported destroyed during the day.

DEC 22 1940

Four Injured in Ireland.

DUBLIN, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Three persons were injured and several houses were damaged last night when two bombs dropped by an unidentified air raider fell in Dun Laoghaire (Kingstown), only seven miles from brilliantly-lighted Dublin, the capital city of neutral Eire.

Two more bombs were dropped about thirty minutes later in the rural district of County Monaghan, which is near the frontier of belligerent Northern Ireland, injuring a farmer and damaging two farm houses.

The Government Information Bureau gave brief details of the incidents, but there was no official indication whether a protest would be made.

Both high explosive and incendiary bombs have fallen in Eire previously, on one occasion killing three girls. The German Government apologized in each instance.

DEATH SILENCES CAROLS AS GERMAN AIR RAIDERS BOMB LONDON TENEMENT

Christmas Party Festivity Suddenly Hushed By "An Awful Woosh"

Victims' Bodies Lie Amid Rubble Of Broken Toys And Torn Tinsel

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21—An undetermined number of Londoners who had been holding parties to celebrate the coming of Christmas were killed tonight in a tenement house smashed by a German bomb.

In the street outside lay bits of tinsel and a star from atop a Christmas tree. Amidst the rubble of furniture, bricks, children's toys and Christmas decorations lay bodies in their respectable "Sunday best."

Men and women who a little while before had been singing carols and exchanging Christmas puddings and candy stood dumbly about the ruins.

"Like A Hammer Blow"

"It came like a hammer blow," one man said. "My wife and I were out in the kitchen mixing some food. Inside they were singing 'God Rest Ye, Merrie Gentlemen' and laughing and shouting. Suddenly we heard that awful whoosh of a falling bomb. Thank God my kids are with their grandmother in the country.

"There's what's left of the party," he said with a gesture at the broken homes.

There had been parties all around the district, some in air-raid shelters and other in homes. When the sirens sounded most of the people stayed in their homes, believing it would be just another "light night."

Dead Lie On Pavemen

Then they were dead on the pavements or peering sadly into wrecked homes. The wounded had been taken to hospitals. Children still clutched cheap toys in the cold.

Firemen worked in the tenement wreckage. There seemed little hope that anyone below was alive—the bomb had been a big one. As they worked, pathetic mementoes of the party were shoveled out into the street—a bag of Christmas candies and a red and white figure of Santa Claus.

There probably were 150 people in the tenement at the time the bomb fell. The number of dead cannot now be released.

Apartments Bombed

German flyers had bombed a London apartment house earlier in the day, causing an undetermined number of casualties there. As they renewed the assault on the city tonight on this, the longest night of winter, raiders were reported crossing the southeast coast at great height in at least two waves.

Liverpool and other Merseyside towns were assaulted for the second successive night. The Nazi air attacks—which followed by twenty-four hours heavy British raids upon Berlin—extended from the English Channel to the Irish Sea.

Plane A Minute

German planes darted over the Liverpool area at the rate of one a minute, beginning the attack shortly after dark.

Earlier reports indicated that working-class districts suffered heaviest; but after the raid had been in progress for some time and many bombs had been dropped there had been no fatal casualties, so far as could be learned.

One public shelter was hit and several people were taken to a hospital.

The raiders first dropped flares and then high explosives.

Raids Taper Off

Occasional bursts were heard in separated London areas, but as the night wore on there was a lull.

During the day three Nazi craft were officially reported shot down.

The most spectacular battle of the day started nearly seven miles aloft and ended only fifty feet above the channel waters. A Spitfire dived at a German bomber, it was said, and, chasing it over the water, caught it with machine-gun burst. The bomber crashed in flames, it was reported.

In Liverpool, hard hit in raids of Friday night, men dug into the wreckage of a bombed hotel for victims. Among those reported killed there were several firemen who died in line of duty.

The Government acknowledged the destruction of a "considerable" number of buildings in Liverpool.

British Blast Berlin

On the offensive side, the British reported a successful overnight bombing campaign which was declared to have caused "many explosions and fires" in a Berlin airplane motor factory; brought "particularly good results" in raids on the invasion ports of Ostend, Antwerp, Le Havre, Amsterdam and Flushing, and in the industrial Ruhr.

Hit, too, said the Air Ministry, were the Nazi gun emplacements across the channel. A 5,000-ton German supply ship was declared apparently smashed to "bits and pieces" by a salvo of four bombs which struck the vessel in Boulogne harbor.

R. A. F. Hits Berlin Hard

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21 — British raiders touched off "many explosions and fires" in a Berlin airplane-engine factory last night, struck damaging blows at the industrial Ruhr and "invasion ports' and attacked Nazi gun positions along the English Channel, the Ministry of Information reported today.

The Ministry said the R. A. F., employing large forces of bombers in "successful and extensive operations," scored hits on the Berlin engine factory and "other parts of the target area," and that the fires which resulted were "stimulated" by a subsequent attack which also started new blazes.

Nazi Supply Ship Hit

In operations by the coastal command yesterday, a "direct hit" was registered on a German supply ship.

This 5,000-ton ship was struck in Boulogne harbor, the Air Ministry news service said, by bombs dropped from a Blenheim reconnaissance plane. Four bombs hit it and sent "bits and pieces" high in the air, the news service reported, adding that when the plane flew away the vessel "was enveloped from end to end in dense smoke through which only the top of the funnel could be seen."

In addition to the attacks on invasion ports, the service claimed effective raids on Nazi air bases at Abbeville, Dunkirk, Le Havre and Caen, in northern France.

"Particularly good results were obtained from the raids on the invasion ports of Ostend, Antwerp (both in Belgium), Le Harve (France) and Flushing (the Netherlands)," said the Information Ministry's statement.

It reported daylight attacks yesterday as follows:

"Yesterday several attacks on enemy gun positions, airdromes and harbors were made by aircraft of the coastal command.

"We suffered no losses from any of these operations.

Boulogne, France, and Amsterdam, the Netherlands, also were reported bombed.

Six Killed In Berlin Raid

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 21—Six persons were killed and seventeen injured by British warplanes, which attacked Berlin during the night, the German high command reported today.

The Dom (Protestant) Cathedral, in the capital, was damaged and small fires were set in the suburbs by incendiary bombs, but no military damage was caused by the raiders, a communique declared.

The Reich's Church Ministry estimated the cathedral damage at 1,500,000 marks ($600,000), and said the raiders dropped flares before they dropped their bombs. The bombing of the cathedral, which faces the former Imperial Palace, was intentional, the Ministry said.

On their first attempt to reach the city, the official account said, the British raiders were driven off by heavy anti-aircraft fire.

BOMBS WHICH PELTED DOWN IN THICKLY POPULATED AREAS OF THE GREAT PORT OF LIVERPOOL AND IN LONDON WERE FEARED TO HAVE CAUSED A NUMBER OF CASUALTIES, BUT A FIERCE ANTI-AIRCRAFT BARRAGE IN ALL DISTRICTS WAS SAID TO HAVE BLUNTED THE EDGE OF THE BLOWS STRUCK BY THE WAVES OF NAZI RAIDERS.

"Later," the communique declared, "several enemy planes flew over the center of the city and dropped a number of explosive and incendiary bombs, particularly in the east, resulting in slight damage to the populace and some damage to buildings."

A lone British plane, dropping explosives and fire bombs in a raid last night on Potsdam, west of Berlin, was reported today by DNB, German news agency, to have killed three civilians.

3 Killed In Potsdam

The cathedral, occupying the site of an eighteenth century predecessor, was reerected in 1894-1905 at a cost of 11,500,000 marks.

Reports from the historic town of Potsdam, west of the capital, said three civilians were killed there by a single British plane which dropped explosives and incendiaries.

BERLIN CATHEDRAL REPORTED BOMBED

Deliberate," Nazis Charge in Announcing "Major Raid" On German Capital

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 21—British pilots struck twice overnight at Berlin in "a major raid," the Nazi high command announced today, flying over the center of the city and loosing both explosive and fire bombs.

Six persons were killed and seventeen injured, a communique reported, and the Protestant Cathedral was hit and damaged—to the extent of 1,500,000 marks (about $600,000), said the Reich Church Ministry.

Fires were set off in the suburbs in the first appearance of the British, said the high command, but on that occasion the raiders were held back by anti-aircraft fire.

The Raiders Return

They returned, however—"several" of them, it was stated—and moved over the heart of the metropolis. Their bombs were declared to have fallen "particularly" in the eastern part of the city, but with "no military or vital war damage."

The high command accused the raiders of having directed their attack "exclusively . . . against non-military targets." The bombing of the cathedral, which faces the old Imperial Palace, was declared by the Church Ministry to have been deliberate.

[In London the British Ministry of Information declared that a Berlin airplane engine factory was hard hit, with "many explosions and fires" set off in it; that heavy bombing blows had been struck in the industrial Ruhr, at the German "invasion ports" and upon the Nazi gun positions along the English Channel.]

Aviation's Part In Driving Fascists Out Of Egypt Described

R. A. F. Fighters In Continuous Contact With Advancing Troops

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21—The British, using Adolf Hitler's own Blitzkrieg tactics, knocked out "at least" 144 Italian planes in the first twelve days of their North African offensive while losing only thirteen of their own, the Air Ministry news service reported tonight.

Eighty-eight of the Fascist planes, the news service said, were shot down in the air and fifty-six destroyed on the ground or captured. Pilots of five of the thirteen British planes lost were reported safe.

Cooperation between ground, sea and air forces in the attack which drove the Fascists out of Egypt was described.

With Advancing Troops

"British (air) fighters maintained continuous contact with our advancing troops," the news service declared.

While battleships and destroyers bombarded the Italians from the Mediterranean and the tanks and infantry trucks advanced, British planes sought out Italian planes or exposed Italian troops.

Bombers, the news service continued, battered forts and airdromes, transport parks, troop concentrations, munition and gasoline dumps. On the whole, they depended more on the planes armed with eight machine guns than on dive bombers to demoralize the Italian troops, the account said.

Derna To Sidi Barrani

On December 9, the news service said, every Italian airdrome "from Derna to Sidi Barrani" was heavily raided.

"Eighteen enemy aircraft were destroyed. Two of our aircraft were lost, but the pilots escaped."

The air bombardment continued all that night and the following day as the Italians retreated toward the frontier city of Salum, it was said:

"For the next seventy-two hours the same harassing tactics were employed, bombing and machine-gunning being almost continuous from dawn to dusk. . . . Italian troops and motor transport were relentlessly attacked and became increasingly demoralized," according to the news service.

Heavy Attack On Tobruk

"A particularly heavy attack was made on Tobruk (Libya), where petrol stores were set on fire and ammunition dumps blown up. Heavy raids also were made on Bardia, where a large dump of stores was destroyed."

The Italians moving along the coastal road to Tobruk were "repeatedly machine-gunned," the news service said.

At Salum, fifteen planes were reported captured on the ground because "airdromes had been rendered unserviceable by low-flying attacks during the previous week."

Raid On Benina Airdrome

On the night of December 17, Benina airdrome received "the heaviest attack yet launched since the beginning of the offensive and eighteen planes were destroyed on the ground," the news service said.

On the following night the barracks, motor transport parks and garages at Derna were reported set on fire and on December 19 troop concentrations and motor transport northwest of Bardia were attacked.

Nearly 5,000 R. A. F. Raids On Axis Reported

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—The British have made nearly 5,000 air raids on Germany and Italy and Axis-occupied territory in the last eight months, the British radio said today in a broadcast heard here by CBS.

"The Italians have felt the weight of almost 1,000 attacks against targets in Italy, Italian East Africa, Libya and the Dodecanese islands," the radio said. "Each of the industrial centers of Turin, Naples and Milan has been badly damaged."

Last night's raid on Berlin was the thirty-seventh, the radio declared.

It said almost 4,000 raids have been made on Germany and German-occupied territory.

Dodecanese Isles Bombed

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21—The Admiralty announced today that the fleet air arm had attacked Rhodes, Stampalia and Scarpanto December 17.

The report said "fires were seen to have been started" in the three cities, in the Italian Dodecanese islands off the Turkish coast, but added that weather conditions made observation of bombing results difficult. All the British planes were reported to have returned safely.

Nazi Guns Shell English Coast

[By the Associated Press]

Dover, England, Dec. 21—The big German guns of Cap Gris Nez opened fire across the Straits of Dover shortly after 9 P. M., breaking a week's silence.

The shelling was heavy. Towns on the Kentish coast were shaken by the crash of the shells, coming at three-minute intervals for a quarter of an hour.

There were no casualties.

Beaverbrook comes more plainly from the air," an opinion backed by neutral and British air sources. Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, warned Britain this week against letting down her guard.

These sources suggested that the comparative immunity of night bombers over Britain porbably may be encouraging the Germans to try landings by parachutists and aerial troop transports at night.

Observers remark hopefully that such landings, bringing Nazi aircraft to low altitudes, would put them within range of searchlights and short-range anti-aircraft guns. The Germans, they say, would suffer heavy casualties in the air, be spotted by searchlights and surrounded on landing.

The most probable line of attack was forecast by one well informed observer as a "sudden and studied attempt" to destroy fighter airdromes so that British Spitfires and Hurricanes would be unable to retain daylight mastery of the air over Britain and the Channel.

After preliminary bombing of hangars, this source said, parachute troops might be dropped at as many as fifty fields at once to hold a landing area and light it for "pancake" landings of troop-carrying Junkers and Focke-Wulf transports.

Following the precedent of Norway and the Netherlands, he added, thousands of troops might be landed to attempt to hold out long enough to destroy all aircraft at air stations while a bridgehead was being established on the English coast free from fighter opposition.

England Would Like The Chance To End Hitler Myth, Citrine Says

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 21 (AP)—England is "ready for invasion if Hitler tries it," says Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Council and member of the King's Privy Council.

Hitler is a "legendary figure, in whose armor many cracks are likely to appear shortly," Sir Walter declared at this armament center last night in a talk sponsored by the American Federation of Labor.

"England would almost welcome an invasion as a chance to inflict on Hitler his first defeat in the field and destroy the myth of his invincibility," Sir Walter said.

He appealed for American aid.

LORD HALIFAX MAY GET LOTHIAN POST

Eden Is in Line for Job of Foreign Secretary.

LONDON, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Appointment of Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax as Ambassador to the United States was regarded as certain by an influential section of the British press today and the London Times said it could conceive of no one better fitted for this important post.

The Daily Mail flatly declared the Foreign Secretary would assume the post left vacant by the death of Lord Lothian, and asserted his name already had been submitted to President Roosevelt for approval.

Minister of War Anthony Eden will move up to the Foreign Secretaryship if Lord Halifax is appointed, and Prime Minister Winston Churchill also will make a post for David Lloyd George, the Daily Mail said.

Lord Halifax, 58 years old, has had a distinguished political career. As Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's Foreign Secretary, he conducted pre-war negotiations with Adolf Hitler.

Lord Halifax was Viceroy to India from 1926 to 1931, has been Lord President of the Council and Lord Privy Seal in the House of Lords and served with distinction in the world war.

The British press has been critical of his handling of the Foreign Office because of his coolness toward Soviet Russia.

Halifax Reported Chosen as Envoy

Name Already Given to Roosevelt Says London Daily Mail

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, who served under the late Prime Minister Chamberlain in the Munich appeasement era, but continued in office under Winston Churchill, is Britain's choice for Ambassador to Washington to succeed Lord Lothian, an influential section of the British press said today.

The London Times said no other British figure was "better fitted for this important post," and the Daily Mail flatly said his name already had been submitted to President Roosevelt for approval.

Anthony Eden, now War Minister, was named by the Mail as chosen to be Halifax's successor.

Lord Halifax has been under fire in some sections of the press because of his handling of the foreign office.

The gift will be transferred formally tomorrow afternoon in a ceremony under the giant Christmas tree in Rockefeller Plaza.

TO INSURE CARGOES IN MEDITERRANEAN

British Trade Apparently Resuming in Near East.

LONDON, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—War risk insurance rates on shipments from Australia and Asia to Mediterranean points were quoted today, effective Monday, by the Institute of London Underwriters.

The rates are 6 per cent to Port Said, Alexandria, Suez and Port Sudan, and 7 per cent to Palestine, Greece and Turkey.

The British Broadcasting Corporation, observing that the quotation was the first since Italy entered the war, speculated that this reflected an opinion in shipping circles that mercantile traffic to the Mediterranean can now be resumed.

Meanwhile today, Reuters, the British news agency, declared in a dispatch from Cairo that the Royal Air Force's repeated attacks in the Italian Libyan air bases, intended to keep the Fascist flying force grounded, have been so intense that the Italians have now been forced to abandon all their fields in Eastern Libya.

Dutch Tanker Safe After Torpedo Call

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP).—The 10,746-ton Dutch tanker Pendrecht, reported by Mackay Radio in New York Wednesday as having radioed that she was torpedoed by a submarine in the Atlantic, has arrived safely at a British port, official Dutch circles in London said tonight.

British Strike Caused By Too Rapid Worker

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP).—Workers in a factory turning out uniforms for British troops struck today because of continued employment of a cutter whom their union had expelled on a charge of working too fast.

The National Union of Tailors and Garment Workers said the man violated union rules by cutting too many pairs of khaki trousers an hour. The union took the view that this endangered its standards of "output and craftsmanship."

Rome Reports Fleet Operating Against Greece

Communique Follows British Raid in Adriatic Where No Italian Ships Were Seen

ROME, Dec. 21 (AP).—Italy's high command said today that its fleet had gone into action against Greece. A communique announced: "Our naval units bombarded enemy positions along the Ionian (southwest Greek) coast effectively, hitting pre-established targets.

[The British have said that their fleet steamed through the Ionian Sea last Wednesday night and penetrated into the Adriatic, shelling the Albanian port of Valona. The Italian high command said nothing about that assertion and gave no details of the action which it reported. The British broadcast that their naval units sighted no Italian ships.

With regard to the Albanian land front, the Italians reported winning an "important position," not identified, in a raid. Italian planes, coordinating their blows with the activities of land forces, were said to have "carried out continuous, effective actions."

The communique said one formation, which included bombers, dive-bombers and fighter planes, had attacked Greek troop concentrations, highway junctions and military works in widespread operations.

The Italians reported sinking two sailboats in the Corfu Canal and said two Gloster (British) fighter planes were shot down in battles, from which one Italian plane failed to return.

Reports Greeks Beaten Off

All Greek attacks were reported repulsed and the newspaper "Il Popolo di Roma" said Italian bombers had hemmed in and hammered Greek units falling back along the coast north of Porto Edda (Santi Quaranta). The Greek troops, which began to retreat at dawn on Dec. 18, have been under heavy and prolonged aerial bombardments almost daily, the newspaper said, asserting that in one place planes had set fire to a big woods where the Greeks were taking shelter.

The Greeks were covering their retreat with machine guns and batteries of small, rapid-firing artillery in emplacements along the coast, the newspaper said. Italian planes, by changing their route, had found an opening through the barrage from those guns and had bombed long columns consisting of a supply train and motor trucks proceeding through the Albanian interior, the dispatch added.

The roads there wind through a steep mountain without means of escape, it was reported, enabling the bombers to catch troops in a narrowing circle of bomb explosions and then machine-gun them and the supply wagons from a low altitude.

The high command said of the Libyan fighting merely that there was "artillery action," and praised the work of Italian flyers attacking armored British units.

Italian planes were reported to have made a night attack on an airfield at Aden, British protectorate across the Gulf of Aden from Somaliland.

thirty-eight trucks.

Estimating British man power in North Africa at 425,000, Gayda said at least 100,000 more men were concentrated in Kenya to face Italian East African forces in Somaliland and southern Ethiopia.

Besides the 500,000 tons previously estimated as Britain's warship strength in the Mediterranean, Gayda said the British have fifty-three cruisers and twenty smaller warships in the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden.

[In 1939, Jane's Fighting Ships, authoritative British register of warcraft, listed only seventy-seven British cruisers altogether, including some not then completed and other undergoing conversion into anti-aircraft ships.]

To Impress Empire And U. S.

Besides 1,500 airplanes on Mediterranean fronts, Gayda said Britain has 300 planes in East Africa.

All these forces have been concentrated in attack on the Italians, he said, because the British military command wanted to free the navy for defense against a strengthened German naval force and because the British Government wanted to raise its war prestige in empire and United States' eyes.

The outcome of the British offensive will show itself only after several weeks or months, Gayda declared.

Freezing Weather In Desert

Officers express satisfaction with the performance of their troops in the desert. The rains have stopped, but temperatures have hit new lows in the desert, with freezing weather reported during last night at some inland points on the excarpment. The temperatures for the past two weeks have been about eight degrees below average for this time of year.

Egyptian Premier Husein Sirry Pasha today toured the British desert military and air establishments.

Italian Troops Will Reach Suez Despite "Shock" In Libya, Says Another Rome Commentator

Rome, Dec. 21—The Suez, as the vital point in the Mediterranean, "will be reached by Italian troops" despite "the violent shock" in Libya, the Fascist weekly Relazioni Internazionali declared today.

Virginio Gayda charged in the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia that "the British command had its troops advance with a white flag" in the "delusion of misleading the defense" of the Italian fortified line in front of Bardia, Libya.

Gun Duel In Libya

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 21—Heavy artillery action was reported today by the Italian high command in the North African desert battlezone across which Britain's forces from Egypt are striking at Libya.

Special credit was given by the high command to Fascist flyers—especially the Fifth Air Squadron—for "having tirelessly and with the most sublime forces of sacrifice" cooperated with Italian land units in hitting hard at the armored columns which spearheaded the British attack.

At the same time, the Italians said their aircraft engaged in fierce air battles with British planes.

The arrival of new British contingents, however, made it plain there was no thought of giving up the attack on this Fascist stronghold.

On the other hand, it seemed equally as certain that the Italians were not planning to abandon the port, but were preparing to put up stiff resistance.

Bulk Of Italians Remain

While some detachments have been withdrawn to Tobruk, further west in Libya, the bulk of the fighting forces—perhaps two divisions—remains in the besieged town.

Italian aircraft have been more active in the Bardia region than at any other place or time since the British offensive began thirteen days ago. British pilots reported encountering big groups of Italian planes, several of which, they said, were shot down.

Italy's War: Troops Trapped Seek Outlet

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 21—While British bombers, artillery and warships were reported battering beleaguered Bardia today in an effort to smash a path through the Italian defenses, a general headquarters communique announced British troops had captured an additional 900 prisoners and were "clearing" the areas to the northwest and west of the eastern Libyan base.

Take Four Guns

The British forces in the western desert, "which continue to be reinforced," also have taken four guns in their mopping-up operations, the communique reported.

In addition, patrols along the Sudan frontier were said to be carrying on "their aggressive activity."

As the British closed in, large units of the trapped Fascist forces were said to be trying desperately to slip through the ring of steel around their eastern Libyan base under cover of darkness and the pall of smoke and dust hanging over the town after five days of bombardment.

Are Going To Tobruk

It was believed in some British circles that such units—if any got through—would try to join Marshal Rodolfo Graziani at Tobruk for a new stand seventy-five miles west of the Libyan-Egyptian frontier.

The coastal road to Tobruk and Derna has been reported, like Bardia, under almost constant R. A. F. and naval bombardment.

Reports from the battlefront said the British, bringing up infantry to reinforce their advance tank columns, completed a semi-circle of men and guns around the landward side of Bardia last night while a line of war ships off the coast finished the en circlement.

From Battle To Siege

Immediately, it was said, the Battl of Bardia became a siege.

From all sides British guns wer thundering at the seventeen-mile Ital ian defense front of tank traps, gu emplacements and pillboxes manne by an estimated 20,000 troops, many o them survivors of the Fascist fligh from Egypt.

The British counter-drive into Liby in the desert lands to the south als was reported advancing.

There the British, spearheaded by unit of Australian cavalry, were fight ing to oust an Italian garrison from the oasis of Giarabub, about twenty miles west of the Egyptian frontier.

Some Prisoners Taken

Some prisoners were taken in three days of fighting around the oasis, and last night the rest of the Italian force was reported still holding out against heavy pressure.

The British said they refrained from the usual bombing prelude to the attack because buildings and monuments sacred to the Senussi sect are around the oasis.

Trying To Send Aid

The Italians were said to be attempting to move up reinforcements from other outlying posts.

(Reuters, British news agency, dispatches from Cairo said the Royal Air Force's repeated attacks on Italy's Libyan air bases, intended to keep the Fascist Flying Force grounded, had been so intense the Italians were forced to abandon all their fields in eastern Libya.)

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 21—The British moved more reinforcements today to Bardia, besieged Libyan port where the Italians are making their first real stand against Britain's thirteen-day-old North African campaign.

The town now has been cut off for two days with the best part of two Italian divisions inside and British guns turned on it from land and sea. Field forces are reported officially to be striking beyond that smoking stronghold toward the important Fascist base of Tobruk, clearing areas to the west and northwest.

Make-Up of Commissions In Axis Alliance Disclosed

Foreign Ministers and Envoys to Form Political Set-Up

ROME, Dec. 21 (AP).—An authoritative source said today that the political commissions now to be set up at Rome, Berlin and Tokio under the tri-partite alliance would be composed of Foreign Ministers of the three nations and their ambassadors.

The military commissions to be established under the same pact will be composed of high-ranking officers and military attaches in each capital, this source said, while officials of government ministries concerned will form the economic missions.

[Agreement on appointment of the commissions was announced yesterday at Berlin and Tokio.]

Fascist newspapers reiterated that the Rome-Berlin-Tokio alliance was intended to keep the United States from entering the war as an ally of Great Britain.

Pope Urges Prayers, Gifts For Sufferers

[By the Associated Press]

Vatican City, Dec. 21—Pope Pius XII called for Christmas prayers and charitable gifts for war sufferers, especially children, in a letter today to Cardinal Luigi Maglione, Papal Secretary of State, and said he prayed "trying days" would be shortened for "suffering humanity."

He said Christmas would bring "more serene times to the tormented Christian family."

The Pope expressed "especial gratitude to the American bishops who, although far from the horrors of war, have shown once more their full comprehension of the needs of the suffering church and, appealing to traditional generosity, those Catholics (and particularly fellow-citizens of the countries struck by the scourge) who have so abundantly and beneficently aided the charity of the Common Father.

Peace Work Fails

"To it (American Episcopacy) goes out our full and entire gratitude and also goes our benediction, as it will go no less affectionately to all who will permit us to dispense with a larger hand that which the other receives."

The Pope said he had done everything possible to avert the ills and sufferings of the devastating war, but that his efforts ran up against "difficulties at all times more serious still than those in the past World War—some of them inherent to the very nature of the scourge which is raging, others—we must also say—interposed by the will of men."

"Not an inert witness of such a deplorable state of things," the Pontiff continued, "and armed only with the arms of truth, justice and Christian charity, that which we can do still once more is to invite all propitiating prayer and significant beneficent action."

Hopes For Christmas Truce

"Prayer is a force," the Pope has said, "which acts softly and irresistibly on the human will."

Charitable action, he added, "is the duty of each and everyone" which in "the grave hours such as Europe is passing through has the high value" of promoting fraternal solidarity.

"We make the wish that all persevere in it without relaxation and without discouragement."

The Pope again expressed the hope that the "powers," from whom a month ago he asked a Christmas truce, would "do honor to the good traditions of civilized life by not permitting the children of belligerent countries or those in any way involved in the war to suffer unmerited pain in so many calamitous happenings."

This was regarded in some circles as a reference to air bombardments.

"Remember Hungry People"

The Pontiff asked that "good Christian children" remember "their little brothers who are without bread, without clothing and without family," that the latter might have from those families still living in peace and well-to-do circumstances "bread, gifts and aid."

Stating that it was impossible under present circumstances "to think of a proper general organization" to care for war victims and difficult to "make use of deserving private institutions already existing," the Pope urged that "everyone do what he can, where he can, how he can."

"Let beneficient activitiy be multiplied everywhere," he said. "Let the energies of good wake up. Let it be the honorable scope of these to bring about, even at a distance, a victory over evil."

Pope Pius Asks Yule Prayer for War Sufferers

Calls on World's Catholics, Voices Special Concern at Plight of Children

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 21 (AP).—Pope Pius XII asked the world's Catholics today to pray at Christmas time for the sufferers from the war and to remember in charity these "little brothers who are without bread, without clothing and without family."

In a letter to Luigi Cardinal Magilone, Papal Secretary of State, the Pontiff expressed special concern for the children, and urged that "every one do what he can, where he can, how he can."

He expressed once again the hope that the warring countries would "do honor to the good traditions of civilized life by not permitting the children of belligerent countries or those in any way involved in the war to suffer unmerited pain." . . .

Pope Pius said he had done all he could to avert the ills of war, but had met "difficulties at all times more serious still than those in the past World War—some of them inherent to the very nature of the scourge which is raging; others, we must also say, interposed by the will of men." He went on: "Armed only with the arms of truth, justice and Christian charity, that which we can do still once more is to invite all propitiating prayer and significant beneficent action."

The Pope expressed "especial gratitude to the American bishops who, although far from the horrors of war, have shown once more their full comprehension of the needs of the suffering church. . . . To it (the American episcopature) goes out our full and entire gratitude and also goes our benediction." . . .

The Pontiff said: "The sad echoes of the devastating war come from all sides, even in the great festival of peace—the Nativity of our Lord—and they are the voices of our sons, who are struggling in grave suffering and imploring aid."

"Such a large sum of ills and sufferings, which are growing worse and spreading more every day, cannot fail to find a most sad echo in our fatherly heart, which gathers the sorrows and tears of all our sons without distinction, so that we can desire nothing greater in such an upset of things than to relieve bodies and raise the spirits," he wrote.

"Among all the sufferers we point out the children—those who in these days bring to mind the Child of Bethlehem, friend of the small and innocent.

"He who defends them from evil rose up severely against all forms of dishonor toward them and becomes through our voice their defense against earthly evil, extending a hand for them and repeating for those who are first among his smallest brothers: 'I was hungry and you gave me food. . . . I was without home and you took me in. . . . I was naked and you clothed me.'" was no answer so far from British military sources.

The Fascists, it was pointed out, may have instructions to hold on as long as possible to give Marshal Rodolfo Graziani time to reorganize his scattered forces farther west—at Tobruk, for instance, which has strong defenses.

Bardia also is strongly defended and British headquarters indicated today it would take considerable more artillery shelling and aerial bombardment before a ground assault can be launched.

The British hold that the final outcome is not in doubt, that they have had few casualties so far and there is no reason for wasting man power.

R. A. F. Strikes Far In Advance

Striking far in advance of the land forces, the R. A. F. last night was reported to have carried out a heavy raid on the Castel Benito airdrome, near Tripoli on the coast, almost all the way across Libya to the Tunisian frontier.

The first of two waves of bombers scored four direct hits on three hangars, a special communique said, causing several fires and an explosion in which eleven airplanes were destroyed and several others damaged.

It said the second formation laid seven direct hits on or near the hangars, three bombs falling in two hangars other than those hit by the first wave. In this attack, it said, eight more planes were destroyed and still others damaged.

900 More Italian Prisoners

There were two large explosions, one of which blew up a building, the communique added, and fires were left blazing over a large area. Flames from one burning bomb dump could be seen seventy miles away, pilots related.

In the areas beyond smoking Bardia, the British command reported capture of 900 prisoners, along with four guns, added to more than 30,000 already taken captive.

Bardia itself, already reported fixed in a circle of steel formed half by the land forces and half by British warships intermittently shelling the town from the Mediterranean, appeared to be taking mighty punishment.

Only Exit Doubly Guarded

The only road out—that westward to Tobruk where the Italians may make their next stand—was commanded not only by the guns of the fleet but by raiding British bombers. Thus the estimated 20,000 Italian soldiers still defending Bardia were under a full state of siege.

While British artillery thundered at the town, still more British troop reinforcements were being brought up, general headquarters said.

During the day the Royal Air Force announced that its violent campaign against Fascist air bases was continuing, reporting heavy attacks on airdromes at Berka, Libya and elsewhere.

Fires enveloped "whole blocks" of the Berka 'drome, it was said, and at least two Italian planes were destroyed on the ground. Five Italian craft were reported shot down in air battles.

Raids In East Africa

"In Italian East Africa," today's communique said, "Gura, Mai Adaga, Metemma, Assab and Tessenei were raided'

"Aircraft of the Rhodesian squadron carried out a raid on Metemma and Tessenei, troop concentrations being attacked at the former and enemy aircraft on the ground at the latter. One Caproni (bomber) was reported badly damaged.

"It is not possible to estimate the amount of damage caused at Gura or Mai Adaga, but all bombs fell within the target area, while at Assab dive attacks were made on a waterworks.

"On December 18 aircraft of the South African Air Force carried out raids on Ifmadu and Moyale. At the former place a garrison building and motor transport were bombed and at the latter direct hits were obtained on an enemy camp."

British Bomb Brindisi

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 21—British Royal Air Force bombers based on Greek soil were repotred today to have carried out "successful attacks" on oil tanks and railways at Brindisi, across the Adriatic Strait of Otranto on the heel of the Italian boot.

"Poor visibility and intense anti-aircraft fire made observation difficult," said the R. A. F. communique, "but all bombs exploded in the target area. Large fires were started and subsequently there were several explosions."

Colonel Captured

While the R. A. F. reported this and other assaults to support the Greek offensive into Italian-held Albania, dispatches from the fighting front said Greek forces had captured an Italian colonel and two battalions in fierce fighting around Tepeleni.

Greek infantrymen, battling cold and a stubborn Fascist force, were said to have occupied two villages and two strategically important heights in the Tepeleni area.

Fought Through Wire

Heights taken in this area were described as strongly guarded with barbed wire. After mentioning the gains in that sector, one report said: "Our artillery successfully shelled the retreating Italians. Guns and much material have fallen into our hands.

"While the enemy was being chased, Italian planes attempted to halt our advance but our fighters took off and shot down four enemy aircraft."

Greek Destroyers Active

A naval communique indicated today that a Greek destroyer force actually preceded British warships in their sweep of the lower Adriatic, as reported by the London Admiralty yesterday. The British sent a battleship-cruiser-destroyer force into the lower Adriatic December 18 and the battleships, it was reported, poured nearly 100 tons of high-explosive shells into Italy's port of entry into southern Albania, Valona.

Now the Greek navy reports that on the night of December 15-16 its reconnaissance destroyers penetrated the lower Adriatic as far as the island of Saseno, at the entrance of Valona harbor, "without encountering any signs of the enemy."

Commanded By Admiral

The Greek foray was commanded by Admiral Cavadias.

The communique said simply:

"During the night of December 15-16 Greek destroyers made a reconnaissance of the Adriatic, going to the island of Saseno without encountering any signs of the enemy."

Besides the Brindisi attack the night of December 19-20, the R. A. F. reported an attack yesterday on Berati, at a vital road junction in the middle sector of the Albanian front, and site of an airfield, as well as a battle between Gladiator fighters and Italian bombers over the Tepeleni area, in which one Italian plane was believed to have been shot down and a British pilot bailed out when his plane burst into flames.

In land fighting, Greek dispatches said "local successes" continued in sectors other than Tepeleni, the weather hindering any major action.

Air Vice-Marshal John Henry D. Albiac, commander of the R. A. F. in Greece, told correspondents today the air force had destroyed thirty-nine Italian aircraft since the Italian-Greek hostilities began eight weeks ago, and had probably destroyed twelve others. One British fighter pilot was killed and one is missing.

Bombing planes in seventy raids had dropped 120 tons of bombs, he said. Nine of the planes were lost.

General Italian retreat from Tepelini and Klisura in southern Albania was reported imminent as Greek advance forces sought methodically to make the towns untenable by endangering the routes of supply and retreat.

That has been the pattern of Greek operations against all of the Fascist defense positions captured so far.

Posts Falling

The Greeks said that "one after another" Italian posts in the mountains north of the two strategic towns, guarding the roads to the battered port of Valona, were falling to fierce bayonet charges.

The Italians were said to be fighting back "especially fiercely" because of the importance of the ridges, beyond which the tangle of mountains of southern Albania gives way to foothills rolling down to the coastal plain.

Bitter cold continued in the Tepeleni-Klisura region, as well as on the northern sector of the fighting front where deep snow has caused a near-stalemate.

The Greeks reported they had repulsed Fascist counter-attacks in the north and claimed some progress in the push through the Ostravitza Mountains toward Elbasani and the Albanian capital of Tirana.

NEW FORTIFIED HEIGHTS TAKEN, GREEKS CLAIM

Capture Of 300 Prisoners And Italian War Material Announced

DEC 22 1940

Athens Reports Successes By Land, Sea And Air. R. A. F. Raids Brindisi

BY MAX HARRELSON

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 21—Greek forces pushing deeper into Albania have captured new fortified heights in the Tepeleni-Klisura sectors and have taken 300 prisoners and a quantity of war material, a Government spokesman reported tonight.

He declared the Greeks also were continuing their advance in other sectors, especially in the coastal region toward Chimara.

Important Italian positions also were taken in the north beyond Pogradetz, the spokesman said.

Greek Initiative Claimed

"Conditions are just the same as in past days," he commented. "The initiative belongs to us and all efforts by the Italians to counter-attack have been crushed.

"Fascist positions on the mountain heights naturally are strong and fortified also by concrete, but these machine-gun nests have been abandoned under the bayonets of charging Greeks."

British-Greek forces in close collaboration were reported to have struck sharply against Italy by land, sea and air.

British flyers participated in two of these, directly in their own attacks at Italy's home and Albanian bases and in support of Greek troops in the front lines. They earned thereby the praise of their commander for doing what he called one of the best aviation jobs of the war under about the worst conditions.

R. A. F. Bombs Brindisi, Berati

By Air—R. A. F. bombers based in Greece were said to have bombed oil tanks and railways overnight at the Italian port of Brindisi, across the Adriatic Sea from Albania, dropping all their bombs in the target area and setting off "large fires" and "several explosions."

Also, the R. A. F. reported attacks yesterday on Berati, at a vital road junction on the Albanian front, and on an Italian airfield.

By Land—Greek infantrymen, hammering at the gates of Tepeleni and Klisura, were said to have taken two villages and two strategic heights in the Tepeleni area, overcoming cold, stubborn Italian resistance and strong barbed wire barriers. An Italian colonel and two battalions were said to have been captured in fierce fighting around Tepeleni.

Greek Naval Activity

By Sea—A naval communique today said a Greek destroyer force preceded the British battleship-cruiser-destroyer armada which was reported yesterday to have pushed into the lower Adriatic December 18 and shelled Valona, Italy's port of entry into southern Albania.

The Greeks said their destroyers penetrated the Adriatic as far as the island of Saseno, at the entrance to Valona harbor, on the night of December 15-16 "without encountering any signs of the enemy."

Air Vice-Marshal John Henry D'Albiac, commander of the R. A. F. in Greece, expressed satisfaction with the progress of the air war.

Chief Lauds R. A. F. In Greece

British fighters, he said, have established one of the best records made anywhere during the war and British bombers have fulfilled their tasks despite weather handicaps encountered nowhere else in Europe.

D'Albiac summarized the R. A. F. record thus:

Fighters — Thirty-nine Italian craft destroyed and twelve probably destroyed; one R. A. F. pilot killed and one missing.

Bombers—Seventy raids carried out, 120 tons of bombs dropped, nine aircraft lost.

On Valona alone, he said, the R. A. F. has made eighteen attacks and dropped 94,000 pounds of explosives. On Durazzo, another of Italy's main Albanian ports, he said there had been eight raids in which 63,000 pounds of bombs were dropped.

Reports Italian Naval Raid On Ionian Coast

Rome, Dec. 21 (AP)—Italy's high command declared today that its fleet had gone into action against Greece.

"Our naval units bombarded enemy positions along the Ionian (southwest Greek) coast effectively, hitting pre-established targets," a communique stated.

[Presumably this action took place at about the same time the British claim their own fleet steamed up the Ionian Sea and penetrated the Adriatic, shelling the Albanian port of Volona. The Italian high command said nothing about this claim, however, and gave no details of the action. The British had broadcast that their naval units sighted no Italian ships.]

Report Greeks Repulsed

On the Albanian land front, the Italians reported winning an "important position," not identified, in a raid.

All Greek attacks were reported repulsed, and the newspaper il Popolo di Roma said Italian bombers hemmed in and hammered Greek units falling back along the coast north of Porto Edda.

Italians Bomb Albanian Town Held By Greeks

By Daniel Deluce

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

Argirocastro, Albania, Dec. 18 (Delayed)—Italian bombers attacked Argirocastro in three waves today, dropping explosives in the heart of this mediæval fortress town, which the Greeks captured less than two weeks ago.

Edmund Stevens, correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, was hurled through a shop door by the force of one of the explosions, but escaped unhurt.

Leland Stowe, American war correspondent, crouched in the basement of the shop while little stores on both sides of the street near by were blasted to fragments.

A companion and I just had driven out of the town on our way toward the fighting front farther north when the first bombers appeared. We stopped and watched the attack.

At least thirty Albanians were killed in the streets and an undetermined number of others were buried in the ruins.

Town Defenseless

The town was completely defenseless. Not a shot was fired at the planes.

Church bells, the only means of sounding an alarm, warned the 12,000 inhabitants.

The raid lasted more than two hours, after which I returned and helped dig the dead and injured out of the wreckage.

Until today neither side had bombed Argirocastro. Its inhabitants had built only a few air-raid shelters.

PETAIN STATES LAVAL CANNOT HAVE JOB BACK

But Marshal Agrees to Send De Brinon to Paris as Envoy.

GERMAN DEMAND IS REJECTED

Other Cabinet Shifts Barred—Ministers Meet in Vichy at Flandin's Sick Bed.

VICHY, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Informed spokesmen asserted today that Fernand de Brinon, French Ambassador in German-occupied Paris, acting on orders of the French Chief of State, Philippe Petain, delivered to the Germans in Paris today France's refusal to make any changes in its Cabinet or take back the ousted Pierre Laval.

Marshal Petain agreed, as requested by Otto Abetz, the German Ambassador to Paris, to replace Gen. de la Laurencie as Delegate-General of the Vichy Government in the occupied zone with Fernand de Brinon, these spokesmen said.

Other demands, including the ouster of the French Minister of the Interior, Marcel Peyrouton, and the Minister of Justice, Raphael Alibert, were said to have been rejected.

Flandin Ill With Flu.

Government leaders convened today at the home of Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, who is ill with influenza, while awaiting the German reaction.

Paul Baudouin, Secretary of State for the Presidency of the Council, received German correspondents today, it was learned, and told them that "collaboration" was not an issue in Laval's resignation but that Laval had lost Petain's confidence because of his methods of working.

Asked by the Germans about Petain's failure to attend the Paris ceremony marking the transfer from Vienna of the ashes of the Duke of Reichstadt, son of Napoleon I, Baudouin replied that Petain had found it impossible to go to Paris.

New Census Being Taken.

Paris newspapers published a note today advising natives of Alsace and Lorraine not to be disturbed by a new census of all people from these provinces who now are in the German occupied zone.

The purpose of the census is to learn the movement of the population in recent years and to determine the wishes of Alsacians and Lorrainers of German origin on the question of returning to German territory.

"There is no intention on the part of the occupying authorities to exercise any pressure on the free decision of the people or to form any prejudice against them because of any position they take," the announcement said.

LEAHY'S WELCOME

French Will Work Hard to Cement Friendship.

VICHY, France, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—French officials made it clear today that the Government will go more than half-way to strengthen Franco-American friendship.

An official spokesman said that the French Government was impressed with the American gesture in sending Ambassador William D. Leahy in a cruiser.

He added that Admiral Leahy's message from President Roosevelt to Chief of State Petain asked that the new Ambassador be received as persona gratissima. He recalled M. Petain's message to the closing New York World's Fair: "We remain faithful not only to your great friendly republic but also to the noble ideals which are our common heritage."

No Mention Of Franco-Nazi Relations Follows Cabinet Meeting

Parley Between Petain And Ribbentrop Indicated As Impending

BY ROBT. OKIN

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Dec. 21—Despite continued silence about what clearly were parleys with Germany over collaboration, the impression grew tonight that tension, evident since the Laval incident, has relaxed.

A communique after a Cabinet meeting made no mention of French-German relations, and no more meetings were scheduled until the end of next week.

Informed circles expressed belief that the Government had taken the stand that it was ready to continue the policy of collaboration with Germany with no further changes in the Cabinet beyond the replacement of Pierre Laval, ousted Foreign Minister and Vice-Premier.

Indications also were that no precipitous action to upset the status quo was expected from Germany, either through total occupation of France or a request for permission to send troops through the unoccupied area.

Petain, Ribbentrop Talk Hinted

Fernand de Brinon, French Ambassador in German-occupied Paris, was reported by informed sources to have told the Germans that France would not reinstate Laval.

These sources said Brinon acted on the orders of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, chief of state.

There was considerable telephone activity between Paris and Vichy this afternoon, and informed persons expressed the opinion a meeting between Petain and the German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was under discussion.

May Call Weygand To Vichy

The presence in Vichy of Gen. Auguste Nogues, former supreme commander of the French defense forces in North Africa, gave rise to a belief that Petain will extend the scope of present interviews with leading French figures to include the empire, and that Gen. Maxime Weygand, new chief in North Africa, also may come to Vichy for a conference.

The Council of Ministers met today at the home of Pierre-Etienne Flandin, Foreign Minister, who is ill with influenza, to await German reaction to Paris developments.

Impressed By U. S. Gesture

French officials, meanwhile, made it clear the Government would go more than half way to strengthen French American relations. Official spokesmen said the French Government was impressed by the United States gesture of sending Ambassador William D. Leahy in a cruiser.

The spokesman recalled Petain's message to the closing New York World's Fair:

"We remain faithful not only to your great friendly republic, but also to the noble ideals which are our common heritage."

Paul Baudouin, Secretary of State for the Presidency of the Council, told German correspondents today, it was learned, that "collaboration" was not an issue in Laval's resignation, but that the Vice-Premier had lost Petain's confidence because of his working methods.

Sentiment For Transfer To Africa Reported

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation attributed today to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the French forces still resisting Germany, a statement that several members of the French Cabinet prefer transferring the government to Africa rather than submitting France to a final "subjugation" by Germany.

The BBC's broadcast, picked up here by NBC, said "the determination of the French leaders in Africa to defend their empire is hardy."

Henri-Haye And President Discuss Mission Of Leahy

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP) — Gaston Henri-Haye, the French Ambassador, discussed with President Roosevelt today the mission of Admiral William D. Leahy, U. S. N. (retired), the new American Ambassador to the Vichy Government, who will sail for his post aboard the cruiser Tuscaloosa Monday.

The French diplomat later said Leahy's mission was a "very important and very interesting one."

He also said the President wanted him to see the personal message he is sending Marshal Petain through Leahy. Henri-Haye described it as a "very cordial and very friendly" communication.

DEC 22 1940

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—The American-French War Relief, Inc., announced today that the British Government had granted its first navicert for the transportation to France of 3,000 vitamin B capsules and 10,000 vitamin A and D capsules.

The organization said that, with the assistance of the American Friends Service, the vitamins would be shipped on a Clipper leaving here tomorrow and delivered to the French Minister in Lisbon, who would see that they were delivered to Quaker offices in Marseilles.

A few bombs are reported in other parts of Great Britain, mainly in the Midlands, but reports indicate that these caused little damage and very few casualties.

An Air Ministry communique:

Yesterday aircraft of the coastal command made another attack on airdromes and harbors in enemy-occupied territory. Gun positions near Cap Gris Nez were attacked and a military building near by was demolished. A direct hit was obtained on a supply ship.

Last night the R. A. F. struck at Berlin, the Ruhr and the invasion ports. In the German capital many fires and explosions were caused in an aero-engine factory and in other parts of the target area. Aircraft arriving later on the scene stimulated existing fires and started new ones.

During the night of Dec. 19-20 R. A. F. heavy bombers attacked Berka airdrome. Bombs fell on buildings and hangars, starting fires which completely enveloped whole blocks; other bombs fell among dispersed aircraft and at least two were set on fire.

Some of our aircraft, having dropped their bombs, machine-gunned the airdrome before leaving.

On the same night the Gazala airdrome was raided, bombs falling on dispersed aircraft. But the full extent of the damage could not be ascertained. One of our bombers failed to return.

Throughout yesterday (Friday) our fighters continued their patrols. One squadron shot down two CR42's confirmed and one CR42 unconfirmed. In addition seven S79's were damaged severely in the Bardia area.

Gladiator fighters on patrol in the Tepeleni area intercepted and engaged a formation of enemy bombers. One is believed to have been shot down. One of our pilots descended by parachute when his aircraft burst into flames.

During the night of Dec. 19-20 our bombers carried out successful attacks on oil tanks and railways at Brindisi. Poor visibility and intense anti-aircraft fire made observation difficult, but all bombs exploded in the target area.

From all operations all our aircraft and crews, with the exception of the fighter already mentioned, returned safely.

BERLIN, Dec. 21 (AP).—The German high command communique today:

In the night of Dec. 20 combat plane units effectively attacked war essential targets in London. During the day also fighting planes bombed London. An armament factory at Chelmsford was badly hit. Air reconnaissance extended over the entire isle as far as the Shetlands.

Last night strong combat formations raided the port and industrial facilities at Liverpool with thousands of explosives and incendiaries, besides attacking other war-essential objectives in southern and central England. Numerous conflagrations and many smaller fires and tremendous explosions were observed by the crews, thus confirming the effect of the raid.

Last night the opponent made a major raid on the Reich's capital. The attack was exclusively directed against non-military targets. A number of houses as well as the Berlin Dom (Protestant cathedral) were damaged. Six civilians were killed and seventeen wounded, most of them outside raid shelters. Anti-aircraft downed two enemy planes.

An earlier high command communique:

British planes last night attacked Berlin. On the first approach of the enemy planes they were hindered by anti-aircraft fire from reaching the city. Incendiaries were dropped on Berlin suburbs. Small fires they started were soon quenched.

Later, several enemy planes flew over the center of the city and dropped a number of explosive and incendiary bombs, particularly in the east, resulting in slight damage to the populace and some damage to buildings. In Berlin the Protestant cathedral also was damaged.

There were no military or warvital damages. To date, six dead and seventeen wounded have been reported.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Italian high command communique today:

There was artillery activity in the Cyrenaican (Libyan) frontier zone. During Dec. 19 the enemy lost two fighter planes besides those reported lost in yesterday's bulletin.

Detachments of the Fifth Air Squadron operating in Cyrenaica deserve special citation, having tirelessly and with the most sublime forces of sacrifice collaborated in the fight for destruction of enemy armored units, undergoing hard fighting against enemy air forces at the same time.

On the Greek front attempted enemy attacks were repulsed everywhere. A raid by our forces gave us possession of an important position.

Air detachments carried out continuous effective actions in cooperation with the troops. A formation of bombers, dive-bombers and fighter planes hit troop concentrations, highway junctions and military works in all sectors involved in actions under way.

Two large sailboats were sunk in the Corfu canal.

Two Gloster (British) planes were shot down in repeated violent fighting. One of our planes failed to return.

Our naval units bombarded enemy positions along the Ionian coast effectively, hitting pre-established targets.

There was artillery activity in East Africa.

One of our air formations made a night raid on Aden, bombing the airport from a low altitude. Other formations bombed enemy defense works in the Metemma zone, starting large fires.

Texts of the Day's War Communiques

British

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP).—A communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security today:

Shortly before dawn today a few single enemy aircraft dropped bombs in widely separated districts in the eastern half of England. Little damage was done and no one was killed or seriously injured. One of these bombers was destroyed.

During the hours of daylight there has been some enemy activity on a small scale. Bombs, dropped in the London area this afternoon, hit a block of flats and caused a small number of casualties.

Another enemy aircraft was shot down this afternoon, making two destroyed during the day.

An earlier communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

Last night the enemy made an attack on Liverpool and Merseyside.

This lasted several hours, but by the early morning the position was already well in hand. A tannery and a storage yard were set on fire, but these and a number of other fires were all soon extinguished or under control. A considerable number of houses were demolished or seriously damaged, but casualties are not expected to be heavy.

In the attacks on invasion ports particularly good results were observed at Ostend, Antwerp and Le Havre. Flushing, Boulogne and the docks at Amsterdam were also bombed during the night.

No losses were suffered by the large forces of aircraft engaged in these successful and extensive operations.

An Admiralty communique:

The following has been received from the commander in chief of the Mediterranean:

Fleet air arm aircraft attacked Rhodes, Stampalia and Scarpanto on the morning of Dec. 17. Weather conditions made observation of results difficult, but fires were seen to have been started. All aircraft returned safely.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 21 (AP).—A communique of the British general headquarters today:

EGYPT—While enemy troops holding the Bardia defenses are being harassed by artillery fire, our forces, which continue to be reinforced, are clearing the areas to the northwest and west. An additional 900 prisoners and four guns have been captured.

On the Sudan frontier our patrols continue their aggressive activity.

No change in the situation on the Kenya front.

A communique from the Royal Air Force Middle East command:

During another engagement between our fighters and enemy bombers two S79's and one S81 were shot down.

In Italian East Africa, Gura, Mai Adaga, Metemma, Assab and Tessenei were raided.

Aircraft of the Rhodesian squadron carried out a raid on Metemma and Tessenei, troop concentrations being attacked at the former and enemy aircraft on the ground at the latter. One Caproni (bomber) was reported badly damaged.

It is not possible to estimate the amount of damage caused at Gura or Mai Adaga, but all bombs fell within the target area, while at Assab dive attacks were made on a waterworks.

On Dec. 18 aircraft of the South African Air Force, carried out raids on Ifmadu and Moyale. At the former place a garrison building and motor transport were bombed and at the latter direct hits were obtained on an enemy camp.

KONOYE NAMES NEW MINISTERS UNEXPECTEDLY

Japanese Cabinet Changes Believed Caused by Pact With Axis.

ADDED UNEASINESS REPORTED

Stricter Enforcement of Nation's Economic Laws Expected as Result of Shift.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Japanese Premier Prince Konoye's appointment today of new Ministers of Justice and Home Affairs is believed by Shanghai observers to have been motivated largely by the Japanese people's increasing uneasiness over their Government's military alliance with Italy and Germany.

Dissatisfaction with Japan's commitments has been gaining momentum since early this month, and reports were current two weeks ago that the Konoye Government might fall as a result.

However, it was understood political leaders were loath to permit a complete change in government because of a fear this would accentuate the public's misgivings. Therefore it was decided to strengthen the present Cabinet through the addition of Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma as Minister of Home Affairs and Lieut.-Gen. Heisuke Yanagawa as Minister of Justice.

The further addition of Gen. Baron Sadao Araki as minister without portfolio appeared probable since he, like Baron Hiranuma, commands considerable political influence. Baron Araki is a former War Minister. The fiery general recently conferred at length with Prince Konoye.

Stricter enforcement of economic restrictions was seen by observers as a further factor in the Cabinet changes.

Cabinet Strengthened.

TOKIO, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—New Japanese ministers of justice and home affairs were appointed by Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye today in a surprise move interpreted by observers as a step to strengthen the Cabinet, aimed at stricter enforcement of economic restrictions.

Acting after long conferences with Emperor Hirohito and members of his Cabinet, the Premier designated Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma as Home Minister and Lieut.-Gen. Heisuke Yanagawa as Minister of Justice.

Baron Hiranuma, Premier for several months in 1939 and recently a minister without porfolio in the Konoye Cabinet, succeeds Eija Yasui as head of the vital department controlling the nationwide police system and prefectural, municipal and village authorities.

Gen. Yanagawa, a former Vice-Minister of War and one-time commander of the Japanese garrison at Formosa, replaces Akira Kazami as Minister of Justice, and adds military strength to the Cabinet. His new post demands close co-operation with the army and also with the Home Ministry in the prosecution of law violators.

Widespread Complaints.

Reports of widespread complaints and numerous violations of the Government's low price policy have appeared recently in the Japanese press.

Economic police recently announced that rice hoarders and foodstuff profiteers would be vigorously prosecuted, but the press complained that no concerted action had been taken.

The army was said to be pushing vigorously a low price, anti-luxury policy in an attempt to "induce the people to share the hardships of the battle front and stabilize the domestic economy."

Observers expressed belief that the Cabinet change presaged increased efforts to accelerate the totalitarian movement in Japan. Baron Hiranuma is a favorite among rightists.

Contrary to the custom in previous Cabinet changes, when public announcements were delayed, the populace was quickly informed of today's shakeup by newsboys shouting extras in Tokio streets.

WARNING BY SIAM

Retaliation Threatened if Bankok Is Bombed.

BANGKOK, Thailand, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The Thailand (Siam) radio broadcast a warning today that the Thai air force would bomb Dalat, Pnompenh and Saigon, all in French Indo-China, if French forces attempted to attack Bangkok.

The warning was in reply, the broadcast said, to a Saigon radio report that French planes had dropped bombs on Korat, in Thailand, and approached Bangkok.

Border clashes between forces of the two countries have been reported for several months.

U. S. MERCHANDISE HELD IN INDO-CHINA

French Refusal To Release $10,000,000 Cargo Laid To Japanese Pressure

Most Of It Consigned To West China—American Consul's Efforts Futile

[By the Associated Press]

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Dec. 21—Charles Reed, United States Consul, has spent the last ten days in a vain effort to obtain release of some $10,000,000 in American merchandise held here and at Haiphong since Japan's entry into Indo-China, it was learned today from authoritative sources.

Reed has urged French authorities to grant permission to re-export the cargoes, but these sources stated emphatically that the French refusal was due to pressure from Japanese military officials.

Consigned To West China

The cargo, the majority of which was assigned to Chinese purchasers in West China, now is piled in warehouses here and at Haiphong and guarded by Japanese soldiers although American flags are flown from the buildings. Shipment to West China became impossible when Japanese entry into Indo-China disrupted service on the Haiphong-Kunming railway.

It also was learned that Joseph C. Grew, United States Ambassador at Tokyo, also has been attempting to obtain release of this American property, apparently without success.

Thai Border Warfare Continues

Hostilities in the Thailand and Indo-China border war continue spasmodically. In the last twenty-four hours French anti-aircraft guns at Battambang have fired intermittently on Thai planes, while along the lower Mekong river there have been several clashes between French and Siamese scouting patrols.

The French announced continued progress in the suppression of Japanese-armed native "rebels" in the vicinity of Langson, on the northeast border, with 100 surrounded and facing annihilation south of Langson. Chinese reports said 300 more had entered southern Kwangsi Province and immediately were disarmed by Chinese border forces.

Vichy Sends Out Feeler To End Border Warfare

Vichy, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Petain Government has sent out a feeler to end the Thailand-Indo-China "undeclared war" by negotiation.

A communique said the border incidents, which at the beginning of the month were "fully alarming," had become no worse and that there were indications that Bangkok had not abandoned the idea of conversations. If this is true, the communique added, the French chargé d'affaires at Bangkok "will be ready to begin conversations."

It also was stated that Indo-China had taken only limited reprisals against Thailand's activities in Indo-China.

Mexican Theaters Guarded

Mexico City, Dec. 21 (AP)—Police assigned special guards today to all theaters showing anti-Nazi films and to all meetings of an anti-Nazi nature in an effort to halt a series of organized disturbances by groups crying "heil Hitler" and throwing stench bombs, tear gas and itch powder.

'Fireside Chat' On Defense Predicted

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—A study of White House records today showed that President Roosevelt, in setting up his new defense machinery, acted under clause six, paragraph one, of an Executive order issued September 10, 1939, redefining the functions and duties of the Executive Office.

The order was issued under authority vested in the President by the Constitution and the Government Reorganization Act.

Clause six in the order said there shall be within the Executive Office of the President "in the even of a national emergency, or threat of a national emergency, such office for mergency management as the President shall determine."

DEC 22 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 21—Four men personally selected by President Roosevelt as a defense "high command" shouldered the concentrated responsibility today of arming America.

The new organization will be known as the office for production management for defense and consists of William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman of the present defense commission, War Secretary Henry R. Stimson and Navy Secretary Frank Knox. Knudsen will be director. Although the present defense advisory commission will be retained, it was expected that the new board would take over most of its duties.

Ten Days Needed

Prospects were that the new set-up would be functioning by January 1.

The President said that about ten days would be required to perfect executive orders necessary for its establishment. Knudsen, one of the nation's outstanding production experts, will represent the management.

Hillman, a union man for thirty years, will handle labor problems, and will be assistant director of the board. Secretaries Knox and Stimson will present the viewpoint of the army and navy.

It was learned from usually well-informed quarters outside the White House that the President was considering a "fireside chat" on the status of the program. There was no indication when it might be given.

The board, the President indicated, will have all the powers which he constitutionally can turn over to subordinates. Under the Constitution, he said, there can be no second president.

Confident Of Harmony

Mr. Roosevelt appeared confident of harmony in the new organization. To a question from a reporter as to whether Knudsen and Hillman would have coequal authority in the production management office, the President replied that he thought it fair to assume there would be unanimous agreement in the division.

Congressional comment on preparedness moves turned on the question of aid for Great Britain.

At San Francisco, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) criticized the President's plan to lend the British war materials, and declared:

"If we are to start on a program of loaning guns, boats, aircraft and munitions to every nation that gets into war with another nation, we'll be entering every war that starts, whether it be in Africa, South America, or Asia."

Two Democratic Senators, Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa, and Alva Adams, of Colorado, expressed the belief that the question of extending credit to Britain should be submitted to Congress as a simple financial proposition.

Gillette said he would like an opportunity to pass directly on the question of removing legal bars which currently prevent loans to Britain.

Said Adams:

"If we're going to lend money to England, let's lend money to England. We aren't going to fool Germany or anybody else by taking some roundabout course."

OPPOSES ARMS LOAN

Wheeler Against Roosevelt Munitions Plan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt's plan to lend war materials to Britain found a stern foe today in Senator Burton K. Wheeler, who said adoption of the program would start the United States toward becoming "the greatest military oligarchy the world has ever known."

The Montana Senator, quoting the President as saying, "If your neighbor's house is on fire, you'd loan him your hose," told interviewers:

"Of course you would loan him your hose. But if two of your neighbors were in a fight, you would not go over and loan your gun to one of them to kill the other and then talk about a good neighbor policy.

"If we are to start on a program of loaning guns, boats, aircraft and munitions to every nation that gets into a war with another nation," Senator Wheeler said, "we'll be entering every war that starts and set up here in the United States the greatest military oligarchy the world has ever known."

ACCORD IS SOUGHT ON DEFENSE ISSUE

Dispute Is Whether Contracts Should Require Labor Law Compliance

Tentative $2,000,000 Order Awarded Ford Provides Key Case In Point

DEC 22 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 21—The Administration was reported today to be studying means of compromising the one major controversy that has cropped up over national defense—whether armament contracts shall include a clause requiring compliance with labor laws.

Informed sources said the War Department was considering a broader clause than that now included in defense contracts. At present, contractors need only pledge observance of the Walsh-Healy Act under which the Labor Department can fix wage-and-hour standards for an industry.

Some officials doubted, however, that any concessions would include the proposal of Sidney Hillman, labor member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, and CIO leaders that the contracts state specifically that employers must comply with the Wagner Act guaranteeing labor the right to organize and bargain collectively.

Protest Over Ford

Hillman protested last week when tentative War Department contracts totaling $2,000,000 with the Ford Motor Company made no mention of the Wagner law. Both William S. Knudsen, defense commissioner in charge of production, and the War Department took the view that this was unnecessary.

30.24-6545

Although approved by Knudsen, signing of the contracts has been delayed while defense commission and War Department officials study a possible compromise of the divergent views on labor policies.

The Ford contracts, for midget scoutcars and other vehicles, provided a key case because the company has pending an appeal from a Labor Board decision under the Wagner Act.

To Prevent Delays

In seeking a compromise, the War Department was represented authoritatively to be trying to reconcile conflicting views both within and without the defense commission, with the primary objective of preventing any delay in defense preparations.

The navy has not figured in the latest phase of the labor controversy, but logically would be governed by any alteration of contracts. It has concurred officially with Knudsen's expressed view that stipulations not specifically required by law had no logical place in defense orders. Congress directed that the Walsh-Healey stipulation be included in all contracts of $10,000 or over.

Production Management of the Defense Commission. It concluded with an appeal for co-operation of "every element in the American community," and closed a day marked by the following gains toward U. S. rearmament:

1—Extension of the export control system to 15 additional items, including chemicals useful in production of war gases and aviation gasoline.

2—Placing of Navy orders totaling $284,218,700 for submarine chasers and auxiliary vessels. Included were four ships designed for placing anti-submarine nets at entrances to strategic harbors.

3—Selection of a site at Tulsa, Okla., for a plant which will assemble planes from parts made in automobile factories. Similar plants already have been allocated to Omaha, Neb., and Kansas City, Mo.

4—Award of a $6,756,399 contract to the Hercules Powder Co. of Wilmington, Del., for operation and equipment of a powder bag loading plant near Pulaski, Va. This plant will operate in connection with the $36,000,000 powder plant the same firm is building for the Government at Radford, Va.

"Both the future security of the United States and the total defense for our democratic principles in this worldwide contest," he continued, "demand that every resource of capital and management and maximum effort on the part of labor shall be ceaselessly employed to provide means of defense against attack.

"The Office of Production Management has but one mission—production — production to the maximum of American resources in capital and labor, in management and industry, in every field which can contribute to victory."

The extension of the export control system by order of President Roosevelt took in cobalt, various plastic molding and testing machines, equipment and plans for producing aviation lubricating oil, and bromine, ethylene, ethylene dibromide and methylamine.

Mr. Nye and his bride of a week, a former Iowa school teacher, arrived here tonight from New Orleans for a honeymoon at Miami Beach. They will remain until Jan. 1.

'Big Four' Rallies America

(By Associated Press)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—Maximum production "in every field which can contribute to victory" will be America's answer to an "irreconcilable" crisis "that cannot be terminated by any methods of appeasement," the nation's new defense high command declared today after its first preliminary meeting.

(President Roosevelt has scheduled the new agency—the "Big Four"—to be formally operative within 10 days and before Congress meets probably will inaugurate it with a rearmament fireside chat, according to the United Press.)

The expression of the high command's purpose was made by William S. Knudsen, under his new title of Director of the Office for Knudsen asked the American people to recognize "the full gravity of the crisis" in the world and "figuratively to pull off their coats and roll up their sleeves and give their concentrated, undivided attention to one thing—the swiftest possible production of mears of defense."

Knudsen's colleagues are Sidney Hillman and Secretaries Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson.

He said "the contest which produced this crisis is irreconcilable in character and cannot be terminated by any methods of appeasement."

Nye Says Arming Is Fast Enough

By The Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 21—Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, tonight scoffed at statements that the United States' rearmament program was not progressing fast enough.

"We are producing enough to meet our own needs as long as we don't give all we produce to other countries," Mr. Nye commented.

He said he would support Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, in Mr. Clark's attempt to establish a committee to investigate foreign propaganda and also a proposal to study cash and other financial holdings of foreign powers in the United States to determine whether Britain needs loans.

Britain should spend her own resources before obtaining financial aid in this country, Mr. Nye declared, adding that "we ought to be sure that every penny we loan them will be a gift, just as it was twenty-five years ago. We'll never get a penny back."

AMMUNITION (PMS BUDGET-NEW)

BY EDWARD E.BOMAR

WASHINGTON, DEC. 21-(AP)-DEFENSE OFFICIALS REPORTED TODAY THAT THE ARMY HAD FORESTALLED A PERILOUS THREATENED SHORTAGE OF AMMUNITION BY SPEEDING A NEW $50,000,000 SMOKELESS POWDER PLANT TOWARD COMPLETION.

UNDER WAR DEPARTMENT PRESSURE, TWO OF SIX PROJECTED PRODUCTION LINES AT THE NEW CHARLESTOWN, IND., PLANT ARE EXPECTED TO BE FINISHED EARLY IN THE SPRING, TWO MONTHS OR MORE AHEAD OF SCHEDULE.

THESE LIMITED FACILITIES ALONE, BY AUTHORITATIVE ESTIMATES, WILL MORE THAN DOUBLE THE NATION'S EXISTING CAPACITY TO SUPPLY POWDER TO THE ARMY AND NAVY. UNTIL THEY ARE PUT INTO OPERATION, THE CAPACITY TO REPLACE LIMITED RESERVES IS SO LOW AS TO CAUSE OFFICIAL CONCERN.

JUST FOUR SUBSTANTIAL PRODUCERS OF THE TYPE OF SMOKELESS POWDER USEB IN SHELLS HAVE SUPPLIED THE PEACETIME NEEDS OF THE ARMY AND NAVY FOR YEARS. ONE OF THESE, THE HERCULES PLANT AT KENVIL, N.J., WAS DAMAGED BY AN EXPLOSION THIS FALL.

THE OTHERS ARE THE ARMY'S PLANT AT PICATINNY, N.J., THE NAVY'S INDIANHEAD, MD., ARSENAL, AND A DU PONT PLANT IN DELAWARE.

TO MULTIPLY MANY TIMES THEIR COMBINED NORMAL RECORDED OUTPUT OF ABOUT 25,000,000 POUNDS A YEAR, THE WAR DEPARTMENT IS BUILDING HUGE PLANTS AT CHARLESTOWN AND AT RADFORD, VA. IT CONTEMPLATES TWO MORE, BUT NONE WAS SCHEDULED TO ATTAIN FULL PRODUCTION UNTIL NEXT SUMMER.

SECRETARY STIMSON, DISCLOSING THIS WEEK THE ARRANGEMENT TO OPEN PART OF TH. RLESTOWN PLANT IN ADVANCE, SAID HE WAS "ASTONISHED AND DISMAYED" TO LEARN THE TIME REQUIRED TO BUILD AND EQUIP SUCH

MUNITIONS FACTORIES. HE TOLD REPORTERS HE HAD BEEN PRESSING FOR SPEED AND REPORTED THAT THE DU PONT COMPANY, WHICH WILL OPERATE THE CHARLESTOWN ESTABLISHMENT, WAS MAKING "FAST PROGRESS."

THE WAR DEPARTMENT UNDERTOOK TO STEP UP THE ARMY'S POWDER SUPPLY AT THE OUTSET OF THE CURRENT $500,000,000 PROGRAM TO ASSURE ADEQUATE MUNITIONS FOR THE EXPANDING LAND FORCES. THE NAVY ALREADY HAD ACCELERATED THE OUTPUT OF ITS INDIANHEAD, MD., ARSENAL.

Gold For Hoover

DEC 22 1940

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover, accepting the 1940 Gold Medal of the Pennsylvania Society of New York tonight, remarked that he was "glad to have a legal gold reserve at a time when that basis of credit is a criminal offense."

The medal was awarded Hoover for his "distinguished achievements, nationally and internationally, and for service to all humanity."

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 21—Former President Herbert Hoover declared tonight that employers and employes in essential war industries should waive their respective rights of lockout and strike "in favor of arbitration."

In a nationally broadcast speech accepting the 1940 gold medal of the Pennsylvania Society of New York, Hoover decried "intolerance" in the United States and said he believed the best way to cope with defense and allied problems was "to definitely organize increase of our industrial efficiency and productivity."

"Parallel Phenomena"

"Among the parallel phenomena with 1916-17," he said, "is the ferocity of the discussion going on among our own people."

Developing that theme, Hoover continued:

"Certainly it is a sign of a dangerously irresponsible mind in a nation when patriotic men are fiercely denounced as being the tools of Great Britain or pro-Nazi. And by way of pointed illustration, I refer to two men—single-minded men in their devotion to our country. They are William Allen White and Colonel Lindbergh—both of whom have long since earned the gratitude of Americans."

Advocates Debate

Hoover declared that it was the "transcendent right of Americans, and their duty" to express their position on war and peace and added that he wanted "no single step taken relating to war that is not given time for public debate."

"As Congress has the final responsibility to declare war," he said, "it should also debate and pass upon every step which may lead to war."

Discussing defense, Hoover asserted that the task the nation had taken upon itself "amounts in some ways to as great an effort as war itself. Many of its problems of economic organization are war problems."

"It is so large an effort," he continued, "that it demands complete national unity. And a pertinent place for unity is in labor relations.

Urges Arbitration

"In the last war employers and employes in essential war industry tactically waived the right of lockout and strike in favor of arbitration. It should be done again."

Hoover declared that the financing of the present preparedness program would be "far more difficult than in the last war," and asserted that "if we are to avoid inflation, we must pay still more taxes. We must have a more constructive tax system. We must place more of the Government borrowing directly upon the savings of the people and not by inflation of bank deposits.

"The ultimate end of inflation is revolution, and today's fashion in revolution is National Socialism."

Hoover noted that longer hours and lower wages for manufacturing labor were advocated by some as one way to help defense production.

Different Alternative

"I support an entirely different alternative," he said. "That is to definitely organize increase of our industrial efficiency and productivity."

He called for "removal of unnecessary governmental restrictions which encumber production and lessen the initiative of men."

"With sufficient increase of industrial efficiency," he said, "we could lower costs, lower prices, increase consumption and increase production.

"We could relieve the strain of priorities. We could take up some of the slack of unemployment. We could maintain our standard of living, we could prepare for the competition to come."

DEFENSE POLICY ASSAILED

Myers, National Organizer, Says It Helps 'Big Business' and Drives Us to War

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 21 (AP)—A six-point program stressing opposition to transfer of United States ships to any foreign power was adopted today by the Great Lakes conference of the National Maritime Unions (C. I. O.).

The statement of policy also urged a national defense set-up based on "immediate needs of the people" and provided for a march on Washington to support "the people's program," as called for by the N. M. U. in New York City last week.

It also urged that no loans be made to Great Britain and appealed for independent political action by labor and the people generally and organization of all unorganized seamen.

Frederick N. Myers, national field organizer, told the conference:

"The new defense set-up is designed to protect big business and to plunge the country into war in the interests of big business."

He said that "the interests of the men who lead our Defense Commission are not the people's interests" and asserted that the leaders of the National Defense Commission "are more interested in profits than a high standard of living."

30.24-6547

Objecting to the transfer of American ships and credits to Great Britain as steps "moving us step by step closer to war," he added:

"Many of the vessels being sold to Great Britain are going into direct competition with American ships. More than 300 vessels have been sold directly or indirectly to Britain."

About fifty representatives of thirty-two Great Lakes ship crews attended the opening sessions of the annual two-day conference.

CIO Union Questions British Ship Situation

[By the Associated Press]

DEC 22 1941

New York, Dec. 21—Great Britain has more merchant shipping under her control today than ever before in her history, according to a survey by the National M 'time Union (CIO), which placed the ire at nearly 17,000,000 tons.

The survey was described today by National Organizer Howard McKenzie, who conducted it, as proof that "the cry 'Aid aid to Britain' is little less than outright duplicity."

A union statement summarizing the survey said that at least 8,300,000 tons of this shipping was engaged in non-defense trade a "in no way connected with British war efforts."

"Some of it is actually engaged in carrying oil, copper and other war supplies from South America to Spain for transshipment to Italy and Germany to be used against the British people," the statement added.

"In addition to her own merchant fleet, the largest in the world," it said, "the British Ministry of Shipping now controls fleets totaling 9,000,000 tons formerly operated by countries now in German hands.

"Nevertheless, the United States Maritime Commission has approved the transfer or sale to foreign countries of American vessels aggregating more than 1,000,000 tons, of which the British got almost half."

Lost Three Million Tons

The statement said England had lost 3,000,000 tons of shipping by submarines and mines since the start of the present war, but that she had acquired 3,500,000 tons of Norwegian shipping, eighty-three per cent. of the 3,000,000-ton Dutch fleet and about a third of Denmark's 1,200,000 tons.

"If the British are so hard up for ships," McKenzie asked, "why don't they withdraw some of this foreign shipping, now operating under their control, from trade with neutrals and put it into defense trade?"

Contracts Let For 31 Ships

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 21—Secretary of Navy Frank Knox announced today the awarding of contracts to private shipyards for thirty-one additional minelayers, tenders and other naval vessels, estimated to cost $265,765,500.

Additional contracts totaling $6,600,000 were awarded at the same time to expand facilities at the widely scattered shipyards receiving the orders.

Cost Plus Fixed Fee

The vessels will be built on a cost-plus-fixed-fee basis. Detailed breakdowns and delivery dates were not disclosed. The shipyards, number of vessels and limit of cost on expansion of facilities included:

The Willamette Iron and Steel Corporation, Portland, Ore., two minelayers, $1,000,000 for expansion of facilities.

Lake Washington Shipyards, Seattle, Wash., six small seaplane tenders. No expansion of facilities provided.

Associated Shipbuilders, Seattle, four small seaplane tenders; $700,000 for expansion.

Ingalls Shipbuilding Company, Pascagoula, Miss., four net layers; $2,000,000 for expansion.

Moore Dry Dock Company, Oakland, Cal., two submarine tenders and five submarine rescue vessels. No expansion.

Sun Shipbuilding Company, Chester, Pa., three destroyer tenders and three seaplane tenders; $2,500,000 for expansion.

Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, San Pedro, Cal., two repair ships; $400,000 expansion.

Export List Tightened

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 21—In the interest of national defense, President Roosevelt issued a proclamation today placing fifteen additional items under the export licensing system.

The White House said the new items consisted of miscellaneous products omitted from former proclamations and were added "for the purpose of perfecting those lists."

Previously fifty-eight articles and materials had been placed under license control, including such items as aircraft, iron and steel products, aviation gasoline and various types of machine tools.

Today's items included:

Cobalt, plastic moulding machines and presses, gauges, measuring machines, balancing machines, testing machines, hydraulic pumps, tools inorporating industrial diamonds, equipment and plans for production of aviation lubricating oil, bromine, ethylene, ethylene dibromide, methylamine, strontium metals and ores, abrasives and abrasive products containing emery corundum or garnet, as well as abrasive paper and cloth.

U. S. Right To Draft In Peace Or In War Is Upheld By Court

Boise, Idaho, Dec. (AP)—Congress has the power to 'apel military service of a citizen," w ether in "peace time or war time," Federal Judge C. C. Cavanah ruled today. He refused to quash an indictment charging failure to register under the Selective Service Act.

Boyd B. Cornell, 24, and Clark Cornell, 30, brothers of Middleton, challenged constitutionality of the act, contending Congress lacked authority to recruit civilians during peace ti

They appeared at the registration place, expressed their views and departed. Indictments followed. Their trial by jury probably will be held in February.

NAVY SEEKING INCREASE TO 400,000 MEN

Reported Planning Request to Congress in Preparation for New 2-Ocean Force

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Navy, rushing construction of a two-ocean fleet, was reported authoritatively today to be planning to ask Congress for a substantial increase in its enlisted strength.

The expanded Navy will require between 400,000 and 500,000 seamen, exclusive of the Marine Corps, but spokesmen declined to say whether Congress would be asked at the coming session to authorize the entire number.

Some Congressional sources said, however, that ranking Navy officials favored getting the necessary legislation enacted so as to save time in event of an emergency.

On Dec. 1, the Navy had 166,388 of its 191,000-limit of enlisted men and officials said the total was rising every day.

Panama Defenses Hit

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—Representative Fred Bradley (Rep., Mich.), one of twelve Congressmen returning from a trip to the Panama Canal, declared today that there "was not a modern bomber in the zone."

"If the Administration considers it such a vital place to guard," he said, "why doesn't it do something to protect the zone with up-to-date aircraft? If there are any modern bombers there, they are so pitifully few that we didn't see them. I was told the fastest airplane there was capable of only 140 miles an hour."

The group returned aboard the liner Panama, after a twelve-day trip.

Bullet-Marked Ship Arrives At New York

Finnish Freighter Machine-Gunned In Kattegat Despite Nazi Permission For Passage

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Finnish freighter Carolina Thorden, pock-marked with the machine-gun bullets of a Nazi warplane and carrying the rescued crew of the mined Greek freighter Dionssios Sathaos, dropped anchor in the lower bay today.

Crew members said German authorities had given the Carolina Thorden permission to sail through the Kattegat, an arm of the North Sea, on the way to the Atlantic from Gothenburg, Sweden.

Despite this assurance, the seamen said, a Nazi warplane splattered the ship with bullets. The crew counted fifty-four floating mines in the Kattegat between sunrise and sundown. Capt. Carl Gabrielson said that in one day in the North Sea his wireless operator had picked up distress signals from thirteen ships.

Listens As One Sailor Tells Her Of Bombing Of Steamer

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 21—In a room redolent of cigar smoke and the aroma of coffee, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands—a royal refugee in a foreign land—was reunited with some of her countrymen today.

For nearly an hour she sat in the Seamen's Institute as twoscore Dutchmen of the sea—some who had served their nation for thirty years—told her tales of their adventures.

Sips Coffee And Smokes

Sipping coffee, and smoking a cigarette, the Princess listened as one sailor, Maarte Van Der Zwan, told her that twenty of a crew of thirty-two had been killed in the explosion of a time bomb which sank the steamer Stad Schiedam last September 16.

She chatted in her native tongue with Frits Franken, who sailed under the Dutch flag for more than a quarter century. She asked that cigars be distributed to all the seamen.

They cheered as she left the hall to attend a luncheon in her honor, given by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and later a private reception at the Netherlands Club.

Arrives From Capital

The Princess arrived here yesterday from Washington after visiting President and Mrs. Roosevelt for three days. She will attend services tomorrow morning in the West End Collegiate Reformed Church. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. Edgar Franklin Romig, said she had expressed the hope her visit "might be in as simple and informal a way as would be customary were she in Holland."

Tomorrow night she will leave by train for Ottawa, Canada, to spend Christmas with her two daughters, the Princesses Beatrix and Irene, aged 3 years and 16 months, respectively.

7 From Devil's Island Ask U. S. To Free Them To Fight Against Nazis

Miami, Fla., Dec. 21 (AP)—Facing deportation next month to Martinique and fearful of death before a firing squad, seven fugitives from France's Devil's Island penal colony renewed their pleas today for freedom and a chance to fight in the forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The men, with a companion who is in the United States Hospital at Key West, made their way to Miami August 24 in a thirty-foot sloop after a perilous voyage through the Caribbean. They have been held in Dade county jail.

Yesterday they received the news that the Coast Guard cutter Unalga would take them some time in January, with twenty other escaped prisoners now in Puerto Rico, back to French-controlled Martinique.

"We are being sent to our deaths by a firing squad," said Jean Touzin, 43, of Vichy, a veteran of the French World War navy.

SAN FRANCISCO, DEC 21-(AP)-PRINCESS STEPHANIE HOHENLOHE CONTINUED TODAY IN THE ROLE OF "MYSTERY WOMAN" AS THE HOUR APPROACHED FOR HER GOVERNMENT-ORDERED DEPARTURE FRO THE UNITED STATES.

DEPARTMENT OF IMMIGRATION OFFICERS SAID THEY HAD "NO IDEA" WHERE THE 44-YEAR-OLD HUNGARIAN PRINCESS WAS, AND THE OFFICE OF CAPTAIN FRITZ WIEDEMANN, GERMAN CONSUL GENERAL AND HER FRIEND, MAINTAINED "NO COMMENT" SILENCE.

THE PRINCESS IS UNDER INSTRUCTIONS FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE TO LEAVE THE UNITED STATES BY MIDNIGHT TONIGHT, AT THE EXPIRATION OF HER ONE-YEAR VISITOR'S PERMIT WHICH THE DEPARTMENT REFUSED TO RENEW.

IT WAS EXPLAINED UNOFFICIALLY THAT HER ASSOCIATION WITH NAZI LEADERS IN THIS COUNTRY MADE HER CONTINUED PRESENCE HERE OPPOSED TO THE BREST INTERESTS OF THE NATION. EVERY EFFORT TO INTERVIEW HER SINCE THE ORDER WAS ISSUED FOUR DAYS AGO HAS BEEN UNSUCCESSFUL.

Princess Hohenlohe Books Passage, Report

If This Is True Her Dead Line For Departure Will Be Extended To Jan. 9, Officials Say

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—Justice Department officials said tonight the Immigration Service was checking a report that Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe, who has been ordered to leave the United States, ha! booked passage on a steamer sailing from San Francisco on January 9.

If that report proved true, officials said, the deadline for her departure fixed for this midnight would be allowed to run until January 9. But, they added, if investigation showed she had not made such arrangements, deportation proceedings would be started, probably early next week. The ship's name and destination were not known here.

The Immigration Service recently denied the Princess' application for an extension of a visitor's permit.

Speculations on What Will Happen If Britain Now Rules the Adriatic

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

When the British drove the noses of a fleet of warships right up into Signor Mussolini's own private fish-pond, which is to say the Adriatic, without encountering signs of the enemy, they uncovered one of the most astonishing situations of the altogether mad battle of the Mediterranean.

If this development means what it seems to mean, and I'm not prepared to say that it does, then good fortune is unfolding for Great Britain like a rose under the morning sun.

To get the full significance of this occurrence we must realize that the fleet passed through the forty-five-mile-wide Strait of Otranto, with two great Italian naval bases almost near enough to be piped up by a boatswain's whistle. It then cut right across Italy's line of communication with its beleaguered army in southern Albania.

The British also plastered the important port of Valona—Albanian end of this life line—with a hundred tons of explosive without having even a pea-shooter leveled at them. They steamed up the Adriatic as far as Durazzo, northern Albanian port, and Bari on the Italian coast, and never a ripple from an Italian warship or a roar from an Italian plane.

No Details Given.

The only indication of any movement of the Italian Navy came today in a report by the High Command that Fascist ships had attacked the Ionian coast of Greece, scoring heavy hits. Details were lacking.

The implications of this mystery of the Adriatic are even more startling than the uninterrupted cruise of the British unit. His Majesty's Admiralty wisely refrains from drawing conclusions, but British commentators say that the Italians have conceded domination of the Adriatic as well as the Mediterranean, and have sought a hide-out to escape their enemy.

Whether those conclusions may be accurate or not, it strikes me we shall be well advised to watch developments a bit before making up our minds. Should it prove to be a fact that the Italians have abandoned control of their Adriatic to the British, then we would have an entirely new situation something like this:

Would Help Jugoslavia.

With communications between Italy and Albania severed, the Fascists would have to abandon that Balkan country, and it's difficult to see how they could evacuate their already shattered army from Albania. Thus the Romans would have written off their attempted conquest of Greece as a catastrophe, and would have surrendered a highly strategic Balkan base of operations to the enemy.

The entire east coast of Italy would be virtually under the muzzles of British guns. You could make anything you wanted out of that.

The great State of Jugoslavia, which lies on the Adriatic just across from Italy, would lose some of its fears of invasion by the Axis Powers. For the first time the way would be open for the British to aid the Jugoslavs should the occasion arise.

This situation would tend to give the British a still greater foothold in the Balkans, providing defense to meet any attempt by the Axis to storm the Dardanelles and reach the Near East, and affording a base for possible offensive operations against Germany through the Balkans. Remember that the British are preparing for a land offensive against Germany, and it might be through the Balkans quite as well as across western Europe.

Big Developments Expected.

The naval correspondent of the British Press Association reports: "With the Adriatic Sea now open to us, important developments may be expected."

That would seem to be a conservative forecast, but I emphasize again that my article is speculative, being based on what I prefer not to accept as an established fact without further proof. Having said that, I may add that if the British do indeed control the Adriatic, then Italy is in a desperate position.

The word "desperate" is used advisedly. My dictionary defines "desperate" as "leaving no or little room for hope."

(WX) INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

BY KIRKE L.SIMPSON

WINTER HAS COME ASTRONOMICALLY FOR WAR-RACKED EUROPE AND WITH IT PROPHECIES FROM LONDON THAT A TRIPLE-FRONTED GERMAN ATTEMPT TO FINISH OFF ENGLAND WILL BE LAUNCHED--AND DEFEATED--BEFORE SPRING BURGEONS.

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL HAS SUPPORTED THAT PREDICTION. HE TOLD PARLIAMENT THAT TO OFFSET WANING GERMAN-ITALIAN AXIS WAR FORTUNES, HITLER "MUST DO SOMETHING NOW, OR AT ANY RATE WITHIN TWO MONTHS."

IT SEEMS UTTERLY FANTASTIC TO ASSUME THAT HITLER'S HIGH COMMAND, SKILLED AND CAREFULLY DARING SOLDIERS, COULD ASSENT TO A WINTER INVASION SCHEDULE EXCEPT IN DESPERATION. THE RISKS ARE GREAT, THE SEASONAL ADVANTAGES FEW, (SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE AMS BUDGET)

(WX) FIRST ADD WAR INTERPRETIVE BY SIMPSON X X X ADVANTAGES FEW.

THE LONGEST NIGHT OF THE YEAR IS THAT OF DECEMBER 21-22. FROM THEN THE NIGHTS WILL SLOWLY SHORTEN AND THE DAYS LENGTHEN UNTIL JUNE.

LONG NIGHTS ADMITTEDLY PERMIT BOMBING WITH MINIMIZED LOSSES FOR THE ATTACKERS; BUT ALSO WITH GREATLY INCREASED BOMBING INACCURACY. ENGLAND HAS ENDURED MONTHS OF NIGHT ATTACK WITH NO HINT OF WEAKENING.

DEC 22 1940

A WINTER SEA INVASION BY THE GERMANS, UNLESS BOMBING HAD ALREADY SMASHED BRITISH MORALE, WOULD HOLD LESS TERROR FOR ENGLAND THAN DID THE INVASION THREATS OF LAST SUMMER AND FALL. BRITISH CHANNEL SCOUTING IN THREE DIMENSIONS, AIR, SURFACE AND SUB-SURFACE, HAS BEEN PERFECTED TO A FINE ART BY SIX MONTHS OF PRACTICE. THAT A BARGE-CARRIED NAZI ARMY COULD REACH ENGLISH SOIL IN SUBSTANTIAL FORCE WITHOUT DETECTION BY NIGHT OR DAY SEEMS WHOLLY IMPROBABLE.

CHURCHILL WARNED THAT BREATHING SPELLS FOR LONDON OR THE REST OF ENGLAND FROM HEAVY NAZI NIGHT BOMBING RAIDS MIGHT BE MERELY IN PREPARATI FOR A GREATER AIR ASSAULT. THAT IS POSSIBLE.

IT IS ALSO POSSIBLE, HOWEVER, THAT THE BREATHING SPELLS ARE DUE TO PRESENT NAZI DIFFICULTIES OF SUPPLYING FUEL OIL AND GASOLINE FOR U-BOAT AND AIR FLEETS AND AT THE SAME TIME STORING RESERVES AT FRENCH, DUTCH, BELGIAN AND NORWEGIAN ATTACK BASES. THOSE DIFICULTIES WILL INCREASE, NOT LESSEN, IN THE MONTHS JUST AHEAD.

THE DANUBE'S 1,750 MILE WATERWAY THAT THREADS EAST AND WEST EUROPE TOGETHER IS GERMANY'S MAIN ROUTE FOR TRANSPORTATION OF RUMANIAN OIL. IN WINTER, IT IS ICED CLOSED FOR MANY WEEKS--THE SAME WEEKS WHEN BY BRITISH FORECAST IT WOULD BE MOST VITALLY NEEDED TO SUSTAIN A NAZI ALL-OUT ATTACK ON ENGLAND.

CONCENTRATED BOMBING OF NAZI AIR AND U-BOAT BASES ON THE INVASION COAST, AND OF CRITICALLY IMPORTANT RAIL JUNCTIONS DEEP INTO GERMANY HAS MARKED BRITISH STRATEGY. TO WHAT EXTENT NAZI OIL SUPPLIES HAVE BEEN HAMPERED CAN ONLY BE CONJECTURED, BUT BEYOND DOUBT IT HAS DONE SOME DAMAGE.

IN DECEMBER, JANUARY, FEBRUARY AND MARCH, THE NORTH SEA AND ENGLISH CHANNEL ARE NORMALLY TURBULENT. CROSSING THEM TO ENGLAND WITH THOUSANDS OF TROOPS AND HEAVY WAR GEAR JAMMED INTO LOW FREEBOARD, OPEN BARGES WOULD BE DIFFICULT EVEN UNOPPOSED.

THERE IS AN ODD, IF NOT SIGNIFICANT PARALLEL BETWEEN THE FORECASTS OF A NAZI WINTER-SPRING OFFENSIVE NOW AND THE LAST WORLD WAR WINTER. THEN, IN LATE 1917, THE CABLES FROM EUROPE HUMMED FOR MONTHS WITH FORECASTS OF A FINAL GERMAN BREAK-THROUGH ATTEMPT IN FRANCE IN SPRING.

DEC 22 1940

IT CAME ON MARCH 18, 1918, AGAINST THE BRITISH FIFTH ARMY, THE HINGE OF THE FRANCO-BRITISH BATTLE LINE. IT STABBED DEEPLY, WRINGING A BACKS-TO-THE-WALL ORDER FROM THE BRITISH COMMANDER, AND BRINGING AMERICAN TROOPS INTO THEIR FIRST MAJOR ACTION AT AMIENS BEFORE IT WAS HALTED.

EIGHT MONTHS LATER, GERMANY SURRENDERED. GERMAN MORALE AT HOME IF NOT AT THE FRONT COLLAPSED.

(ADVANCE)...BERLIN-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-IN EIGHT DAYS, ADOLF HITLER CAN EXPLAIN TO HIS PEOPLE SUCH A THING AS HIS PRESENT REASONS FOR BEING NICE TO RUSSIA--AND HE CAN SMELL THE FIRST SMOKE OF UNREST OR SERIOUS DISCONTENT IN A MATTER OF HOURS.

IT IS ALL A MATTER OF PARTY ORGANIZATION, WORKED OUT TO THE LAST AUTHORITARIAN DETAIL. IN THE BREADTH OF ITS SCOPE IT HAS THE AMERICAN STYLE OF SENTIMENT POLL BACKED TO THE WALL.

FOR INSTANCE, IT WAS NECESSARY TO HELP THE GERMAN PEOPLE UNDERSTAND WHY IT WAS IMPORTANT TO HAVE RUSSIA AS AN ALLY OR AT LEAST A QUIET FRIEND WHO WOULD NOT STRIKE IN THE BACK. IT SEEMS THAT THE PACT CAME FIRST, THEN THE PEOPLE WERE TOLD WHY IT WAS NECESSARY.

THE FULL PUBLIC EXPLANATION WAS NOT GIVEN TO THE PEOPLE THROUGH NEWSPAPERS. INSTEAD, IT WAS PASSED DOWN THROUGH THE CHAIN OF PARTY LEADERSHIP TO THE FINAL ROW OF BLOCK LEADERS. IT WAS THEIR JOB TO EXPLAIN IT TO PARTY MEMBERS AND NON-PARTY MEMBERS LIVING IN THEIR BLOCKS.

THE EXPLANATION SEEMED TO HAVE BEEN ACCEPTED, EVEN THOUGH IT WAS A SHARP CHANGE OF FRONT FOR A REGIME WHICH HAD BEEN HAMMERING AGAINST THE COMMUNISTS FROM THE DAY OF ITS BIRTH.

HERE IS HOW THE SYSTEM WORKS:

FOR PARTY PURPOSES, GERMANY IS DIVIDED INTO FORTY GAUS OR DISTRICTS. EACH GAU IS DIVIDED INTO "CIRCLES," EACH OF WHICH IN TURN IS DIVIDED INTO TOWNS. THE TOWNS, OF COURSE, ARE THE TOWNS OR CITIES WITHIN THE "CIRCLE." THE TOWNS ARE DIVIDED INTO "CELLS," AND THESE ARE SUBDIVIDED INTO BLOCKS. THE BLOCKS ARE SIMPLY CITY BLOCKS.

DEC 22 1941

OVER EACH GAU, CIRCLE, TOWN, CELL AND BLOCK IS A LEADER RESPONSIBLE FOR REPORTING OR "INFORMING" THE TERRITORY UNDER HIS JURISDICTION.

IF THE JOB IS TO "INFORM" THE PUBLIC IN A QUIET WAY WHY THE ONCE-HATED RUSSIANS MUST BE CONSIDERED RESPECTED COLLEAGUES IN THE NEW WORLD ORDER, FOR INSTANCE, THE DISTRICT LEADERS ARE CALLED TO BERLIN, ALL 40 OF THEM. THEY FLY TO SAVE TIME. THERE THEY HEAR TALKS BY PARTY LEADERS, HISTORIANS AND MILITARY MEN. THEY ARE GIVEN A COMPLETE FILL-IN OF WHAT THE GERMAN LEADERSHIP WANTS THEM TO TAKE BACK TO THEIR SUBORDINATES.

THEY FLY BACK TO THEIR DISTRICTS AND CALL MEETINGS OF CIRCLE LEADERS, WHO IN TURN GET THE OFFICIAL EXPLANATION. THUS IT IS PASSED ON DOWN TO THE BLOCK LEADERS THROUGH A SERIES OF CONFERENCES. TO THE BLOCK LEADERS FALLS THE JOB OF DOLING OUT THE INFORMATION TO THE GERMAN PUBLIC.

OFTEN ENOUGH THE EXPLANATIONS NEVER REACH THE PAPERS. THE PUBLIC KNOWS THE FUEHRER'S REASONS FOR AN ACTION TAKEN--OR IN SOME

BY GODFREY H.P.ANDERSON

(ADVANCE) LONDON-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-THE LONDON BOBBY IS A FRONT-LINE SOLDIER OF THE AIR BLITZ ON THE EMPIRE'S CAPITAL.

HIS FAMILIAR HIGH HELMET IS REPLACED BY A FLAT STEEL SHRAPNEL HAT WITH THE WHITE-PAINTED WORD "POLICE" (ALL CAPS), AND A KHAKI GASMASK HANGS ON HIS CHEST.

HE STILL COMMANDS THE DIMINISHED TRAFFIC IN HIS OLD LORDLY WAY -- SIX FEET SOMETHING OF IMPRESSIVE BLUE-CLAD STOLIDITY--FINDS TIME TO DIRECT BEWILDERED FOREIGNERS AND TELL SMALL BOYS THE TIME. BUT HE NEVER KNOWS WHEN THE BUILDINGS ON HIS BEAT MAY CRUMPLE TO DUST WITH A DEAFENING ROAR, WHEN BLEEDING AND MANGLED BODIES MAY LIE WAITING TO BE TORN FROM THE RUINS, WHEN HE MAY HIMSELF HAVE A DATE WITH DEATH.

FIFTY-FOUR BOBBIES ALREADY HAVE FALLEN WITH THOUSANDS OF THEIR FELLOW-LONDONERS TOHITLER'S BOMBS. SOME 372 LIE, SILENT AND BANDAGED, IN THE CITY'S HOSPITALS.

YET EVERY MOMENT OF EVERY DAY AND EVERY NIGHT, THE FAMILIAR TALL POLICEMEN STROLL SLOWLY ALONG THEIR BATTERED BEATS READY TO AID THE CITIZEN IN HIS DISTRESS.

WAR HAS PROVIDED A HOST OF NEW PROBLEMS FOR LONDON'S FAMED SCOTLAND YARD. SIR PHILIP GAME, SLIGHT, THIN-FACED, 64-YEAR-OLD COMMISSIONER OF METROPOLITAN POLICE, BEGAN PUTTING HIS FORCE ON A BASIS FOR POSSIBLE WAR ALMOST AS SOON AS HE HAD FINISHED WITH THE EXHAUSTING PROBLEMS SET BY KING GEORGE'S CORONATION.

AUXILIARY POLICE WERE ENROLLED IN THE SPECIAL CONSTABULARY AND A NEW WAR RESERVE FORCE. OLD OFFICERS, WHO HAD RETIRED ON PENSION, WERE RECALLED. BY THIS MEANS THE STRENGTH OF THE FORCE WAS INCREASED FROM ITS PEACETIME 18,000 TO ABOUT 35,000 ON THE OUTBREAK OF WAR.

A NEW DEPARTMENT WAS SET UP AT SCOTLAND YARD TO DEAL WITH THE HUNDREDS OF ANXIOUS INQUIRIES RECEIVED AFTER EACH NIGHT'S BOMBING FROM PEOPLE WHO HAD LOST THEIR FATHERS, THEIR MOTHERS, THEIR CHILDREN, THEIR FRIENDS.

BUT WHEN THE BOMBING OF LONDON WAS DELAYED, MANY EVACUEES RETURNED TO TOWN AND ROBBERY INCREASED AGAIN.

THIS YEAR HUNDREDS OF POTENTIAL CRIMINALS HAVE BEEN DRAFTED

DEC 22 1940

DEC 22 1940

INTO THE ARMY INSTEAD OF BEING LEFT ON THE BREADLINES UNTIL TEMPTED INTO CRIME.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS HAVE DROPPED SHARPLY BUT BICYCLE THEFTS HAVE RISEN. THIS PROBABLY IS ATTRIBUTABLE TO THE DIFFICULTIES OF OBTAINING GASOLINE--NOW STRICTLY RATIONED--AS MUCH AS TO THE FACT THAT POLICE REGULATIONS NOW REQUIRE EVERY DRIVER TO LOOK OR DISABLE HIS CAR EACH TIME HE LEAVES IT IN THE STREET. THIS ORDER, WHICH WAS DIRECTED AGAINST THE GERMANS WHEN INVASION WAS FEARED, HAS PROVED EQUALLY DISCOURAGING TO THE AUTOMOBILE THIEF.

TRAFFIC OFFENSES HAVE FALLEN, TOO, BECAUSE THERE ARE FEWER CARS ON THE STREETS. BUT MUCH OF THE TIME WHICH THE COURTS USED TO DEVOTE TO AUTO ACCIDENTS NOW IS EMPLOYED IN FINDING OUT WHO LEFT THE LIGHT ON.

DEC 22 1940

ENFORCEMENT OF THE BLACKOUT REGULATIONS HAS BROUGHT IN A TIDY SUM IN FINES, ALTHOUGH A FEW OFFENDERS HAVE SUCCESSFULLY ARGUED THAT THE BLAST FROM A NEARBY BOMB FLICKED ON THE SWITCH THEY HAD TURNED OFF.

SMASH AND GRAB RAIDS HAVE ALMOST DIED OUT, PERHAPS--AS A SCOTLAND YARD OFFICER PUT IT--"BECAUSE MOST OF THE SHOP WINDOWS ARE ALREADY SMASHED."

"WE DO ALL WE CAN TO PROTECT DAMAGED PROPERTY," SAID THE YARD MAN, "BUT AFTER A BOMB HAS FALLEN OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO TRY AND SAVE LIFE AND WHILE WE ARE DOING IT, THE SNEAK THIEF MAY GET HIS CHANCE. AFTER ALL, PEOPLE WOULD NOT THANK A POLICEMAN WHO SAVED A GOLD WATCH INSTEAD OF A HUMAN LIFE."

HOUSEBREAKING PERSISTS BUT IT IS MOSTLY THE WORK OF AMATEURS. "THE PROFESSIONAL SEEMS TO HAVE GONE OUT OF BUSINESS," ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIAL VIEW.

THE VICE SQUAD HAS HAD ITS WORK HALVES BY THE AIR WAR. NOWADAYS FEW LONDONERS GO OUT AT NIGHT.

CONFIDENCE MEN HAVE ADAPTED THEIR ART TO THE DEMANDS OF WAR, HIDING THEIR IDENTITY AMONG THE THOUSANDS OF MEN AND WOMEN IN UNIFORM. THE GULLIBLE PUBLIC, BELIEVING THAT EVERY MAN IN UNIFORM IS A POTENTIALHERO, DIVES INTO ITS POCKET TO AID THEM IN ANSWER TO their tuneful THEIR [illegible]FUL STORIES.

CASUALTY LISTS ARE CAREFULLY COMPILED AND PRINTED ON THE YARD'S OWN PRINTING PRESS FOR CIRCULATION TO LOCAL POLICE STATIONS WHERE, AFTER A BAD NIGHT, THERE MAY BE POIGNANT SCENES AS THE LISTS ARE POSTED.

DEC 22 1940

THEN AGAIN, IT IS A POLICEMAN WHO PULLS THE LEVER WHICH SETS OFF THE SCREAMING ELECTRIC SIRENS TO GIVE THE AIRRAID WARNING OR THE "RAIDERS PASSED" SIGNAL.

POLICE HAVE TO ENFORCE THE STRINGENT REGULATIONS AGAINST ALIENS, TO SEE THAT THEY DO NOT OWN AN AUTOMOBILE OR A BICYCLE, THAT THEY ARE NOT ON THE STREETS AFTER MIDNIGHT WITHOUT A SPECIAL CURFEW PERMIT, THAT THEY DO NOT POSSESS A CAMERA OR TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS.

THERE ARE OFTEN WHOLE STREETS TO BE ROPED OFF BECAUSE OF UNEXPLODED BOMBS, HOUSES TO BE EVACUATED, DAMAGED PROPERTY TO BE PROTECTED.

WHEN BRITAIN LIVED IN FEAR OF HOURLY INVASION AFTER THE FRENCH COLLAPSE, THE POLICE REMOVED ALL DIRECTION SIGNS FROM THE

30.24-6557
30.24—6557

STREETS AND ROUNDED UP THE HUNDREDS OF ENEMY ALIENS WHO SUFFERED INTERNMENT AS "FIFTH COLUMN" SUSPECTS.

THEN OLD LADIES IN SCORES TRIPPED FROM THE BOARDING-HOUSES OF KENSINGTON AND BAYSWATER TO TELL THE LOCAL POLICE THAT THEY WERE SURE THEIR NEIGHBOR WAS A GERMAN SPY. THE MOST WORTHY AND INNOCENT CITIZENS FOUND THEMSELVES DENOUNCED. ONE WOMAN EVEN SWORE HER NEIGHBOR WAS SPELLING OUT MESSAGES TO GERMAN AIRCRAFT BY THE WAY SHE HUNG HER WASHING ON THE LINE!

SOME SPIES WERE FOUND. BUT PSEUDO-REFUGEES AND SERVANT GIRLS SEEMED TO HAVE REPLACED THE ELABORATE BLONDE BEAUTIES WHO TEMPTED WASP-WAISTED CAVALRY OFFICERS OF FORMER WARS.

THE MOVEMENT OF VAST NUMBERS OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN FROM BOMBED AREAS TO THE COUNTRY HAS PROVIDED SPECIAL PROBLEMS AT MAIN-LINE RAILROAD STATIONS AND ELSEWHERE. HERE LONDON'S 150 WOMEN POLICE SOOTHE THE NERVOUS, COMFORT CRYING BABIES, CONTROL THE PUSHING CROWDS

THE THE TRANSFER OF THE YOUNG HAD AN EFFECT ON CRIME STATISTICS.

DEC 22 1941

DURING THE MONTHS BEFORE THE OUTBREAK OF WAR, CRIME INCREASED BY AS MUCH AS FIVE PER CENT. CONDITIONS WERE UNSETTLED. THE POLICE WERE PREOCCUPIED WITH PREPARING FOR THE WAR WHICH SEEMED INEVITABLE.

THEN CAME SEPTEMBER, 1939, AND THE DECLARATION OF WAR. MANY YOUNG OFFENDERS WERE TAKEN TO THE COUNTRY AND THE CRIMINAL ELEMENT TOOK TIME TO ADAPT ITSELF TO NEW CONDITIONS CAUSED BY A TOTAL BLACKOUT OF THE CITY. IN SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER THE CRIME CURVE DROPPED 10 PER CENT.

AGAIN THERE WERE OTHERS WHO BOUGHT UNIFORMS FROM A SENSE OF VANITY, BECAUSE THEY LIKED TO CUT A GOOD FIGURE BEFORE THEIR FAMILIES OR SWEETHEARTS OR FANCIED THEMSELVES IN BATTLE DRESS. NEW REGULATIONS HAVE BEEN ENFORCED ON TAILORS TO COUNTER THE EFFORTS OF THESE MASQUERADERS, WHO ARE GENERALLY UNMASKED BY SALUTING THE WRONG KIND OF OFFICER IN THE WRONG WAY, OR THROUGH SOME MINOR INCORRECT DETAIL OF THEIR OUTFITTING.

VICTOR LANGSTON, 33, DESCRIBED AS A FITTER WITH 13 PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS, WENT SO FAR AS TO POSE AS MEMBER OF A BOMB DISPOSAL SQUAD AND DECLARED THAT A BOMB WHICH HAD FALLEN IN A WEST END CAFE WAS SAFE WHEN IT WAS NOT. POLICE BEGAN TO MOVE BACK PEOPLE WHO HAD BEEN EVACUATED FROM THE AREA BEFORE THE FRAUD WAS DISCOVERED. BECAUSE LANGSTON, BY MENTIONING CAPTAIN DAVIES (WHO DUG OUT THE UNEXPLODED BOMB FROM UNDER ST.PAUL'S), FALSELY OBTAINED AN AUTOMOBILE AND GASOLINE, HE WAS SENTENCED TO EIGHT MONTHS' HARD LABOR BY A MAGISTRATE WHO CALLED HIM "A PUBLIC MENACE."

DEC 22 1941

STRANGER WAS THE BEHAVIOR OF FREDERICK GEORGE LEIGHTON-MORRIS, 30-YEAR-OLD OF INDEPENDENT MEANS, WHO WALKED CALMLY INTO A FRIEND'S APARTMENT AND REMOVED AN UNEXPLODED BOMB, CARRYING IT ACROSS THE ROAD AND INTO ST.JAMES'S PARK. BECAUSE OF HIS ACTION MORE PEOPLE HAD TO BE EVACUATED FROM THEIR HOMES NEARBY.

"I MUST HAVE LOST MY HEAD" HE SAID AND PAID A FINE OF £100 (ABOUT $400).

THERE HAS BEEN LITTLE "SERIOUS" CRIME, ALTHOUGH ONE MAN MURDERED HIS WIFE IN HIS BACKYARD AIRRAID SHELTER DURING A RAID, AND AN

A.R.P. WARDEN FOUND THREE MEN LYING BATTERED ABOUT THE HEAD IN A BLACKED-OUT OFFICE UNDER A RAILROAD ARCH AT HAMMERSMITH. ONE WAS DEAD AND THE OTHERS ARE STILL IN HOSPITAL.

I.R.A. TERRORISM HAS BEEN STAMPED OUT.

SUICIDES HAVE NOT INCREASED.

BUT THE LONDONER CAN FIND HIMSELF IN TROUBLE OVER STRANGE OFFSHOOTS OF THE LAW THESE DAYS. FOUR WOMEN WERE CHARGED FOR HAVING NO TAIL LIGHTS ON THEIR BABY-CARRIAGES IN THE BLACKOUT; FOUR YOUTHS WERE FINED FOR MAKING NOISES LIKE AIRRAID SIRENS AND WHISTLING BOMBS. ONE INDIGNANT FLAT-DWELLER HAD TO PAY BECAUSE, HE SAID, A BURGLAR SWITCHED ON HIS LIGHTS DURING THE BLACKOUT AND LEFT THEM BURNING.

AND THE BOBBIES ARE ANGRY AT HITLER BECAUSE THEY NOW MUST MAKE THEIR PANTS LAST A FULL YEAR. THEY USED TO GET A NEW PAIR EVERY SIX MONTHS.

MUSSOLINI BESET BY ARMY COMPLAINTS, NEW DEFEATS, SPIES AND FEAR OF FRENCH

Graziani Blames Reverses In Africa On Lack Of Tanks; Says Shortage Let British Get Jump On Him

Rome Exposes "Network Of Informers"; Two Are Shot — Fascist Magazine Scents Petain-De Gaulle Plot Against Axis

News from and about Italy bulks large in yesterday's foreign dispatches:

Marshal Graziani, in a report to Premier Mussolini, blames Italian reverses in North Africa on the lack of armored cars and tanks.

A naval officer and a salesman are executed as spies after exposure of what the Fascists call a "network of informers."

Suspicion of a plot between the Vichy Government and General de Gaulle for the formation of an anti-Axis bloc in North Africa is voiced by the Fascist magazine, Rassegna Italiana.

Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor, warns United States against "complications" if she turns interned belligerent ships over to Britain.

Meantime, from Athens and Cairo come reports of fresh successes by Greeks and British against the forces of Mussolini. A radio report has it that the town of Chimara, on the southern front in Albania, has fallen to the Greeks. Italy herself admits the bombing of Fiume and Porto Malghera by the British.

Graziani Blames Reverses On Lack Of Armored Cars

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 22—Italian reverses in Egypt and Libya were blamed today by Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, in a report to Premier Mussolini, on the lack of armored cars, tanks and other mechanized equipment which prevented the Fascists from taking the offensive before the British got started. The Italians were also outnumbered, he said.

DEC 23 1940

These cars and other equipment were to have arrived from Italy early in December, when the Italians were poised for the attack which was ordered by Mussolini and which was to have carried them, according to Italian plans, to Suez and the Nile.

His First Explanation

Graziani's report was his first explanation of the British successes which opened two weeks ago and backed the Italians westward out of Egypt into Libya.

He told Mussolini it would "certainly be premature to forecast developments in the titanic fight" in Libya in which the British "have concentrated the best troops of four continents."

Graziani said the British attack was not a surprise to the Italians.

Scouts Told Of British Moves

The marshal declared that from the beginning of October Italian scouting planes had reported a continuing massing of British forces and equipment east of Matruh, which was then attributed to a British determination to stave off the expected Italian push.

30.24- 6559

30.24—6559

From prisoners captured during a night raid December 7, the report said, news was heard that a British attack was to be launched in about ten days.

Guards were strengthened, Graziani said, and he again advised his officers to hold themselves in readiness for a British attack.

If the number of prisoners taken by the British is high, Graziani told the Duce, it is because the Italians held out "to the last spasm," and Mussolini "must not doubt their bravery."

Praises Italian Troops

"Italian troops sacrificed themselves without sparing," he said. "I once more confirm to you categorically that everybody there has fulfilled his duty as far as possible."

His report was long and detailed the preparations for the Italian offensive ordered by Mussolini the day after the Fascist troops reached Sidi Barrani, Egypt, in September.

To supply water in the occupied zone in Egypt, the marshal said, his troops built seventy-two miles of pipe line and road from Fort Capuzzo, on the Libyan frontier, to Sidi Barrani.

Some of the Italian unit, he declared, marched hundreds of miles on foot, to economize on transport facilities, and were "burning for battle."

Everything But Tanks

By the first day of December all the Italians lacked for the offensive was the tanks and mechanized equipment they had ordered from home.

He said the British had an easy chance of employing masses of armored cars, supported by mobile guns and their air force, against the Italian troop positions in the flat desert.

"After short but terrible gunfire and air bombardment, the armored cars came from everywhere encircling our resistance centers which in some hours were overthrown," the marshal said.

"Never Gave Way"

But the Italians never gave way so long as they had a single cartridge to shoot, he said.

[Reports from British sources said last week hundreds surrendered with full equipment and many with loaded guns.]

Graziani said that after the first defeat, another line was formed between Salum, Egypt, and Fort Capuzzo, and the main forces of the Italian troops withdrew to that point, necessarily sacrificing small units as they retired.

He emphasized the support given the British ground forces by the fleet and air force, and said Italian airmen were seriously hampered by sandstorms, followed by floods from exceptionally heavy rains. In spite of this, he said, the Fascist flyers brought down forty-two British planes and probably twenty others.

Preparations Completed

Preparations for the Italian offensive against Matruh, Egypt, "overcoming difficulties of all kinds," were largely completed at the beginning of December, Graziani said.

"An acqueduct, an imposing work built with first-rate speed and technique using all the pipe then existing in Libya, by December 3 carried four liters (about a gallon) of water per second to Sidi Barrani . . . while a highway built with everything available in Libya was completed as to foundation and largely rolled," the marshal said.

"On the front, deposits of food, munitions and gasoline and almost all estimated requirements were already concentrated. Only the completion of equipment in motor trucks which were forwarded from the mother country was lacking.

Rear Lines Demolished

"Meanwhile our air force systematically demolished the rear lines and supply installations and the enemy was doing the same, concentrating its attacks on our rear bases, especially Bengasi."

Italian troops patrolling the desert to feel out the British resistance and engaging in fights with British mechanized forces noted "growing aggressiveness and audacity," culminating in a clash in the front of Italian detachments known as the Maletti grouping, Graziani reported.

While large units were assuming lines for an imminent advance on Matruh, Graziani said he stationed adequate gun power at Halfaya, Labia and Sidi Barrani to guarantee marching columns against possible enemy attacks on the southern flank.

Enemy Had Easy Time

"Against the key points occupied by our troops on the desert country, flat, easily looked over and devoid of any tactical possibilities, the enemy had an easy time of pooling masses of armored equipment, medium and heavy tanks, aided by fast moving batteries and effective assistance of the air forces," Graziani said.

"Short preparation generally was generally entrusted to artillery and aviation. A murderous air bombardment had hardly ceased when armored forces rushed from all directions against our troops and thus, despite the most strenuous resistance, the key points, in a few hours were submerged one by one.

"The first to be invested was the Maletti grouping, which began an orderly withdrawal until, overcome, it trailed a second Libyan division, which had sent a strong motorized column to its aid.

Forced To Scatter Fire

"Against an armored mass operating concentrically on a wide front, the anti-tank guns and artillery of our divisions, forced to scatter their fire on many fast-moving targets headed decisively for their objective, could have little effect.

"The essential reason for the first lightning success gained by the enemy must therefore be sought in the crushing superiority of armored forces employed in masses."

Gen. Pietro Maletti fell at the head of his Libyan battalions, which were eliminated from the battle, and the British "swept on to Sidi Barrani where the iron-like 'January Third' Black Shirt division, bombarded by sea and air, resisted gallantly for two days.

The first Libyan division which had attempted to reach Sidi Barrani from Nadimaktla, where it was intensely bombarded by the British fleet, found the road barred by armored cars but held out a long time "although knowing its doom was sealed."

Two Divisions In Peril

The infiltrations of British troops on the Buqbuq road threatened to overthrow for a second time the divisions of Cantanzaro and Cirene, too, Graziani reported.

"If it had been possible to throw them back in a counter-attack against the armored cars, this would have meant sending them to certain destruction," he said.

"Therefore, profiting from the resistance of the troops barricaded in Sidi Barrani, I decided to withdraw those divisions from the enemy grip and bring them back to the line between Halfaya, Salum and Capuzzo, where I had meanwhile sketched a defense with those divisions.

"On the afternoon of December 10, therefore, I ordered a retreat. This was carried out fairly regularly by the Cantanzaro Division up to the heights of Tishidada when the march was encircled and caught in the fire of armored cars and thrown into disorder.

Cites Sacrifice

"The sacrifice of some detachments, which resisted until December 12, permitted two-thirds of the division to reach our lines at Salum.

"The Cirene Division, on the other hand, escaped the enemy's grip better, but arrived rather tired at Halfaya.

"On the night of December 12, while the remaining defenders at Sidi Barrani and Maktila—encircled for three days—offered the last fierce resistance, the vanguard of the enemy of armored columns closed in on our troops at Halfaya attempting to envelop their right flank.

From December 13 to 15 fierce fighting took place in the square area between Halfaya, Sidomar, Capuzzo and Salum, where Graziani said "intrepid" General Bergonzoli's troops, in counter-attacking, succeeded in eliminating the threatening enemy infiltrations which were attempting to cut the Italian line in two and separate it from the fortified city of Bardia.

Retreat "In Perfect Order"

On the night of December 15 while new mechanized columns pressed in a concentric maneuver toward Salum, Gabrabu and Faizes, and the group at Sidomar already was appearing at Sidi Azeiz, all of General Bergonzoli's troops fell back "in perfect order" on Bardia where Graziani said they "are still holding out against enemy attack with a gallantry equal to the decisive will to resist to the end."

An idea of the Italian fighting in the desert can be obtained, the marshal reported, from the figures showing that Italian bombing planes had flown 900 hours, the fighters 1,300 hours, and that two torpedoes and 13,000 bombs weighing 1,000 tons had been dropped and 17,000 rounds of machine-gun ammunition fired.

Fascists Execute Two As Spies, Find 'Net Of Informers'

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 22—Discovery of a "network of informers" was revealed today when Aurelio Cocozza, a traveling salesman of Taranto, and Francesco Ghezzi, a navy officer, were executed as spies at Fort Bravetta, near Rome.

The executions were carried out at dawn with the military dispatch and secrecy customary among nations at war, and the firing squad was back in barracks before there was even an official announcement of the trial.

25 Others Stand Trial

This statement disclosed that twenty-five other persons also had stood trial as "members of a network of informers which acted in our country in the interest of a foreign power," and that only three were acquitted because of insufficient evidence.

The case was the first to come to public notice since Italy entered the war a little over six months ago.

The trial ended last night, a few hours before Cocozza and Ghezzi were marched out of their cells to their death.

Details Not Disclosed

The nature of the espionage activities was not disclosed. Something relating to the navy, however, was suggested in the occupations of those involved.

Some observers thought the case might have related to the British air raid on the Taranto naval base on November 11, when three Italian battleships were torpedoed and damaged. On the other hand, the announcement that it was a spy "network" indicated the scope might be more extensive.

Lived At Taranto

Cocozza lived in Taranto, at least part of the time, and Ghezzi was a navy quartermaster.

Oswaldo Basevi, another quartermaster, and Guisto Antonio Gubitta, an employe of a naval-construction firm, and the latter's wife, Clara Machetto Gubitta, were condemned to life imprisonment.

"Margherita Gross, of Austrian origin," said the official announcement, "and Adolpho Dedominica are sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment, and Antonio Merlini to twenty-seven years.

"Lesser sentences, varying from three to ten years, were imposed on sixteen other prisoners."

Vichy Plotting Anti-Axis Bloc With De Gaulle, Fascists Fear

Magazine Calls Situation In Africa "Muddy," Questions Weygand's Activities

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 22—Belief that the Vichy Government of France is plotting with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the "Free French" forces to reunite French territories in Africa for resistance to "any eventual foreign intervention" was expressed today by the Italian magazine Rassegna Italiana.

The magazine said the combination of French African possessions under the de Gaulle flag, with British African territories, would form a "gigantic bloc" which not only could help in defense of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, but also in an offensive on Italian territories.

"We must be vigilant that this bloc does not spread and absorb other territories of still more vital importance," Rassegna Italiana said.

Describing the situation in French Africa as "rather muddy," the magazine said, "we don't know whether General Weygand (Chief of State Petain's representative in Africa) really refused to return to France, ignoring Vichy's orders, but we are fairly well acquainted with what is happening in French West Africa, French Morocco and districts in Northern Africa at present controlled by France."

[General Weygand has made inspection trips to various French points in Africa and has been received ceremoniously at numerous points.]

"What do they mean by all these ceremonies accompanied by vows of loyalty by sultans, beys and other notables and crowned by unvarying assurances of governors, residents and functionaries that France will never yield an inch of her overseas territories?" Rassegna asked.

"What Do They Mean?"

"What do they mean by all these missions coming and going between unoccupied France and the empire bringing orders of the day and oaths of fealty, funds for public works, and ordinary administrative documents just as if there never had been a war between France and the Axis powers and the June armistice had never been asked for?

"No Initiative"

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—The British radio tonight quoted the Vichy Air Minister, Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret, as saying that Marshal Petain is "determined to take no military initiative against anyone." The BBC broadcast was heard here by CBS.

The British radio added that General Bergeret also said Petain "is equally determined to reserve for France the rights she has acquired in the past."

BBC said General Bergeret's statement was broadcast from French Syria, where he is on a special mission.

BATTLE RAGES AS GREEKS PUSH ON FOR VALON

Chimara Under Cor Of Hellenic Artille Athens Announce

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 22—The British radio in a broadcast heard here today quoted the Athens radio as claiming Chimara, Albania, had been captured by Greek troops.

Five minutes before this broadcast, the NBC short-wave listening post heard the Rome radio declare Chimara still was held by the Italians.

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 22—Greek troops were reported today to have skirted the well-defended Adriatic coastal city of Chimara, in Albania,, leaving other units behind to clean out Italian opposition there.

The advance units pressed onward toward the strategic port of Valona, about thirty miles farther north, and in fierce hand-to-hand fighting were said to have captured several hundred Italians on important heights bordering the sea.

Claim Control Of Chimara

A Government spokesman declared Chimara was under the "absolute control" of Greek artillery and that the Greek army along the Albanian front was advancing "steadily and securely."

Choice Italian troops fighting in the Klisura-Tepeleni region resisted strongly, but were unable to check the Greeks and suffered heavy losses, the spokesman added.

Frontier dispatches said a "very large scale" battle was raging twenty miles northeast of Chimara in the Tepelini-Klisura area in one of the major conflicts of the Italo-Greek war.

Regiment Declared Decimated

"Brilliant successes" were claimed by the Greeks in that area where units struggled northwestward to effect a junction with the Greek coastal units and to secure the collapse of all Fascist resistance in southern Albania.

One report said an entire Italian regiment had been decimated just outside Tepelini in one of the greatest victories since Greek troops routed the Italians from Greece and began their own counter-invasion. The Fascist regiment there, the report said, had put up a terrific fight for several days before crumbling.

One Redoubt After Another

Another report telling of the capture of important heights in the same area said two Italian battalions were surrounded.

Because of the wild, mountainous nature of the country where the fighting now is taking place, it was difficult to give a clear picture of the battle lines, but the Greeks here said their troops were taking one mountain redoubt after another.

Some idea of their officially claimed victories can be gauged by the number of prisoners, approximately 2,000, taken in the last seven days.

Italians Rely On Airplanes

The Italians now are relying heavily on their airplanes in an effort to halt the Greeks. The bombing of rear-line towns and villages held by the Greeks and the machine-gunning of Greek troops were increasing, these reports said.

More than fifty bombs were dropped on Premet in the central sector of the Albanian front and were said to have caused heavy casualties and property damage.

R. A. F. Bolstering Greeks

British airmen were bolstering the Greeks.

[An Exchange Telegraph dispatch received in London from Athens said the Greeks shot down eighteen Italian planes today.]

An R. A. F. communique today said British planes shot down one Italian bomber in a formation encountered Friday near Tepelini, and that the same R. A. F. patrol later intercepted another Fascist formation of which one plane was shot down and another forced down.

BARDIA SIEGE PRESSED BY BRITISH FORCES

Army, Navy And R. A. F. Combine To Harass Beleaguered Italians

Flyers Range West In Libya To Blast Bengasi And Berka

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Monday, Dec. 23—Britain's hard-hitting air force continued to pound 20,000 Italians besieged at Bardia, Libya, and to range far west against Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's stronger defenses at Bengasi and Berka, frontier reports reaching here said early today.

Since there was no apparent move by the Italian leader to send aid to his beleaguered forces in the eastern Libyan port, it was assumed by military sources that the Bardia garrison had been chosen to hold up British forces while Marshal Graziani prepared a "last ditch" stand in western Libya.

Siege Enters 7th Day

The siege of Bardia by steadily reinforced British ground troops, the R. A. F. and British warships pouring shells in from the Mediterranean, entered its seventh day today.

British dispatches said the R. A. F. shot down only one Italian bomber in yesterday's fighting, but that since the offensive began a fortnight ago had accounted for a total of 175 Italian planes at a cost of only fourteen British craft.

British batteries encircled a seventeen-mile perimeter outside Bardia, tossing shells into the Italian positions. Italian artillery roared back at the British.

Reinforcements Arrive

A general headquarters communique said merely: "Reinforcements are steadily reaching our troops in the Bardia area. A further seven guns have been collected from the enemy frontier posts we recently occupied."

The Italians are said to have plentiful food and ammunition and, it is believed, probably can hold out for some days if the British do not attack.

An actual assault on the town's defenses, military sources say, is likely to come when the British consider themselves sufficiently strong to take the town without big losses and after intense artillery and air bombardment.

Pause Benefits British

The pause around Bardia has benefited the British, principally by enabling them to improve their communication lines with their bases, now 150 miles to the rear in the western desert. The use of the port of Salum is important in this, even though the harbor is small.

Bardia harbor would also be useful. With stores now being moved up to that area, the British would be able to push forward without delay if they chose, once Bardia is captured.

Military sources said the advance could be continued even now, leaving Bardia to fall in due course, but that this would mean leaving a large force behind to watch the town.

Mechanized forces units, meanwhile, were reported operating to the west and northwest beyond Bardia, but headquarters has not disclosed how far.

Italians Are Putting Up Stiff Fight, Rome Says

Rome, Dec. 22 (AP)—Italian artillery, combat planes and bombers, and at least one warship were fighting tonight a hard defensive battle against the invading British forces in Libya.

The warship, described in a high command communique only as "one of our naval units," bombarded British motorized groups near the Mediterranean coast, the communique said. It also claimed that an Italian torpedo boat shot down a torpedo-launching plane.

While both sides fought an artillery duel, the communique continued, Italian planes were attacking troop concentrations and mechanized equipment; and throughout last night, in spite of unfavorable w[illegible], bombed docks and installations of the British advance base, starting some fires.

Tripoli Bombed

The British, on the other hand, the Italians acknowledged, bombed an air base at Tripoli and "dropped some bombs on Fiume," hitting a private home and injuring six persons.

The communique also claimed some success on the Greek front. There, the high command said, Italian artillery halted the Greeks, who suffered "considerable losses" in a counter-attack by the Italians.

In various air battles, the Italians said, eleven British planes were shot down in flames, while the Fascists lost four.

"During the night of December 20 and all yesterday numerous formations of bombers and dive-bombers effectively pounded troops, preparations, highways, railroad batteries and bases involved in operations under way in Albania," the communique said.

11 Hurt as Planes Drop Bombs in Zurich Area

Raiders Unidentified; Town in Yugoslavia Struck

BERNE, Dec. 23 (Monday) (AP).—Eleven persons in the Zurich region were injured last night by explosive and incendiary bombs dropped by "unidentified planes" which came from the north, the Swiss nigh command announced today.

Five of the casualties occurred at Hoengg, five miles northwest of Zurich, where a house in the factory district was demolished.

Incendiary bombs falling near the Orion automobile works in suburban Zurich started a fire which soon was controlled.

One explosive bomb fell near the railway viaduct at Wipkingen, an industrial district, making a big crater in the ground and severing a power line.

Yugoslav Town Bombed

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Dec. 22 (AP).—Yugoslavia will demand compensation from the British government for injuries and property damage caused by the bombing early today of Susak, Yugoslav town across the border from Fiume, Italy.

Diplomatic action by the Yugoslav government awaited conclusion of an official inquiry.

It was reported that seven persons were wounded in Susak by two bombs which caused "material damage."

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, Dec. 23—German airmen apparently concentrated their bombs on a northwest English town last night and early today, but were active over many parts of England, including London, which had two alarms.

Some enemy activity over the west Midlands was described as "nuisance" raiding, and the planes roaring over London sped back to the Continent just before dawn and the all-clear sounded.

Liverpool Gets Hard Bombing 3d Night in Row

London Also Raided as Nazi Planes Strike at Nearly Every Section of England

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Dec. 23 (Monday).—The German Luftwaffe battered a northwest English town heavily last night and early today and bombed other northwestern towns in a series of raids that reached into nearly every section of England, including the capital.

[The name of the town was withheld because of the censorship, but earlier the Germans were reported to be over the vital western Midlands port of Liverpool for the third consecutive night. Informed sources in Berlin, according to The Associated Press, said numerous waves of German bombers had been taking off since early evening to attack an "important industrial town in the Midlands" where a large number of fires were reported to have been started.]

Nazi raiders attacked London soon after darkness fell yesterday, but the all clear was given in the capital area about an hour after midnight. Other raiders were reported from numerous sections after giving the British a virtual rest during Sunday's daylight hours.

The raiders apparently were following the same pattern as Saturday night, which resulted in casualties in Liverpool, London and a northeastern town and subjected London to an eleven-hour alert period ending before dawn.

It was reported officially there was no raiding during the daylight hours in Britain except for a few bombs dropped at dawn at one point in western Scotland.

Saturday night the Germans directed their heaviest attacks on Liverpool and the important Merseyside area around that port. The British admitted some damage to commercial and private buildings and said "a number of people were killed and others injured but casualties were not thought to be heavy."

Several persons were killed and injured in the northeastern town attack. High-explosive bombs demolished three houses in terraces occupied by workers and damaged all the other houses in the group.

The sound of bombs and the drone of planes preceded the night alarm in London. The rumble of anti-aircraft fire continued in the capital area as the raid progressed.

Within a few minutes, raiders were reported over Liverpool, another northwest town, two northern towns, two towns in East Anglia, one in the East Midlands and one western town.

In the industrial Midlands, the sky was alight with bomb explosions and anti-aircraft fire. In one west Midland town, high-explosive bombs were met by a heavy anti-aircraft barrage.

Little damage was reported from bombs dropped on an East Anglia town. The Germans were also reported over Wales.

The Strait of Dover was swept by a bitterly cold northeast wind, which made the sea choppy. The sky was overcast, but the mist was gone from the sea.

Nazis Report Liverpool Fires

BERLIN, Dec. 22 (AP).—Numerous waves of German bombers have been taking off since early evening, informed sources said tonight, to attack "an important industrial town in the Midlands." First reports of returning flyers said a large number of fires were seen, the sources said.

"Worse than Coventry" was the phrase used tonight by several German bomber and observation flyers in describing the damage inflicted on Liverpool last night in a concentrated attack by "several hundred planes."

One aviator said the glow of eight great fires could be seen about 150 miles south of the city—almost from Britain's south coast. All planes returned safely from the Liverpool raid, the Germans said.

The high command reported that strong groups of bombers caused spreading fires in Liverpool, especially in the dock sections. In addition, the high command said, the air force bombed "important war facilities in London, Bristol and Southampton, as well as a number of airports."

The high command also said that Italian flyers attacked Harwich harbor facilities "with good effect."

The reflection of fires in the Mersey River at Liverpool made the stream glow with many colors in the clear night, the German flyers said.

Another flyer reported that warehouses about Wellington and Bramley Moore docks, as well as dock facilities, were targets. Waterloo (Seaforth) docks were also reported heavily bombed.

The Germans said highly inflammable tobacco and wool warehouses near the Stanley docks, as well as three great grain elevators at the Waterloo docks, were reported to have made extensive fires.

The Birkenhead section of the town at the Mersey mouth and dry-docks there got an intensive bombing, the Germans added.

The communique carried a belated report that German planes attacked and sank two freighters off the English east coast on Dec. 20 and so damaged a third that it can be reckoned as lost." The three totaled 15,000 tons.

Raids on "several sections" of German territory by the British were acknowledged but, said the high command, "no military objectives were hit." Two British planes were reported shot down and one German plane was missing.

German long-range guns fired "effectively" yesterday on ships of an English convoy in the English Channel near Dover, D. N. B., German news agency, reported today.

Anti-Aircraft Shell Kills 9 British Wedding Guests

Bride and Bridegroom Hurt as It Explodes in 'Pub'

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP).—Nine wedding guests, singing to an accordion accompaniment in a "pub," were killed and the bride and bridegroom were injured by an anti-aircraft shell fired during last night's German raid on the western Midlands.

The shell crashed through a window, plowed through the floor and exploded in a cellar. Six of the guests were killed outright; including an uncle and a brother of the bride. Three others died shortly afterward.

The bride, Florence Lily Pottinger, and the bridegroom, Sidney Jones, suffered leg injuries.

4 British Flyers Interned After Landing in Ireland

Two Bailed Out of Crashed Craft, Others Forced Down

DUBLIN, Dec. 22 (AP).—Four British airmen—two of three who bailed out of a plane which later crashed on Irish territory, and two occupants of a training plane which made a forced landing—have been interned by Irish authorities, it was announced officially today.

The third man from the plane which crashed was found this morning after an all-night search. He was suffering from exposure and received medical attention.

Both incidents happened about the same time. The forced landing was made near Dundalk, on the east coast.

BRITISH TAILOR STRIKE HITS 4,000 WORKERS

Walkout, Caused by Fast Cutter, May Become 'Serious'

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP)—An unofficial strike at a factory making uniforms for British soldiers, caused by one tailor's cutter who works too fast, may assume "serious proportions," the British Press Association reported tonight.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 workers were expected to be idle tomorrow and the only man scheduled to work is the cause of it all—Albert Lazenby.

The factory will be picketed tomorrow and a strike committee will inform the management that the walkout will continue unless Mr. Lazenby "is withdrawn."

The National Union of Tailors and Garment Workers expelled Mr. Lazenby because, it said, he violated union rules by cutting too many pairs of khaki pants per hour, endangering union standards of "output and craftsmanship."

LONDON LISTS AS LOST FAMED SUB SWORDFISH

Craft Credited Recently With Sinking German Torpedo Boat

British Steamer's S.S.S Reports Attack Off Coast Of Portugal

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—The loss of the British submarine Swordfish was announced tonight by the Admiralty, which said she was long overdue.

The Swordfish, for which a 640-ton class of British submarines is named, was credited with having torpedoed and sunk a German torpedo boat off the French coast last October.

Submarines of her type usually carry a complement of forty men and mount one 3-inch gun and six 21-inch torpedo tubes as their chief armaments. The Swordfish class, a seagoing type, was the forerunner of the successful Shark class.

Next Of Kin Notified

The official announcement said:

"The Board of Admiralty regrets to announce that H. H. submarine Swordfish (Lieut. M. A. Langley, D. S. C., R. N.) is overdue and must be considered lost.

"The next of kin have been informed."

Recently Received D. S. C.

The Swordfish cost about $1,000,000. In February, 1937, she struck bottom making a deep dive off Portland Bill and lost a piece of secret mechanism so important that divers went down to retrieve it.

Lieutenant Langley, while commanding the submarine H-49 last September, directed a torpedo attack on a convoy of eight supply vessels and about two weeks ago received the Distinguished Service Cross for "courage, enterprise and resource during successful patrols by his Majesty's submarines."

Attacked By Submarine, British Steamer Reports

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—The British steamer Sarastone radioed today she was being attacked by a submarine about 350 miles off the Portugal coast.

The 2,473-ton vessel flashed an "S S S"—signifying a submarine attack—at 10.11 A. M. She gave her position as latitude 41.18 north, longitude 15.14 west.

No other word of her fate was received immediately.

The Sarastone, owned by the S. & R. Steamship Company, was operated out of Llanelly, Wales.

Italian Submarine Activity

Earlier in the day the German radio said Italian long-distance submarines, based in the Atlantic and operating as far north as the Arctic Ocean, have sunk more than 100,000 tons of shipping, "including a Canadian destroyer and the British tanker British Fame, of 17,000 tons."

[Lloyd's Register of Shipping lists the British Fame as an 8,406-ton ship.]

The broadcast, heard here by both CBS and NBC, quoted the Italian newspaper Corriere de la Serra as saying that "dozens" of the submarines were operating in the Atlantic under an independent high command of the Italian submarine arm in cooperation with the Germans.

BRITAIN SOON MAY GIVE OUT HER WAR AIMS

Some Quarters Expect Statement To Be Published Before Christmas

Outline Likely To Follow Pattern Put Forth By Church Leaders

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—A formal statement on Britain's war aims may be made by the Government before Christmas, British sources declared tonight.

However, other observers viewed that possibility as slim, since Parliament—the chief sounding board for such a statement—is in recess.

The British sources said the statement could well follow the pattern of the country's religious leaders given in a letter to the Times and outlining what they called the only permanent basis for lasting peace.

Religious Leaders' Views

Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders urged five standards "by which economic situations and proposals may be tested."

They were listed as follows:

1. Abolition of the extreme inequality of wealth and possessions.
2. Equal opportunities of education for every child.
3. The family as the social unit should be safeguarded.
4. A sense of divine vocation must be restored to man's daily work.
5. The earth's resources must be used as God's gift to the whole human race.

Called True Basis For Peace

"We are confident the principles we have enumerated would be accepted by the rulers and statesmen throughout the British commonwealth of nations and be regarded as a true basis on which lasting peace could be established," the churchmen said.

They declared the "present evils in the world" are due to the failure of nations and peoples to carry out the laws of God.

Some of these views already have been expressed by Prime Minister Churchill. At Harrow last Wednesday, Churchill said that when the war is over the "advantages and privileges which hitherto have been enjoyed only by the few shall be far more widely shared."

WATCH BRITISH ROLL OUT BOMBERS

American Writers See Boys And Girls Helping In War Plants

Precautions Remind That Arms Workers Are In Front Line

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—American correspondents touring three factories in the north of England saw thousands of workers turning odd strips of metal into heavy, long-distance night bombers at a speed which would have seemed incredible a few short months ago.

In response to Lord Beaverbrook's "roll out the bombers" appeal, white-haired veterans of the factory bench, smooth-faced youths in the khaki uniforms of the Home Guard, boys out of school and hundreds of girls in dust caps and striped overalls worked like beavers in echoing halls which covered acres.

Precautions Taken

Outside were grim reminders that Britain's armament workers stand in the front line no less than the fighting forces and the civilian population of bombed cities. Signs mark the way to first-aid posts, to decontamination gas centers, to fire-fighting appliances and to Home Guard pill boxes.

"We have our own spotters on the roof to sound the alarm buzzer when the raiders come," an official explained, "but few go to shelters. Even the girls mostly prefer to carry on."

These girls, paid on the basis of results, do an increasing amount of lighter work in aircraft factories.

Woman Works Saw

Pretty blond Mrs. Grace Kirk operates an electric cutting saw which makes you clap hands to ears because it sets every tooth on edge.

"No, I don't hear it in my sleep," she said, "I forget all about it when I get home. Our windows have been smashed by a bomb, but we've still got a roof, so you see we can still call it home."

A woman at a nearby hammer machine was less lucky.

"I've been bombed out twice," she said without looking up from her task. "My husband is fighting and my three children have been evacuated, so I am free to work."

Planes Assembled

In the main assembly shops, long rows of jigs held planes in all stages of construction—like a great shipyard.

Printed Ministry of Aircraft production bulletins on the walls gave the workers encouragement—telling how one plane got home with half the tail shot away, how another crew survived only because of the soundness of construction. The workers take special pride in these reports.

Each skeleton plane gradually acquires flesh as it moves down the assembly line — mighty Rolls Royce engines capable of developing more than 2,000 horsepower and of raising a great load of metal and bombs to 15,000 feet in twenty-one minutes are fitted into place, a few finishing touches are added, and another great Whitley bomber is towed out to the landing field.

KALLIO MOURNED BY FINNS

Body Is Sent From Helsinki for Burial at Nivala

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 22 (AP)—Thousands mourned today as the body of former President Kyosti Kallio was borne through Helsinki on the way to Nivala for burial.

Mr. Kallio died Thursday in the arms of Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Emil Mannerheim. A few hours before, ill and tired at 67, he had turned his office over to Risto Ryti.

The cortege included a military procession in which Finnish generals, followed by President Ryti and Baron Mannerheim, surrounded the artillery carriage bearing the coffin. Eight generals lifted the flag-wrapped coffin into the train in the view of such dense crowds that traffic in downtown Helsinki was at a standstill for hours.

Petain's Special Guard Rumored As Disbanding

Vigilante Legion Seen When Pierre Laval Was Ousted As Vice-Premier

Vichy, France, Dec. 22 (AP)—It was rumored today that the new "protection groups"—a kind of vigilante legion formed by Marcel Peyrouton, Interior Minister, to be Marshal Petain's special guard—was being disbanded as quietly as it was formed.

The organization, including uniformed and plainclothes men, was modeled somewhat on the lines of the black-shirted German Elite Guard, but without legal status.

It first appeared when Petain visited Marseille and was seen again last week end during the tension when Pierre Laval was ousted as Foreign Minister and Vice-Premier.

RED PRESS EXPECTS AXIS WAR SPEEDUP

Forecasts Sharp Reaction To British Gains In Africa And Greece

Says Invasion Of England Would Be "Exceptionally Difficult"

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Dec. 22—The Soviet press forecast sharp Axis reaction to British war gains in war reviews published today, but characterized invasion of England as an "exceptional difficulty."

The reviews appeared in the army and navy publications, Red Star and Red Fleet, and in the Communist party and labor union organs, Pravda and Trud.

"The successful British advance in North Africa is of great significance, not so much in the seizure of the territory as in considerable Italian losses which tangibly change the relations of the forces," Red Star commented.

Italy's Position "Complicated"

Said Trud:

"The simultaneous Greek attack in Albania and that of the British in North Africa have complicated considerably Italy's position, but the British success cannot yet be called a breaking point of the war.

"It should be expected that these successes will call forth firm action on the part of her enemies."

Foresees Drawn-Out War

Discussing the possibiilty of an invasion of England, the trade union paper said that "under conditions of British mastery of the sea and uncrushed aviation, this is a task of exceptional difficulty.

"In general, in evaluating the situation in the British-German theater of war one must come to the conclusion that no matter what methods of warfare the Germans employ the struggle will retain its drawn-out character."

SOVIET TO OBSERVE JAN. 1

Decrees Day of Rest—Santa Claus Appears on Streets

MOSCOW, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Council of People's Commissars decreed today a day of rest for Jan. 1—there is no official observance of Christmas in Soviet Russia—but ruled that work be maintained as close as possible to normal to make up for the lost time.

For those who usually take their day of rest on Sundays, Dec. 29 was designated a work day, and for those who usually take Fridays off, next Jan. 3 also will be a work day.

Giant figures of Santa Claus, tinsel-bedecked trees and strings of red and green lights have appeared in Moscow streets for the New Year celebration.

Juliana Hears Minister Pray For Return Of Her Homeland

Netherlands Princess Attends Church At New York And Later Leaves For Ottawa

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 22—From a front pew of the West End Collegiate Reformed Church, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands heard a prayer today for the overthrow of "the tyranny that despoils" her homeland.

With head bowed, the heir to the Royal House of Orange sat with 1,800 worshipers who overflowed the church as the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Edgar Franklin Romig, prayed for the eventual "home-coming" of Queen Wilhelmina, the Princess' mother, and other members of the [illegible] family.

Police Lines Broken

"And, according to Thy will," said Dr. Romig, "do Thou bring in the time when the tyranny that despoils their land shall be overthrown and the ancient privileges of their people shall be restored, and when all shall praise Thee for the restitution of their soil, the home-coming of their sovereign, and the vindication of the cause of civil and religious liberty for which, with all men of unfettered soul, they are struggling."

It was the third and final day of the Princess' New York visit. An estimated 1,000 persons, unable to enter the church for services, broke police lines and crowded about as she left for Old Westbury, N. Y., where she had luncheon at the home of W. R. Grace, steamship line executive.

Spectators Cheer

Many of the spectators cheered, some throwing their hats into the air, as the Princess smiled and waved. She left tonight for Ottawa, where she and her two small daughters are making their home.

As the minister started his prayer, the church lights dimmed and blue lights strung on three Christmas trees about the pulpit went up to outline a United States flag and a Netherlands banner.

Princess Juliana sat with the Netherlands Minister to the United States, Dr. Alexander Loudon, Mrs. Loudon and Dr. Romig's wife and three children.

The Princess, sister of King George VI, responded to remarks of Betty Bredon, representing the Girl Scouts, who told of the ambulance presentation ceremony in Rockefeller Plaza New York, this afternoon.

Six Start 158-Mile Walk Seeking Aid for Europe

Yule Pilgrimage to New York Stresses Threat of Famine

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 22 (AP).—Sixty young men, including a Methodist minister, started last night on a 158-mile walk from Lancaster to New York, seeking to stimulate sympathy and aid for starving persons in conquered European nations.

Their spokesman, the Rev. Dr. J. Holmes Smith, pastor of the East Berlin (Conn.) Methodist Church, said the group hoped the pilgrimage would gather recruits along the way and enable them to collect pledges for aid and signatures to petitions asking the British and German governments to allow relief ships to pass the blockade.

Striking out along the busy Lincoln Highway with their belongings in a two-wheeled cart, the six planned to "propagandize" by day and sleep in barns and churches by night. On their cart was a sign reading: "Can you have a merry Christmas while millions of innocent victims face famine in Europe?"

Others in the group were Bryn Hammerstrom, of Philadelphia; Lee Stern, of Cleveland; Philip Meyer, of Steubenville, Ohio; Preston Luttweiler, of Millbu..., N. J., and La[illegible] Gara, of Reading, Pa.

An earlier communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

Enemy activity last night was again mainly directed against Liverpool and Merseyside. The attack, which began shortly after dark, was on a considerable scale and continued until this morning.

Many fires were started, but owing to the work of the fire-fighting services these were brought under control during the night, and the situation never got out of hand. Some commercial and other buildings and many houses were damaged. A number of people were killed and others airdromes.

In a large military store near Cologne, explosions were caused and many fires were left burning.

At Porto Marghera, bombs burst on the target and fires were started. Docks and harbor works used by the enemy at Rotterdam, Flushing, Antwerp, Ostend and Calais were hit and damaged.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 22 (AP).—The British general headquarters communique today:

Egypt: Reinforcements are steadily reaching our troops in the Bardia area. A further seven guns have been collected from the enemy frontier posts which we recently occupied.

On the other fronts the situation remains unchanged.

BERLIN, Dec. 22 (AP).—The German high command communique today:

As already announced, strong groups of planes attacked Liverpool the night of Dec. 21 with great success. Besides that the air force bombed important war facilities in London, Bristol and Southampton, as well as a number of airports.

The mining of British harbors continued. By day, air activity was limited to armed observation, but London, however, was a bomb target. Army and navy long-range guns fired effectively on an enemy which was destroyed.

Later, the same patrol intercepted another formation, and in this engagement one was shot down and another forced down and crashed in landing.

From all operations all of our aircraft and air crews returned safely.

convey hugging the English coast. Long-range guns also shelled Dover Harbor.

Liverpool was again attacked the night of Dec. 21 by strong groups of heavy bombers. Spreading fires could be observed in the target area, especially in dock sections.

Italian flyers attacked Harwich harbor facilities with good effect.

The same night enemy planes bombed several sections of Reich's territory with incendiaries and explosives.

In two West German cities, limited damage was done to buildings. No military objectives were hit. Civilian losses amounted to one dead and eleven injured. Two enemy planes were shot down yesterday by pursuit planes. One of our own planes is missing.

As belatedly reported, three enemy freighters totaling 15,000 tons were attacked from the air Dec. 20 off the English east coast. Of these, we sank two and a third can be reckoned as lost.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 22 (AP).—The Italian high command communique today:

In the Cirenaica (Libya) frontier zones, actions of opposing artilleries took place. One of our naval units bombarded enemy motorized groups near the coast. A torpedo boat shot down an enemy torpedo-launching plane.

Our air detachments carried intense bombardments against concentrations of troops and mechanized equipment. All night long, moreover, although handicapped by bad weather, they kept under constant attack docks and installations of the enemy advance base, where fires were started.

The enemy bombed one of our air bases in Tripoli.

On the Greek front, an enemy attack was halted by our artillery action and counter-attacks which inflicted considerable losses on the enemy.

During the night of Dec. 20 and all yesterday, numerous formations of bombers and dive-bombers effectively pounded troops, preparations, highways, railroad batteries and bases involved in operations under way in Albania.

Eleven enemy Gloster planes were shot down in flames in various air battles. Four of our planes failed to return.

In East Africa, the usual activity took place on the Sudanese border.

One of our air formations repeatedly bombed enemy troops in the locality of the upper Sudan.

During the night between Dec. 21 and Dec. 22, enemy planes dropped some bombs on the City of Fiume, hitting a private home and injuring six persons.

LONDON, DEC 23-(MONDAY)-(AP)-VISCOUNT HALIFAX, 59-YEAR-OLD FOREIGN SECRETARY WELL KNOWN AS THE "CHRISTIAN GENTLEMAN IN BRITISH POLITICS," WAS NAMED EARLY TODAY TO SUCCEED THE LATE MARQUESS OF LOTHIAN AS BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO WASHINGTON.

WAR SECRETARY ANTHONY EDEN, WHO WAS SUCCEEDED AS FOREIGN SECRETARY BY LORD HALIFAX WHEN EDEN RESIGNED IN FEBRUARY, 1938, AFTER A DISAGREEMENT WITH THE LATE NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN OVER APPEASEMENT OF GERMANY AND ITALY, WAS NAMED TO RETURN TO THE FOREIGN SECRETARY-SHIP. EDEN IS 43.

CAPTAIN DAVID MARGESSON, 50, FOR NINE YEARS THE GOVERNMENT'S CHIEF WHIP IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS WAS A "SURPRISE" APPOINTMENT AS SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR TO SUCCEED EDEN.

SN719PES

HALIFAX'S APPOINTMENT TO WASHINGTON REMOVED THE LAST GREAT FIGURE IN LONDON'S GOVERNMENT WHO WAS ASSOCIATED CLOSELY WITH THE LATE NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN IN HIS APPEASEMENT POLICIES BEFORE THE WAR.

PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL HAD NEVER QUESTIONED HALIFAX'S INTEGRITY AND ABILITY IN THOSE BITTER YEARS BUT HAD CONSISTENTLY ATTACKED THE POLICIES OF CHAMBERLAIN, AS HAD EDEN.

HALIFAX IS KNOWN TO BRITONS AS A QUIET, UNASSUMING SCHOLAR AND CHURCHMAN, WHO ROSE FROM POLITICAL OBSCURITY IN THE EARLY 1920S TO BECOME VICEROY OF INDIA IN 1926.

THE BRITISH PRESS REACTION TO HIS APPOINTMENT PERHAPS WAS GAUGED BY THE YORKSHIRE POST WHICH SAID "IT IS NO SPELLBINDING ORATOR WE WANT (IN WASHINGTON) BUT A MAN OF ABSOLUTE INTEGRITY WHOM AMERICANS CAN UNRESERVEDLY TRUST."

M&SN733PES

THE NEWSPAPER ADDED "THE VERY WORST AMBASSADOR WE COULD HAVE AT WASHINGTON JUST NOW WOULD BE ONE LIABLE TO INVITE SUSPICION AS AN ASTUTE PROPAGANDIST SENT TO WHEEDLE AMERICA INTO THE WAR."

HALIFAX IS KNOWN FOR HIS TACT AND PRUDENCE HERE SINCE THE TROUBLOUS DAYS IN INDIA DURING GANDHI'S CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE CAMPAIGN.

HALIFAX RETURNED FROM INDIA IN 1931 WITH THE FIRM FRIENDSHIP OF GANDHI, A RELATIONSHIP WHICH SURVIVED EVEN THOUGH THE INDIAN LEADER WAS ARRESTED DURING HIS REGIME.

THE TALL, SHY FOREIGN SECRETARY HAD BEEN UNDER ATTACK BY SOME SECTIONS OF THE BRITISH PRESS AFTER WINSTON CHURCHILL SUCCEEDED PRIME MINISTER NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN LAST SPRING. THE LABEL "APPEASER" WAS STILL ATTACHED TO HIM, AND HIS HANDLING OF FOREIGN RELATIONS ALSO WAS CRITICIZED, ESPECIALLY HIS COOLNESS TOWARD SOVIET RUSSIA.

BESIDES HIS FIVE YEARS AS VICEROY OF INDIA, HALIFAX'S LONG RECORD OF PUBLIC SERVICE INCLUDES TWO PRESIDENCIES OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION, MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE, MINISTER OF WAR IN 1935, LORD PRIVY SEAL AND LEADER OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

HANDSOME ANTHONY EDEN WAS EDUCATED AT ETON AND OXFORD, SERVED BRILLIANTLY IN THE WORLD WAR TO WIN THE RANK OF BRIGADE MAJOR AT THE AGE OF 21 AND THE MILITARY CROSS.

THE SON OF AN ECCENTRIC YORKSHIRE SQUARE, EDEN INCURRED THE UNDYING ENMITY OF PREMIER BENITO MUSSOLINI OF ITALY WHEN HE LED THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS SANCTIONS CAMPAIGN AGAINST ITALY OVER THE ETHIOPIAN AFFAIR.

EDEN'S FRIENDS GAVE MUSSOLINI A SHARE OF THE CREDIT IN CAUSING EDEN'S DOWNFALL FROM THE FOREIGN OFFICE IN 1938 WHEN CHAMBERLAIN STARTED BRITAIN ON THE ROAD TO CONCILIATION TO AVOID "THE FRIGHTFUL QUESTION OF WAR" AND REPUDIATED THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

CHURCHILL WAS AMONG MANY WHO DEPLORED EDEN'S RESIGNATION AT THAT TIME IN A STORMY HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATE. NOW EDEN RETURNS TO THE FOLD TO WORK EVEN MORE CLOSELY WITH CHURCHILL.

CAPTAIN MARGESSON WON THE MILITARY CROSS IN THE WORLD WAR, AND ENTERED PARLIAMENT IN 1922. HE COMPLETED HIS NINTH YEAR AS CHIEF GOVERNMENT WHIP IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS LAST MONTH.

Appointment Of Halifax Welcomed In Washington

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—The appointment of Viscount Halifax, British Foreign Minister, as the new Ambassador to the United States was received warmly in Administration circles tonight.

Authorized spokesmen said that Lord Halifax was eminently satisfactory as successor to the late Marquess of Lothian. Secretary Hull and other high officials were represented as having the highest regard for Lord Halifax.

His appointment was looked upon here as a sign that the British Government considered the Washington post of equal importance with a Cabinet portfolio.

Considered Highly Qualified

Although Lord Halifax was closely associated with the late Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain during the so-called "appeasement" era of British foreign policy, those familiar with his more recent views were said to be entirely satisfied that he stands for vigorous prosecution of the war.

As Foreign Minister during the most critical prewar period and also throughout the war so far, Lord Halifax was considered in diplomatic circles here to be highly qualified to interpret British policy to the United States Government.

He was said also to be probably more familiar than any other British official with the full details of the informal conversations of Lord Lothian and Hull.

Contrast To Lord Lothian

The tall, austere and formal Lord Halifax is a contrast in personality to Lord Lothian, whose popularity in the United States was ascribed in large measure to his informal, easy manner. Also unlike his predecessor, Lord Halifax lacks wide personal friendships and familiarity with this country.

In view of the close relations between the United States and Britain, however, Prime Minister Winston Churchill was believed here to have selected Lord Halifax primarily because of his intimate knowledge of British war plans and Churchill's personal regard for his ability.

VICHY, FRANCE, DEC 22-(AP)-THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT WAITED TONIGHT FOR WORD FROM GERMANY CONCERNING THE NEXT STEP IN DISCUSSIONS OVER THE FUTURE COURSE OF COLLABORATION.

INFORMED SOURCES SAID THAT OTTO ABETZ, ADOLF HITLER'S REPRESENTATIVE IN PARIS, WAS BELIEVED TO BE CONFERRING THERE WITH GERMAN MILITARY AUTHORITIES AND THAT NO DEFINITE ACTION COULD BE EXPECTED FOR SEVERAL DAYS.

FRENCH CIRCLES GAINED THE IMPRESSION THAT THE GERMANS PREFER TO AVOID INCIDENTS AND, IN VIEW OF THE ITALIAN MILITARY SITUATION, IT IS CONSIDERED THAT IT WOULD BE TO GERMANY'S INTEREST TO AVOID DIFFICULTY WITH FRANCE.

AN OFFICIAL SPOKESMAN MADE CLEAR TO THE FRENCH PRESS THAT THERE IS NO QUESTION OF ANY CHANGE IN THE FRENCH CABINET NOR OF THE RETURN OF PIERRE LAVAL, RESIGNED FOREIGN MINISTER AND VICE-PREMIER.

MEMBERS OF THE CABINET HELD NO MEETING FOR THE FIRST TIME IN SEVERAL DAYS AND A FEELING OF EASING TENSION, WHICH OBSERVERS NOTED YESTERDAY, CONTINUED.

ROME, DEC 22--THE POSSIBILITY OF "COMPLICATIONS" WITH THE ROME-BERLIN-TOKYO AXIS IF THE UNITED STATES LETS BRITAIN GET BELLIGERENTS' MERCHANT SHIPS REFUGED IN AMERICAN HARBORS WAS SUGGESTED TODAY BY VIRGINIO GAYDA, FASCIST EDITOR WHO OFTEN REFLECTS OFFICIAL OPINION.

"IT COULD NOT BE IMAGINED," GAYDA WROTE IN THE NEWSPAPER LA VOCE D'ITALIA, "THAT THESE MORE OR LESS CLANDESTINE NORTH AMERICAN INTERVENTIONS IN THE WAR WOULD CONTINUE IN THE LONG RUN WITHOUT COMPLICATIONS WITH REFERENCE TO THE THREE-POWER PACT OF BERLIN."

DEC 23 1940

D-A-S-H

THE THREE-POWER PACT BINDS ITS SIGNATORIES TO A ONE-FOR-ALL AND ALL-FOR-ONE WAR ON ANY NEW BELLIGERENT ENTERING EITHER THE WAR AGAINST THEM IN EUROPE OR IN CHINA. THUS, GAYDA LEAVES THE INFERENCE THAT DELIVERY OF THE SHIPS MIGHT BE CONSTRUED BY THE AXIS AS AN ACT OF WAR, A POSITION ALSO TAKEN IN GERMANY.

HIS COMMENT WAS A SEQUEL TO THESE EVENTS OF THE PAST THREE DAYS:

IN LONDON, RONALD CROSS, BRITISH MINISTER OF SHIPPING, SUGGESTED FRIDAY THAT GERMAN AND ITALIAN SHIPS TIED UP IN THE HARBORS OF NEUTRAL UNITED STATES BE ASSIGNED TO THE BRITISH.

IN BERLIN YESTERDAY AN OFFICIAL SPOKESMAN OF THE GERMAN FOREIGN

OFFICE CHARGED THAT CROSS WAS "INCITING AMERICA TO COMMIT A WARLIKE ACT" AGAINST THE AXIS AND THAT THE UNITED STATES' REACTION "IS BEING AWAITED BY GERMANY WITH EXTRAORDINARY INTEREST."

IN WASHINGTON, CONGRESSIONAL REACTION INDICATED THAT ANY FORMAL PROPOSAL FOR FILLING CROSS' SUGGESTION WOULD ENCOUNTER STIFF OPPOSITION.

UNITED STATES SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL DECLINED TO COMMENT ON THE BERLIN STATEMENT.

D-A-S-H

DEC 23 1940

ALTHOUGH GAYDA'S WAS THE FIRST ITALIAN PRESS REACTION TO CROSS' SUGGESTION IT WAS PRECEDED YESTERDAY BY ASSERTIONS IN INFORMED BUT UNOFFICIAL ITALIAN POLITICAL QUARTERS THAT DELIVERY OF AXIS SHIPS TO BRITAIN BY THE UNITED STATES WOULD BE "UNFRIENDLY" AND "UNNEUTRAL."

GAYDA SAID THAT THE BRITISH MINISTER'S REQUEST FOR AMERICAN SHIPPING AS WELL AS HIS SUGGESTION THAT SHIPS OF THE AXIS POWERS BE CONFISCATED SHOWED GROWING HUNGER AND DISARMAMENT IN BRITAIN UNDER THE AXIS' COUNTER-BLOCKADE, AIR BOMBARDMENTS AND ATTACKS BY LAND, SEA AND AIR.

"IT MAY BE SAID THAT ENGLAND WOULD NOT SUCCEED IN THIS WAY, EITHER, IN PROLONGING A LITTLE LONGER AND WITH HEAVIER EXPENSE THE BURDEN ON ITS ATLANTIC SHIPPING, NOW DOOMED," GAYDA DECLARED.

"IT MAY BE ADDED THAT ENGLAND IN THIS WAY WOULD SUCCEED IN DRAGGING INTO THE CONFLICT THE UNITED STATES WHICH, AFTER ALL, HAS EVERY INTEREST TO STAY OUT OF IT.

"IT IS THE HABIT OF BRITISH POLICY TO DISREGARD SCRUPLES AND THE INTERESTS OF OTHER NATIONS IN ORDER TO HAVE THEM SHARING THE RISKS AND CALLING ON THEM TO BEAR THE EXPENSES.

"IT IS NOT THE HABIT OF THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT TO GIVE ITSELF UP IMPRUDENTLY TO USELESS COMPLICATIONS WHICH WOULD TRANSFORM GOOD EARNINGS INTO THE DANGER OF SERIOUS LOSSES."

HOWEVER FRIENDLY TOWARD BRITAIN, GAYDA SAID, THE UNITED STATES "COULD NEVER" SHOW IT TO HER OWN INTEREST TO MIX IN THE EUROPEAN CONFLICT "AGAINST THE NEW EUROPEAN FORCES OF THE FUTURE."

WITH THE GREEK FORCES ON THE SOUTHERN ALBANIAN FRONT, DEC 22-(AP)-NIMBLE GREEK ARTILLERYMEN JUMPING ABOUT IN MUDDY FIELDS POURED SHELLS INTO LONG, THIN RANKS OF RETREATING ITALIANS TODAY, WORKING FURIOUSLY TO KEEP THE FLEEING FASCISTS WITHIN GUN RANGE.

TWO HILLS AND RIDGES FROM THIS POINT ON THE FRONT FAILED TO SCREEN THE ITALIANS FROM THE GREEK ARTILLERY OBSERVERS AND THEY WERE SPOTTED WHEN THEY BEGAN ANOTHER WITHDRAWAL.

THE FIRING GOES FAST.

HALF-A-DOZEN BURSTS ARE GIVEN, THEN THE RANGE IS EXTENDED.

THE ACTION APPARENTLY IS ONE-SIDED, WITH THE GREEKS "SHOOTING THE WORKS" TO GAIN A DECISIVE ACHIEVEMENT IN A SECTOR WHERE BITTER FIGHTING

THERE HAVE BEEN HARD DAYS AND NIGHTS OF SMALL ATTACKS AGAINST ITALIAN POSITIONS FROM THE VALLEY FLOOR TO THE MOUNTAIN CREST NEARLY A MILE HIGH. ALL THESE LITTLE ACTIONS WERE DESIGNED TO PRODUCE ONE RESULT--THE "ENEMY IN RETREAT."

EVEN THROUGH BINOCULARS THERE WAS NO GLIMPSE OF THE GREEK INFANTRY PRESSING HOME THE VITAL OFFENSIVE BUT THE ALMOST INCESSANT CHATTER OF MACHINE GUNS ALL ALONG A SECTION OF THE FRONT SHOWED THEY WERE AT WORK.

THOUGH THE BATTERIES ARE BUSY, SEVERAL GUNNERS FOUND TIME DURING THE DAY TO WASH THEIR SOCKS AND SHIRTS AT A NEARBY CREEK AND SPREAD THEM OVER BUSHES.

WHAT IS MORE IMPORTANT, THE WOUNDED NOW CAN BE SENT TO BASE HOSPITALS WITH LESS DELAY SINCE THE SNOW HAS STOPPED. WHERE IT RECENTLY TOOK A DAY TO MOVE THE WOUNDED TO THE REAR IT NOW IS A MATTER OF A FEW HOURS.

THE GREEKS LIKE TO TALK ABOUT THE WAR AND CITE THE FACT THEY ARE FIGHTING A NATION MORE THAN SIX TIMES THEIR SIZE.

THE ARTILLERYMEN ARE NO EXCEPTION.

THEY SAY THEY WILL "THROW THE MACARONI EATERS INTO THE SEA" BUT THERE EVIDENTLY IS NO ENMITY AGAINST THE ITALIAN TROOPS INDIVIDUALLY.

"WE'VE GOT A SWELL CAUSE TO FIGHT FOR," SAID ONE CORPORAL WHO SPENT TWO YEARS IN NEW YORK. "NOT FOR EMPIRE, JUST FOR OUR HOMES."

Churchill Bids Italy Oust Duce; Manchester Bomb Havoc Heavy; Commons Hit; Mannheim Blasted

Otherwise, Prime Minister Warns In Surprise Broadcast, "Our Armies Will Tear Your African Empire Into Shreds And Tatters"

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 23—In a bold and surprise effort to speak directly to the Italian people over any barriers intended to forestall reception, Prime Minister Churchill appealed tonight for the overthrow at home of Premier Mussolini.

His message was broadcast repeatedly to Italy in English and Italian in the hope that Italians somehow might hear and heed him. Listening to enemy broadcasts is forbidden in Italy.

Churchill gravely told his uncounted audience that British armies "are tearing and will tear your African empire to shreds and tatters."

Coming To "Closer Grips"

And he told any Italians listening that "presently we shall be forced to come to much closer grips." In this connection it was recalled the British fleet last week end penetrated the Adriatic.

Churchill called Mussolini a "criminal" who, after eighteen years of power, had left Italians only the "hard choice" of standing up to the might of the British Empire or calling in "Attila over the Brenner Pass with his hordes of ravenous soldiery and his gangs of Gestapo policemen to occupy, hold down and protect the Italian people for whom he and his Nazi followers cherish the most bitter and outspoken contempt."

English "On The Move"

The English-speaking world is "on the move," he solemnly declared, and he asked:

"Why have you placed yourselves, you who were our friends and might have been our brothers in the path of this avalanche now only just started from its base to roll forward on its predestined track?"

"sombre tale" is only a Italians, was an unmistakable hint that and "who can say when Britain was ready to crush Italy with the vast weight of her military force if Italians fail to take advantage of Churchill's invitation to quit following Mussolini.

Religious Factor Seen

Other circles pointed out that the deeply religious Italian people might be in mood to listen to Churchill at the Christmas season.

It has been reported in London that the Italian people do not have their hearts in the war and are saddened by war losses and severe economic conditions.

Further, since the Italian reverses in Albania and Africa, both official and unofficial reports have quoted Italian prosiners as saying they did not want to go to war.

Churchill placed the blame for the war on "one man."

Smashing Events Portended

The speech was seen by informed circles here as a portent of smashing events to come in the two theaters of war—Africa and Albania—where the Italians appear to be playing a losing role.

The significance of the Prime Minister's bid to Italians to throw Mussolini overboard was emphasized, these circles said, by the possibility that Churchill might have taken the microphone "before the news breaks" of Britain's war effort being thrown struggle against the British Empire and has deprived Italy of the sympathy and intimacy of the United States of America. That he is a great man I do not deny, but that after eighteen years of unbridled power he has led your country to the horrid verge of ruin can be denied by none.

"It is all one man who, against the crown and royal family of Italy, against the Pope and all the authority of the Vatican and of the Roman Catholic Church, against the wishes of the Italian people who had no lust for this war, has arrayed the trustees and inheritors of ancient Rome upon the side of the ferocious pagan barbarians."

"There Stands The Criminal"

"There lies the tragedy of Italian history and there stands the criminal who has wrought the deed of folly and of shame."

It was pointed out authoritatively, in this connection, that Churchill attacked Mussolini alone at an hour when the German Luftwaffe was increasing its threat to Britain, Nazi submarines were intensifying their campaign and an invasion was possible.

Some circles borrowed an American phrase and said the speech was an "or else" warning uttered in confidence that Britain would be able to make it good.

People Should Have Say

Churchill couched his appeal in these terms:

"One man and one man alone ordered Italian soldiers to ravage their neighbor's vineyard. The time has come when the Italian monarchy and people who guard the sacred center of Christendom should have a word to say upon these awe-inspiring issues.

"Surely the Italian army, who has fought so bravely on many occasions in the past but now evidently has no heart for the job, should take some care of the life and future of Italy."

Broadcast A Surprise

The British Broadcasting Corporation planned to send Churchill's appeal around the world in a dozen languages before midnight. The Italians, first to hear the broadcast in the regular BBC propaganda program, didn't know it was coming.

The BBC was reported to have held off advertising the broadcast for fear Italian officials would attempt to jam it.

A BBC spokesman said the Italian translation would go out five times before noon tomorrow. He said that British broadcasts were considered to have a big audience in Italy and that after the first broadcast word would get around and by the time of the fifth transmission Churchill's message would have reached a large portion of the Italian people.

"Last Appeal To Reason," Bloom Says Of Speech

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—Sol Bloom (Dem., N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said today Prime Minister Churchill's speech was "a last appeal to reason to the people of Italy before the Nazis penetrate Italy."

"As Churchill said, if the Germans ever get into Italy with their Gestapo and their soldiers, that would be the end of Italy," Bloom asserted.

Churchill tried to prove that the English always liked the Italians and the Italians liked the English and this was the last chance for the Italian Army to save Italy for the Italian people. They owe this to themselves and to their children—to save Italy from this one-man despotic rule."

Churchill Talk Brings "Cad" Cry From Rome Radio

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Tuesday, Dec. 24—Italian officials professed not to have heard Prime Minister Winston Churchill's broadcast and therefore said they would not comment. It was considered unlikely that any reply would be made officially or in the press.

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 23—The Rome radio, in a broadcast heard tonight by NBC, called Prime Minister Churchill a "cad," in referring indirectly to his radio appeal today to the Italian people.

"Whatever Daventry (British radio station) may say about Mr. Churchill personifying Britain's old tradition of aristocracy—Daventry has just sent out this priceless message of insults into the winter air—everybody who knows Mr. Churchill knows him to be a cad," the Rome announcer said.

"The Unanimous Opinion"

"This was the almost unanimous opinion of his school contemporaries at Harrow, his fellow-cadets at Sandhurst, his follow-officers and his fellow-journalists during the South African war.

"The same reputation followed him into the House of Commons and worked against his becoming Prime Minister. Nobody wanted to be ruled by a cad until the feeble leadership of the present war called for the substitution of someone who at least possessed a dynamic personality—and there was no one else who possessed this quality.

"He is costing the nation pretty dear, however. The sound instinct of the people will not stand for him for long, most probably."

TEXT

Tonight I speak to the Italian people and I speak to you from London, the heart of the British islands and of the British Commonwealth and Empire. I speak to you in what the diplomatists call words of great truth and respect. We are at war—that is a very strange and terrible thought. Whoever imagined until the last few melancholy years that the British and Italian nations would be trying to destroy one another?

We have always been friends. We were the champions of the Italian Risorgimento. We were the partisans of Garibaldi, the admirers of Mazzini and Cavour. All that great movement toward the unity of the Italian nation which lighted the nineteenth century was aided and was hailed by the British parliament and public.

Our fathers and our grandfathers longed to see Italy freed from the Austrian yoke and to see all minor barriers in Italy swept away so that the Italian people and their fair land might take their honored place as one of the leading powers upon the continent and as a brilliant and gifted member of the family of Europe and of Christendom.

Comrades In Last War

We have never been your foes till now. In the last war against the barbarous Huns we were your comrades. For fifteen years after that war we were your friends. Although the institutions which you adopted after that war were not akin to ours and diverged, as we think, from the sovereign impulses which had commanded the unity of Italy, we could still walk together in peace and good will. Many thousands of your people dwelt with ours in England, many thousands of our people dwelt with you in Italy.

We liked each other, we got on well together. There were reciprocal services, there was amity, there was esteem. And now we are at war; now we are condemned to work each other's ruin. Your aviators have tried to cast their bombs upon London; our armies are tearing and will tear your African empire to shreds and tatters.

We are only now at the beginning of this sombet tale. Who can say where it will end? Presently we shall be forced to come to much closer grips. How has all this come about and what is it all for?

Blames One Man Alone

Italians, I will tell you the truth. It is all because of one man. One man and one man alone has ranged the Italian people in deadly struggle against the British Empire and has deprived Italy of the sympathy and intimacy of the United States of America. That he is a great man I do not deny, but that after eighteen years of unbridled power he has led your country to the horrid verge of ruin can be denied by none.

It is all one man who, against the crown and royal family of Italy, against the Pope and all the authority of the Vatican and of the Roman Catholic Church, against the wishes of the Italian people, who had no lust for this war, has arrayed the trustees and inheritors of ancient Rome upon the side of the ferocious pagan barbarians.

There lies the tragedy of Italian history and there stands the criminal who has wrought the deed of folly and of shame.

Opposed Admission

What is the defense that is put forward for his action? It is, of course, the quarrel about sanctions and Abyssinia. Let us look at that. Together after the last war, Italy and Britain both signed the convenant of the League of Nations which forbade all parties to that covenant to make war upon each other or upon fellow members of the League and bound all signatories to come to the aid of any member attacked by another.

Presently Abyssinia came knocking at the door, asking to be a member. We British advised against it. We doubted whether they had reached a stage in their development which warranted their inclusion in so solemn a pact. But it was Signor Mussolini who insisted that Abyssinia should become a member of the League and who, therefore, bound himself and bound you and us to respect their covenanted rights.

Thus the quarrel arose and thus, although no blood was shed between us, old friendships were forgotten.

But what is the proportion of this Abyssinian dispute arising out of the covenant of the League of Nations to which we had both pledged our word compared to the death grapple in which Italy and Britain have now been engaged?

Sees No Justification

I declare—and my words will go far—that nothing which happened in that Abyssinian quarrel can account for or justify the deadly strife which has now broken out between us.

Then the great war between the British and French democracies and Prussian militarism or Nazi overlordship began again. Where was the need for Italy to intervene? Where was the need to strike at prostrate France? Where was the need to declare war on Britain? Where was the need to invade Egypt, which is under British protection?

We were content with Italian neutrality. During the last eight months of the war we paid great deference to Italian interests.

But this was all put down to fear. We were told we were effete, worn out and an old chatterbox people mouthing outworn shibbolets of nineteenth-century liberalism.

Denies Fear Was Cause

But it was not due to fear. It was not due to weakness. The French republic for the moment is stunned. France will rise again, but the British nation and commonwealth of nations across the globe and, indeed, I may say, the English-speaking world are now aroused. They are on the march or on the move and all the forces of modern progress and of ancient culture are ranged behind them.

Why have you placed yourselves, you who were our friends and might have been our brothers, in the path of this avalanche now only just started from its base to roll forward on its predestined track? Why after all this were you made to attack and invade Greece?

I ask why, but you may ask why, too, because you never were consulted. The people of Italy were never consulted. The army of Italy was never consulted. No one was consulted.

One man and one man alone ordered Italian soldiers to ravage their neighbor's vineyard. The time has come when the Italian monarchy and people who guard the sacred center of Christendom should have a word to say upon these awe-inspiring issues.

Surely the Italian army, which has fought so bravely on many occasions in the past but now evidently has no heart for the job, should take some care of the life and future of Italy?

Did Best To Prevent War

I can only tell you that I, Churchill, have done my best to prevent this war between Italy and the British Empire and to prove my words I will read you the message which I sent to Signor Mussolini in the fateful days before it began. Cast your minds back to the sixteenth of May of this year. The French front had been broken the French army was not yet defeated, the great battle of France was still raging.

Here is the message which I sent to Signor Mussolini:

"Now that I have taken up my office as Prime Minister and Minister of Defense I look back to our meetings in Rome and feel a desire to speak words of goodwill to you as chief of the Italian nation across what seems to be a swiftly widening gulf. Is it too late to stop a river of blood from flowing between the British and Italian people? We can, no doubt, inflict grievous injuries upon one another and maul each other cruelly and darken the Mediterranean with our strife.

"If you so decree, it must be so, but I declare that I have never been the enemy of Italian greatness nor ever at heart the foe of the Italian lawgiver. It is idle to predict the course of the great battles now raging in Europe, but I am sure that whatever may happen on the Continent, England will go on to the end, even quite alone as we have done before, and I believe, with some assurance, that we shall be aided in increasing measure by the United States and, indeed, by all the Americas.

Makes Solemn Appeal

"I beg you to believe that it is in no spirit of weakness or of fear that I make this solemn appeal which will remain on record. Down the ages above all other calls comes the cry that the joint heirs of Latin and Christian civilization must not be ranged against one another in mortal strife. Hearken to it, I beseech you in all honor and respect before the dread signal is given. It will never be given by us.

And this is the reply which I received:

"I reply to the message which you have sent me in order to tell you that you are certainly aware of grave reasons of a historical and contingent character which have ranged our two countries in opposite camps.

"Without going back very far in time I remind you of the initiative taken in 1935 by your Government to organize at Geneva sanctions against Italy engaged in securing for herself a small space in the African sun without causing the slightest injury to your interests and territories or those of others.

Reply Cited Axis Pact

"I remind you also of the real and actual state of servitude in which Italy finds herself in her own sea. If it was to honor your signature that your Government declared war on Germany you will understand that the same sense of honor and of respect for engagements assumed in the Italian-German treaty guides Italian policy today and tomorrow in the face of any event whatsoever."

I make no comment upon the dusty answer. It speaks for itself so anyone can see who it was that wanted peace and who it was that meant to have war. One man and one man only was resolved to plunge Italy, after all these years of strain and effort, into the whirlpool of war.

And what is the position of Italy today? Where is it that the Duce has led his trusting people after eighteen years of dictatorial power? What hard choice is open now?

It is to stand up to the battery of the whole British Empire on sea, in the air and in Africa and the vigorous counter-attack of the Greek nation; or on the other hand, to call in Attila over the Brenner Pass with his hordes of ravenous soldiery and his gangs of Gestapo policemen to occupy, hold down, and protect the Italian people for whom he and his Nazi followers cherish the most bitter and outspoken contempt that is on record between races. There is where one man and one man only has led you; and there I leave this unfolding story until the day comes—as come it will—when the Italian nation will once more take a hand in shaping its own fortunes.

500 Trapped as Manchester Shelters Are Hit

Rescue Crews Still Are Digging Out Injured —Liverpool, Southampton and Bristol Also Are Targets.

MANCHESTER, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Heavy bombs which hit two public air raid shelters, one of which housed almost 500 persons, left an undisclosed number of casualties today after a nightlong German air attack on this city in the industrial heart of England picture theater and set fire to Bombs also wrecked a moving scores of buildings. The raid on the most densely populated section of England started in the early evening when streets were crowded.

Thick smoke still hung over the city this morning.

Wave after wave of bombers approached the city from the south and spread fanwise over a wide area. The first wave dropped flares. Incendiary bombs followed and high explosive bombs pelted down after that.

Some fires cast a deep red glow visible for miles but the flames were under control this morning.

Rescue parties still were trying to free persons trapped in raid shelters in various parts of the city.

Sixty persons were trapped at one of the two hotels hit but a number of them had been released by daylight.

London Raided Again Tonight.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Heavy anti-aircraft fire roared in the London area tonight after an early alarm had warned Londoners that the Luftwaffe was beginning its usual nocturnal raid.

The guns boomed steadily for some minutes. Then the firing became intermittent. Planes were heard overhead.

The London raid followed a day in which Britain was almost completely free from attack.

The raiders were active last night over many parts of England and London had two alarms. A famous old naval inn was smashed in a south coast town and one of the town's oldest mansions and a big motion picture theater were set on fire.

Nazis Raid Several Cities.

BERLIN, Dec. 23.—German raiders started "gigantic conflagrations" in factories and store houses at Manchester, in the industrial heart of England, last night and attacked additional military targets in London, Bristol, Liverpool, Southampton, Portsmouth and other English cities, the High Command announced today.

A pile of rubble containing broken bookcases and torn papers looks as if it had been poured down a chute from the nearby stately center Tower. This was the only part of the building to receive a direct hit in two recent Nazi raids, but the members' cloakroom, secretaries' offices and the inner lobby were regarded as unsafe as a result of the blast.

Some Windows Broken.

John Chambers, physician to Henry VII., built the cloisters at his own expense, incorporating in them part of the older cloisters of Richard II.

The hoary, greystone walls of the small courtyard were dented by flying debris and some windows were broken. The bomb just missed Westminster Hall, which has epitomized English history almost from the time of the Norman conquest.

Evidences of damage in the first Nazi raid still are visible. Twisted bits of iron window frame and broken glass are piled nearly around the vast window space, filled with iron scaffolding.

Statue Is Headless.

Directly under the window, a statue commemorating members who died in the last war stands headless and footless as a result of the bombing. Fallen masonry closed the entrance to the crypt beneath the cloisters, but there was no structural damage to the crypt itself. One parliamentary press office is in the crypt.

St. Stephen's Chapel, a few yards from the main entrance, was untouched, but a few stained glass windows in the central hall were broken. St. Stephen's Hall bounds the cloisters on the south and adjoins the central hall, which is in the center of the Houses of Parliament.

In a previous bombing windows were broken in the House of Lords, which is in the south group of buildings, and historic Westminster Hall, which bounds the cloisters on the west.

Nazi Bomb Hits Parliament

Corner of Ancient Building Is Shattered and Reduced to Twisted Rubble.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—One of the most ancient and architecturally beautiful parts of the Houses of Parliament has been reduced to a heap of twisted girders and masonry by a German bomb which fell in the Cloister Court. The Public Bills Office on the east side, the Vote Office on the south side and the Old Members' staircase leading to the inner lobby were destroyed.

BOMB STRIKES THIRD BRITISH RAID SHELTER

Deaths And "Terrific" Blasts Reported In Northwestern City

Wave After Wave Of Nazi Planes Drops Explosives On Town

[By the Associated Press]

A Northwestern English City, Tuesday, Dec. 24—A direct bomb hit on a public shelter caused undetermined casualties as German warplanes subjected this city to another heavy assault last night and early today.

[Editor's Note—Nazi bombers scored direct hits on two public shelters in Manchester Monday night.]

There were a number of other deaths and several persons were trapped in cellars when their houses were demolished.

Explosions "Terrific"

Wave after wave of raiders dropped heavy explosives, and an observer in a neighboring city reported: "There have been terrific explosions."

One German plane was reported shot down at Old Trafford, famous international cricket ground at Manchester.

[Both Liverpool and Manchester, neighbors in the northwest, have been subjected to "Coventry" attacks in the last few nights.]

R.A.F. Pounds Mannheim For 7th Time In Month

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—The seventh heavy raid this month on Mannheim, strategic German Rhine river fort and railway junction, was reported today by the Air Ministry, which said R. A. F. bombs had forced Germany to divert France-bound railway traffic to a less satisfactory line and had seriously impeded river traffic.

The Ministry's news service said British bombers in "one crowded hour" poured thousands of incendiary bombs and some "very heavy" explosive missles on Mannheim and its industrial neighbor, Ludwigshafen.

Other Targets Blasted

The raid was one of the night's R. A. F. attacks upon the Rhineland, airfields in German-occupied territory and the invasion ports of Flushing, Dunkerque and Calais.

[An indication that the far-ranging British bombers were on the wing again tonight came from Basel, Switzerland, where air-raid alarms were sounded. Swiss alarms usually indicate British raids on Italy or southern Germany.]

Night Raid On London

At home, the Germans gave the British a virtual day of rest after concentrating night air attacks on Manchester, in the industrial heart of England. But tonight the Luftwaffe flew back into action and an early night alarm in London was quickly followed by the booming of anti-aircraft guns and the drone of attacking motors.

There were several fatalities when a London pub was razed by a high-explosive bomb.

The "all clear" signal sounded early, after high-explosive and incendiary bombs dropped in some areas. The raiders appeared mainly concentrating on a northwest city which has been previously attacked.

Two Shelters Bombed

Heavy bombs hit two public air-raid shelters in Manchester and left an undisclosed number of casualties.

An authoritative source said, however, the Manchester death list was comparatively small in view of the severity of the attack.

Nazi raiders followed their familiar pattern tonight, flying over the misty, cloudy Strait of Dover and spreading to many districts in Britain.

The repeated attacks on Mannheim were believed by observers to be part of a scheme to sever the rail communication between the Saar Valley of Germany and Italy, as well as obstruct traffic to and from France.

"Great Damage" Done

The Air Ministry said it has learned from sources other than pilots that "great damage" has been done at Mannheim.

"The Rhine harbor was hit and barges sunk," the Ministry said. "As a result, the river traffic which helps give Mannheim its position as the most important industrial center of southwest Germany has been very seriously impeded."

These sources were quoted as saying part of the I. G. Farbenindustrie plant in Ludwigshafen, one of the largest chemical plants in the world, received a direct bomb hit.

Fires In Ludwigshafen

Returning pilots said most of the damage last night was done near the main railway station and there were "spreading wastes" of fires in Ludwigshafen.

The Ministry news service said there were three "huge" fires after the attack on Frankfurt-on-Main, a large fire at inland docks at Cologne and a fire in a large block of factory buildings in western Germany.

The British Admiralty said 41,476 tons of merchant shipping was sunk by "enemy action" during the week ended December 15, a sharp decrease from the weekly average of 62,867 tons.

Nazis Report Big Fires Left In Manchester

Berlin, Dec. 23 (AP)—"Gigantic conflagrations" were left in Manchester, Britain's great steel center, last night by German air raiders who also were said to have blasted at military targets in London, Bristol, Liverpool, Southampton, Portsmouth and other British cities.

In another blow at the sources of British war metals a German bomber was reported by informed sources to have raided Fort William, aluminum manufacturing center, at the western end of Loch Ness canal in west Scotland.

A large factory power plant there was said to have been bombed out of operation by a single missile from a low-diving plane.

German submarines were reported to have sunk two freighters of 18,000 and 9,000 tons, respectively.

A communique reported only "slight damage" by R. A. F. planes on western Germany last night.

HULL SAYS U. S. WILL WELCOME HALIFAX CHOICE

New Ambassador to Rest Before Making Voyage to America

EDEN TAKES OVER OFFICE

As Foreign Minister, Observers Believe, He Will Promote Ties With Russia.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that the appointment of Viscount Halifax as British Ambassador to the United States was highly welcomed by this Government.

The Secretary of State added that the accomplishments of Lord Halifax were such as to commend him, and he looked forward with pleasure to working with him.

Eden Takes Over Halifax's Post As Foreign Chief

Likely to Bring Britain Closer To Soviet Russia

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Anthony Eden took over the Foreign Secretaryship today in a quick change interpreted by some neutral sources as foreshadowing a more aggressive British diplomacy, possibly including improved relations with Soviet Russia.

His predecessor, Lord Halifax, will leave for his new post as Ambassador to Washington "early in the New Year."

[The United Press reported Lord Halifax would fly to America. He surrendered his seals of office this morning to King George and went north for the holidays.]

More Realistic.

Some sources recalled that Eden, whom Halifax replaced as Foreign Secretary Feb. 20, 1938, when the latter differed with the appeasement policy of his chief, Prime Minister Chamberlain, had visited Moscow in his former tenure in the Foreign Office.

The Russians regarded Halifax and the late Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain as foes of a British-Russian rapprochement.

It is understood here that they regard Eden as possessing a better understanding of Russia and more realistic views as to advantages of trade and other agreements between Russia and Britain.

Eden's post as Secretary of War goes to Capt. David Margesson, 50, chief government whip in Commons.

Additional Cabinet changes were expected, including possibly the appointment of World War Premier David Lloyd George to the government.

When British policy underwent its shift to so-called appeasement during the winter of 1937-38, it was Halifax who laid the groundwork for a direct contact with Hitler.

In November, 1937, while Eden still was Foreign Secretary, Halifax visited Germany for a talk with Hitler. On Nov. 17 he was closeted with Hitler at Berchtesgaden. Eight days later Neville Chamberlain acknowledged the semi-official character of the visit with the statement in Commons that the talks were "of a confidential character."

Last Big Appeaser.

The succession of Halifax to the post left vacant by the death of Lord Lothian removes the last great figure in the London government associated with Chamberlain in appeasement.

King George VI. raised Viscount Cranborne to the peerage in his own right to act as spokesman for the Foreign Office in the House of Lords. He will continue as Dominions Secretary. Until now Cranborne has held only a courtesy title as a son of a Marquess.

Eden Sees Role for Army 'Reckoning With Hitler'

Writes Farewell Message as War Secretary

LONDON, Dec. 23 (AP).—Anthony Eden, Great Britain's new Foreign Secretary, told the army today, in his farewell letter as War Secretary, that "our military power now expands apace" and that it would play a "decisive" part in the "final reckoning with Hitler."

Eden's letter, written from the War Office, said he was leaving his work with the army "with deep personal regret." He added: "The army has been through a challenging ordeal. Strong in the conviction that, man for man, the British soldier has no superior anywhere, we have rebuilt with all speed."

Eden declared the British victory in the western desert in North Africa was "the first reward of much patient effort, no less than of dash and daring."

The army's "quality to command success" was proved in Africa, he said, "as one day it will be proved in Europe." He declared: "Much remains to be done. More tanks, more guns, more weapons of every kind—these are our need in December, as they were our need in June."

Nazis Assert Churchill 'Rid Himself of Halifax'

Eden Is Called Chief Factor in Present Chaos

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (AP).—Official

German comment on Anthony Eden's appointment as British Foreign Secretary was lacking today, but authorized sources here asserted it was "interesting to note how Churchill managed to rid himself of Halifax." [Viscount Halifax has been made British Ambassador to the United States, with Eden replacing him as Foreign Secretary.]

"Regarding Eden's past we certainly aren't in doubt," one authorized commentator said, and "Churchill has found in Eden a man who corresponds to his own policy of adventure."

The commentator charged Eden with having been the chief factor in rendering fruitless Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's efforts to come to an arrangement with England. In the German mind, he said, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, Eden and Alfred Duff Cooper, British Minister of Information, formed the triumvirate chiefly responsible for the present war.

Italy Sees More U. S. Aid

ROME, Dec. 23 (AP).—Italian political circles said today they looked for "still more intimate collaboration" between the United States and Great Britain with Lord Halifax as British Ambassador at Washington.

The newspaper "Il Piccolo" viewed the appointment of Anthony Eden to replace Halifax as Foreign Secretary as a victory for the young Conservatives in British politics. They "are anxious to take" the place of Prime Minister Churchill, "Il Piccolo" said.

Dorman-Smith Named New Burma Governor

As Agriculture Minister He Launched Britain's Campaign For Home Gardens

London, Dec. 24 (AP)—Col. Sir Reginald Hugh Dorman-Smith, who was Minister of Agriculture at the outbreak of the war, was appointed Governor of Burma today by King George.

Sir Reginald is a fromer president of the National Farmers Union and has been a member of the House of Commons since 1935. He attended Harrow and the Royal Military College at Sandhurst.

As Minister of Agriculture he launched Britain's campaign for home gardens to help offset the island's dependence on sea-borne foodstuffs. He was succeeded in this post by Robert S. Hudson.

CALLS FOR 15,000 MEN

London Needs Greater Force To Clear Air-Raid Damage

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—Sir Warren Fisher, special commissioner of roads and buildings, called today for 15,000 additional civilian workers and 1,000 private trucks to help clear London streets which have been closed or obstructed by air-raid damage.

Clearance work now engages 23,000 men in the London area.

Eire Guards Roads

London, Tuesday, Dec. 24 (AP)—Eire military authorities have placed barriers across many main island roads and manned them with armed guards instructed to shoot those who fail to heed their challenges, it was reported here today.

BRITAIN ACTS IN STRIKE

Tailors Quit, Accusing Man of Working Too Fast.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (A.P.).—The Ministries of Supply and Labor were asked today to settle a strike in the plant where the National Union of Tailors and Garment Workers charges that Cutter Albert Lazenby cut too many pairs of khaki trousers an hour.

It was estimated unofficially that between 4,000 and 5,000 workers are affected by the strike, which started despite efforts of union representatives to keep the men on the job. The strike was called after Lazenby was expelled from the union of tailors and garment workers on a charge of endangering union standards of "output and craftsmanship." He stayed at work.

BOMBS FALL ON IRELAND

Enemy Aircraft Active In Last Week, Belfast Reports

Belfast, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Ministry of Public Security for Northern Ireland announced tonight that "enemy aircraft" had been identified in operations over Northern Ireland "on several occasions" during the past week, but that all bombs they dropped fell in open country and caused "no damage and no casualties."

King's Card Shows Him Viewing Ruins

LONDON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Royal Christmas card this year is a topical one.

The Royal Crown appears on the exterior of cards of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, while on the inside is printed a previously unpublished photograph showing their Majesties surveying bomb damage to Buckingham Palace.

Queen Mother Mary's card shows an old English thatched cottage standing in a peaceful Old World setting. The title is:

"There'll always be an England."

Churchill Lunches With Royal Couple

LONDON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—King George VI received Prime Minister Churchill and Charles D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Munitions, in audience today. Mr. Churchill remained to lunch with the King and Queen.

Mr. Churchill is broadcasting to the British Empire tonight (3 P. M., New York time).

41,476 TONS SUNK

British Admiralty Reports on Week Ending Dec. 15.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—A total of 41,476 tons of merchant shipping was sunk by enemy action during the week ending December 15, the Admiralty reported today. This marked a sharp decrease from the weekly average of 62,867 tons.

An authoritative spokesman pointed out that the December weekly average of losses of merchantmen based on figures to December 16 was 71,000 tons, the lowest in the last six months.

Of shipping reported sunk in the week ended December 15, the Admiralty said five vessels totaling 30,830 tons were British and two totaling 10,646 tons were Allied. No neutral ships were reported lost.

Germany claims to have sunk 82,450 tons during the week.

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—German submarines sank two merchantmen, one of 18,000 tons and one of 9,000 tons, within the last twenty-four hours, the Geneva High Command said today.

R. A. F. Attacks Wide Area

Thousands of Incendiary Bombs Dropped on Mannheim—Chemical Works Hit.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—British bombers dropped thousands of incendiaries and some very heavy explosives on the southwest German industrial center of Mannheim last night in the seventh raid on that Rhine River port this month, the Air Ministry news service reported today.

The news service said that most of the damage done was near the main railway station, a vital junction for traffic to France. On the Ludwigshafen side of the Rhine there were "spreading wastes of flames," the report said further.

The Air Ministry said that it had learned the British raids had forced the Germans to divert rail traffic to France to another and less satisfactory line and that there had been a direct hit on part of the I. G. Farbenindustrie works in Ludwigshafen, one of the largest chemical plants in the world.

RAF planes also attacked the invasion ports of Flushing, Dunkirk and Calais last night, the Air Ministry announced.

Last night's attacks capped a series of British raids since Saturday on Germany, Italy and four Nazi-conquered countries. The Air Ministry said that only one plane was lost in the latest forays.

Observers believed the renewed attack on Mannheim was intended to sever the main rail link between Germany's vast Saar Valley coal fields and the war-vital heavy industries of northern Italy.

One informant said such raids were the R. A. F.'s part in a British land, sea and air effort to knock the Fascists out of the war quickly, thus releasing Great Britain's mediterranean fleet for Atlantic convoy duty and to guard against the still-present threat of German invasion.

Pilots returning from the far-flung raids told of inflicting heavy damage from Norway to the Adriatic.

1600-mile Round Trip.

The most spectacular of the raids was a 1,600-mile round trip attack across the Alps to the head of the Adriatic.

The Air Ministry reported fires were started in a petroleum refinery and docks and factory buildings at Porto Marghera, near Venice, in a half-hour attack around Saturday midnight.

Flyers were quoted as saying they broke through heavy anti-aircraft fire along the Nazi-held coast of France, crossed the Alps flying at 17,500 feet in temperatures 30 degrees below zero, but could see the dark lines of the Venice canals distinctly as they neared their target.

In attacks at daybreak yesterday, coastal command planes were reported to have bombed important German docks at Wilhelmshaven and the Nazi bases at Lorient and Brest which are believed used by submarines and light naval units preying upon shipping in the Atlantic.

Late the night before, other coastal command planes dumped explosives on the railroad line which the Germans were said to be using to carry supplies from Oslo to the Norwegian port of Bergen.

Raid Alarms at Basle.

BASLE, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Air raid alarms sounded in Basle at 8:46 P. M. tonight (2:46 P. M., Eastern standard time). Air raid alarms in Swiss cities usually have indicated British planes were on their way to bombing objectives in southern Germany or northern Italy.

Bombs Fall in Venice.

ROME, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command said today that bombs dropped in a lagoon at Venice caused neither casualties nor damage. The Italians also said Fiume was bombed by the British the same night.

Berlin Death Toll Grows.

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The number of dead from the British air raid on Berlin on Saturday was reported today to have risen to 36.

Today's communique said British planes dropped "a small number of explosives and incendiaries" at a few places in the western border region of Germany last night. It sad there was only "slight damage to the populace and unimportant damage to apartment houses."

LAND AND SEA GUNS BATTER PORT IN LIBYA

Plans For Direct Assault Are "Proceeding Satisfactorily"

R. A. F. Again Bombs Italian Air Bases Farther West Near Bengasi

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 23—The British Army of the Nile, with some 36,000 Italian prisoners reported already moved to the rear, poured reinforcements into siege lines around beleaguered Bardia today preparatory to an assault on its 20,000 defenders.

While the troops were massing outside the Libyan port, British artillery and naval guns pumped shells into positions occupied in the town itself by remnants of the Italian Tenth Army declared trapped there.

Italian Bases Struck

Ranging far ahead of these operations, the R. A. F. reported new night raids on Italian bases along the arching Libyan Mediterranean coast as far as Bengasi, 300 air miles to the west.

Near Bengasi, the air bases at Berka and Benina were reported raided Saturday night, and returning pilots told of starting tremendous fires and explosions. Often-bombed Tobruk, eighty miles west of the Egyptian border, also came in for another pounding.

"Our preparations are progressing satisfactorily," the British command said.

35,949 Prisoners Moved

It announced that 35,949 prisoners, including 1,704 officers, had been moved to the rear since the British offensive started in the Sidi Barrani area of the Egyptian coast and that "several thousand more" still were awaiting transfer.

Swift British mechanized units, which paced the drive to Dardia, were reported to have struck westward once more; just how far was not disclosed.

[British military circles in London said Bardia probably was heavily fortified "in depth" on the land side and with coast defense guns to combat offshore bombardments.]

Assault Delayed

Military observers believed the British would attempt to take Bardia at as small cost as possible, by delaying direct assault until the steady bombardment, now in its seventh day, could break Italian resistance.

It was assumed here that the Bardia defenders had been thrust into the role of a sacrifice garrison to hold up the British while Fascist defenses are strengthened at Tobruk, Derna and Bengasi.

The R. A. F. said that in air fighting yesterday one Italian fighter was downed and a second probably destroyed.

A "Weak Excuse"

In British military circles Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's report to Premier Mussolini on the "first phase of operations" in Libya was termed a "remarkably weak effort at excuse."

These sources said the accumulation of stores and equipment taken at Sidi Barrani made it obvious that Graziani, as he reported to il Duce, had been preparing for a further advance eastward. But they declared his statement that he was about to attack appeared to be contradicted by his claim that he was waiting only for the arrival of mechanized transport from Italy.

These sources countered Graziani's assertion that the British attack had not come as a surprise with the statement that all their evidence showed the Italians were taken completely unawares. They claimed that even as late as December 12, three days after the offensive was launched, Italian units west of Sidi Barrani had no knowledge of the British attack.

Why Not A Better Fight?

"Anyway, if the Italians weren't surprised, as Graziani claims," went the British reaction, "why didn't they put up a better fight?"

The Italian claim to having taken on December 6 a prisoner who told them a British attack was due within the next ten days was met with the statement that British plans for the offensive were such a close secret that the troops believed they merely were about to engage in major maneuvers until half an hour before the assault was launched.

Ethiopian Town Bombed

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Air Ministry news service reported today that planes of the South African Air Force dropped 300 bombs on Yavello, in Italian-conquered Ethiopia.

Rome Sets Casualties At 18,824 in 6 Months

Report Doesn't Include Recent Warfare in Africa and Albania

ROME, Dec. 23 (AP).—In the first six months of Italy's war, casualties in the Italian forces numbered 18,824, including 4,531 killed, an official resume stated today.

The report covered only the period from Italy's entry into the conflict on June 10 to Dec. 12, and therefore did not include latest figures from the Albanian and African fronts, where losses have been reported as heavy. (The British claim to have taken 40,,000 prisoners and to have inflicted losses at a ratio of ten to one on the Italians in Africa, while the last figures from Albania placed the number of Italian prisoners at 7,500 and casualties in the thousands.)

The report included Albanian and African colonials as well as Italians fighting for the empire. The breakdown gave 4,531 killed, 10,055 wounded and 4,238 missing. Of this number, 14,078 were Italians, 3,655 of whom were killed, 7,538 wounded and 2,885 missing.

The report also listed twenty-seven warships as fleet "casualties," including twenty-three acknowledged to have been sunk. (The last official British claims said they had sunk thirty-five warships, including twenty-four submarines, and damaged ten other men-of-war, including four battleships.)

The breakdown of fleet losses in today's resume was: sunk: one cruiser, five destroyers, ten submarines, three lightships, four torpedo boats; damaged: three battleships, one destroyer.

BRITISH SEND MORE TROOPS

Reports Auxiliary Cruiser Sunk —Says Re-enforcements Are on Way to Libya.

CAIRO, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The British raised their total of Italian captives again today, announcing that 35,949 prisoners, including 1,704 officers, have been moved to the rear from the Sidi Barrani area in North Africa and "several thousand more" are still awaiting transfer.

Crossing paths with the Italians moving behind the British lines in the western desert, steady streams of British re-enforcements were moving up to the siege line around Bardia, massing for an assault against the 20,000 survivors of Italy's tenth army reported trapped in the Libyan port.

A communique said that, while British artillery still harassed the Italians inside Bardia, "our preparations outside are progressing."

Reports from the frontier said that while field and naval guns battered Bardia's defenses from land and sea, fast mechanized units which have spearheaded the British counter-invasion struck off to the west once more.

How far these advance units penetrated toward Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's next line of defense was not disclosed. It was said, however, there was no sign of an Italian drive to save the troops at Bardia.

British observers assumed that Bardia's defenders had been assigned the role of a sacrifice garrison to hold up the British while Marshal Graziani strengthened new defenses to the west, at Tobruk, Derna and Bengasi.

Delay Direct Assault.

There was no indication how soon the British might try to collapse the Bardia defense. Observers believed they would try to take the town at as small cost as possible by delaying direct assault until bombardment, now in its seventh day, could crack Fascist resistance.

The British reported last night that 175 Italian planes had been destroyed with a loss of fourteen British planes in the fortnight since the Army of the Nile turned the tables on Graziani's invasion army in Egypt.

Reuters, the British news agency, reported that news of Britain's victories in North Africa was spreading from village to village through Italian-held Ethiopia.

It asserted the Ethiopian and Sudanese frontier was buzzing with rumors of uprisings by Ethiopian tribes against her Italian overlords.

Claim to Have Sunk Cruiser.

ROME, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—An Italian torpedo plane operating off the North African coast sank an unidentified British auxiliary cruiser, the High Command reported today.

The situation on land in the battle zone of Libya was unchanged, it said.

Fascist planes attacked a British advance base and renewed their attacks on British armored equipment in this area, a communique said.

The British, meanwhile, bombed some centers in Libya, killing one and injuring three, the communique added.

In localities of the upper Sudan, the High Command said, "enemy motor trucks and preparations were bombed."

NAVY CONVOYS AID TO LIBYA, FASCISTS SAY

Troops, Supplies Ferried Across Mediterranean, Paper Reports

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 23—Italian troops and supplies, the newspaper La Tribuna said today, are being convoyed across the Mediterranean to reinforce Fascist legions against the British desert offensive.

Italy's navy, a correspondent wrote, is "guaranteeing passage" of men and materials "to ports of the fourth shore." The "fourth shore" is a common Italian expression for Libya.

[British naval sources maintain that their blockade cut off shipping between Italy and her African empire.]

Situation "Unchanged".

Premier Mussolini's high command reported the situation was "unchanged" in the fifteen-day-old battle of north Africa, where the siege-battered Italian garrison at Bardia, Libya was officially described as vowing to fight to the end.

Fascist warplanes slashed at Britain's counter-invasion armies over the wastes of the Libyan desert and a British warcraft in the near-by coastal waters.

The high command said a Fascist torpedo-throwing plane sank a British auxiliary cruiser off the north African coast.

Counter-Attack Claimed

In the Balkan war counter-attacking Fascist troops were reported to have thrown back the Greeks in an unspecified sector, and the high command declared:

"We have inflicted considerable losses on the enemy and captured automatic arms."

"A formation of Italian fighter planes clashed with a formation of nine Blenheim (British) planes, three of which were shot down," the high command said in its Albanian war report.

Far-ranging British bombers attacked Venice for the first time in the war in a pre-dawn raid Sunday, the high command acknowledged, but said the bombs splashed harmlessly in a lagoon. Fiume, 130 miles east, near the Yugoslav border, was also raided.

Arranges Barter

Italy, meanwhile, arranged to obtain metals and cattle from Sweden and Slovakia for food, flowers, wine and machinery in a newly signed barter agreement.

In the first six months of Italy's war, casualties in the Italian armed forces numbered 18,824, including 4,531 killed, an official resume stated today.

The report covered only the period from Italy's entry into the conflict, June 10, to December 12, and therefore did not include latest figures from the Albanian and African fronts where losses have been reported as heavy.

Colonials Included

The 18,824 total included Albanian and African colonials as well as Italians fighting for the empire. The breakdown gave 4,531 killed, 10,055 wounded and 4,238 missing.

Of this number, 14,078 were Italians, 3,655 of whom were killed, 7,538 wounded and 2,885 missing.

The report also listed twenty-seven warships as fleet "casualties," including twenty-three acknowledged to have been sunk.

[The last official British claims said they had sunk 35 warships, including 24 submarines, and damages to 10 other men o' war, including 4 battleships.]

Italy in Barter Pact With Sweden

ROME, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Italy has arranged to obtain metals and cattle from Sweden and Slovakia in newly signed barter agreements, it was announced today.

Sweden is to supply iron, other metals and some machinery in exchange for flowers, vegetables, dried fruit and gloves. From Slovakia, Italy is to receive cattle and barley—used as a coffee substitute—in exchange for fresh foods, wine and machinery.

TWO SPIES EXECUTED

Italy Imprisons 22 Others, Including Two Women.

ROME, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The execution of two men as spies and the imprisonment of twenty-two other persons, two of them women, revealed the smashing of an alleged network of informers which some observers thought today might have been related to the damaging British raid on the Taranto naval base on November 11.

Aurelio Cocozza, described as an impostor traveling salesman of Taranto, and Francesco Ghezzi, a naval officer, were shot by a firing squad at dawn yesterday, only a few hours after they were condemned and before any official announcement of the trial was made.

ITALY CAUTIONS U. S.

Gayda Sees Complications if Ships Are Seized.

ROME, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Virginio Gayda, the Fascist spokesman, has suggested the possibility of complications with the Rome-Berlin-Tokio Axis should the United States permit belligerants' merchant ships now refuged in her harbors to fall into British hands.

Officials remained cautious regarding the suggestion of Ronald Cross, British Minister of Shipping, but in political circles complete solidarity with Germany in the matter was expressed.

"If the United States accepts the proposal it would be regarded as seriously involving the maintenance of American neutrality," correspondents were told.

GRAZIANI SAYS FIGHT GOES ON

Blames Reverses in Egypt on Lack of Tanks.

ROME, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Marshal Rodolfo Graziani blames the Italian reverses in Egypt and Libya on the failure of tanks and armored cars to reach him from Italy, thus preventing his forces from getting the jump on the British.

He refused, however, to concede defeat in North Africa.

The Fascist commander, in a detailed report to Premier Mussolini yesterday, declared the Italian troops under Gen. Annibale Bergonzoli at beleaguered Bardia were determined to fight to the end.

He attributed the Italian retreat from Egypt to the "crushing superiority" of British armored forces, and added that his army was outnumbered.

Tanks Never Arrived.

Tanks and other mechanized equipment were supposed to arrive from Italy early in December and the Fascist fighters were poised for an attack ordered by Il Duce, which was to have carried them, according to battle plans, past Matruh to the Nile and the Suez Canal.

The equipment, however, did not arrive, Marshal Graziani said.

"The essential reason for the first lightning success gained by the enemy must, therefore, be sought in the crushing superiority of armored forces employed in masses," he said.

"Against the key points occupied by our troops on the desert country, flat, easily looked over and devoid of any tactical possibilities, the enemy had an easy time of pooling masses of armored equipment, medium and heavy tanks, aided by fast-moving batteries and effective assistance of the air forces," he continued.

Says Italians Never Quit.

The Italians never gave up, Graziani asserted, so long as they had a cartridge to shoot.

[Earlier British reports said hundreds had surrendered with full equipment and many with loaded guns.]

Marshal Graziani asserted it would "certainly be premature to forecast developments in the titanic fight" in Libya.

He said the Italian forces were not surprised by the British attacks which began on December 9. Italian scouting planes had reported a massing of British troops and equipment east of Matruh from the beginning of October, he continued, and from prisoners captured the night of December 7 it was learned the attack was to start in about ten days.

"To the Last Spasm."

He had only the highest praise for his men and declared that if the number of prisoners taken by the British was high it was because the Italians held out "to the last spasm."

"Our Italian and Libyan divisions in this battle have held high the traditions of gallantry and heroism of our army," the Marshal reported. "Commanders and troops have written pages of the most splendid heroism in desolate stretches of the western desert.

"Italian troops sacrificed themselves without sparing. I once more affirm to you categorically that everybody there has fulfilled his duty as far as possible."

Graziani commented especially on the support given the British ground forces by the fleet and air force and added that sandstorms had handicapped his own air force. Nevertheless, he said, Italian fliers brought down 42 British planes and possibly 20 more.

Italy Fits Out a Prison De Luxe

British Officers Will Be Held at Old Villa—Privates Kept in Cold Mountain Camp.

FONTE D'AMORE, Italy, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Italy is converting an eighteenth century villa of the old Roman Orsini family into a prison residence de luxe for high-ranking British officers near this mountain prison camp, where some 350 French and British captives are shivering in quarters built during the world war.

Foreign correspondents were taken on a tour of the villa and the camp today and learned that Air Marshal Owen Tudor Boyd captured when his plane was forced down in Sicily on November 21 soon after he was appointed vice commander of British air forces in the Middle East, would be brought to the villa soon with other officers.

The villa is at Sulmona, birthplace of the Roman poet Ovid.

The visiting journalists found the morale of the British prisoners apparently higher than that of the French, who were bewildered at being held when they consider the war over for France.

Complain at Lack of Heat.

The English complained yocif-

The camp, built to house 18,000 Austrian prisoners during the world war, is in this suburb whose name means fountain of love because of the waters here which Ovid prized.

The climate is harsh in midwinter, but the location was considered ideal for a prison camp because of its great security. It is about 120 miles from Rome and linked to nearby towns only by a few mountain roads.

An Italian official said greater freedom therefore was allowed prisoners and that officers were permitted to take walks, under guard, outside the camp.

Greek Prisoners Expected.

Some Greek prisoners are expected to be brought here soon.

The correspondents were told the camp was run in accordance with the international Geneva convention of 1929. Officers are paid wages corresponding to those paid to Italian officers of similar rank. They are given rooms but pay for their food and clothing.

British privates get food, lodging and clothing, but no pay. By an agreement with France, French privates also receive the same pay Italian soldiers are given. It was said Great Britain declined to make such an agreement with Italy.

erously at the lack of heat and delays in the mail. They seemed otherwise cheerful and generally healthy, and noted that they were no colder than the Italians who lived around them.

The British entertained visiting newspaper men with a program of snappy songs led by Edward Rogers, a London comedian.

The English prisoners were mostly airmen and members of submarine crews. Fifty-two of them were saved from the submarine Oswald, said to have been rammed and sunk off Taranto.

A few were taken from tanks put out of action by Italians in the Egyptian desert. Rogers was among these.

French and English prisoners are separated.

Chimara Captured by Greeks In Their Drive to Seize Valona

Athens Reports 800 Men and 30 Officers Rounded Up—Says Italian Troops Are in Disorderly Flight.

ATHENS, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Greek Army occupied the strategically important Albanian coastal town of Chimara, Premier-Gen. John Metaxas announced today, after having crushed an Italian attempt to halt the advance toward Valona, less than thirty miles further up the coast.

Victory in the week-long battle for this Italian supply base between Valona and Porto Edda, it was reported, came when the Italians withdrew to avoid being cut off by Greek forces which threatened to encircle the town.

In taking Chimara from picked Italian troops holding strongly fortified positions, the Greeks claimed the capture of the 153d Battalion of Fascist Militia, made up of 800 men and thirty officers.

Much Material Captured.

Great quantities of war materials were said also to have been taken.

The Italians were reported in disorderly flight toward Valona, pursued by a Greek motorized column. Greek military spokesmen said possession of Chimara opened the way for the Greeks to advance swiftly toward the Italian-held port over a good coastal highway.

At the same time, the R. A. F. command reported a big air battle Saturday over Argyrokastron, Greek-held Albanian stronghold, in which it said the British flyers shot down at least eight Italian planes and lost only two themselves, although outnumbered more than five to one.

The Italian attack, by fifty fighters, it said, came after nine R. A. F. fighters had intercepted fighter-escorted Italian bomber formations over the town.

R. A. F. Bombs Oil Wells.

The communique also reported R. A. F. attacks yesterday on oil wells at Kucova, in central Albania, and said "all bombs fell in the target area" despite Italian aerial and ground defense fire.

The Greeks earlier had reported skirting Chimara and said their troops were fighting forward toward the port of Valona on the Adriatic, less than thirty miles up the coast.

A Greek spokesman said then that Chimara was "under absolute control of our artillery," and the Greek forces were reported shooting the works to keep the Italians in retreat.

Twenty miles to the northeast, on a second road to Valona, the Greeks claimed brilliant successes in a very large scale battle for the mountainous Tepeleni-Klisura region.

The Greek spokesman declared that the Italians were smashed back there with heavy losses after a determined stand of nearly a week.

Other reports last night said one choice Fascist regiment had been cut to pieces by the latest Greek assault near Tepeleni and that two battalions were surrounded.

Steady Advance Reported.

"Our army is advancing steadily and securely," the spokesman said. "In the coastal sectors the enemy offered stiff resistance . . . and tried to maintain himself in strongly fortified positions protected by barbed wire entanglements, but has been unable to succeed.

Of the Greek drives toward Elbasani and the Albanian capital, Tirana, from the northern wing of the battlefront, the spokesman declared:

"More northward, where Alpine units are fighting, our troops advanced and occupied heights and villages."

A communique issued today by the Greek High Command said two lieutenant-colonels were among new prisoners taken by the Greeks, reported to have captured approximately 2,000 Italians in the last seven days.

Extreme cold and heavy snow have hampered operations recently, but weather over the week end was improved.

No air raids were reported on Greece yesterday, but there were accounts of intensive air activity over the battlefront.

The Greeks and the British Royal Air Force units operating with them reported shooting down at least eighteen Italian planes and damaging two others badly.

Report Greeks Repelled.

ROME, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Greek attacks in Albania were repelled by Italian counter-attacks, the Italian High Command asserted today.

"We have inflicted considerable losses on the enemy and have captured automatic arms," the daily war bulletin said.

Formations of Italian fighter planes were said to have clashed with a formation of British Blenheim bombers, shooting down three.

DRIVING GREEKS SEIZE CHIMARA, ATHENS CLAIMS

Important Fascist Supply Base Falls, According To Metaxas

Premier Says New Decisive Victories May Be Expected Soon

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 23—The Greek army, heading northward along the Albanian coast toward the port of Valona, was reported tonight to have captured the Fascist supply base of Chimara and to be pressing home its advantage against retreating Italians.

Premier General John Metaxas announced victory in the week-long battle for Chimara, less than thirty miles south of Valona, at a Cabinet meeting. He added that further operations were developing satisfactorily and new decisive results could be expected soon.

Black Shirt Battalion Captured

Night communique said:

"Local operations continued today with success. Chimara has been occupied. The One Hundred and Forty-first Black Shirt battalion consisting of twenty-nine officers and 677 men surrendered after being surrounded.

"At the same time we also captured the commandant of the second battalion of the second regiment of Bersaglieri together with the second in command and a number of men of the unit.

"Considerable material also has fallen into our hands."

Continued Gains Reported

From the Tepeleni-Klisura sector came reports of continued gains against Italian positions pounded heavily by Greek artillery. In the north, action was said to be enlarging because of improved weather conditions.

The British R. A. F. command claimed at least eight Italian planes were shot down in an air fight Saturday over Argirocastro, Albania, against a loss of two British ships. It told, too, of bombing attacks yesterday on oil wells at Kucova, central Albania, in which "all bombs fell in the target area."

Greeks attributed their success at Chimara, after a week of fighting against picked Italian troops holding strong positions, to their tactics of skirting the town and threatening to cut off the defenders.

Report Battalion Captured

One of these units—the One Hundred and Fifty-third Battalion of Fascist militia, 800 men and 30 officers—was said to have been captured with all its equipment. At least one Greek motorized column was reported to have advanced beyond the town, against the heights where the Italians were believed preparing to make a new stand.

Chimara, formerly a Greek town, is built on the ruins of an ancient city mentioned by Homer in some of his writings. Announcement of its capture was followed by enthusiastic demonstrations throughout Greece.

Church bells pealed and flags were displayed at all public buildings. A large crowd cheered Premier Metaxas and King George VI when they left general-staff headquarters at Athens.

NAZI SECRET POLICE ARREST DR. GRUEBER

German Known for Work on Behalf of 'Non-Aryan' Christians

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (AP)—Dr. Heinrich Grueber, known throughout the Protestant world for his efforts in behalf of "non-Aryan" Christians, has been arrested by the Secret Police and taken to the Sachsenhausen-Oranienburg concentration camp, where the Rev. Martin Niemoller is imprisoned.

The cause of the arrest was not divulged, but observers presumed it to have some connection with the anti-Semitic government policies.

Dr. Grueber conducted a bureau which had correspondents throughout the Reich who reported on cases of needy Jewish Christians.

His bureau succeeded the so-called Paulus Bund, composed of "on-Aryan Christians. The name was taken from St. Paul.

The Gestapo, with which Dr. Grueber had frequent official contacts on account of his charitable work, closed his office last Friday and searched both his home and his office. He was taken on an unrevealed charge to the Alexanderplatz, the main police station, and thence to the concentration camp yesterday.

Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, foreign secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, whose office has worked in close collaboration with Dr. Grueber and his organization for several years, said yesterday that the council through Dr. Grueber's assistance had been able to help a number of victims of religious and racial persecution to leave Germany.

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 23—The civil administration of Alsace, in German-occupied France, announced completion today of expulsion of persons regarded as unsuited for incorporation in the region's new order.

Removal of the non-German element, the administration said, had "banished the last doubt that Alsace is and will remain German."

The majority involved—numbers were not given—were persons of French nationality, replaced by many of German nationality who came from France.

VICHY, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Spanish Ambassador to the Vichy Government, Jose Felix Lequerica was reported here today to be in Paris taking part in French-German discussions on collaboration. It was said that he might see German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Ambassador Lequerica took an active part in negotiations leading to the French-German armistice.

There were reports that Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's Ambassador to Paris might make another trip to Vichy.

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Authorized spokesmen today denied that Germany had threatened renunciation of the French Armistice. They said they could not confirm the reported receipt by Fuehrer Hitler of a message from French Chief of State Philippe Petain and insisted they had no intimation as to whether Ambassador Abetz was coming to Berlin in the near future.

Swiss Protest to London On Bombing Near Zurich

Demand Made for Damages and Reparation

BERNE, Dec. 23 (AP).—The Swiss Minister at London was instructed today to make a "most energetic protest" against Royal Air Force flights over neutral Switzerland, after bombs dropped last night near Zurich injured eleven persons.

A Swiss communique said the planes which dropped the bombs and caused alarms over several Swiss cities for the second night in succession were identified as British. The Minister was instructed to demand full damages and reparations.

It was the second formal protest to London within a week. Bombs which killed four women Dec. 16 at Basel also were identified as British and a protest was made the following day.

One bomb which fell last night near a railway viaduct at Oerlikon, in suburban Zurich, exploded three and a half hours later, wounding five railway workers, some seriously. There was damage to the viaduct, over which traffic had just been restored after repairs to an electric power line severed by a previous bomb explosion, as well as to a railway turntable.

Residents of the city extinguished many incendiary bombs by covering them with snow.

MORE NAZI TROOPS POUR INTO RUMANIA

Soldiers in Full Gear Cross Border From Hungary.

LOKOSHAZA, Hungary, on the Rumanian Frontier, Dec. 23 (A. P.). — Thousands of German troops with full war gear crossed into Rumania today.

Border reports said they would re-enforce the Nazi divisions already patrolling the country and guarding its rich oil wells.

A Rumanian official, however, declared that the additional Nazi troops were only another part of the corps being sent in to instruct the Rumanian Army.

Machine-guns, field artillery and tanks were taken across the border.

The troop movement followed the dispatch of two other German divisions to Rumania two weeks ago.

Military observers estimated that there are more than 100,000 German soldiers already in Rumania—their ranks increased steadily by a stream of troops moving across Hungary from the Reich.

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 23 (AP)—Portuguese officials said today that 400 officers and men of French warships lying at Martinique had been landed at Casablanca, French Morocco, by the Portuguese liner Mouzinho, due here today from Portuguese Africa.

Naval sources said the crews of the French vessels at Martinique, including the aircraft carrier Bearn, probably had been reduced to one-tenth of their normal strength—"an indication," they said, "that France is not planning to use these units at present."

The French Government had asked the Portuguese Navigation Company to furnish transportation for these men from the West Indies island.

CROWN PRINCE OLAF ARRIVES IN WASHINGTON

Heir To Norwegian Throne Visits President, Joins Own Family

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23—Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, arriving here for Christmas with his family, called on President Roosevelt today to express Christmas greetings.

Olaf reached New York from England by clipper plane and flew thence to Washington. He was greeted at the airport by his wife, Crown Princess Martha; George T. Summerlin, the State Department's chief of protocol, and other officials.

The 37-year-old Prince, a general in the Norwegian army, and his father, King Haakon, have been in England, rallying their countrymen as allies of Great Britain.

Living Near Capital

The Crown Princess and her three children came to the United States several months ago at the invitation of President Roosevelt and have taken up residence at an estate near the Capital.

Before returning to England, five or six weeks hence, Prince Olaf expects to visit Canada and inspect Norwegian flying and naval units in training there.

He expressed the hope of driving "the German invaders from our land and all other countries they have seized."

Reticent On Food Crisis

While declining to discuss general food conditions in Europe, he said that Norway "has food enough to feed our own people, but that is about all."

Secretary Hull received, during the day, a message from another royal refugee who recently was a guest at the White House, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands.

Before leaving for Canada, where she is making her home for the time being, the Princess wrote Hull that "I wish to thank Your Excellency for the generous hospitality of the United States Government. I shall always look back with great pleasure on the days so happily spent in this country."

MAGYAR PRINCESS WILL LEAVE U. S.

Washington Not to Press Deportation Action.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Department of Justice officials said today that the Princess Hohenlohe of Hungary had agreed to leave the United States at a specified time and that in view of this no deportation proceedings were contemplated.

The Princess has been described in the British House of Commons and elsewhere as an ardent Nazi sympathizer.

She was scheduled to leave at midnight last Saturday. Four days earlier, Attorney-General Jackson announced that her application for a second extension of her temporary visitor's permit had been denied, and that deportation action would be started unless she left at the expiration of the permit she then held.

However, in view of the arrangement for the Princess's departure at an early date, an official said, the department has agreed not to act immediately. This official said that because of department policy and for other reasons, presumably the request of the Princess, there could be no disclosure of the date, time, place or manner of her leaving.

She came to this country a year ago from England, where her activities and associations had aroused considerable criticism. In this country she had been close to German official representatives. Recently she has been in the company of Capt. Fritz Weidemann, German Consul at San Francisco.

2 STEPS ARE TAKEN IN SABOTAGE FIGHT

Navy To Require Contractors To Report On Possible Danger

Bill Covering Manufacture Of Exports Introduced In House

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23 Two new steps to prevent sabotage of munitions production were taken today.

The Navy Department disclosed that henceforth all contracts would contain a clause requiring the contractor to "submit a confidential report to the Navy Department whenever, for any cause, he has reason to believe that an active danger of espionage or sabotage exists at the plant, factory or site of the work" covered by the contract.

Must Tell Why

The report must contain a complete explanation of why the contractor is apprehensive of such danger.

The contractor also is pledged, whenever directed by the Secretary of the Navy, to report "the citizenship, the country of birth or the alien status of any or all of his employes."

He also must agree that he "will refuse to employ, or if already employing shall forthwith discharge from employment and exclude" from his factory any person "designated by the Secretary of the Navy for cause as undesirable to have access to work or materials for the navy."

Bill Introduced

On Capitol Hill, a bill was introduced to give the Justice Department authority to act against sabotage committed in this country against goods being manufactured for export to foreign nations.

Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General, had told Congress that, although the National Defense Act provided such protection for materials being produced for defense of this country, there was no Federal law allowing the department to move against sabotage of goods for export.

The measure was introduced in the House by Representative Voorhis (Dem., Cal.), chairman of a subcommittee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Far East Affairs: Dutch Isles Watched

Shanghai, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Japanese Navy announced today extension of its blockade of China's coast to the southwestern ports of Kwangtung province, and notified foreign consulates that Japan would not be responsible for damage to vessels or crews entering the blockaded area.

The United States Consulate was expected to make its customary reply that the United States would hold Japan responsible for any such damage.

Singapore, Dec. 23—Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Britain's commander-in-chief in the Far East, announced today that "substantial reinforcements of all arms have recently arrived in Malaya."

"The reinforcements include aircraft, air-force personnel, members of Indian infantry, artillery, engineers and auxiliaries," the official announcement said.

"The reinforcements not only strengthened already formidable defenses at Singapore but also increased defense forces in other areas of the Far East command."

Eyes On Dutch Indies

The Far East command includes Malaya, Burma and Hongkong.

Sir Shenton [illegible] Governor of the Straits Settlements, announced in a broadcast yesterday that the mainland of Malaya as well as Singapore and Penang were being placed in a state of defense.

The great naval base of Singapore guards Britain's communications with the Far East, Australia and New Zealand and stands as a power behind Netherlands forces in the Netherlands East Indies, important producer of oil, tin and rubber.

A thousand miles to the north of Singapore, Thailand (Siam) is em-

Thailand Artillery Duel

[By the Associated Press]

Bangkok, Thailand, Dec. 23—An exchange of heavy gunfire between Thai (Siamese) and French Indo-China batteries was reported today by the Thai high command.

French artillery, anti-aircraft batteries, machine guns and rifles, it said, opened fire yesterday on the Thai town of Nakonpanom from Thakhek, across the Indo-China border. It said the French sent over one hundred shells, but "there were no casualties on our side."

Thai guns "retaliated promptly and vigorously and silenced the enemy guns," it said, "and it is believed that most of the French gun emplacements were destroyed or damaged."

U. S. FOREIGN POLICY DISTURBING TO TOKYO

Share Drop Ascribed to Clash of Opinion With Berlin

TOKYO, Dec. 23 (AP)—Nervousness over the United States foreign policy, which might involve Japan through the three-power pact if it led to a break with Germany, was indicated in the press today.

A one-yen drop to 108 in the price of shares in the Tokyo Stock Exchange, a normally steady barometer, was ascribed by the financial newspaper Chugai to two developments.

One of these was a German Foreign Office spokesman's statement that Germany would consider it an unfriendly act if the United States requisitioned foreign-flag ships in her ports to sell to Britain. The other was President Roosevelt's addition of fifteen items to the list under the export licensing system.

The Japan Times and Advertiser, English-language paper controlled by the Foreign Office, commented that "Germany has opened a diplomatic offensive against the United States." The paper said that the German move might have greater significance than merely calling attention "to an intolerable situation" and that Germany "comes extremely close to a direct warning to keep out—or else."

Tass Denies Arms-Trade Report

MOSCOW, Dec. 23 (AP).—Tass, official Russian news agency, denied today that the Chinese Army had received large quantities of war material, medicaments and other supplies by way of Vladivostok, Soviet Far Eastern port.

The Tass statement, published in denial of a report published in the United States, also said it was untrue that "the American military officer Carlson will shortly go to Vladivostok to speed up transportation of war material to China."

[The published report had attributed such a plan to Evans Carlson, a former United States Marine officer.]

"Tass in authorized to deny this report, which is fabricated from beginning to end," the agency said.

War Powers' Communiques

German

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (AP).—The German high command communique:

The air force's activity during the day yesterday generally was limited to armed reconnaissance.

One reconnaissance plane attacked a large British aluminum plant at Fort William, in northern Scotland, in a daring low dive despite strong anti-aircraft defense. Works and important shops were most seriously hit by the resultant explosions.

Last night strong formations of heavy combat planes attacked with great success important industries in Manchester. Gigantic conflagrations in factories and storehouses resulted.

Furthermore, war-essential objectives in London, Bristol, Liverpool, Southampton, Portsmouth and other cities were raided.

Last night enemy planes dropped a small number of explosives and incendiaries at a few places in the western border region. There was only slight damage to the populace and unimportant damage to apartment houses.

Pursuit planes shot down one enemy plane yesterday. One of our own planes has not returned.

In the attack on the aluminum plant at Fort William the crew of the reconnaissance plane; Comdr. First Lieut. Fidorra, pilot Lieut. Muendel, radio operator Bothe and gunner Sgt. Lemberg especially distinguished themselves.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (AP).—An Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

Enemy activity last night was mainly directed against a city in the northwest which was heavily attacked for many hours. A large number of fires were caused and considerable damage was done to buildings and shops in the city. Full reports as to casualties are not yet available, but it is known that a number of people were killed and many other injured.

Bombs were dropped on Merseyside and in the East Midlands. In these areas little damage was done and casualties were slight.

In the south of England some houses were damaged and a small number of people were killed and and others injured.

Two enemy bombers were destroyed.

A later joint communique of the same ministries:

Enemy activity today has been confined to attacks by single aircraft at a few points on the east coast. These caused little damage and very few casualties.

An Air Ministry communique:

Industrial targets at Mannheim were the main objectives of Royal Air Force bombers last night. Both here and at Ludwigshafen on the opposite bank of the Rhine, fires were started and there were a number of explosions. Other targets in the Rhineland were also bombed.

Attacks were made on the ports of Flushing, Dunkerque and Calais and on airdromes in enemy-occupied territory.

One of our aircraft is missing.

A later Air Ministry communique:

It is known that on Saturday night two enemy bombers were destroyed by anti-aircraft defenses on the Merseyside. Last night, in addition to the two already reported, a third enemy bomber was destroyed by our night patrols. At about dusk today, another enemy bomber was intercepted by one of our aircraft high over the south coast, and blew up when hit.

CAIRO, Dec. 23 (AP).—A British general headquarters communique:

Our artillery has continued to harass the enemy inside the defenses of Bardia whilst our preparations outside are progressing.

Prisoners evacuated from the main Sidi Barrani battle area now total 35,949, including 1,704 officers. Several thousand more are still awaiting return from the forward camps.

In the area west of Gallabat, our artillery has been active.

On the northern frontier of Kenya, offensive patroling continues.

A communique of the Royal Air Force Middle East command:

Airdromes at Berka and Benina, the two main reinforcement airdromes near Bengasi, were heavily raided by R. A. F. bombers on the night of Dec. 21-22. At Berka, explosions and fires were started among the hangars, the fires burning fiercely as our aircraft left the target. One violent explosion occurred on the eastern side of the airdrome. At Benina, fires followed by explosions were caused. Two hangars were seen burning and a third badly damaged. Aircraft on the ground were machine-gunned from 500 feet.

Considerable damage was caused on the same night at Torbruk, where our bombers attacked the harbor and military objectives.

Our fighters maintained active patrols throughout yesterday, in the course of which one S-79 was shot down and another is believed to have been destroyed.

In southern Albania a fierce air battle took place over Argyrokastron between nine R. A. F. fighters and a force of enemy aircraft exceeding fifty in number. Although outnumbered by more than five to one, eight enemy fighters were shot down and three more probably were destroyed. Two of our aircraft were lost.

The pilot of one was seen being machine-gunned by enemy fighters while he was descending by parachute. He died half an hour after being found, from wounds received during his parachute descent.

It is placed on record that this is the second occasion since hostilities began in the Middle East that irrefutable evidence has been received of an R. A. F. pilot having been machine-gunned while making a parachute descent. This follows the practice Italian pilots adopted in the Spanish War.

Oil wells at Kucova (central Albania) were raided by R. A. F. bombers yesterday, all bombs falling within the target area. The powerhouse was hit. Our bombers were attacked by enemy fighters and intensive anti-aircraft fire. One enemy aircraft (Macchi 200) is believed to have been shot down. Two of our aircraft failed to return.

On other fronts there is nothing of outstanding importance to report, but numerous reconnaissance flights were successfully carried out.

Air bombardment of the enemy advanced base and attacks against his armored equipment have been renewed.

A torpedo from a plane hit and sank an English auxiliary cruiser.

The enemy bombarded some centers in Libya, with one dead and three injured.

On the Greek front, enemy attacks have been repulsed by our counter-attacks. We have inflicted considerable losses on the enemy and captured automatic arms.

Formations of fighter planes clashed with a formation of nine Blenheim (British) planes, three of which were shot down.

In East Africa enemy motor trucks and preparations were bombed in localities of the upper Sudan.

During the enemy air raid on metropolitan territory the night of Dec. 21 to Dec. 22, some bombs were dropped in the Venetian Lagoon without damage to persons or property.

Shortage of Oil for Planes Reported Hampering German Air Force

If somebody will be good enough to put his finger on the mysterious bottleneck which has prevented the Germans from employing more than a limited number of warplanes over Britain at any one time, then I will make a close guess as to whether Hitler will succeed in the invasion which England is expecting him to attempt in the near future.

The importance of this query is emphasized by the week end feat of the Royal Air Force in ranging western Europe from Norway to the Adriatic for bombing raids over six countries.

Invasion of England must be premised on such absolute control of the air that Britain and her 3,000,000 soldiers can be bombed into near insensibility before an effort is made to land a Nazi army from small boats on the channel. Anything short of that means disastrous failure for the Germans.

Obviously Nazidom thus far hasn't possessed anything like control of the air—or at least hasn't exhibited it. There can be small doubt that last summer, when Hitler was maneuvering for invasion, he hit England from the skies with everything he could. Yet the greatest fleet he ever succeeded in putting over the British Isles at one time was something like a thousand planes, according to estimates by observers. Where then was the invincible armada of many thousands, which was supposed to plow England under in short order by working in huge relays?

Even British Puzzled.

Even England is puzzling over the mystery of the bottleneck. Is it that the Nazis are husbanding their strength for the coming blow? Is it shortage of planes, by any chance?

Nobody but Hitler and those close to him know how many planes Germany possesses. Estimates run anywhere from 15,000 to 50,000, and one guess is as good as another. The same is true of Nazi production.

The only point everybody is agreed upon, including the British, is that Germany has a numerical superiority. There seems little question that Hitler has enough warplanes so that he could have used swarms more than he has employed—unless something else was wrong. You don't let your enemy wax stronger with each passing day if you can help it.

Running Short of Oil.

Is it lack of pilots? Early in the war we heard a good deal about Germany being short of fully trained airmen. Assuming that to be true, the scarcity could have been greatly remedied since then, if not wholly repaired. The trouble is something beside want of pilots, though Germany has lost many in combat.

There are other points, but we seem to hit rock-bottom for the first time when we come to the question of oil, and the gasoline which comes from it. Experts generally agree that Germany is dangerously short of this absolute essential, without which no war machine can run.

Russia and Rumania are the only direct sources of natural oil which the Nazis can reach, and thus far these two countries combined have not supplied more than a fraction of the Reich's requirements.

The Germans have been producing oil synthetically and refining it to get gasoline for their warplanes, which consume rivers of this precious fluid. The amount produced, however, is said to be less than that normally required for civilian use, not to mention military needs. On top of that British Minister of Economics Dalton the other day stated that the Royal Air Force had bombed more than 90 per cent of the synthetic plants and 80 per cent of the refineries. This would reduce production.

A shortage of gasoline—which the Nazis deny—might easily force Der Fuehrer to conserve his supplies. But there's more than that to it.

One of America's leading oil experts told me recently that without doubt both Germany and Italy were terribly short of lubricating oil upon which all industries which use machinery are utterly dependent. He thought the outcome of the war might turn on this shortage. Lubricating oil, by the way, cannot be made synthetically.

If the oil shortage report is correct, Hitler will have to make a quick killing on his next blitzkrieg, for it likely will be his last chance.

HE WAS WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN BELGIUM AND FRANCE DURING THE BLITZ-KRIEG LAST SPRING; HE HAS UNDERGONE GERMAN BOMBING RAIDS IN ENGLAND AND TOURED THE NORTH ATLANTIC WITH A BRITISH DESTROYER ON PATROL. NOW, IN A SERIES OF TWO STORIES, HE TAKES YOU TO VISIT THE BRITISH ROYAL ARMORED CORPS. TOMORROW: A RIDE IN A NEW BRITISH TANK.)

BY DREW MIDDLETON

WITH THE BRITISH ROYAL ARMORED CORPS SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND -(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-THOUSANDS OF TANKS IN AN AMAZINGLY LARGE NUMBER OF ARMORED DIVISIONS ARE BRITAIN'S ANSWER TO GERMANY'S PANZER DIVISIONS.

BRITISH OFFICERS CONFIDENTLY EXPECT THESE TANKS--MANY OF NEW AND SECRET DESIGN -- TO SMASH EITHER A NAZI INVASION ATTEMPT OF DEAL A DECISIVE STROKE ON THE EUROPEAN CONTINENT AT SOME FUTURE "DAY OF REVENGE."

THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE LEFT 471 TANKS AND MACHINE-GUN CARRIERS IN FRANCE; BUT NOW, STARTING FROM SCRATCH SINCE THE WITHDRAWAL FROM DUNKERQUE LAST SPRING, BRITISH DESIGNERS HAVE BUILT UP AN ENTIRE NEW GROUP OF ARMORED DIVISIONS.

"FEAR NAUGHT," THE MOTTO OF THE ROYAL TANK CORPS, HAS BEEN BALANCED IN THE NEW CONSTRUCTION WITH "GET THERE FUSTEST WITH THE MOSTEST MEN," WITH THE NEW TANKS EMPHASIZING SPEED AND FIRE POWER AS NEVER BEFORE.

ARMY TANKS ARE DIVIDED INTO TWO CATEGORIES -- THE "I" TANK FOR INFANTRY, WHICH OPERATES EXCLUSIVELY WITH FOOT SOLDIERS, AND THE CRUISER TANKS, WHICH FORM THE SPEARHEAD OF THE ARMORED DIVISIONS.

NEITHER THE SMALL, PUDDLE-JUMPING WHIPPET TANKS NOR THE LUMBERING 50 AND 60-TON MONSTERS BELOVED OF NEWSREELS ARE IN EVIDENCE. BOTH TYPES ARE OUT OF FAVOR IN BRITAIN'S MODERN ARMY; THE LIGHT TANKS BECAUSE THEY DON'T CARRY ENOUGH ARMOR AND CAN'T HANDLE ROUGH COUNTRY, AND THE BIG TANKS BECAUSE THEY ARE TOO SLOW.

THE "I" TANK IS A FORMIDABLE WEAPON. ITS ARMOR IS SO HEAVY THAT IN THE FLANDERS CAMPAIGN IT TOOK DIRECT HITS FROM GERMAN 77-MILLIMETER FIELD PIECES WITH NO EFFECT SAVE THE DENTING OF ITS ARMOR.

THE "I" TANK'S ARMAMENT INCLUDES A SMALL GUN WHICH CAN TOSS A 12-POUND SHELL 2,000 YARDS TO PIERCE THE ARMOR OF MOST TANKS, AND IT HAS A SECONDARY WEAPON IN THE NEW BESA MACHINE-GUN WHICH PUMPS METAL AT THE RATE OF 750 ROUNDS PER MINUTE.

SPEED IS NOT ESSENTIAL TO THE "I" TANK, WHICH PRECEDES INFANTRY IN ATTACKS AND ONLY OCCASIONALLY FIGHTS INDEPENDENTLY, BUT IT CAN SWING ALONG AT CLOSE TO 20 M.P.H. ITS CREW OF FOUR GUNNERS, WIRELESS OPERATOR, DRIVER AND COMMANDER ARE INTERCHANGEABLE.

CRUISER TANKS ARE THE DARLINGS OF THE ROYAL TANK CORPS. AS LARGE AS THE "I" TANKS, THEY WEIGH MUCH LESS AND ARE MORE THAN TWICE AS FAST. THEY CAN TURN ON A DIME, AND THE ONE I RODE IN CLIMBED HILLS, WENT CRASHING THROUGH UNDERBRUSH AND KNOCKED DOWN TREES A FOOT AND A HALF THICK WITH A TERRIBLE NONCHALANCE.

THEIR ARMAMENT IS ALMOST IDENTICAL WITH THE "I" TANKS, BUT THE CRUISERS DEPEND MORE ON SPEED AND MANEUVERABILITY TO RESIST ENEMY FIRE. AS THE GENERAL TENDENCY TOWARD TANKS OF THIS SIZE BECOMES MORE PRONOUNCED, THE BRITISH ARE DEVELOPING NEWER, FASTER MODELS WHICH LITERALLY CAN DRIVE CIRCLES AROUND THE PONDEROUS OLD-TIMERS THAT FIRST MADE THEIR APPEARANCE ON THE SOMME IN 1916.

BRITAIN'S CAVALRY REGIMENTS NOW ARE MECHANIZED AND OPERATE IN ARMORED FIGHTING FORMATIONS WHICH ARE A PART OF EACH ARMORED DIVISION. THEIR JOB IS STRICTLY RECONNAISSANCE, AND IN ONE REGIMENT, A LANCER UNIT OPERATED WITH SUCH DASH AND COURAGE IN THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS THAT IT WON SPECIAL PRAISE FROM LORD GORT AND THE FRENCH COMMANDERS.

TRAINING FOR THE ROYAL TANK CORPS IS ARDUOUS. FIRST THERE ARE 16 WEEKS IN WHICH THE CANDIDATES, EVEN THOSE SELECTED AS COOKS AND CLERKS, LEARN TO FIRE TANK WEAPONS AND USE THE WIRELESS WITH WHICH EVERY TANK IS EQUIPPED.

30.24 65 79

THE CHIEF DIFFICULTY IN SELECTING CANDIDATES IS THAT EVERY FIGHTING SERVICE AND CIVILIAN WAR INDUSTRY WANTS THE TYPE OF MEN SUITED FOR THE R. A. C. -- TRUCK DRIVERS, MECHANICS AND WIRELESS OPERATORS.

A148

ACCOMPANYING THE TANKS AND ARMORED CARS IN THE ARMORED DIVISIONS ARE SWARMS OF FAST NEW SCOUT CARS CALLED "DINGOS" WHICH MOVE AS FAST IN REVERSE AS FORWARD. THESE, ALONG WITH OBSOLETE LIGHT TANKS ON WHIC PRODUCTION HAS BEEN HALTED, AND TINY "BEAVERETTES," PERFORM LIGHT CAVALRY ROLES AT LIAISON AND RECONNAISSANCE.

THE FIRE POWER OF A SINGLE TANK BATTALION NOW EQUALS THAT OF THE 1914-18 WORLD WAR'S INFANTRY BRIGADE.

THE BRITISH CLAIM THAT THE GERMANS CANNOT LAND HEAVY TANKS BY SEA OR AIR IF THEY ATTEMPT AN INVASION, AND THAT THEIR TANKS WILL CUT THE GERMANS DOWN BEFORE THEY GET ORGANIZED.

BUT THERE IS NO COMPLACENCY IN THE TANK CORPS. INSTEAD, EFFORT IS DIRECTED TOWARD NEWER AND FASTER MODELS OF THE WEAPON WHICH BRITAIN INVENTED, AND THE "YEARS OF THE LOCUST" IN WHICH BRITAIN LOST HER LEADERSHIP IN ARMORED FIGHTING VEHICLES ARE BEING MADE UP BY THOUSANDS OF DESIGNERS AND THOUSANDS OF MEN AND OFFICERS.

POPE CALLS FOR MORAL VICTORIES AS BASIS FOR NEW WORLD ORDER

Pius Urges End of Hatred and Idea Might Makes Right---Appeals for Economic Freedom.

Vatican City, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII in a Christmas Eve message to the College of Cardinals declared today that the "new world order" proposed by warring nations should be based on five moral victories and pleaded for sincere political and economic solidarity in post-war Europe in order that it may not be a mere external mechanism imposed by force.

The five victories that should be the basis for any new world order, the pontiff said, were victories over hatred, mistrust, the idea that "might makes right," economic maladjustment and "cold egoism."

The Pope's message was delivered in response to the Christmas greetings of the cardinals. The Vatican City station broadcasts the speech at 8 A. M., and translations were broadcast to the world.

"A Certain Country"

Elaborating on the first of his five points, the Pontiff said:

"Indeed, at present in a certain country propaganda without check, which does not avoid manifest alterations of truth, shows enemy nations to public opinion daily and almost hourly in a false and outrageous light."

"But whoever really desires the well being of people and longs to help save the spiritual and moral bases of future cooperation among peoples from incalculable damage," he added, "will consider it his sacred duty and high mission not to let the minds and feelings of men lose the natural ideal of truth, justice, courtesy, good will, cooperation and, above all, the supernatural ideal of brotherly love brought by Christ to the world."

Asks Observance of Pacts

Regarding his second point, he called for "return to that fidelity in observance of pacts without which pure neighborliness of peoples, and particularly the coexistence of powerful and weak peoples, could not possibly succeed."

In his third point the Pope said the principle that might makes right caused "greater damage, especially to those states which, whether for their traditional fidelity to peaceful methods or their low war potentiality, do not want to or cannot contend with others."

It meant therefore, he explained, "the return to the serious and profound morality in love of relationship between nations, which obviously does not exclude either search for honest usefulness or timely and legitimate use of force to watch over peaceful rights seized with violence, or save them from harm."

Asks Economic Peace

The fourth moral victory was described as the triumph "over those germs of conflict which consist in two-sided differences in the field of world economy."

This triumph, he said, would mean "progressive action to arrive at arrangements which would give to every state the medium necessary for insuring the proper standard of living for its own citizens of every rank."

Of his fifth and final point the Pope declared the "spirit of cold egoism, which, fearless in its might easily leads to violation not only of the honor and sovereignty of a state but of the righteous, wholesome, disciplined liberty of citizens as well."

The Pope observed that "from the impassioned polemics of warring factions concerning the objedtives of the war and the ultimate peace settlements," there was emerging more clearly defined the "quasi universal opinion" that Europe was undergoing a transformation signalling the coming of a new era.

Something new and better, stronger, sounder and freer, must now replace the past, he said, "in order to elimnte its weaknesses and its deficiencies xx."

He said,

"The solace we derive from the riches of Christmas greetings is the greater because of the sad times in which we live."

Asks for Post-war Solidarity.

The Holy Father pleaded for "sincere political and economic solidarity" as part of "the so-called New Order in Europe" in order that it may not be a mere external mechanism imposed by force.

He directed the world to hold itself ready to heal its "spiritual wounds" when the war is ended.

The Pope recommended the Church as a spiritual bulwark and a refuge from earthly miseries.

"The Church, the common mother of all peoples, better understands all peoples," he declared. "The Church cannot be called partisan."

The Church exists to carry truth and moral teaching, he said, "to all nations the Church has preached truth, he added, but now "hard realism itself preaches it."

Pleads for 'Non-Aryans.'

The Pope [illegible] is gratified to be able to [illegible] with moral and spiritual assistancce . . . large numbers of refugees, expatriates and emigrants, including 'non-Aryans.'"

The contributions of Catholics in the United States, he said, had enabled him to be especially generous to war sufferers of Polish origin.

The Pope lamented, however, "the ever-diminishing possibility" of his bringing aid "through efficacious relief and consolation to prisoners of war," among whom, he said "victims are most numerous and misery most pitiable."

"However, although our aims have been frustrated in some countries," he said, "our efforts have not been in vain."

Sees Minds Improved.

The Pope declared that "not only today while the present conflict is raging, but also later on, nations will realize the need for the solution of social problems in the spirit of Christianity."

"The world will leave the hard school of today with an improved mind," he said. "Mankind will listen to the voice of reasoning and of justice. Only in such a state of mind can the world proceed to the establishment of a new order based on justice."

The pontiff spoke of unchecked propaganda in some countries, which, he said, sets up the enemy daily and hourly in a false light.

In conclusion he said: "We pray that men will grow mature enough to establish a new and just social and ecenomic order. We pray that mankind will be liberated from his tribulations."

Might Not Right, Pope Warns in Christmas Plea

Vatican City, Dec. 24 (AP).—Pope Pius declared today that in search for the new order of the future men and nations must triumph over hatred, over mistrust, over the notion that might makes right, over economic maladjustment and cold egoism.

In a Christmas Eve message to the College of Cardinals he said that while the war goes on there is little hope for such a restoration.

Hopes for New Order.

Nevertheless, he expressed "a heartfelt wish that when the guns shall have fallen silent at last humanity and its leaders will be sufficiently matured intellectually and capable in action to prepare the ground of the future for a new order that will be solid, true and just."

"We pray God," he added, "that it may so happen."

The Church itself could not be called upon to favor one over another of "the contrasting systems which are part of our times and dependent upon them," he said, since its "sole longing" is to provide to all the world's peoples "the clear waters of the fountains of our patrimony and values of Christian life."

But for a society that "would be humanly praiseworthy and spiritually elevated and a source of genuine good," he went on, there were these "indispensable prerequisites:"

"One, triumph over hate, which is today a cause of division among peoples; renunciation, therefore, of the systems and practices from which hate constantly receives added nourishment.

Deplores Rivalries.

"Two, triumph over mistrust, which bears down as a depressing weight on international law and renders impossible the realization of any sincere agreement.

"Three, triumph over the distressing principle that utility is a basis of law and right and that might makes right . . .

"Four, triumph over those germs of conflict which consist in two-sided differences in the field of world economy; hence progressive action, balanced by correspondent degrees, to arrive at arrangements which would give to every state the medium necessary for insuring the proper standard of living for its own citizens of every rank.

"Five, triumph over the spirit of cold egoism which, fearless in its might, easily leads to violation not only of the honor and sovereignty of states but the righteous, wholesome and disciplined liberty of citizens as well."

"...NO LESS COMFORTING IS IT TO US TO HAVE BEEN IN A POSITION TO CONSOLE WITH THE MORAL AND SPIRITUAL ASSISTANCE OF OUR REPRESENTATIVES, OR WITH AN OFFERING OF OUR RESOURCES, THE LARGE NUMBERS OF REFUGEES AND EXPATRIATES AND EMIGRANTS, INCLUDING 'NON-ARYANS.'"

Pope's Program for a Permanent World Peace

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 24 (AP).—The official English summary of the address today by Pope Pius XIII follows:

The holy joy of the feast of the nativity of our Lord, the intimate happiness which rises spontaneously in the hearts of the faithful of Christ, does not depend on external events, nor can it be disturbed or dismissed by them.

Whosoever grasps the intimate meaning of the Christmas hymn and has tasted even one drop of the sweet nectar of the truth of love which it contains knows where, amidst the confused succession of events, suffering and trials of these tempestuous days, he may find a haven of safety, and he will refrain as much from undue optimism which disregards reality, as from the still less apostolic tendency toward cowardly, depressing pessimism.

Let us be infinitely grateful to our Lord that in this, our own day, our church is not lacking in such elect, saintly, courageous souls, found alike in the ranks of the clergy and laity, who give strong evidence of heroism, generally overlooked by the world, and of unwavering fidelity.

The Heritage of War

The material and spiritual condition of the present age brings into being and imposes on the apostolate enormous demands not only for the duration of this dreadful war but still more for that day at the conclusion of the war when the people will be obliged to dedicate themselves to the task of repairing the deep-seated evils which will be their bitter social and economic heritage; when disorganized nations find themselves at the war's conclusion with spiritual wounds which will certainly demand assiduous and watchful care, that their pernicious effects may be forestalled or minimized.

Among the many misfortunes arising from this cruel conflict, one in particular which immediately brought sorrow to our heart continues to grieve us—namely, the misfortunes of the prisoners of war, which become progressively more distressing for us with the ever-diminishing possibility of our hastening in our paternal soluitude to bring aid through efficacious relief and consolation where the victims are most numerous, the misery most pitiable.

Mindful of what we ourselves in the august name of the sovereign pontiff, Benedict XV of happy memory, were able to accomplish during the last war for the relief of the moral and material distress of many prisoners of war, we had hoped that in the present instance as well there might be left open the way for the religious and charitable initiatives of the Church.

However, although our aim has been frustrated in some countries, our efforts have not been in vain everywhere, since we have succeeded in bringing many material and spiritual evidences of our concern to at least a portion of the Polish prisoners; and indeed other more frequent evidences of that same solicitude to Italian prisoners and internees, especially in Egypt, Australia and Canada.

Helps Locate Refugees

Nor as it our desire that the holf feast of Christmas should dawn in the world without our conveying through the medium of our representatives some definite manifestation of our encouraging remembrance and benediction to England and Greeks in Albania, and to Italians soattered throughout various parts of the British Empire, especially in Egypt, Palestine and India.

Eager, therefore, to make our own the anxieties of families fearful for the lot of their separated and unfortunate relations, we have undertaken and are actively advancing and developing yet another task of no small magnitude, namely that of requesting and transmitting information wherever it is possible and permissible to do so, not only concerning countless prisoners, but also concerning refugees and those whom the present calamities have so sadly separated from fatherland and home.

In this way we have been able to feel, close to our own, the beats of thousands of hearts with the disturbed tumult of their most intimate feelings, either in strained tension or under the terrible incubus of uncertainty, or in the exultant joy of renewed assurance or in profound suffering and quiet resignation regarding the state of their loved ones.

No less comfortable is it to us to have been in a position to console with the moral and spiritual assistance of our representatives or with an offering of our resources the large numbers of refugees and expatriates and emigrants, including "non-aryans."

Peace With Justice

We were enabled in our aid to those of Polish origin to be especially generous as also to those others for whom the charitable contributions of our children in the United States facilitated our paternal solicitude for them.

Exactly one year ago, venerable brothers and beloved sons, in this very place we formulated certain principles with regard to essential presuppositions of peace which would conform to principles of justice, equity and honor and would thus be enduring. And if the succeeding march of events has delayed their application to more distant time, the thoughts then proposed have nevertheless lost none of their intrinsic truth and conformity to reality, nor of their force of moral obligation.

From the impassioned polemics of warring factions concerning the objectives of the war and the ultimate peace settlements, there emerges ever more clearly defined the quasi-universal opinion which contends that pre-war Europe as well as its political structure are now undergoing a process of transformation of such nature as to signal the dawn of a new era.

Europe and its system of states, it is said, will not be as they were before. Something new and better, more evolved organically, sounder, freer and stronger, must replace the past in order to eliminate its defects, its weaknesses and its deficiencies, which are said to have been disclosed convincingly by recent events.

Church and the New Order

In the midst of the contrasting systems which are part of our times and dependent upon them, the Church cannot be called upon to favor one more than another. In the orbit of universal value the divine law, whose authority obliges not only individuals but nations as well, there is ample room and liberty of action for the most varied forms of political opinion; whilst the practical application of one political system or another depends in a large measure and often quite decisively upon circumstances and causes which, considered in themselves, are extraneous to the purpose and action of the Church.

As protectress and herald of the principles of faith and morals it is her sole interest, her sole longing, to convey through educational and religious channels to all peoples without exception the clear waters of the fountains of our patrimony and values of Christian life in order that every people in its own peculiar way may enjoy Christian fellowship, Christian ethical-religious impulses to establish a society that would be humanly praiseworthy and spiritually elevated and a source of genuine good.

Indispensable prerequisites for the search for a new order are:

One, triumph over hate, which is today a cause of division among peoples; renunciation, therefore of the systems and practices from which hate constantly receives added nourishment.

Two, triumph over mistrust, which bears down as a depressing weight on international law and renders impossible the realization of any sincere agreement.

Opposes "Might" Principle

Three, triumph over the distressing principle that utility is a basis of law and right and that might makes right, a principle which makes all international relations liable (liable to fall).

Four, triumph over those germs of conflict which consist in two-sided differences in the field of world economy; hence progressive action, balanced by correspondent degrees to arrive at arrangements which would give to every state the medium necessary for insuring the proper standard of living for its own citizens of every rank.

Five, triumph over the spirit of cold egoism which, fearless in its might, easily leads to violation not only of the honor and sovereignty of states but of the righteous, wholesome and disciplined liberty of citizens as well.

It must be supplanted by sincere juridical and economic solidarity, fraternal collaboration in accordance with the precepts of divine law among peoples assured of their autonomy and independence.

As long as the rumble of armaments continues in the stark reality of this war it is scarcely possible to expect any definite acts in the direction of the restoration of morally, juridically inprescriptible rights.

But it would be well to wish that henceforth a declaration of principle in favor of their recognition may be given to calm the agitation and bitterness of so many who feel that they are menaced or injured in their very existence or in the free development of their activity.

We express our heartfelt wish that humanity and those who will show it the way along which it is to move forward will be sufficiently matured intellectually and capable in action to prepare the ground of the future for the new order that will be solid, true and just.

We pray God that it may so happen.

SAYS HE KNOWS MEN YEARN FOR DER TAG

Von Brauchitsch Visits Battery on Channel, Where Activity Breeds Fear of Yule Attack—Fuehrer on Secret Trip.

Berlin, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, in a radio address from a long-range battery on the English Channel coast, told Germany's armed forces today "I know you all are just burning with the desire at last to meet the English and you are merely awaiting the Fuehrer's command so to do."

Meanwhile Adolf Hitler left Berlin aboard a special train for an undisclosed destination. Inquiries as to whether he would celebrate Christmas with the army and S. S. units as he did last year met with the rejoinder, "that's military information." On the train, however, it is known he studied British Prime Minister Winston Churchill's address yesterday to the Italian people.

Von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the German Army, said that recently he had been able to visit "all sections of the army to convince myself of the excellent spirit and ever-growing strength of our army."

He declared that "the ocean can protect England only so long as it suits us," a remark which suggested to observers here that the plan for invading Britain has in no way been dropped.

Union in Blood Spent.

Only one task remains for the army, "to knock down to the ground this last embittered adversary and thereby compel peace to issue forth," the marshal declared.

"It is a question of breaking England's one-sided hegemony," he added.

Then he turned to praise of those who sacrificed their lives since the beginning of the war.

"We have experienced much together," he said, reviewing briefly the events of the last year. "Nothing so binds people together as blood spent."

His visit was a surprise to the channel battery. Its officers and men were celebrating Christmas eve in a village school.

No Yule Truce, Say Nazis.

The Reich has no truce with Great Britain for a cessation of hostilities over the Christmas holiday and the fighting will continue, qualified spokesmen said today.

"Our Christmas will be rendered secure by the German Army, Navy and Air Force," they said, "and if there should be an air raid tonight, then we'll shoot."

Meanwhile, it was learned that Reichsmarshal Herman Wilhelm Goering, Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels and other members of the Fuehrer's Cabinet are due to spend a quiet Christmas with their families.

'We're Able to Invade'—Nazis Hint They Will

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

Berlin, Dec. 24 (AP).—Amid big guns which point at England from the French coast, Field Marshal von Brauchitsch, Hitler's commander-in-chief, declared today: "The ocean can protect England only as long it suits us."

He made a surprise visit to a long-range battery on the Channel coast (one is situated at Cap Gris Nez) and, from there, spoke by radio to the army.

His words indicated that German plans for invasion of England were in no sense abandoned.

(Official quarters in Berlin took pains to emphasize that von Brauchitsch addressed the army, not the air force, Christmas celebration. The official news agency said the explanation was necessary because most German people did not realize that the army and not the air force formed the bulk of the troops established on the Channel.)

(EARLY TODAY BRITISH BOMBERS GAVE THE CHANNEL "INVASION PORTS" A HEAVY POUNDING, FOLLOWING REPORTS OF CONSIDERABLE MILITARY ACTIVITY THERE. BRITISH LEADERS HAVE BEEN WARNING FOR DAYS THAT AN INVASION ATTEMPT MAY BE IMMINENT.)

IN BERLIN, THE HIGH COMMAND DECLARED THAT GERMAN SPEEDBOATS HAD SUNK TWO BIG BRITISH MERCHANTMEN -- A 10,000-TON TANKER AND A 6,000-TON FREIGHTER -- IN A RAID ON THE ENGLISH EAST COAST, DURING WHICH THEY FOUGHT A BRIEF ENGAGEMENT WITH SIX BRITISH DESTROYERS.

ALL THE SPEEDBOATS GOT BACK TO BASE SAFELY, THE HIGH COMMAND SAID.

THE DAILY COMMUNIQUE ALSO DETAILED A RAID BY NAZI PLANES ON SHIPS IN A WESTERN SCOTTISH LOCH. IN THIS ATTACK TWO HITS WERE SAID TO HAVE BEEN SCORED ON A 12,000-TON MERCHANTMAN AND ONE HIT EACH ON TWO OTHER SIZEABLE VESSELS. FOUR OTHER SHIPS WERE SAID TO HAVE BEEN DAMAGED BY BOMBS DROPPED NEARBY, AND DNB, THE GERMAN NEWS AGENCYN ESTIMATED THAT BETWEEN 70,000 AND 75,000 TONS OF BRITISH SHIPPING WERE DESTROYED.

"SUCCESSFUL" RAIDS ON MANCHESTER, LONDON AND GREAT YARMOUTH WERE LISTED.

"I KNOW," VON BRAUCHITSCH TOLD THE TROOPS, "THAT YOU ALL ARE JUST BURNING WITH DESIRE AT LAST TO MEET THE ENGLISH, AND THAT YOU ARE MERELY AWAITING THE FUEHRER'S COMMAND TO DO SO."

JUST ONE TASK LIES AHEAD OF THE ARMY, HE SAID, AND THAT IS TO "KNOCK TO THE GROUND THIS LAST EMBITTERED ADVERSARY" -- ENGLAND -- "AND THEREBY COMPEL PEACE TO ISSUE FORTH. IT'S A QUESTION OF BREAKING ENGLAND'S ONE-SIDED HEGEMONY."

OF THE GERMAN WAR DEAD, HE SAID:

"NOTHING SO BINDS PEOPLE TOGETHER AS BLOOD SPENT."

WITH VON BRAUCHITSCH ON THE "INVASION COAST", ADOLF HITLER LEFT BERLIN FOR AN UNDISCLOSED DESTINATION. INQUIRIES AS TO WHETHER HE WOULD CELEBRATE CHRISTMAS WITH ARMY AND "SS" UNITS AS HE DID LAST YEAR BROUGHT THE REJOINDER: "THAT IS MILITARY INFORMATION."

ON THE TRAIN, IT WAS KNOWN, HE STUDIED A SUMMARY OF WINSTON CHURCHILL'S RADIO APPEAL TO THE ITALIAN PEOPLE. AUTHORIZED SOURCES TODAY CHARACTERIZED THIS AS "A FOOLISH, INSOLENT ATTEMPT TO SOW DISCORD BETWEEN THE ITALIAN PEOPLE AND IL DUCE".

DEC 25 1940

Berlin, Dec. 24--(AP)-Adolf Hitler is observing Xmas with the war workers and soldiers "in the west," DNB, German official news agency, reported tonight.

DNB gave no details and earlier questions as to where Hitler had gone were met with the replies saying "that's military information."

NAZI SPEED BOATS IN NORTH SEA FIGHT

Berlin Reports Brief Clash With British Destroyers.

Berlin, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—German speedboats made a sudden thrust toward the east coast of Britain yesterday and sank a 10,000-ton British tanker and a 6,000-ton freighter despite strong protection by six destroyers, the German High Command reported today. Destroyers and speedboats fought a brief skirmish at close range, it added asserting that the German craft returned to their bases unharmed.

In other blows at British shipping, the High Command said, heavy, Nazi warplanes made an attack on ships in a western Scottish loch, scoring two hits on a 12,000-ton merchantman and one hit each on two other large merchantmen; and damaging four other vessels by laying bombs near by.

DNB, official German news agency, following up the High Command's brief account of this episode, asserted that the destruction of at least 70,000 to 75,000 tons of British shipping could be counted upon.

...—Large air force formations were reported today to have attacked Manchester and London again last night with several large and many small fires resulting in both places. Machine-gunning of trains and a bomb hit on an important plant in Great Yarmouth also were reported.

The German High Command said today that several British bombers last night made a raid along the southwestern German border, but it was claimed that there was only slight damage to buildings.

In the sea war, the High Command reported the sinking of 25,500 tons of shipping space by a single submarine but did not give the period covered.

Yule Message by Goebbels.

Berlin, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels told several hundred children at a Christmas party today "Let's show ourselves worthy of that peace and happiness which is in store for us at the end of the war."

His address, broadcast throughout the nation, was intended as a general Christmas message to all children and their parents.

The Minister admitted that "there was much heartache" because many children had been removed from Western Germany, Hamburg and Berlin and could not enjoy Christmas with their parents. He also recalled that many children of families re-patriated from other territory had not found permanent homes.

"But that is the way things happen in wartime," Goebbels said. "We must all make big sacrifices. Every mother must rest asured, however, that no matter where her child may be today it is surrounded by love."

Meanwhile Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering was disclosed by DNB, the official German news agency, to be playing Santa Claus to the children of his aviators who have been killed. The agency said that Goering opened a savings bank account of 1,000 marks (nominally $400) for each child, but it was not disclosed how many received the gift.

Calm Greets Arrival Of London Christmas.

By ALFRED E. WALL.

London, Dec. 25 (Wednesday) (AP).—Christmas came peacefully to bomb-scarred Britain today.

No bombs or gunfire—not even the drone of hostile planes—bothered Britons in their subdued Christmas observances.

The quiet of blacked-out London was duplicated in the countryside and towns, industrial centers and seaports. Not since yesterday's daylight hours were any reports made of aerial conflict.

There naturally was no indication as to whether the Royal Air Force too had remained on the ground for Christmas, but there seemed to be a tacit feeling in informed circles that Berlin and other RAF objectives were having a peaceful beginning of Christmas.

Too, there was a possibility that the weather might have caused the dearth of aerial activity.

A low ceiling of dense clouds hung over Dover Strait—raiders' pathway from Europe—with a light mist in the channel and the sea choppy. There was an east wind.

Britons held their parties and observances with one ear cocked for the sound they hoped they would not hear—the wail of the air raid siren.

But there was little time for celebrating in the Lancashire area of England's industrial northwest, where rescue workers still were probing the ruins for victims of a massive German mauling last night. Heavy casualties, including many killed, and widespread damage were inflicted in this hours-long attack.

Hospitals Bombed

(The Germans identified the town as Manchester, one of the world's largest cotton textile centers, which they said was heavily attacked for the second successive night.)

A "considerable number" of high explosive bombs and incendiaries were showered on this town, and, the British announced, three hospitals, two air raid shelters, numerous houses, shops and a church either were damaged or destroyed.

Thirteen persons were believed killed by a bomb which hit the administration building of one hospital, at least seven were killed in a demolished tavern and a group of firemen were killed while fighting a fire started by the raiders. Many were left homeless and were being fed at communal kitchens.

GERMANS BOMBARD MANCHESTER AGAIN

3 Hospitals and 2 Shelters Are Hit by Missiles.

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—German raiders again bombed the industrial Lancashire area last night in a massive assault which lasted for hours, inflicting heavy casualties and destroying a number of buildings.

[Berlin identified its target as Manchester, also assaulted Sunday night.]

The raiders dropped many fire bombs, followed by high explosives of big caliber. Three hospitals, two air raid shelters, shops, houses, commercial buildings and a church were damaged or destroyed. Thirteen persons were believed killed in the administration building of one hospital, bombed some months ago.

A group of firemen were killed while fighting one fierce blaze, and seven bodies were removed from the wreckage of a tavern where rescue workers were attempting today to reach others believed trapped by heavy beams.

The Nazis also struck hard against a south coast town, where some deaths were reported.

British Shoppers Avoid Luxuries in Gift Buying

Most Parcels Go Unwrapped Owing to Paper Shortage

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Britons went home with armfuls of unwrapped packages tonight to celebrate Christmas Eve behind the curtain of the nightly blackout. Despite the scars of war, the people put on a brave front and went about their last-minute shopping as usual. In London they looked like the normal Christmas crowd to be found anywhere. But they had to tread through piles of debris and peek into show windows half their normal size, for German bombs long ago shattered most of the downtown windows.

Most of the packages they carried were not wrapped because of a paper shortage, and the gifts they contained were picked from depleted stocks. Expensive silks and perfumes were foregone in favor of more vital necessities.

Off to See Children.

Thousands crowded the railway stations, most of them mothers and fathers on the way to the country to visit children removed from the danger of London's bombs.

Vendors stood in the streets selling apples at a shilling (20 cents) a pound for their best. There were no bananas or oranges to be had. Onions for the turkey dressing also were lacking. Those who could afford turkey had to pay "two and ten," about 57 cents a pound for it.

The Government made the people a Christmas gift by relaxing slightly the rationing of sugar and tea during the holiday period. One of the toughest blows to Englishmen was the lack of the traditional roast beef and Yorkshire pudding. Beef, of course, is rationed and it can't be had at all in most districts.

Another thing which made Christmas unreal was the silence of church bells. They are allowed to ring only in case of invasion.

Christmas Invasion Feared.

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The Royal Air Force bombed the so-called invasion ports today following reports of unusual activity along the occupied coast of France, which led to speculation here that the Nazis may be planning a Christmas attempt to invade England.

Observers on the English coast along the Strait of Dover said that unfavorable weather made it impossible to judge the effect of the bombardment, but declared that the attack appeared somewhat lighter than on the previous night, when the R. A. F. pounded Calais, Dunkirk, Flushing and numerous airports in the occupied area. The ports attacked last night included Boulogne, Dunkirk and Ostend.

One of the British raiders was said to have come down at sea and the crew was reported missing.

Raids were also carried out last night against industrial targets in the Rhineland, a brief communique declared. British warplanes again attacked Ludwigshaven, junction point on one of the main traffic routes linking the industrial Saar Basin with Italy.

Tripoli Attacked.

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The Admiralty announced today that British naval aircraft blasted the harbor of Tripoli, in Italian Libya, on Friday and Saturday and sank two merchant ships in a torpedo attack on a convoy on Saturday afternoon.

One British plane was lost, it said.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON, DEC 24--BRITISH BOMBERS SCORED HITS ON AN AIRDROME AND ON THE HARBOR JETTY, SEAPLANE HANGARS AND POWER STATIONS AT CASTEL BENITO AND TRIPOLI, IN WESTERN LIBYA, DURING AN AIR ATTACK LAST NIGHT, THE AIR MINISTRY NEWS SERVICE ANNOUNCED TONIGHT.

DEC 25 1940

THIS HEAVY THRUST AT ITALIAN POWER IN AFRICA WAS DELIVERED SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH AIR ATTACKS ON THE INVASION PORTS OF BOULOGNE, DUNKERQUE AND OSTEND, IT WAS REPORTED OFFICIALLY.

THE AIR MINISTRY ALSO SAID THE BRITISH HIT AT INDUSTRIAL TARGETS IN THE RHINELAND, INCLUDING THE INDUSTRIAL TOWN OF LUDWIGSHAVEN, ACROSS THE RIVER FROM MANNHEIM AND THE TARGET OF A RAID SUNDAY NIGHT.

THE RAID ON TRIPOLI LAST NIGHT WAS THE SECOND SINCE LAST FRIDAY NIGHT. THE ADMIRALTY EARLIER SAID NAVAL AIRCRAFT ATTACKED TRIPOLI HARBOR ON THE NIGHT OF DEC. 20-21 AND REPEATEDLY HIT THE QUAY.

"WAREHOUSES WERE SET ON FIRE AND ONE WAS SEEN TO EXPLODE," THE ADMIRALTY SAID.

THE AIR MINISTRY'S NEWS SERVICE REPORTED NUMEROUS FIRES WERE CAUSED BY LAST NIGHT'S BOMBS AND MANY EXPLOSIONS WERE OBSERVED.

FIRES COULD BE SEEN FOR 50 MILES AND WERE BURNING FIERCELY WHEN THE BRITISH AIRCRAFT LEFT THE TARGET, THE SERVICE ADDED.

ON THE JETTY, HITS WERE REGISTERED ON CUSTOM HOUSES AND SEAPLANE HANGARS. THE POWER STATION WAS STRADDLED BY BOMBS AND AT LEAST NINE EXPLOSIONS WERE HEARD IN QUICK SUCCESSION, THE REPORTS SAID.

"THERE IS EVERY INDICATION THAT A LARGE QUANTITY OF FUEL HAS BEEN BLOWN UP," THE NEWS SERVICE ADDED.

ALL BRITISH AIRCRAFT RETURNED SAFELY IN THE LIBYAN ACTION BUT ONE PLANE WAS REPORTED MISSING IN THE EUROPEAN RAIDS. #

WASHINGTON, DEC.24-(AP)-AUTHORITATIVE GERMAN SOURCES HERE REPORTED TONIGHT THAT THE LUFTWAFFE PROPOSED TO REFRAIN FROM BOMBING ENGLAND FROM TONIGHT UNTIL DEC.27 AS A SORT OF CHRISTMAS TRUCE PROVIDED THE ROYAL AIR FORCE CARRIED OUT NO ATTACK UPON GERMANY OR GERMAN-HELD TERRITORY.

THE REPORT GAINED CREDENCE FROM THE FACT THAT NO AERIAL ACTION WAS REPORTED OVER BRITAIN SINCE EARLY TODAY WHILE NO BRITISH AERIAL ATTACK APPARENTLY HAD BEEN MADE UPON GERMANY TONIGHT. IT WAS RECALLED, HOWEVER, THAT PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL REJECTED A PROPOSAL FOR A CHRISTMAS ARMISTICE ADVANCED RECENTLY IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TO INQUIRIES ABOUT THE ARMISTICE REPORT, OFFICIALS OF THE GERMAN EMBASSY HERE SAID THAT THE EMBASSY WAS MAKING NO ANNOUNCEMENT ON THE SUBJECT AND THEY DECLINED TO BE QUOTED AS CONFIRMING THE REPORT IN THEIR INDIVIDUAL CAPACITIES, ALTHOUGH THEY DID NOT DENY IT.

ANY OFFICIAL STATEMENT, THEY SAID, WOULD COME FROM BERLIN.

IF GERMANY IS FORMALLY PROPOSING SUCH A TRUCE, THE OFFER PROBABLY WOULD BE MADE THROUGH THE AMERICAN EMBASSY IN BERLIN WHICH IS REPRESENTING BRITISH INTERESTS THERE. +

Fascists Reply to Churchill

Promise War to Finish and Say Marie-Jose's Joining Party Is Best Answer.

Rome, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Italy will continue the war on all fronts until victory, Premier Mussolini's government announced today, because in Italy the regime and the people are one, and no slanderous propaganda from Britain can divide them.

This was Italy's answer to the radio address broadcast to the Italian people yesterday by the British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, which an official statement characterized as "a substantial appeal for a compromise peace" and an admission of British weakness.

[Mr. Churchill appealed to the Italians to overthrow Mussolini's leadership and to give up a war which could have, he said, only ruinous results.]

The statement was bulwarked by a Christmas message sent to Italy's armed forces by King Victor Emmanuel, praising their courage and declaring that "no obstacle and no difficultly can halt the glorious ascension of Italy."

British in Mediterranean.

In answering Mr. Churchill's appeal the Government declared it has been "shown indisputably that England wanted the present war," and asserted that "English solidarity with the Italian Renaissance has been historically demonstrated to be false." The statement complained that Italy lacks freedom of life in her own sea, the Mediterranean, because England guards the outlets, and asserted: "This fact and other vital aims for which Italy is fighting, Mr. Churchill took care not to mention."

Called Puerile Propaganda.

Mr. Churchill's entire address was dismissed as a puerile propaganda maneuver.

It was stated that Italy's Belgian-born Crown Princess, Marie-Jose, had given the best answer by joining the Fascist party at her own request; it was added that her membership would be considered as dated 1935.

A seven-point official statement issued in response to Mr. Churchill, said:

"1. English solidarity with the Italian Renaissance has been historically demonstrated to be false.

"2. It is true the English and Italians fought together in the world war, but Italian sacrifices were repaid by the English in the well-known manner

"3. The unforgettable seriousness in the application of sanctions (economic measures against Italy in the Ethiopian war) comes from the fact that by the initiative of England they were applied for the first time against us.

Says England Wanted War.

"4. It is shown indisputably that England wanted the present war. Refer to the guaranties to Poland and the attempted policy of encirclement of the totalitarian States.

"5. Italy lacks freedom of life in her own sea, all outlets being guarded by England. This fact and other vital aims for which Italy is fighting Mr. Churchill took care not to mention.

"6. In Italy the regime and the people are one. Regarding the classic English attempt, therefore, to separate the chiefs from the people and place various authorities of the State in antithesis, this is a puerile propaganda maneuver of the fourth order. It may be noted that this indirect reply to Mr. Churchill was given by the Princess of Piedmont (Crown Princess) in asking for membership in the Fascist party at this time.

"7. The two messages exchange between Mr. Churchill and Signor Mussolini document that Italy, like all peoples who respect themselves, has a sense of honor. Mussolini, moreover, has declared several times that the epoch of 'waltz turns' was finished.

"Mr. Churchill's speech will be made known through the press and radio with considerable publicity, since it is considered 'profitable' for its compactness and conciseness to the Italian people which continues and will continue the war on all fronts until victory.

"The fact that Mr. Churchill, at the height of the struggle, felt the necessity of coming out with this slanderous attempt and with this substantial appeal for a compromise peace shows that beyond some brilliant appearances and propagandistic exaggerations England is aware of the tragedy of her own situation."

Text of King's Message.

Following is the text of King Victor Emmanuel's message to the Italian armed forces:

"Fighters of the land, sea and air!

"In these days sacred to family affections my mindful and grateful thoughts are closer to you than ever.

"To all of you who, on the land, the sea and in the air are answering the sacred call of the fatherland, you who have fought and are fighting, I desire to send my word of affection and praise.

"A well-armed enemy is before you but you all will know how to show that no obstacle and no difficulty may halt the glorious rise of our Italy.

"Fighters of the land, sea and air!

"United in my most fervent wishes for you and your families there is today the whole nation, which shares with you the certainty of its glorious future."

arrogance" and an embodiment of "insolent hostility," and said his elevation could "only hasten the victory of the Axis powers in Europe and Africa and of Japan in Asia."

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of "Il Telegrafo," of Leghorn, went on the air with a violent retort to Churchill. Earlier, the government itself had answered that "the war will continue on all fronts until victory," and King Victor Emmanuel III had declared in a Christmas message to the nation's armed forces that no obstacle could halt the rise of Italy.

In a blast of sarcasm and indignation sharply contrasting with his regular drawling broadcasts to the forces, Ansaldo denounced Churchill's attempt to subvert Italians, declaring that Italy's war aims were:

First, "To keep our word of honor with Germany" and, second, "To shake off the humiliation of always being threatened by England, bottled up in the Mediterranean and stopped."

Recalls Sanctions.

Ansaldo, whose newspaper is owned by Il Duce's son-in-law, Foreign Minister Ciano, recalled the imposition of economic sanctions on Italy during the Ethiopian war and vexations which he said Italy suffered from the British contraband control during her non-belligerent period in the present war.

Rome Shouts Its Angry Defiance To Churchill's Call for Revolt

Fascists' Denunciation of British Prime Minister Flows by Press, Radio and Official Statements; King Assures Soldiers Nothing Can Halt Italy

By The Associated Press

ROME, Dec. 24.—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's appeal to the Italian people by radio yesterday was met with blasts of defiance and denunciation by Fascist spokesmen today, and the royal family itself made a show of loyalty to the Fascist regime and its course in the war.

Virginio Gayda, one of Fascism's most authoritative editors, declared that the appointment of Anthony Eden to head the British Foreign Office was a "worthy crown in this foggy end of a year of extreme Churchill politics." He called Eden a "typical representative of British

"IT IS FINE FOR HIM TO TALK OF SYMPATHY FOR THE ITALIAN PEOPLE," ANSALDO SAID OF CHURCHILL, BUT ADDED THAT ITALIANS HAVE NOT FORGOTTEN THAT ENGLAND "TRIED TO STRANGLE US AND STARVE US."

IT IS THE OLD ENGLISH GAME OF TRYING TO SEPARATE THE CHURCH FROM THE PEOPLE, ANSALDO ASSERTED. HE ADDED THAT THEY TRIED IT WITH NAPOLEON AND WILHELM II "AND NOW ARE TRYING IT WITH ITALY."

"BUT ITALY IS NOT ALLOWING HERSELF TO BE FOOLED," HE WENT ON. "SHE KNOWS TOO WELL HER FATE IF THE MANEUVERS SUCCEEDED. SHE WOULD BE REDUCED TO THE STATE OF A MASSED COLONY."

TAKING HIS CUE FOR THE GOVERNMENT'S EARLIER STATEMENT, HAT CHURCHILL MADE HIS APPEAL "AT THE HEIGHT OF THE STRUGGLE," ANSALDO SAID "WE ITALIANS ARE NOT ENTIRELY WITHOUT ABILITY TO OBSERVEV IT IS VERY SIGNIFICANT THAT CHUCHILL FOUND IT NECESSARY TO MAKE SUCH AN APPEAL NOW."

THE NEWSPAPER IL GIORNALE D'ITALIA REPORTED, MEANWHILE, THAT 80 GERMAN PILOTS VISITED IL DUCE'S BIRTHPLACE AT FORLI IN "PASSING THROUGH" THAT TOWN, BUT IT FAILED TO SAY WHERE THEY WERE HEADED. FORLI IS IN NORTHEAST ITALY, NEAR THE ADRIATIC COAST OPPOSITE YUGOSLAVIA.

(AN INFORMED ROME SOURCE SAID LAST FRIDAY THAT GERMAN TRANSPORT PLANES WERE BEING USED TO FERRY FASCIST TROOPS ACROSS THE ADRIATIC TO THE ALBANIAN FRONT AND THAT GERMAN STUKA DIVE-BOMBERS, OPERATED BY ITALIAN PILOTS, WERE SERVING WITH MUSSOLINI'S FORCES IN ALBANIA.)

King of Italy's Message Praises Troops' Courage

Declares 'No Obstacle' Can Halt 'Glorious Rise'

ROME, Dec. 24 (AP).—King Victor Emmanuel III praised the courage of Italy's armed forces in a Christmas message today, declaring that no obstacle and no difficulty could halt the "glorious rise" of Italy.

The text of the address, made to the Italian armed forces, said:

"Fighters of the land, sea and air!

"In these days sacred to family affections, my hindrul and grateful thoughts are closer to you than ever.

"To all of you who, on the land, the sea and in the air, are answering the sacred call of the fatherland, you who have fought and are fighting, I desire to send my word of affection and praise.

"A well armed enemy is before you, but you all will know how to show that no obstacle and no difficulty may halt the glorious rise of our Italy.

"Fighters of the land, sea and air!

"United in my most fervent wishes for you and your families there is today the whole nation, which shares with you the certainty of its glorious future."

Called Insolent by Nazis.

Berlin, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—British Prime Minister Churchill's radio address to the Italian people yesterday was characterized by authorized Germans today as "a foolish, insolent attempt to sow discord between the Italian people and Il Duce."

The spokesman said that Germany considered the speech renewed proof of "British inability to understand the psychology of other peoples and especially of totalitarian States. This inability . . . will in the last analysis spell the deathblow for the British Empire."

"Mr. Churchill's attempt is so silly and laughable that one can pass over it with a shrug of the shoulders," the spokesman continued. "The Italian people undoubtedly remember what the Duce made of their nation."

One spokesman said they noted with special amusement that the British broadcast of Mr. Churchill's speech in German omitted all references to Attila and the Huns, while they were contained in the Italian-language broadcast. This, the Germans said, indicated cowardice and foolishness.

Churchill Speech Spread All Over Italy

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's bid to stir the Italian people against Premier Mussolini was transmitted in the Italian language by "various routes" before Mr. Churchill broadcast it at 3 P. M. yesterday, an authoritative spokesman said today.

"No possible method of making the speech effective was overlooked," it was added.

The Italian Government has charged that the British were using agents to stir up unrest in Italy and there were hints that these agents may have aided in circulating the speech. In addition to wide broadcasting of the address, it was also distributed in leaflets by airplanes.

ROME, Dec. 24 (AP).—"Il Giornale D'Italia" reported today that eighty German flyers visited the birthplace of Premier Benito Mussolini at Forli in "passing through" that town. The paper did not indicate their destination.

(An informed Rome source said last Friday that German transport planes and German Stuka dive-bombers, the latter operated by Italian pilots, were serving Italy's forces in Albania. The transports, this source said, were carrying Italian reinforcements across the Adriatic to the Albanian front. Military sources at Struga, Yugoslavia, had retailed similar information the previous day.)

Rome Reports Planes in Libya Pound British

2 Enemy Aircraft Declared Downed, Attack on East African Front Repelled

ROME, Dec. 24 (AP).—Italian artillery and warplanes were reported today by the high command to be co-operating in pounding British mechanized forces attacking along the Libyan frontier, where a heavy battle has been raging for a week in the vicinity of Bardia.

Fighting also occurred on the east African front, where, the Italians said, their troops repelled British forces which "attempted to approach our advance positions" along the Sudanese border. The locale of the action was not otherwise identified.

The brief communique made no comment on the progress of the fighting in the Bardia zone, but indicated the British were continuing to attack there.

In addition to pounding attacking British forces, Italian warplanes carried out "a most successful action" against "an advanced enemy base," the high command said. The base was not identified.

The Italians said their fighting planes had shot down two British planes and that one of their own craft had failed to return.

The high command said also that Greek forces had been repulsed with heavy losses in attacks on Italian positions on the Albanian front.

At one point an "offensive reconnaissance" by Fascist troops was said to have resulted in capture of an unspecified number of prisoners, as well as "machine-guns and many rifles." A crack Alpine division was said to have "particularly distinguished itself" in this fighting, but the communique did not identify the sectors where the actions mentioned took place.

Gun Duel Rages As British Near Forts at Bardia

Reinforcements Brought Up for the Big Assault on Trapped Italian Forces

By EDWARD KENNEDY
By The Associated Press

WITH BRITISH FORCES OUTSIDE BARDIA, Libya, Dec. 24.—The battle for Bardia warmed into a great artillery duel this Christmas Eve with guns booming on both sides and the British units drawing slowly nearer the ring of fortresses encircling the town.

The steady flow of reinforcements, including tanks and much artillery, crossing into Libya, leaves no doubt that the British are determined to break this strong outpost of Italy's North African possessions and possibly plan to go beyond it in a sweeping operation.

"We could go in and take Bardia," the Australian captain in command of one unit said. "But it would probably cost a good many lives, so it's better to keep hammering at them. Then when we get more tanks and artillery we will get them out of their holes without much trouble."

The main body of Italians, perhaps running to almost two divisions, is entrenched in dugouts and ditches along a dried-up river bed outside the town.

In addition to many field pieces and other guns in pillboxes, the Italians have two 13-inch naval guns, manned by naval gunners, which the British so far have been unable to silence. The British soldiers have christened them "Long Lizzie" and "Bardia Belle."

The British themselves are bringing up guns of this size, but their transportation over the desert and up the steep escarpment road offers a difficult problem.

For the soldiers attacking Bardia, many of them veterans of Narvik and Dunkerque, there will be only the usual bully beef and hard tack for Christmas dinner. The sole yuletide supplies it has been possible to deliver are four truckloads of beer, which have just arrived.

For the troops farther back in the desert, within range of normal military communications, there will be a full dinner, with turkey and Christmas pudding.

Big dinners also were planned at Royal Air Force airports dotting the desert, and one air officer returned from Alexandria, Egypt, laden with champagne and caviar for a feast at his mess.

The desert night cold has become more intense. Last night we slept in an abandoned Italian dugout, while outside the wild dogs which roam the desert were howling, apparently attracted by our food. In the morning, water left in a basin had a thin coat of ice. During the day, however, the temperature rises to 70 degrees under a bright sun.

Italian planes have been attacking the troops around Bardia for the last few days but have bombed only from great heights. British fighters have brought down several and are busy raining bombs on their airports to keep them on the ground as they did successfully earlier in the offensive.

Since their retreat the Italians have resorted to a type of bomb they used three months ago without much effect. These missiles are about the shape and size of quart bottles, but do not explode when dropped. They will go off when any vibration such as that of a passing truck comes near. Several were found on the Sollum airport in Egypt.

Shortage Of Water In Bardia

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 24 (AP).—British forces besieging the key Italian base of Bardia indicated today they were almost ready for a final, full fledged attack on that heavily fortified post which for eight days has endured a rain of British shells and bombs and the increasing threat of empty water tanks.

While the British brought up reinforcements and continued the artillery pounding of Bardia's defenses the two Italian divisions locked in Bardia's lines were reported facing a critical water shortage.

A brief British headquarters' report said "the concentration of our troops and artillery preparation in the Bardia area are proceeding."

An Associated Press writer at the front, Edward Kennedy, in a dispatch delayed two days by poor communications, reported the two divisions are camped in a dried river bed near the ruined town.

Italian defenses, he said, from a ring four to six miles outside Bardia. They are made up of arc-shaped trenches, pillboxes and barbed wire and behind these are heavy field guns.

From London came an Admiralty report that British naval aircraft raided the harbor of Tripoli, in Italian Libya about 700 air line miles west of Bardia and near French Tunisia, on Dec. 20-21.

Two merchant ships were sunk on the afternoon of the 21st in a torpedo attack on a convoy, the British Admiralty also reported.

DEFENSE AVIATION IS ACTIVE

Intelligence Officers Say Enemy Has Doubled Precautions Against Native Revolt.

Cairo, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The British Army of the Nile intensified its eight-day-old siege of Bardia today, bringing up more troops and pounding the defense lines with an artillery preparation which indicated that the final assault on the shell-battered Italian stronghold may be at hand.

A critical water shortage was reported facing the Italians and the Fascist air force, which heretofore had not offered stiff competition, suddenly came to life in a desperate effort to save the threatened east Libyan base.

The British reported today that four Italian planes had been shot down yesterday without the loss of any British planes in clashes over the Bardia-Tobruk area.

British intelligence officers expressed the belief that the available water supplies in Bardia which is isolated by land and sea, would not long prove sufficient for the 20,000 or more men trapped there, and that their plight would soon grow serious.

Native Uprising Hinted.

Other reports reaching Cairo indicated that the Italians were hastily erecting additional defenses far to the west at such places as Derna, Bengasi and even Tripoli. The British said that the Italians were keeping a close watch on the native population at those places and have doubled their precautions against possible disorders.

These reports that the Italians were strengthening their positions in the west tended to bear out the belief here that the Tenth Army, trapped in Bardia, was cast in the role of a sacrifice to slow up the British advance and give Marshal Rodolfo Graziani time to reorganize his main forces before the final showdown.

Although faced with the necessity of mopping up Bardia before continuing their drive in full strength, the British were reported to be stabbing here and there to the west with armored patrols.

British aviation likewise continued to harass the Italians as far west as Bengasi, 300 air miles from the Egyptian frontier.

cold, the Greeks are still on the offensive with satisfactory results.

"North and east of Premeti they scored very appreciable victories by occupying strategic heights of great importance, where the enemy put up stiff resistance but was overcome despite that and other unfavorable conditions."

The Fascist retreat, the dispatches said, was hurried and disorderly, with only a rear-guard opposition to the swiftly advancing Greeks. Military quarters said Logara Pass was the only strong defendable position before Valona.

The fall of Chimara after a week of fighting was announced yesterday by Premier John Metaxas. The Greeks, military authorities said, took over the whole region, which consists of six villages as well as the town, an important Italian supply base thirty miles south of Valona.

The extent of the victory also was indicated by the number of prisoners, believed to total about 1,500. These were said to include the 141st Blackshirt Battalion with twenty-nine officers and 667 men. These were in addition to the 153d Blackshirt Battalion, some 800 strong, reported captured earlier.

An official announcement said that the commanding officer of the Third Battalion, Second Regiment of Bersaglieri, was captured with his entire staff and many soldiers.

Reports from the coastal region said that an Italian naval unit shelled the highways before Chimara in an abortive attempt to aid the Fascist troops defending the town, and that Italian aviation also was used extensively.

Heavy fighting continued in the Tepeleni-Klisura area.

Further north a Greek patrol of ten men was reported to have captured 170 prisoners.

British Captor of 500 Italians Gets On With the Libyan War

By The Associated Press

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN LIBYA, Dec. 24.—Remember that British tank officer who said he was surrounded by 500 surrendered Italian Black Shirt troops in the desert near Sidi Barrani, Egypt, and sent out a radio appeal several days ago for somebody to take them off his hands?

Well, here's the rest of the story as told by the officer himself:

"We were isolated from the rest of the Hussar regiment that used to do its riding on horseback when we ran into these 500 Italians. After a few rounds of machine-gun fire from us they threw down their guns and raised their hands.

"I wanted to go on to something else, but there I was in a bit of dilemma. So I sent that message for somebody to come and round them up.

"I didn't get out of my 'horse' right away because, of the casualties we've had, most have been caused by men doing just that—only to be picked off by snipers.

"But after looking these men over I took that chance and popped out and stood on top of the tank with a revolver. They didn't show much sign of resistance, and we just stood looking at each other until our infantry came along.

"Then I shuffled off to some unfinished business."

Strategic Heights Occupied in Tepeleni Sector—Cold and Snow Harry Troops

ATHENS, Dec. 24 (AP)—Greek troops, carrying out bayonet attacks on the Italians despite heavy snows, have captured prisoners, taken "large quantities of material" and won new "appreciable victories," it was reported tonight.

The Greek High Command reported that eight guns were seized by its troops along with the Italian prisoners and war material in local engagements. The new triumphs were said by government sources to have been won in the mountains northeast of Khimara, the Adriatic coastal port already wrested from the Italians.

A government spokesman said Fascist positions north and east of Premeti in the central sector also were stormed and captured in widespread Christmas eve battles.

Battle for Valona Looms

"After the victory of Chimara, the Italians withdrew northwestward," he said. "They intend to offer resistance from strong natural positions at Logara Pass, south of Valona.

"Our troops, fighting away from the coast in the mountains northeast of Khimara, continued to advance and dislodged the enemy from new positions. These positions were protected by barbed wire. Farther to the east, where the snow is fairly deep and it is bitterly

Albanian Gold 'Finagling' Is Laid to Italians

Greek Banker Reports on Financial Juggling With Newly Printed Francs

By Wes Gallagher

KORITZA, Albania, Dec. 23 (Delayed) (AP).—Describing the operation as "financial finagling," a Greek banking official said today that Italy had "legally" removed the Albanian gold supply for her own use, while increasing money in circulation fourfold.

This informant, an English-speaking official of the Bank of Greece sent here to develop some method of co-ordinating the Albanian franc with the drachma, declared that prior to Italy's entrance into Albania the country had 20,000,000 paper francs in circulation, backed by 12,000,000 gold francs.

"The first move o fthe Italians," he said, "was to send the gold to Italy and take over the Albanian National Bank. Next, state control of the bank was decreed. The franc was no longer to be backed by gold but by paper Italian lire. This left 12,000,000 francs in gold for Italy's use in international trade, and at the same time made Albania completely dependent on Italy for imports."

Italy, the banker continued, then started paying the army in Albania with new printed Albanian francs, with the result, he asserted, that up to July 31 of this year the National Bank of Albania had 40,409,716 paper francs in circulation "not backed by an ounce of gold, and at the same time had 50,000,000 more francs carried on the books as deposits."

He added that from July to the start of the war Oct. 28 the Italians were believed to have boosted the Albanian franc circulation to 70,000,000, although exact figures were unavailable.

Thus, he said, the Albanian franc was now worthless in world trade.

In Greek-occupied section of Albania officials have made the franc worth 20 Greek drachmas. This figure is usable in Albania but not in Greek trade, except in payments for supplies of food in which Albania is short.

Reporter Rides In Tank: Longs For Ship in Gale

Jammed In Amid Levers, He Is Thoroughly Jolted as Guns' Din Deafens Him

By Drew Middleton

WITH ROYAL ARMORED CORPS, Somewhere in England (AP).—By preference, I'll take a destroyer in a gale, but you have to have tanks in a war. Ever ride in one?

You squeeze through the tank's conning tower into a chamber that makes a submarine seem roomy. An inch from your face is a telescope calibrated for fire by the tank's two-pounder and Besa machine gun. Your right shoulder rests on a brace by which you elevate or deflect the guns by moving a shoulder.

The commander's voice crackles through your earphones. "Here we go!" he yells, and the cruiser tank swings into action with a terrific grinding noise.

It's like the engine room of a ship. Every available inch is filled with machinery, levers, dials and ammunition.

The steady clack-clack of the tracks and the pounding roar of the motors deafen you. The continuous lurching and dipping motion makes you long for the comparative steadiness of that aforementioned destroyer in a gale.

Curiously, the crew do not seem to mind. They move as steadily and efficiently as machines. They never bump painfully into apparatus, as you do, and they seem unaffected by the racket or motion.

I nthe gunner's telescope, trees and grush suddenly loom up. They're so close you duck—and bang your head on a lever. Then you see the trees suddenly whip down as the tank grinds through them. There's a crashing-crackling noise, and the tank grunts like a huge animal, then roars on.

You think the speed must be close to sixty miles an hour, but the commander say no, only about forty.

The driver turns swiftly and the tank tips down a forty-degree hill. The earth of the valley floor lies far below you, and it feels exactly like a roller coaster dropping on the down curve.

They fire the tank's two-pounder on the range, and the recoil whips past the gunner's ears. There's the bang of the semi-automatic breech opening. The chamber fills with smoke and the acrid smell of cordite. Then another shell bangs and another and far off across the valley you see your shells smack into a steel tank silhouette.

Next the Besa gun fires at full speed. The noise of its report is deafening. Bullets pierce the shell of the target like cheese and crash into a brick wall behind.

After it's all over, you talk to the driver, who was a school teacher before the war.

He says the firing doesn't disturb him because he's got too much to do.

"When you're in action, you never notice explosions or recoil," he says nonchalantly. "Once I left the hatch open and the blast from he two-pounder burned my hair off. But that was extraordinary.

"This is just an ordinary job."

Officers Captured at Dakar Reported Back in Army

VICHY, Dec. 24 (AP).—The War Ministry asserted today that a number of De Gaullist officers captured at Dakar Airfield had been converted to the cause of the Vichy regime and had petitioned for readmission to the regular French Army.

These officers belonged to a party that landed at Dakar Airfield to deliver an ultimatum to the Governor there at the time of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's unsuccessful attempt to seize the West African port.

"Enlightened since then on the real situation of France," said a communique, "these officers and non-commissioned officers realized they had been misled by the counsels of adventurers and imposters."

Nazi-Turkish Pact Reported

Said to Cover Trade; Berlin Admits More Troops Go to Rumania

BERLIN, Dec. 24 (AP).—Reliable sources reported today that Germany had concluded a new trade treaty with Turkey, but its scope was not disclosed. (Turkey has a mutual aid pact with Great Britain, and last month a new British-Turkish trade accord was signed. Turkey, however, has maintained trade relations with Germany.)

These sources also confirmed reports that additional German troops were being sent to Rumania, but added that it was merely a case of complementing divisions already there. Modern warfare requires so much mechanical equipment, it was added, that enormous train loads are necessary for relatively small units, and laymen frequently mistake regiments for divisions. (Reports from the Hungarian border said thousands of additional German troops with full war gear had crossed into Rumania.)

She has been transferred to the legation staff here.

SWISS OPEN SPY TRIAL

Ex-army Chief Accused With Woman U. S. Citizen.

Lausanne, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Seven persons, including a former Colonel in the Swiss Army, his son and a woman of German origin who is an American citizen by marriage, were charged before a Swiss Federal penal court today with espionage and violation of the code covering security of the State.

The former Colonel is Arthur Fonjallaz and the woman is Mrs. Frieda Ellison. Fonjallaz's son, Rene Marcel, is known as a champion bob-sledder. The others are two Swiss and two Germans.

Fonjallaz's case caused a sensation in Switzerland when it was unearthed on January 27, 1940, since the officer, although retired, had attained the highest peacetime rank in the Swiss Army. He has also been accused of treason.

All the accused have been questioned thoroughly in an effort to track down the ramifications of a spy ring which was earlier said to have been working for Germany.

Japanese Will Shoot on Sight Any One Crossing Walls

PEIPING, Wednesday, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Japanese Army published a Christmas Day order by Major Gen. Hasegawa warning this city's million residents that any one caught crossing the city's walls would be shot on sight and also that the walls were electrically wired to kill.

The order climaxed nearly a month of tension, with the city under virtual martial law as a result of the assassination of a Japanese officer on Nov. 29 and large-scale desertions by Chinese "puppet troops" who have joined guerrilla bands preying upon the Japanese.

Fighting Continues

BANGKOK, Dec. 24 (AP).—Fighting continued today without let-up in various sectors of the Thailand-French Indo-China frontier, a high command communique reported.

Heavy firing occurred yesterday on the upper Mekong River, where the French opened rifle, artillery and machine-gun fire, and Thai forces retaliated vigorously for five hours. Casualties were reported heavy on the French side. A French armored boat and an armed speedboat were damaged, the high command said, and two other craft sunk.

Last night French forces at Thakhet sent 120 shells across the frontier, the communique said. Thai guns replied until the French were quiet.

Roosevelt Christmas Message

He Speaks Men's Hope for Peaceful Chance Voluntarily to Better Their World.

Washington, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt, in his annual Christmas Eve greeting to the nation, declared today that most human beings want a peaceful chance to better the world in a voluntary way, not a way imposed on the world by conquest.

The President, who pressed a button to light the capital's Christmas tree in a park near the White House, said that people should make this Christmas a merry one for the little children in our midst.

"For us of maturer years it cannot be merry," he continued, "but for most of us it can be a happy Christmas if by happiness we mean that we have done with doubts, that we have set our hearts against fear, that we still believe in the Golden Rule for all mankind, that we intend to live more purely in the spirit of Christ, and that by our works, as well as our words, we will strive forward in faith and in hope and in love."

Text of Greeting.

The text of the President's remarks follows:

At this Christmastide of 1940 it is well for all humanity to remind itself that while this is in its name a Christian celebration, it is participated in reverently and happily by hundreds of millions of people who are members of other religions, or belong actively to no church at all.

The reason is not far to seek. It is because the spirit of unselfish service personified by the life and the teachings of Christ makes appeal to the inner conscience and hope of every man and every woman in every part of the earth. It transcends in the ultimate all lines of race, of habitat, of nation. It lives in the midst of war, of slavery, of conquest. It survives prohibitions and decrees and force. It is an unquenchable spring of promise to humanity.

Sometimes we who have lived through the strifes and the hates of a quarter century wonder if this old world of ours has abandoned the ideals of the brotherhood of man. Sometimes we ask if contention and anger in our own midst in America is a portent of disunion and disaster. Sometimes we fear that the selfishness of the individual is more and more controlling in our lives.

Of Cynicism and Defeatism.

When we are in those moods it is hard for us to keep from putting our tongues in our cheeks when we say "Merry Christmas"—for we think in thoughts of futility and not of hope. A few people are cynics all of the time; some people are cynics part of the time; but most people keep their faith most of the time.

That is why we must keep on striving for a better and a more happy world.

It is unintelligent to be defeatist. Crisis may beget crisis, but the progress underneath does not wholly halt—it does go forward.

In a century we have gained much. Aside from great areas stricken by actual warfare in the present moment, the lives of human beings are safer than they were in the olden days. Great and spreading plagues take smaller toll, starvation of millions is less; the forces of nature are better controlled. There is in the civilization we recognize a greater security for the young, for the worker, for the aged. Charity in the narrower sense of the word helps the needy more usefully.

Compared with the days when Charles Dickens wrote the Christmas Carol, we see a definite betterment. We do not claim attainment, and we recognize that there is much—oh, so much—to do.

Most of all we ask a chance to do it—Yes, a peaceful chance to do it.

Mankind Is Indivisible.

We want to do it the voluntary way—and most human beings in all the world want to do it the voluntary way. We do not want to have the way imposed on the world by the conquest of the world by the sword.

That would not follow in the footsteps of Christ. That would not make for happier Christmases in the future of any nation. Mankind is all one—and what happens in distant lands tomorrow will leave its mark on the happiness of our Christmases to come.

Let us make this Christmas a merry one for the little children in our midst. For us of maturer years it cannot be merry.

But for most of us it can be a happy Christmas if by happiness we mean that we have done with doubts, that we have set our hearts against fear, that we still believe in the Golden Rule of all mankind, that we intend to live more purely in the spirit of Christ, and that by our works, as well as our words, we will strive forward in faith and in hope and in love.

In that spirit I wish a happy Christmas to all, and happier Christmases yet to come.

'If We Are All Here....' Roosevelt's 1941 'If'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—President Roosevelt tonight made another of the sombre "if" remarks which have caught so much attention.

Lighting the Capital's Christmas tree outside the White House grounds, he said that h thought it would be more "homey" if next year's ceremony were held inside the grounds. He said he would make that change, and deliver his address from the White House porch on Christmas Eve, 1941, "if we are all here."

On Dec. 14, the Presideit told patients of the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia that he would be back to spend two weeks with them next March "if the world survives."

In the spring of 1939, after a visit to the foundation, he had told spectators gathered at his train at Warm Springs that he would "be back in the fall if we don't have a war."

Pope Says Midnight Mass

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 24 (AP).—Pope Pius XII did not depart from the tradition of midnight Christmas Mass, although by his dispensation the faithful in countries blacked out by war were permitted to attend afternoon services. The Pontiff himself celebrated the customary Masses at midnight in his private chapel, with a few close associates and relatives.

Who's Hitler To Spoil Day?

London, Dec. 24 (AP).—The following sign was displayed widely in downtown London on this Christmas Eve:

"Christmas is 1,940 years old and Hitler is only 51. He can't spoil our Christmas."

Rome May Have A White Christmas

Rome, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Snow fell today to give Rome the rare prospect of a white Christmas. The fall began at noon and the city soon was coated.

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Snow falling along the Dover Strait today presaged a white Christmas for southeast England.

Cheer Radioed By Wilhemina, King Haakon

He Hopes for Norwegian Unity and Liberty; Queen Prays for Real Christmas

LONDON, Dec. 24 (CP).—Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and King Haakon VII of Norway, two monarchs who will pass Christmas away from their countries, broadcast messages of hope and sympathy tonight to the people in their Nazi-occupied lands.

"We can now face the future with growing hope and confidence," Queen Wilhelmina told her subjects in Holland. "I pray the Lord that, in spite of everything which this year might make it so very difficult for you to celebrate the sacred day in a true spirit, it will nevertheless be a real Christmas for you in a most profound sense."

Haakon spoke of his "deep sorrow" at not being able to celebrate Christmas with the Norwegians at home.

He said that "what is most painful for me is the unarmed civil war now going on in Norway," but added that it was his firm conviction "that the overwhelming majority of our people are keeping together, in the belief that we can manage ourselves, as we have done hitherto, without interference from the outside."

"Let Christmas this year," he said, "more than ever before, be a family feast to strengthen family ties and unity between all Norwegians and give further impetus for the liberation of our country."

Nazi Prayer: Help Us To Help Our Fuehrer

BERLIN, Dec. 24 (AP).—Rudolf Hess, Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's deputy, proposed a prayer for all Germans in his traditional Christmas Eve address:

"Almighty God: You gave us Der Fuehrer. You blessed his battle with a vast victory. You gave him power to create and defend a new, great and freeGermany. Now give us power to help him to the limit of our abilities by fighting and working for an everlasting and beautiful Germany, and grant that we be worthy of your blessings."

Ex-Kaiser Greets Day In German-Held Doorn

Octogenarian, in Good Health, Distributes Gifts to Retinue

DOORN, The Netherlands, Dec. 24 (AP).—Former Kaiser Wilhelm II, now a white-bearded octogenarian, celebrated his first Christmas Eve under German occupation of Holland in perfect health today.

With him was probably the smallest circle of relatives since his exile began twenty-two years ago. Besides the Kaiserin Hermine, only the latter's youngest daughter, Henrietta, and her newly wedded husband, the Kaiser's grandson, Karl Franz Josef, attended.

The ex-monarch presented gifts to Dutch employees at his castle at 10 a. m., and to the German household, including German guards posted there by Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's order, at 5 p. m.

Wilhelm himself read the Christmas Gospel to a small, devout assemblage. Gifts were distributed to all needy persons in Doorn Village.

Christ's Birth Enacted In Bethlehem Blackout

Stars Again Pilgrims' Guide; Shepherds' Fires Out

BETHLEHEM, Palestine, Dec. 25 (Wednesday) (AP).—This little Judean city was shrouded in its first blackout in history while the ageless drama of Christ's birth was reenacted early today at the Church of the Nativity in bomb-proofed gloom instead of the traditional blaze of Christmas light.

Even the bonfires in shepherds' fields about the city were put out early—lest they guide Italian air raiders.

And thus the line of pilgrims moved slowly and carefully into the town by starlight for the observance, just as the Three Wise Men came centuries ago by light of the Star of Bethlehem to worship the Christ child.

All other holy places in this shrine of christendom were blacked out, too, and filled with the gloom af war time.

But no feeling of futility was apparent among the hundreds of pilgrims at the Church of the Nativity peace was their message, peace on earth, and good will to all men.

Italian Prisoners Mark Christmas in Holy Land

Former New York Chef Cooks Them a Holiday Dinner

JERUSALEM, Dec. 25 (Wednesday) (AP).—Camped in tents behind barbed wire, hundreds of Italian prisoners taken by the British in their Western Desert offensive in Egypt had a real taste of Christmas in the Holy Land today.

A Roman Catholic chaplain attached to the British Army arranged special midnight masses for the prisoners, who also received holiday food prepared by a former New York hotel chef appointed especially to cook for them.

A second contingent of Fascist captives arrived in Palestine yesterday and marched through Haifa's streets today. Many of them expressed surprise that Haifa was still standing, as they had thought the Italian air force had demolished the city.

An Italian corporal said Fascist troops in Egypt had known nothing of Italian reversals in the Greek campaign.

China Greets Holiday With Quiet Optimism

Chungking Omits Merry-Making in 4th War-Time Christmas

CHUNG KING, Dec 25 (Wednesday) (AP).—China greeted its fourth war-time Christmas today with a spirit of quiet optimism.

No large celebrations were held here, even by the foreign community, because of an almost complete lack of luxuries anda feel that war time is not an occasion for merry-making.

China's foremost Christian, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, remained at home, but his Christmas was somewhat saddened by the absence of his wife in Hongkong, where she is receiving medical treatment.

The Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, gave a party last night to leading Chinese Christians, while Chungking's only turkey dinner was served aboard the United States gunboat Tutuila.

Holiday Eve in Shanghai Emphasizes Contrasts

Champagne Flows as Scores Die of Hunger

SHANGHAI, Dec. 24 (AP).—Christmas Eve in Shanghai . . .

A Chinese urchin opens the door of a limousine, pressing his wasted body against the handle . . . The white man, loaded to the chin with champagne bottles, thrusts out a ten-dollar bill (70 cents). The child looks at the note with hungry eyes; he can't take it; he has no arms. The foreigner slips it inside his ragged shirt.

Pretty flower girls dart through the crowds . . . selling boutonnieres . . . getting 10, 20 even 100 Shanghai dollars. And in an alley three Chinese are beating up a coolie because he couldn't pay two miserable coppers for his bowl of rice. He dies on the wet flagging, blood gushing from his mouth.

Christmas Eve . . . and tomorrow, the Shanghai Public Benevolent Cemetery will find a hundred corpses in the street, for there are always at least that number and sometimes more who die of cold and hunger; and more than half will be small ones—children and even babies.

White men in white ties and white men in rags; Chinese in brocaded silk and Chinese in gunny-sacking . . . the piercing wail of the beggars sounds mournfully through the laughter of the crowds.

At a barricade a soldier wraps red and green bunting on the spikes and barbed wire.

War Powers' Communiques

Italian

ROME, Dec. 24 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

In the Cyrenaican (Libyan) frontier one our artillery batteries have pounded enemy armored cars and tanks which approached our positions.

Our bombers carried out a most successful action against mechanized equipment and an advanced enemy base. Our fighter planes shot down two Hurricane planes in air combat. One of our planes failed to return from a scouting flight.

he torpedo - launching plane which sank an English auxiliary cruiser as announced yesterday was piloted by Lieut. A. A. Gallamberti, with naval Lieut. Sleiter as observer.

On the Greek front, some attacks by the enemy, on whom heavy losses were inflicted, were repulsed. During offensive reconnaissances, prisoners, machine guns and many rifles were captured. The Gliea Alpine Division again particularly distinguished itself.

In East Africa on the Sudanese border an enemy detachment which attempted to approach our advanced positions was repelled.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 24 (AP).—The German high command communique:

During a thrust of speedboats toward the English east coast on Dec. 23, the commander's boat sank a 10,000-ton British tanker and a 6,000-ton freighter, as previously announced. This success was scored despite strong protection of the enemy ships by six British destroyers. A short, close-up skirmish developed between our speedboats and the destroyers. All our speedboats returned to their bases unharmed.

One submarine sank 25,500 tons of enemy merchant shipping space.

On Dec. 23 heavy combat planes successfully attacked ships assembled in Loch Linnhi on the western coast of Scotland. One 12,000-ton merchantman received two direct medium-caliber hits, two additional large merchantmen were hit by one medium-caliber bomb each, and four other merchantmen were damaged by bombs exploding close by.

In the course of armed reconnaissance several trains were machine-gunned.

During a raid on Great Yarmouth, one bomb hit was observed in an important plant.

In the course of last night larger air force formations again attacked Manchester and London. In London and especially in Manchester several large and many small fires resulted.

Several British bombers last night again threw incendiary and explosive bombs along the southwestern border, causing only slight damage to buildings.

On the night of Dec. 22 two British planes were downed in an air fight. One of our own planes failed to return.

British

LONDON, Dec. 24 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique:

Last night aircraft of the bomber command attacked Boulougne,-Dunkerque, Ostend and industrial targets in the Rhineland, including Ludwigshafen. One of our aircraft came down in the sea and the crew still is missing.

CAIRO, Dec. 24 (AP).—A Royal Air Force communique:

During an offensive patrol over the Bardia-Tobruk area yesterday, fighter aircraft of the R. A. F. on three occasions intercepted enemy aircraft. Four aircraft were definitely destroyed.

With regard to the night attack on Benina during the night of Dec. 21-22, as reported in our communique yesterday, it is now definitely established that one hanga at the Benina airdrome was completely destroyed by fire and that three enemy aircraft on the ground near the hangar were burned out.

In Italian East Africa, dive bombing attacks were made on a pumping station near Assab and the target was well straddled by bombs. Reconnaissance flights were also made in this area, and aircraft of a Rhodesian squadron carried our successful attacks on the enemy position near Gallabat. Fires were started, followed by explosions.

All our aircraft returned safely.

LONDON, Dec. 24 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

The following has been received from the commander in chief in the Mediterranean:

Naval aircraft attacked the harbor of Tripoli in North Africa on the night of Dec. 20-21. Attacks were extremely successful, the quay being repeatedly hit. Warehouses were set on fire and one was seen to explode. The seaplane station was also heavily hit.

On the afternoon of Dec. 21 our naval aircraft attacked with torpedoes a convoy of three merchant ships escorted by a destroyer. One 3,000-ton ship was seen to blow up. Another 6,000-ton ship also was sunk.

One aircraft failed to return from these operations, and the next of kin have been notified.

More Submarines at Manila

15 Now Believed in Asiatic Waters as Fleet There Is Strengthened

MANILA, Dec. 24 (AP). — Several additional United States submarines arrived in Manila Bay today. Reliable sources said they brought to at least fifteen the number of American underwater craft in Asiatic waters.

Navy men were reluctant to talk, but it was known the Asiatic Fleet had been strengthened gradually on the surface, in the air and under water since a recent mased flight of bombers from Hawaii to the Philippines. The same sources said the Army also was being strengthened, particularly in the air.

Purvis Says Speed Is Vital

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—Calling for more weapons quickly as "the keynote to stopping the war," Britain's chief buyer, Arthur B. Purvis, brought a fresh report on British war needs from his country to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau today.

Ships, he said, "and maintaining the British merchant fleet so that supplies can be brought from America to Great Britain" constituted the most urgent immediate problem.

"The production of weapons," he said, "both in the United Kingdom and North America—by which I mean both the United States and Canada—is the keynote to stopping the war.

"The more we produce in the next few weeks the greater will be the production six months from now."

"All we ask from America," he told reporters, "is production and more production. We want an enthusiastic approach to production, and from what information I have I believe we are getting it."

Purvis's views on the importance of speeding up war supplies during the next sixty or ninety days coincided with the opinion, held in high Administration quarters, that a serious British emergency might arise in that period from an intensified German effort to "knock out" the British Isles.

Purvis explained that he was not implying that the British feared military peril soon, but asserted that "if you understand that the strategy of this war depends on the dominant supply of weapons, you will realize the importance of the next few weeks."

Stark Warns on Delay in Defense

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25 (AP).—Admiral Harold R. Stark told the nation tonight that, while "excellent progress" was being made on the two-ocean navy, "we must exert every ounce of our national energy to insure that the words 'too late' are not chalked up as the final reckoning on our own national scoreboard."

The Chief of Naval Operations, in a Christmas message to the fleet said:

"We often speak of the cost of preparedness, but it is trivial compared to the cost of unpreparedness, as witnessed and now realized by many nations abroad. We must not repeat their mistake."

Tydings Asks Aims of War

Wants U. S. to See if There's a Chance for Just Peace in Europe.

Washington, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Senator Tydings, Democrat, of Maryland, suggested today that the United States ask Great Britain and the Axis Powers for a statement of the conditions under which each would agree to end the European war.

Given such a statement, Senator Tydings said that this country could determine for itself whether there appears to be any basis for negotiations of a just peace. If there was, the United States could work toward that end, he added, while if there was not, it would know just what country stood in the way and could shape its course accordingly.

"I do not speak of a peace of appeasement, but a peace of justice," Senator Tydings told reporters.

He said it was his opinion that a just peace would involve the restoration of the political sovereignty of Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and France, with the possible creation of wholly Polish and Czecho-Slovakian States. It must be accomplished, he said, by a measure of actuzl, as well as promised, disarmament.

Against Appeasement Peace.

"Certainly," he said, "America would not look with favor upon a peace based upon appeasement, but I hope it would look with favor upon a peace whose fundamental parts were made of justice. We should work for such a peace."

An advocate of extending aid to Great Britain, Senator Tydings expressed the opinion that if the United States found there was now no chance of bringing about a lasting and equitable peace, the knowledge would be invaluable in shaping the course of defense preparations.

At the same time Senator Tydings was expressing his views, two Republican members of the House who had just returned from a trip to Panama called for immediate strengthening of defenses in the Canal Zone.

One, Representative Bradley of Michigan, said that he didn't see a single modern plane in the zone and declared that military aircraft should be dispatched there as fast as they came off the production line.

Criticizes Canal Laborers.

The other, Representative Harness of Indiana, a member of the Military Committee, asserted that the average Panamanian employed on construction work on the canal was "incompetent . . . lazy . . . practically worthless."

Mr. Harness said that the United States has been negotiating with the republic of Panama for defense stations beyond the Canal Zone proper.

On another portion of the broad defense front, the navy tightened its contract form to guard against sabotage and espionage in construction activities. Under the new order, the navy can force a navy contractor to discharge any employee designated by the Secretary of the Navy as undesirable to have access to work or materials for the navy.

New Type Bomb to Blast Submarines Gets a Test

Coast Inventor Uses an Alloy; May Cut Costs a Third

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24 (AP).—A new type of bomb designed to blast subarines was demonstrated today by Russell Hart, Los Angels inventor.

It is fashioned from an alloy which Hart said is highly explosive in water. To demostrate, he placed a bit weighing a tenth of an ounce through a small iron pipe into a can of water. There was an explosion. Hart said the explosion equalled that of two ounces of black powder. The water, he said, liberated hydrogen in the alloy and caused the explosion.

"A 100-pound bomb of this material," hart asserted, "would be equal to a 300-pound depth bomb of the type now used by Great Britain."

The cost would be about thirty-five cents a pound instead of the present $1, Hart said.

Hart related that he discovered possibilities of the alloy only by accident in removing bark from trees on a farm near Portland, Ore., in 1938. He said a piece of the alloy used in the bark removed slipped and plunged into a water well, causing an explosion.

Hart plans to demonstrate his idea and materials in a few days to Lieut. Col. Arthur R. Baird, in charge of the war department's Los Angeles ordnance region.

Two Truckloads of Gifts Delight 44 Nazi Seamen

Men Will Have Christmas Joy on Ship in Florida

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Dec. 24 (AP).—There's Christmas joy aboard the German freighter Arauca even though the forty-four members have not seen their families for more than a year.

The motorship has been tied up here since last Dec. 19, when she barely made port ahead of a pursuing British warship. Two truckloads of gifts were delivered for distribution to the men as they gathered around a decorated tree in the salon. Capt. Frederic Stengler said the presents came from all parts of the United States and from Germany. Many, he added, were sent by unknown friends.

"I am overwhelmed, as are my men, at the generous gestures on the part of so many American citizens in sending the presents," the skipper declared. He distributed an $8 bonus to each member of the crew.

Churchill's Address to Italian People Emphasizes Eden's Return to Old Post

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

There is interesting coincidence in British Prime Minister Churchill's appeal to the Italian King-Emperor and the people to throw Mussolini overboard, and in the simultaneous return of Capt. Anthony Eden to Britain's Foreign Secretaryship, which he abandoned in 1938 because he couldn't go along with Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of appeasing the dictators.

I don't suggest that Capt. Eden was the author of this historic attempt to persuade the Italians to revolt (an effort described by official Rome today as "a puerile propaganda maneuver") though it wouldn't be surprising to learn that in truth he was. The feud that existed between the Fascist head of State and Capt. Eden as Foreign Secretary was so bitter as to have few parallels in the history of diplomacy.

Indeed, Capt. Eden resigned his post because he refused to compromise with Il Duce on a settlement of the Anglo-Italian dispute over the Mediterranean. The next day the Captain explained to a sympathetic and cheering House of Commons that he quit rather than deal with Italy in the face of Mussolini's propaganda against Britain and glorification of Italian victories in Spain.

Threats Not Firm Basis.

"Agreements that are worth while," he exclaimed, "are never made on the basis of threats."

Later Capt. Eden went up and down the land like a prophet of old, crying, "Stand up to the dictators!" Then came the war and he unfurled his standard:

"There can be no peace until Nazism is banished from the earth."

Now he is back in his old position—the most important in Britain next to the premiership—and it's easy to believe that there are jobs he would dislike more than that of helping oust Mussolini.

However, there are other vital tasks for Capt. Eden to perform as he matches wits with the enemy to hold Britain's friends and win fresh support for her.

Among other things, it is believed he may make a fresh effort to bring Russia into the Allied fold—an achievement which might be expected to tip the scales of war heavily in Anglo-Allied favor.

The anxious efforts of the British to win the Soviet over haven't progressed smoothly. Some observers believe this was due in part to a lack of mutual amity between the London Foreign Office and the Kremlin. Lord Halifax, who is leaving the Foreign Secretaryship to become Ambassador to Washington, is said to have been out of tune with the Bolshevists.

Eden May Have Chance.

Capt. Eden, however, is understood to rate well with the Muscovites. Back in 1935, before he became Foreign Secretary, he was sent to Moscow to confer with the then Foreign Commissar, Maxim Litvinov on how peace could best be preserved in face of the Nazi menace.

Capt. Eden appeared to have created a favorable impression in Moscow, and at the termination of his mission he and Litvinov pledged their efforts to preserve peace. It is believed that Capt. Eden now will try to renew old acquaintances in the Soviet capital.

So far as Germany is concerned, Nazi officialdom professes to hold Capt. Eden as one of those chiefly responsible for the war.

WITH BRITISH FORCES ON THE HEIGHTS OVERLOOKING BARDIA, DEC. 22 --(DELAYED)--(AP)--THE ITALIANS ARE FIGHTING DESPERATELY TO HOLD THE LIBYAN PORT OF BARDIA AS THE BRITISH TIGHTEN THEIR ENCIRCLEMENT AND BOMBARD THE TOWN FROM LAND, AIR AND SEA.

ITALIAN AVIATION, NOT MUCH IN EVIDENCE DURING THE BRITISH DRIVE WESTWARD ACROSS THE EGYPTIAN DESERT, HAS SUDDENLY COME TO LIFE IN AN EFFORT TO SAVE BARDIA.

AS WE WERE ADVANCING THIS MORNING WITH AN ARTILLERY UNIT -- WHOSE FAMOUS NAME IS RETAINED ALTHOUGH THE UNIT IS WHOLLY MOTORIZED -- 24 BIG ITALIAN BOMBERS ATTACKED, LOOSING A TERRIFIC SHOWER OF EXPLOSIVES.

(MORE)--ME953AES

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES ON THE HEIGHTS OVERLOOKING BARIDA FIRST ADD EYEWITNESS BY KENNEDY X X X EXPLOSIVES.

THEY FLEW HIGH, HOWEVER, AND THE DAMAGE WAS COMPARATIVELY LIGHT. THEN THE ITALIAN ARTILLERY ONLY A MILE AWAY OPENED UP, BUT SCORED NO HITS.

ROYAL AIR FORCE FIGHTERS HAVE ENGAGED SEVERAL ITALIAN SQUADRONS OVER THE BARDIA REGION, AND WE SAW SEVERAL SHATTERED ITALIAN PLANES LYING IN THE DESERT AS WE MOVED UP.S I SAW NO CRASHED BRITISH PLANES.

ONE BRITISH PILOT TOLD US THAT HE HAD ENCOUNTERED THREE ITALIAN BOMBERS ESCORTED BY THREE FIGHTER PLANES WHICH WERE FLYING AT A SLIGHTLY HIGHER ALTITUDE.

THE PILOT, WHO WAS FLYING AN EIGHT-GUNNED FIGHTER, SAID HE SHOT DOWN TWO OF THE BOMBERS AND THEN WENT UP TO ENGAGE THE OTHER ITALIAN PLANES BUT THEY FLED BEFORE HE COULD CLOSE WITH THEM.

WE WENT A CONSIDERABLE DISTANCE INTO LIBYA TO A POINT SOUTHWEST OF BARDIA AND FOUND ALL THIS TERRITORY IN BRITISH HANDS.

BOTH SALUM AND SIDI BARRANI, ITALIAN ADVANCE BASES IN EGYPT WHICH THE BRITISH TOOK BEFORE DRIVING ACROSS THE BORDER, ARE A SHAMBLES -- DUE PARTLY TO AIR BOMBING BUT MAINLY TO SHELLING FROM THE SEA.

BARDIA NOW IS RECEIVING THE SAME KIND OF BATTERING.

THE ROAD IMMEDIATELY WEST OF SALUM, WHICH WINDS UP A STEEP CLIFF IN A HAIRPIN CURVE, WAS BLOWN UP BY THE ITALIANS AS THEY RETREATED, BUT IT HAS BEEN REOPENED BY THE BRITISH. THIS WAS THE ONLY DAMAGE THE ITALIANS HAD TIME TO DO AS THEY FELL BACK.

THE ONLY OTHER ROUTE INTO LIBYA FROM THE COASTAL DESERT IS "HELLFIRE PASS" UP THE ESCARPMENT SEVEN MILES TO THE SOUTHEAST. BRITISH TANKS CHARGED THROUGH THIS PASS TO TAKE SALUM. "HELLFIRE" IS THE BRITISH SOLDIER'S CORRUPTION OF THE ARABIC NAME, HELFAYA.

ACROSS THE LIBYAN FRONTIER FROM UPPER SALUM IS FORT CAPUZZO, THE FRONTIER POST NAMED FOR AN ITALIAN FLIER KILLED BY LIBYAN REBELS. LIKE SALUM, THIS POST NOW IS A MASS OF WRECKAGE AS THE RESULT OF CONTINUED BOMBINGS.

AN ARCH ERECTED AT FORT CAPUZZO IN HONOR OF KING VITTORIO EMANUELE'S VISIT IN 1938 IS NOW DENTED AND SCARRED, AND THE ROMAN EAGLE WHICH SURMOUNTS A PILLAR IS MINUS HEAD AND WINGS.

A COLUMN OF SMOKE IS RISING FROM THE SMOULDERING RUINS OF BARDIA VILLAGE.

ITALIAN FORCES ESTIMATED AT TWO DIVISIONS WHICH ARE HOLDING THE BARDIA DEFENSES ARE MAINLY ENCAMPED IN DUGOUTS AND TRENCHES IN A DRIED UP RIVER BED NEARBY.

IN A RING FOUR TO SIX MILES OUTSIDE BARDIA ARE THE ITALIAN DEFENSES, ARC-SHAPED TRENCHES, PILLBOXES AND BARBED WIRE. BEHIND THEM ARE HEAVY

FIELD GUNS.

THE ITALIANS HAVE BEEN WORKING ON THE BARDIA DEFENSES FOR YEARS AND THE TOWN IS FAR MORE STRONGLY FORTIFIED THAN ANY OF THEIR POSTS IN EGYPT.

BRITISH OFFICERS ADMIT IT WILL NOT BE EASY TO TAKE.

THERE WERE LINES OF FATIGUE IN HER FACE. SHE WOULD HAVE NO SLEEP UNTIL THE MEN ON BOARD, RIPPED AND SHATTERED WITH BULLETS AND SHELL FRAGMENTS, WERE SAFELY DELIVERED TO A BASE HOSPITAL FAR DOWN THE LINE.

MOST OF THE WOUNDED MEN LAY IN WOODEN BUNKS IN RECONDITIONED FREIGHT CARS. THEY SLEPT UNDER HEAVY BLANKETS.

NURSES WEARING THIN GLOVES AND THIN COATS OVER THEIR WHITE UNIFORMS MOVED TO AND FRO IN THE CARS TO KEEP FROM FREEZING. EVERY TIME THE TRAIN STOPPED THEY CROWDED INTO THE STEAM-HEATED CAR FOR A MOMENT OF WARMTH. WHEN THE WHISTLE WAS HEARD THEY HUSTLED BACK INTO THE FREIGHT CARS.

THEY WERE WOMEN OF ALL AGES, BRIGHT-EYED GIRLS SCARCELY OUT OF THEIR TEENS AND MANY ELDERLY WOMEN,WOMEN OF THE LOWER MIDDLE CLASSES AND ARISTOCRATS.

"THIS IS MY FOURTH WAR," SAID THE ONE STERILIZING BANDAGES. "I NURSED IN THE BALKAN WAR, THE TURKISH WAR AND THE WORLD WAR. MY SONS WANTED ME TO PROMISE NEVER TO NURSE AGAIN, BUT I DON'T THINK THIS ONE WILL HURT ME."

AS DAWN CAME THE ELDERLYNURSE TURNED FROM HER WORK. HER TONE BECAME APOLOGETIC. THE TRAIN WAS DRAWING INTO A STATION.

SOMEWHERE ON THE SOUTHERN ALBANIAN FRONT, DEC 24-(AP)-THE CAPTURE OF CHIMARA, A DRAB LITTLE ALBANIAN COASTAL SETTLEMENT OF 1,500 SOULS, WAS HAILED TODAY AS A MAJOR VICTORY BY THE GREEK FORCES ENGAGED IN THE DRIVE AGAINST THE ITALIANS IN SOUTHERN ALBANIA.

IN THE FACE OF HEAVY COUNTER ATTACKS BY THE FASCIST AIR FORCE, WHICH RAINED BOMBS ON GREEK SUPPLY LINES THROUGHOUT THE PAST WEEKEND, THE ADVANCING GREEK INFANTRY CLEARED THE ITALIANS FROM IMPORTANT STRATEGICAL SECTIONS ON THE COASTAL FLANK.

THE GREEKS NOW DOMINATE THE COAST TO A POINT TWO-THIRDS OF THE WAY FROM THE GREEK-ALBANIAN BORDER TO VALONA.

CHIMARA IS THE NAME OF BOTH THE TOWN AND THE MOUNTAIN REGION WHICH RISES FROM THE SHORES OF THE ADRIATIC.

(DISPATCHES TO ATHENS TODAY SAID THE GREEKS WERE ADVANCING BEYOND CHIMARA WHILE THE ITALIANS TRIED TO FORM DEFENSES AT LOGARA PASS, HALFWAY BETWEEN CHIMARA AND VALONA. THE FASCIST RETREAT WAS DESCRIBED AS HURRIED AND DISORDERLY WITH ONLY A REAR GUARD OPPOSITION.)

THE GREEKS SAY THE MAJORITY OF THE INHABITANTS ARE GREEK BY RACE AND TRADITION. FOR ONE GREEK IN PARTICULAR THE MILITARY SUCCESSES CAPPED A LIFETIME.

THIS MAN WAS BORN IN A VILLAGE FIFTEEN MILES SOUTH OF CHIMARA AND HELPED LEAD THE REVOLT AGAINST TURKEY WHICH ESTABLISHED THE AUTONOMOUS EPIRUS GOVERNMENT IN 1914.

"AT LEAST 13 COMMUNITIES ALONG THE COAST, INCLUDING CHIMARA ITSELF, HAVE BEEN PURE GREEK FOR CENTURIES," HE SAID. NIGHT LEAD CHRISTMAS ABROAD (BUDGET)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THIS IS THE SECOND CHRISTMAS OF WAR FOR THE MILLIONS IN EUROPE. IT MAKES A STRANGE PATTERN, AND NOT A CHEERFUL ONE. BUT STILL IT IS CHRISTMAS, AND TODAY IT IS IN THE HEARTS OF EVERYONE.

THERE IS NO TRUCE; INDEED, THE FULL FURY OF A NEW ASSAULT MAY BE DAYS, OR EVEN HOURS AWAY. BUT THE BELLS OF BETHLEHEM RING BRAVELY, THOUGH THE BELLS OF ENGLAND ARE MUTE, FOR IT IS THESE BELLS WHICH WILL GIVE THE ALARM OF INVASION.

HERE ARE A FEW GLIMPSES OFEUROPE ON CHRISTMAS EVE:

DEC 25 1941

LONDON: THE CURTAIN OF THE BLACKOUT FELL MERCIFULLY TO HIDE THE SCARS OF BOMBS. THE 1940 BOB CRATCHETT PICKED HIS WAY WARILY TO HOME OR SHELTER, ARMS LOADED WITH BUNDLES, MANY OF THEM UNWRAPPED, BECAUSE PAPER IS SCARCE. THE RAILWAY STATIONS WERE CROWDED WITH MOTHERS AND FATHERS ON THEIR WAY TO THEIR CHILDREN IN THE SAFER COUNTRYSIDE. THE PEOPLE IN PICCADILLY HURRIED PAST AN APPLE VENDOR, SELLING HIS WARES FOR A SHILLING--20 CENTS--A POUND. THE SIGNS SAID: "CHRISTMAS IS 1940 YEARS OLD AND HITLER ONLY 51; HE CAN'T SPOIL OUR CHRISTMAS!" AND THERE WAS TURKEY--FOR SIXTY CENTS A POUND.

BERLIN: THE WORDS OF HITLER'S DEPUTY, RUDOLF HESS, CAME THROUGH THE NIGHT AND INTO THE GERMAN HOME: "ALMIGHTY GOD, YOU GAVE US OUR FUEHRER...NOW GIVE US POWER TO HELP HIM...". BERLIN WAS DARK, TOO, AND THE STREETS WERE COLD AND FORBIDDING, BUT INSIDE THERE WAS LIGHT AND WARMTH AND CHEER. THE GERMANS HOPED WITH REICHSMARSHAL HERMANN GOERING: "MAY NEXT CHRISTMAS BE ONE OF PEACE...AND VICTORY."

FOR THE CHILDREN ONE COULD BUY TWO POUNDS APIECE OF APPLES AND PEARS; HALF A POUND OF NUTS (COUNTING THE SHELLS); HALF A POUND OF HONEY AND FIVE-EIGHTHS OF A POUND OF CANDY. FOR THE GROWNUPS: TWO POUNDS OF APPLES OR PEARS AND A HALF POUND OF CANDY.

VICHY: IT WAS BITTER COLD IN THIS SADDEST OF CITIES ON THIS UNHAPPY CHRISTMAS EVE. BUT MARSHAL PETAIN, HIS OLD VOICE ATREMBLE WITH HOPE, SAID OVER THE RADIO: "A NEW FRANCE IS BORN...MADE BY YOUR TRIALS, YOUR REMORSE, YOUR SACRIFICES...TAKE COURAGE! SWEAR TONIGHT TO AID WITH ALL YOUR FORCE THIS GREAT REBIRTH SO YOUR CHILDREN AGAIN WILL KNOW HAPPY CHRISTMASES!"

THERE WERE GOVERNMENT GIFTS OF POTATOES, RICE, LENTILS, SPAGHETTI AND DATES FOR THE THOUSANDS EXPELLED FROM THE LOST PROVINCES OF ALSACE AND LORRAINE; THERE WERE CHEAP TOYS, LEFT OVER FROM LAST YEAR, IN THE SHOPS, BUT FEW BUYERS. SAID ONE DEMOBILIZED SOLDIER, LIVING IN A TINY ROOM WITH HIS WIFE AND DAUGHTER: "WE CAN'T EVEN HAVE A CHRISTMAS TREE--THERE'S NOT ENOUGH ROOM."

DEC 25 1941

IN PARIS: "MIDNIGHT" MASS WAS SUNG AT 5 P.M. AT NOTRE DAME; BECAUSE OF THE CURFEW.

ROME: THE ETERNAL CITY WALKED THROUGH SLUSH AND SNOW AND THE INK OF THE BLACKOUT, HOMEWARD FROM DAYLIGHT CHRISTMAS EVE MASSES. THEY WERE HOPING, MOST OF THESE ROMANS, THAT CHRISTMAS DAY WILL BRING AT LEAST A TACIT TRUCE FOR THE ITALIAN SOLDIERS SO HARD PRESSED IN THE AFRICAN DESERT AND IN [redacted]. MASS WAS SAID IN MOST CHURCHES IN ROME AT 4:30 P.M., BY SPECIAL DISPENSATION OF THE POPE, BECAUSE OF THE CONDITIONS OF WAR. AND THE GOVERNMENT LIFTED FOR TODAY THE RESTRICTIONS ON MEAT AND PASTRIES, SO THERE WILL BE TURKEYS, SAUSAGES, FRUITCAKE AND THE GOOD THINGS OF PEACE FOR THOSE WITH THE MONEY TO BUY THEM. MANY ITALIANS HAD PUT SPAGHETTI ASIDE FROM THEIR MONTHLY RATION FOR THE CHRISTMAS EVE SUPPER.

DUBLIN: THE BRIGHTEST CITY BETWEEN MOSCOW AND NEW YORK SPARKLED WITH CHRISTMAS EVE CELEBRATIONS; GAY CROWDS OVERRAN THE CURBS. BUT

THERE WERE REMINDERS OF THE DANGER: ONE OF THEM AN OFFICIAL WARNING TO MOTORISTS TO TAKE HEED OF ROAD BARRIERS AND ARMED GUARDS, ALERT AGAINST THE CHANCE OF INVASION.

AND IN BETHLEHEM:

ONLY THE STARS SHONE THROUGH THE BLACKNESS OF WAR TO LIGHT THE PILGRIMS' WAY TO THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY AND THE BELLS PEALED SILVERY CLEAR; HUNDREDS WATCHED THE SUBLIME DRAMA OF CHRIST'S BIRTH REENACTED THERE.

HONOLULU, DEC 24-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT AND PRIVATE CLAIMANTS TODAY DISPUTED TITLE TO PALMYRA ISLANDS, WHICH THE ADVANCE OF AVIATION AND INTERNATIONAL TENSION OF RECENT YEARS HAVE LIFTED FROM OBSCURITY TO A PLACE OF MILITARY IMPORTANCE IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN.

PRIVATE INTERESTS WON THE FIRST ROUND OF THE FEDERAL COURT BATTLE HERE YESTERDAY WHEN JUDGE DELBERT METZGER RULED IN EFFEVO OHAT A PALMYRA ISLAND AUXILIARY SEAPLANE BASE WAS BEING CONSTRUCTED FOR THE NAVY ON PRIVATE LAND AND COMMENTED THAT THE GOVERNMENT HAD TITLE THAT COULD BE SUSTAINED IN ANY COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

THE GOVERNMENT IN A PETITION TO QUIET TITLE FILED A YEAR AGO CONTENDED THAT TITLE TO THE ISLANDS, 850 MILES SOUTHWEST OF HONOLULU, HAS REMAINED WITH THE UNITED STATES SINCE ANNEXATION OF HAWAII, AND AFTER YESTERDAY'S DENIAL OF THE PETITION ANNOUNCED AN APPEAL WOULD BE TAKEN TO THE APPELLATE COURT IN SAN FRANCISCO.

THE GOVERNMENT'S PETITION NAMED MR. AND MRS. LESLIE FULLARD-LEO OF HONOLULU AND SEVEN OTHERS AS RESPONDENTS. THE FULLARD-LEOS CLAIM OWNERSHIP OF 50 OF THE 52 ISLETS IN THE PALMYRA GROUP, INCLUDING THE MILE-SQUARE CORAL STOLL ON WHICH THE NAVY IS CONSTRUCTING ITS SEAPLANE BASE.

THE BASE, NAVY MEN SAY WILL REQUIRE CONSIDERABLE DREDGING AND BLASTING TO MAKE IT A SUITABLE LANDING PLACE FOR PATROL SEAPLANES, IS ONE OF SEVERAL INVOLVED IN A $13,000,000 DEVELOPMENT EXTENDING NAVY OBSERVATION FACILITIES ALONG A FAR-FLUNG FRINGE OF SMALL PACIFC ISLANDS..

THE FULLARD-LEOS ONCE CONSIDERED LEASING THE BASE SITE TO THE NAVY BUT NEGOTIATIONS WERE INTERRUPTED BY THE FILING OF THE QUIET TITLE SUIT, IN WHICH THE GOVERNMENT MADE NO ADMISSION AS TO PRIVATE OWNERSHIP.

ALTHOUGH THE ISLANDS ARE 850 MILES SOUTHWEST OF HONOLULU THEY ARE UNDER THE JURISDICTION OF HONOLULU COUNTY.

South American Says Relations With U. S. Are in Testing Period

Cordiality Dependent On Aid to British and Our Discreetness, Says Writer

The United States is engaged in an intensive effort to promote good feeling and co-operation among the American nations. Here is a trenchant delineation of their attitude as seen by a distinguished South American journalist, Senor Fernando Ortiz Echague, for the last 22 years chief European correspondent of the newspaper La Nacion of Buenos Aires.

By FERNANDO ORTIZ ECHAGUE.
Written for the Associated Press Special News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—The offices of La Nacion on the Champs Elysees near the Arch of Triumph, which for a quarter of a century were a favorite rendezvous of South Americans in Paris, are occupied today by the Germans. They give courses in French to their officers in the vast reading room where formerly one could find files of all the newspapers of Latin America.

La Nacion shared the building with the "National Office of Tourism," whose quarters also have been taken over by the Nazis and converted into an office for the Ministry of Communications. The building is large and has a good location, adjoining Fouquets restaurant, one of the favorite gathering places for the conquerors of Paris. Of the former inhabitants of the buildings, which was familiar to tourists of both Americas, there remain only the porter and his wife and their dog.

France Was an Example.

Thus ended, with so many other things, a long period of pleasant and profitable relations between France and Argentina, characterized by a great interchange of travelers and of ideas, in which the budding Pan-American policy of good neighborliness may well find inspiration.

France used to send to Argentina carefully selected objects of art, its theatrical companies, its professors and its men of letters.

Each year the spirit of France left in Buenos Aires its fecund seed, and in exchange each year there passed through Paris some dozens of students, and thousands of moneyed Argentine tourists: Cultured men and beautiful women whose presence alone was sufficient to dissipate the primitive image of the pampas, which legend persists in perpetuating.

For Argentina, the eclipse of France is a great misfortune. The Argentine does not know how to navigate through the world without the light of Paris, without the guiding beacon whose shafts illuminated a century of our spiritual formation.

Can New York Take Paris' Place?

Can New York now take for the Argentines the place of Paris?

It may take that place partially, if it does not commit the same errors that the French committed with regard to us: Errors based on lack of information and failure to grasp certain psychological factors.

These errors were tolerated and even amused the Argentines, in the case of France, so far from our continent; but they hardly would be overlooked so easily in the case of the United States, the neighbor to the north, especially in its new role of the guardian of America.

It is a good occasion to know each other better, the Americans of the North and of the South.

Without the defeat of France, without the war in Europe, the road which one may travel now in a matter of weeks would have required years to traverse.

The spiritual distances of America diminish as the routes of Europe are closed to our hopes.

Cordiality and Distrust.

We recognize the official and private efforts which are made here to do away with some Argentine and other South American conceptions regarding the United States.

As regards ourselves, we follow the course of these efforts toward continental rapprochement with a mixed sentiment of cordiality and distrust.

Facing the possibility of a totalitarian threat, more evident each day, the countries of South America recognize in general the necessity of a defensive co-operation.

But when an effort to organize such co-operation is made—when, for example, there is talk about the eventual cession to the United States of air and naval bases—the misgivings of the countries concerned come to the fore.

It is difficult to prevent their seeing in that project something like an abdication or surrender of their sovereignty.

It is needless to say with what ability that sentiment is exploited by those elements interested in preparing, for some future time, the way for Nazi penetration into our America.

United States Must Be Discreet.

The fifth column already has the ground fertilized in several of the Southern republics.

For that reason it is necessary that this country proceed with discretion in the delicate project of continental defense, at all times making sure of its ground, of exactly what it desires and how far it may go.

The inequality between the military strength of the United States and the weakness of the other republics of this continent in that sphere is so great that any protective gesture might be easily interpreted in our our countries as an aspiration to continental domination.

But on the other hand, the growing power attained in Europe by the aggressive powers, and the possibility that the war may spread to America, tell us clearly and concretely that the time has come to regard the solidarity of the continent as something more than an abstract idea.

Hour of Trial for U. S.

It is an hour of trial for the United States; and all its neighbors of America have their eyes fixed here, in this tremendously anxious moment of the world's history. For one who like myself comes here from having witnessed in Europe a catastrophe of tremendous historical significance, for one who has seen France pass away in a few days from the rank of a great power to zero, how inexplicable are those limitations, legal technicalities and bargainings that figure in the aid which the United States is giving to England!

We neighbors to the south have a high idea of the technical capacity, of the industrial strength, of the economic resources and of the ability to adapt itself to the new rhythm of things of this great democracy which we so much admire.

Thus, it cannot but surprise us to observe now that while public opinion seems to give its total approval to the idea of aiding England more and more, the results of these efforts to render assistance respond all too slowly to the wish that inspired them.

If on this exceptional occasion the United States does not convince us with the demonstration of its capacity to incline definitely in favor of the democracies the balance of strength in this war, without necessity for participating in it, this country would lose the incomparable opportunity which it now has to occupy the place which France left vacant in the heart of our America.

BY MILO M.THOMPSON

(ADVANCE) NEW YORK,DEC 24-(AP)-I WAS FEELING MY WAY, LIKE A BLIND MAN, GROUND A TURN IN A LONDON SUBURBAN STREET LAST CHRISTMAS WHEN THERE CAME THE THRILL OF CAROLING VOICES IN THE BLACKOUT AHEAD OF ME.

NO ANCIENT LANTERN WAS THERE TO LIGHT UP PICTURESQUE GARMENTS. NOR WAS ANY HOSPITABLE DOOR THROWN OPEN TO LET OUT A FLOOD OF BRIGHTNESS AND FLICKERING FIRELIGHT AND WELCOME THE SONGSTERS IN. IF THEY WERE TAKEN INSIDE FOR HOT TEA AND CAKES, IT WAS DONE IN THE DARK, STEALTHILY, AS IF THEY WERE A BAND OF SMUGGLERS.

I CAUGHT UP WITH THE SINGERS. SAID ONE:

"IT ISN'T WHAT IT USED TO BE. YOU CANNOT TELL WHETHER A HOUSE IS EMPTY OR PERFECTLY BLACKED OUT. MUCH OF THE TIME WE SING TO NO ONE AT ALL, BUT WE SING."

I HAVE BEEN WONDERING WHAT THIS CHRISTMAS WILL BE, NOW THAT THERE IS TALK OF HITLER TAKING ADVANTAGE OF A HOLIDAY LET-DOWN TO LAUNCH AN INVASION ATTEMPT. THERE IS SCARE TALK, TOO, FROM THE BRITISH LEADERS, CALCULATED TO KEEP THE BRITISH ALERT, WARY, PREPARED.

IF THIS WERE A PEACETIME CHRISTMAS, IT WOULD BE A PERFECT SET-UP FOR A PERFECT HOLIDAY, WITH CHRISTMAS FALLING ON A WEDNESDAY. THE DAY AFTER CHRISTMAS -- BOXING DAY, WHEN BOXES AND BASKETS OF SURPLUS GOOD THINGS GO TO THE RETAINERS AND POORER PEOPLE -- IS NORMALLY A LEGAL HOLIDAY. THESE ARE NOT THE CRACKERS WHICH, TO AN AMERICAN, BELONG WITH SOUP. THEY ARE THE FAN-TAILED CYLINDRICAL THINGS YOU PULL APART WITH A SNAP TO PRODUCE FORTUNES, GAMES, JOLLY PAPER HATS OR TOY BALLOONS, THE MAKING OF THE CHRISTMAS PARTY.

ONE REASON WE AMERICANS WHO HAVE BEEN LONGER IN ENGLAND LIKE TO BE IN AT THE FIRST MEAL OF A NEWCOMER FROM AMERICA, EVEN IF WE HAVE TO BUY IT, IS THAT HE INEVITABLY ASKS FOR CRACKERS WITH HIS SOUP AND THE WAITER INEVITABLY FAILS TO UNDERSTAND, FOR THESE ARE THE ONLY CRACKERS THE ENGLISH KNOW.

THEY SEEM MORE IMPORTANT THAN CHRISTMAS TREES. IN NORMAL YEARS, DOWN WHOLE STREETS OF SHOPS, THE WINDOWS SEEM FILLED WITH NOTHING ELSE BUT BOXES OF CRACKERS, RESPLENDENT IN COLORS AND FOIL, COSTING FROM A DOLLAR A DOZEN TO TEN DOLLARS. THERE WAS GREAT LAMENTING WHEN IT WAS ANNOUNCED LAST SPRING THEY COULD NO LONGER BE MANUFACTURED.

BUT SOME WILL BE THERE. THEY MAY HAVE BEEN HELD OVER FROM LAST SEASON OR MANUFACTURED BEFORE THE BAN, BUT WHEN I LEFT ENGLAND MANY CHRISTMAS SHOW WINDOWS WERE ALREADY FILLED WITH THEM AGAIN.

SOME PUDDINGS WILL BE MADE ALSO, BY THOSE WHO GATHERED FRUITS PIECEMEAL BY HOARDING, AND BY THOSE WHO HAVE CONTRIVED SUBSTITUTE INGREDIENTS FROM AUTUMN FRUITS, HOME-DRIED BECAUSE THERE WAS NO SUGAR FOR THEIR CANNING.

THIS YEAR, IN SPITE OF ALL THE OBSTACLES, THERE IS EVERY SIGN THAT CHRISTMAS WILL BE CHRISTMAS, EVEN THOUGH THE FIREPLACE WHICH HELD LAST YEAR'S STOCKINGS BE SHATTERED, EVEN THOUGH THE PUDDING MAY BE TASTED IN AN UNDERGROUND HIDEAWAY.

ONE CAN BE SURE THE CAROLS WILL BE SUNG IN THOUSANDS OF SHELTERS WHERE PEOPLE HAVE TAKEN TO SINGING ANYWAY TO DROWN THE SOUND OF PLANES AND GUNS, RAISE THEIR SPIRITS AND SHOW STUBBORN RESISTENCE TO THE RAIDERS.

I AM CONFIDENT THIS WILL HAPPEN EVEN IF THE ENEMY CHOOSES THE SEASON TO PREPARE HIS PATH FOR INVASION. THERE MAY BE HELL ON EARTH ABOVE BUT THERE WILL BE THE SOUND OF "PEACE ON EARTH" BELOW GROUND. THERE WILL BE GIFTS GIVEN, I KNOW, FOR THEY WERE BUYING THEM IN THE SHOPS BEFORE I TOOK THE CLIPPER TO THESE SHORES.

I AM SORRY I SHALL MISS IT ALL BY A COUPLE OF WEEKS, FOR IT MAY BE THE WORLD WILL NEVER SEE AGAIN SUCH A CHRISTMAS AS WILL BE CELEBRATED THIS YEAR IN THE WORLDS BIGGEST, DARKEST, MOST-BOMBED BUT MOST UNYIELDING CITY.

300,000 MORE NAZI TROOPS ARE SENT INTO RUMANIA; SOVIET RIFT IS REPORTED

Vanguard Of New Reich Expedition Begins Moving Across Hungary--Showdown With Russia Or Greece Believed Goal

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 25—The vanguard of a new German expedition into the Balkans, a total force estimated at twenty divisions or 300,000 men, with artillery, bridge-building equipment, tanks and motor transports, began moving today across Hungary to Rumania.

Germany already has 100,000 men in Rumania—by the minimum estimate of military experts—and the movement of the new troops with Hungary's grant of right of way stirred conjecture as to the probable reasons.

Diplomatic sources thought perhaps Germany at last was planning action against Turkey and Greece through Bulgaria or preparing for a showdown with Soviet Russia, or simply strengthening military forces in Rumania to assure civil order, or sparring for position against Russia.

May Be Only Part Of Bluff

In the last case the impressive movement of troops, which will utilize 1,160 trains from now until January 31, may be only part of a game of bluff.

The Hungarian Railway Administration has publicly announced that passenger-train service will be "specially restricted" during the troop movement, with one local train running on each line daily to handle the mails. This will leave the tracks clear for Nazi transport, and German experts already are quartered in Hungarian stations to supervise the train movements.

The theory that the movement of troops concerned Russia was supported by reports from travelers from Germany who said rail traffic in the eastern part of the Reich was disrupted by the movement of troop trains toward the German-Russian frontier and into Slovakia.

Soviet-Axis Tension Reported Increasing

Diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest said there was increasing tension between the Soviets and the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Soviet diplomats openly declare the Red army is preparing to occupy the Rumanian province of Moldavia up to the Siretul river and all mouths of the Danube shortly after the new year opens.

The Rumanian police prefect at Iasi issued a communique denying "alarmist rumors that the Russians were about to occupy Moldavia." Diplomatic reports considered that the action was made necessary because of the near panic among residents of Moldavia, many of whom are already fleeing to southern Rumania.

The Rumanian-Russian frontier was closed at Galati and a bargeload of 800 Jewish refugees, seeking to enter Russia, was turned back without explanation.

Russian, German, Italian and Rumanian experts who have been sitting for nearly two months in Bucharest in an effort to decide which nation or group of nations controls the strategically important mouths of the Danube, Germany's lifeline of supply from the Balkans to the Black Sea, have finally gone home admitting their failure to reach an agreement.

Quarrel Marks Session

The recent session was marked by a quarrel between the Nazis and Fascists on the one side and the Russians on the other, with each refusing to compromise. Officially the meetings have been postponed until the end of January, but it was learned from informed sources that the Soviets are firmly insisting on control of the Danube outlets.

Russia now controls the northernmost outlet of the river through the muzzles of heavy guns installed at Ismail, Bessarabia. The Red army annexed Bessarabia and northern Bucovina from Rumania last June.

The Rumanians have closed the Sulina and St. George outlets to shipping except with special Rumanian pilots. Lighthouses are blacked out and all shipping is barred at night.

Diplomatic dispatches told of four Russian diplomatic protests to Rumania within the last two weeks, and it was recalled that similar protests preceded the Soviet seizure of the Rumanian province of Bessarabia last summer.

Russian Protests

The Soviet Minister at first protested the "attitude of the Rumanian press," then the "campaign labeling all Rumanian criminals as Communists," then the "general unfriendly Rumanian attitude."

At the same time military dispatches from Bucharest told of German army engineers supervising construction of defensive works on the Prut river frontier between Rumania and Bessarabia. Secondary defenses are being prepared now on the Siretul river and a third line on the Carpathian Mountains which now are held in the north by Hungary.

Travelers arriving in Budapest reported passing solid lines of German military trains for one hundred miles in Hungary. The trains were loaded with heavy and light motorized artillery, armored cars, troop transport trucks, anti-aircraft guns and other equipment.

May Be To Span Danube

Military experts thought possibly the bridge-building equipment might be used to span the Danube river toward Bulgaria or the Prut toward Russia should it be necessary.

New contingents of picked Russian troops have been reported moved up the Prut river, and at the same time Soviet diplomats reported the Kremlin was concluding a new friendship pact with Turkey to be announced soon after January 1.

One diplomatic explanation of the future is that Germany will continue to follow her "rubber-fence theory"—that the Nazi trade in Moldavia and the mouths of the Danube go to Russia in return for a Soviet promise to keep hands off if Germany goes through Bulgaria to Greece and to the Dardanelles.

This theory, of course, ignores Soviet reports of a new friendship treaty with Turkey.

Expect War On Russia

Another possible explanation of Nazi-Soviet moves is that Russia may determine to have a common frontier with friendly Bulgaria before Germany can move, thus putting the Soviets in a position to forestall a German march to the south, or that the Reich itself means to move first to block such a Russian advance.

At any rate, Rumanian army officers frankly declare they expect to help Germany fight Russia in the spring. They point to notices in the Bucharest newspapers warning Rumanians to take seriously their pledge of full military assistance to Germany.

R. A. F. Surprise Dive-Bombing Raid On Fascist Base In Albania Described

Many Planes On Ground And Cruiser In Port Declared Machine-Gunned

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Thursday, Dec. 26—With Italian troops reported occupying strong natural positions south of Valona and preparing a defense of that southern Albanian port, the British

30.24 — 6603

Royal Air Force announced yesterday a surprise dive-bombing, which left Valona's air field "enveloped in palls of black smoke."

[The Italian high command, apparently reporting on the same attack, staged Tuesday, said that the British raiders "withdrew from combat" when challenged.]

Greek advices were that Italian troops had taken up positions at Logara Pass, fifteen miles south of Valona, ready to oppose the left wing of the Greek offensive into Albania.

Christmas Victory Claimed

Continued snow, bitter cold and mist limited operations in the North, but the Greeks claimed local successes there against heavy reinforcements of crack Alpine troops from Italy.

A Government spokesman said:

"Our army is celebrating Christmas among Christian and Moslem populations who have been liberated from Italian tyranny.

"To previous victories of our army is added a victory scored in the region west of the river Drinos, where units of our army pushed the enemy back in an attack amid a blizzard and occupied additional fortified enemy positions."

Many Bagged On Ground

The R. A. F. said that "Valona airdrome, with many aircraft on the ground, was successfully attacked by R. A. F. formations."

[Italy has acknowledged that German transport planes, with Germans at the controls, are flying Italian troops to the Albanian battle front. These use such airfields as Valona's to land troops close to the fighting line.]

"The target, as well as the harbor and town, was covered with low clouds and our aircraft dived through them, taking Valona defenses completely by surprise," said the R. A. F. communique.

Target Also Machine-Gunned

"While a number of our aircraft bombed enemy aircraft on the runway, others attacked the hangars, airdrome buildings and aircraft.

"During this low level attack, the target was also machine-gunned.

"When our aircraft left, the airdrome was enveloped in palls of smoke.

"A cruiser, which put up an anti-aircraft barrage, was heavily machine-gunned. From all operations, our aircraft returned safely."

"Most Exhilarating" Raid

The leader of one formation called it "perhaps the most exhilarating raid the squadron has ever carried out.

"Because low clouds covered the harbor, the town and all our targets, we dived through them at more than 300 miles an hour and found there was just room to squeeze our formation through the narrow gap separating the mainland from the promontory," he related.

"We took the whole place by surprise as we dived low over the airdrome.

Place Enveloped In Smoke

"Some of us bombed the many aircraft on the runway while the rest attended to hangars and airdrome buildings and other aircraft on the ground.

"Because this was a low level attack, the air gunners had a chance to add to the damage the bombers caused and pumped many rounds into the hangars and aircraft.

"Great palls of black smoke were seen enveloping the whole place when we turned away.

"The cruiser was between the promontory and the island (Saseno) as we made for home and it was heavily machine-gunned."

Christmas Raid On Corfu

The Home Security Ministry reported a Christmas Day bombing of Corfu, resulting in "fifteen dead and about thirty wounded, mostly women and children."

Since the outbreak of the war, the communique said, Corfu has been bombed twenty-three times.

"According to international agreement," the ministry added, "Corfu is an open town, where there are no military targets, and the Italian raids were directed against the civil population exclusively."

Lefkas likewise was bombed yesterday without casualties or damage, the communique said.

our admiration for your courage in the face of heavy and constant attack and as appreciation of the kindnesses shown our airmen who have had to land at Corfu."

Later in the day, according to a Home Security communique, Italian planes bombed Corfu for the twenty-third time, killing fifteen persons and injuring about thirty.

Corfu's Christmas Gifts And Bombs

Athens, Dec. 25 (AP)—British pilots in Santa Claus roles bombarded Corfu today with Christmas gifts for children of the defenseless island which has been a frequent target of Italian planes.

People of the island had been informed in advance of the appearance of the planes, and large crowds gathered about the "target area."

Vice-Air Marshal J. H. d'Albiac, of the R. A. F., in a message to the Corfu prefect said the gifts were "tokens of

ALL ALBANIA'S GOLD REPORTED TAKEN BY ITALY

"Financial Finagling," Bank Of Greece Official Describes Operation

Lira-Backed Franc Substituted Called Worthless In World Trade

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Koritza, Albania, Dec. 23 (Delayed).—Describing the operation as "financial finagling," a Greek banking official said today that Italy had "legally" removed the Albanian gold supply for its own use while increasing money in circulation four-fold.

This informant, an English-speaking official of the Bank of Greece sent here to develop some method of coordinating the Albanian franc with the drachma, declared that prior to Italy's entrance into Albania the country had 20,000,000 paper francs in circulation backed by 12,000,000 gold francs.

Army Paid In New Francs

"The first move of the Italians," he added, "was to send the gold to Italy and take over the Albanian National Bank. Next, state control of the bank was decreed. The franc was no longer to be backed by gold but by paper Italian lira. This left 12,000,000 francs in gold for Italy's use in international trade and at the same time made Albania completely dependent on Italy for imports."

Italy, the banker continued, then started paying the army in Albania with new printed Albanian francs, with the result, he asserted, that up to July 31 of this year the National Bank of Albania had 40,409,716 paper francs in circulation "not backed by an ounce of gold and at the same time they had 50,000,000 more francs carried on the books as deposits."

Worthless In World Trade

He added that from July to the start of the war October 28 the Italians were believed to have boosted the Albanian franc circulation to 70,000,000, although exact figures were unavailable.

Thus, he said, the Albanian franc was now worthless in world trade. In Greek-occupied sections of Albania officials have made the franc worth 20 Greek drachmas. This figure is usable in Albania but not in Greek trade except in payments for supplies of food in which Albania is short.

MALTA UNDAUNTED BY 203 AIR ATTACKS

Few on Most Raided of British Outposts Now Bother to Take Shelter on Alarm

MILITARY POSTS INTACT

Italian Bombers Have Failed to Destroy Either Army or Navy Establishments

VALLETTA, Malta, Dec. 25 (AP)—Aside from Great Britain, the Mediterranean fortress and naval base of Malta has experienced more bombing in this war than any other place in the British Empire.

The island bristles with anti-aircraft guns, mounted on the high rock promontory. Squadrons of fighter planes are constantly ready to take off to combat Italian raiders.

The British report they have shot down thirty-five Italian bombers and "probably" downed twenty-five others in 203 attacks on Valletta alone since Italy entered the war last June.

One stepping ashore from the flagship of the British Mediterranean Fleet is amazed to find Malta singularly free of bomb damage, except in a few residential areas near the port. The Fascist achievements to date have included the destruction of 166 houses, an old church and Fort Angelo, built in 1210.

From what could be learned, casualties have been comparatively slight and the Italians have failed to destroy either British naval units here or the military establishments.

The Maltese are courageous and deeply religious. They have become so inured to air raids that comparatively few seek shelter. For those who wish protection, however, there is a maze of tunnels cut out of the solid rock. Many business establishments and homes have prepared abandoned water wells, some a hundred feet deep, as places of retreat should the bombings grow worse.

Valletta is plastered with religious quotations, such as "the Virgin Mary protect Malta and England and bring victory to the British Empire." Alongside are slogans like "hold fast and we will win!"

Climbing the rocky steps to the top of the great promontory on which Valletta is built, one finds a magnificent medieval palace, the chief office of Malta's government. In the palace's armor room there is enough medieval armor of Turkish, Spanish, French, Moroccan, British and German origin to equip an army of 15,000. There are hundreds of museum piece weapons, cannons and guns, swords and javelins.

Asked how the people were reacting to the Italian air raids, the Governor replied they were like the people of London, and nothing could shake their faith that Britain would win.

BRITISH HINT 'ZERO HOUR' IN LIBYA IS NEAR

"Pushing Forward Preparations To Deal With Situation" There

R. A. F. Activity Reported In Western Desert And Italian East Africa

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 25—In the face of intensified Italian air attacks, British forces besieging Bardia were reported today to be "pushing forward preparations to deal with the situation" at the Fascist base in eastern Libya.

With Bardia already under heavy artillery fire in its ninth day of siege, the British general headquarters communique which anounced the preparations were interpreted as the approach of the "zero hour" for an all-out attack on the Italian garrison of 20,000.

R. A. F. Active In Desert

Picked desert troops, who led in the offensive that took Sidi Barrani and pushed on fifteen miles along the Libyan coast, were expected to make the assault with the support of tanks and other mechanized units

The R. A. F. also was active in the western desert. The Middle East command's communique reported bombing attacks on the airdromes at Tmimi and Gazala in which "all bombs fell within the target area." On the other hand, a large force of Italian bombers, with fighter plane protection, was said to have inflicted only "slight" damage and a "number" of casualties in a raid on Salum.

Air Raids In East Africa

Without a single loss in aircraft or personnel, the R. A. F. claimed successful aerial blows at Gunna, where bombs struck an ammunition dump; at Burye, where buildings were set on fire, and at Hess, where a dive-bombing attack caused "considerable damage" to storehouses and dumps. These are in Italian East Africa.

In the same sector a plane of the Rhodesian squadron, on a pamphlet raid, was reported to have brought down an Italian fighter plane over Kassala.

Of the other British land forces, only patrols on the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan frontier with Ethiopia were reported active. There, general headquarters said, "inflicted casualties upon the enemy."

Rome Reports Rout of British Raid on Valona

Says Its Flyers Also Blasted Foe in Libya; Naples Has Leaflet-Incendiary Raid

ROME, Dec. 25 (AP).—Fascist planes bombed and machine gunned British forces in eastern Libya, the Italian high command reported today, while others based in Albania attacked a British squadron which raided the port of Valona.

In one British air base in North Africa, a Christmas Day communique said "explosions and fires were noticed." The situation in Libya as a whole was described as "unchanged."

The high command said that the British had bombed the western Libyan port of Tripoli, "causing some damage," and that other British planes yesterday flew over Naples, "dropping incendiary bombs and the usual leaflets."

Bad weather hampered land operations on the Albanian battle front, the high command said. It declared Greek attacks were repulsed.

The high command said the fighter planes which attacked British raiders at Valona machine gunned and pursued them, forcing them to "withdraw from combat."

In East Africa, along the Sudan frontier, the high command reported that an Italian scouting party repulsed British troops in armed trucks who attacked Dec. 23.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 25—Fighters of the fleet air arm shot down a German plane over the Orkney Islands in the only air battle of Christmas Day, the Air and Home Securities Ministries announced tonight. Four of the German crew were captured, the communique said.

Text of King's Broadcast to the Empire

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 25—The text of King George's Christmas message to the British Empire today follows:

In days of peace, the feast of Christmas is a time when we all gather together in our homes, young and old, to enjoy the happy festivity and good-will which the Christmas message brings. It is, above all, the children's day, and I am sure that we shall all do our best to make it a happy one for them, wherever they may be.

War brings, among other sorrows, the sadness of separation. There are many men in the forces away from their homes today, because they must stand ready and alert to resist an invader, should he dare to come, or because they are guarding the dark seas, or pursuing the beaten foe in the Libyan desert.

Many family circles are broken. Children from English homes are today in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. For not only has the manhood of the whole British Commonwealth rallied once more to the aid of the mother country in her hour of need, but the peoples of the empire have eagerly thrown open the doors of their homes to our children so that they may be spared from the strain and danger of modern war.

And in the United States also, where we find so many generous and loyal friends and organizations to give us unstinted help, warm-hearted people are keeping and caring for many of our children till the war is over.

But how many more children are there who have been moved from their homes to safer quarters.

To all of them, at home and abroad, who are separated from their fathers and mothers, to their kind friends and hosts, and to all who love them, and to parents who will be lonely without them: from all in our dear island, I wish every happiness that Christmas can bring. May the New Year carry us toward victory and to happier Christmas days when every one will be at home together in the years to come.

To the older people here and throughout the world I would say: In the last great war the flower of our youth was destroyed and the rest of the people saw but little of the battle. This time we are all in the front line and the danger together, and I know that the older among us are proud that it should be so.

Remember this. If war brings its separations, it brings new unity also, the unity which comes from common perils and common sufferings willingly shared. To be good comrades and good neighbors in trouble is one of the finest opportunities of the civilian population. And by facing hardship and discomfort cheerfully and resolutely not only do they do their own duty but they play their part in helping the fighting services to win the war

Time and time again during these last few months I have seen for myself the battered towns and cities of England and I have seen the British people facing this ordeal. I can say to them all that they may be justly proud of their race and nation. On every side I have seen a new and splendid spirit of good fellowship springing up in adversity, a real desire to share burdens and resources alike.

Out of all this suffering there is growing a harmony which we must carry forward into the days to come when we have endured to the end and victory is ours.

Then, when Christmas days are happy again and good will has come back to the world, we must hold fast to the spirit which binds us all together now. We shall need this spirit in each of our own lives as men and women and shall need it even more among the nations of the world.

We must go on thinking less about ourselves and more for one another; for so, and so only, can we hope to make the world a better place and life a worthier thing.

And now I wish you all a happy Christmas and a happier New Year. We may look forward to the new year with sober confidence.

We have surmounted a grave crisis. We do not underrate the dangers and difficulties which confront us still. But we take courage and comfort from the successes which our fighting men and their allies have won at heavy odds by land and air and sea.

The future will be hard. But our feet are planted on the path of victory, and with the help of God we shall make our way to justice and to peace.

Serious Note Stressed Also In Other Messages

London, Dec. 25 (AP)—The same serious note sounded by King George in his Christmas broadcast to the empire was stressed by A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty; Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary of State for Air, and Capt. H. D. R. Margesson, newly appointed War Minister, in messages to the fighting services, and by Queen Wilhelmina in a message to the German-held Netherlands and the Dutch East and West Indies.

The navy, Alexander said, has "charted the course to victory," but must "stick to it."

Sinclair, congratulating the R. A. F. on its "decisive victories in the skies," reminded the air force that "our task is less than half completed."

"Good Omens" In Libya

Margesson declared the successes of the army in Libya were "good omens" for the moment when the British army will "measure its strength against our main enemy."

Queen Wilhelmina told her subjects she was in a position to say prospects of victory had "improved greatly in recent months."

"We take up the burden of the new year," she said, "in the firm belief that God shall restore true peace to my kingdom and indeed to the whole world."

Christmas 'Bombing Truce' Acknowledged By Berlin

Berlin, Dec. 25 (AP)—A Christmas "bombing truce" in effect was acknowledged by the German high command today as it reported there had been no attacks on Britain since the raid on Manchester the night of December 23-24 and no retaliatory R. A. F. raids in the same period.

The assault on Manchester, Midlands industrial center, was "shown to be effective by the far-visible glow of fires," the daily communique said.

It also reported that a German speedboat, already credited with sinking two British ships, had accounted for a third, of 2,500 tons, in operations on December 23.

"Solid Front" Stressed

The German radio said German newspapers in Christmas Day editorials stressed the "solid front" formed by the armed forces and the people and gave prominence to the speech of Deputy Reichsminister Rudolf Hess in which he said the day surely would come when England would be at the end of her term.

The Berliner Boersen-Zeitung declared Germany realized that defeat of the British Empire, with strategic bases all over the world, could not be achieved in a few days.

The Lokalanzeiger, on the other hand, said the end of the struggle already "is in sight and German victory now is completely assured."

London Sings in Shelters On Quiet Christmas Night

Makes Merry in War Homes Deep Underground

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP).—The cockney—and cocky—English working folk made this Christmas night one to be remembered, possibly by the proportions of tomorrow's hangovers.

They figuratively "tore the lid off" the deep air-raid and subway shelters, where costermongers, charwomen, teamsters, shopgirls and factory workers have found safe retreat from German air bombs.

There were no bombs tonight, and the crowds laughed and sang and danced, always to merry tunes. The only Christmas carol was sung at the request of a stray American, but carols are not dancing tunes and the music soon swung back to the lively side. Some persons slept amid the din.

At one subway station a four-piece "pickup" orchestra made so much noise it had to be hushed when the stationmaster announced the trains.

Paper hats were everywhere, even cocked on the heads of snoring oldsters who had partaken enough of barley wine and beer. Many shelters contained Christmas trees. There were children clutching toys, and one gay foursome was playing bridge.

One old man got up and folded his blankets to make room for the dancers, remarking: "It's that or be trampled to death."

Londoners did not need to stay in the shelters, but most of them apparently wanted to pass Christmas night at home—and the shelters have been "home" since early September.

Lonely Londoners Call Soldiers In for Dinner

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP).—London men, separated from their wives and families, made a spontaneous Christmas gesture today.

Each engaged a table for two at a restaurant, then went out on the street to find a soldier, sailor or airman and take him to the table for Christmas dinner.

BLACKOUT SHROUDS BETHLEHEM RITES

Bombproof Gloom Replaces Usual Lights At Church Of Nativity

Even Bonfires In Shepherds' Fields Put Out Lest They Guide Raiders

[By the Associated Press]

Bethlehem, Palestine, Dec. 25—This little Judean city was shrouded in its first blackout in history while the ageless drama of Christ's birth was reenacted early today at the Church of the Nativity in bomb-proofed gloom instead of the traditional blaze of Christmas light.

Even the bonfires in shepherds' fields about the city were put out early—lest they guide Italian air raiders to the little city.

Pilgrims Move By Starlight

And thus the line of pilgrims moved slowly and carefully into the town by starlight—for the observance just as the three wise men came centuries ago by the light of the Star of Bethlehem to worship the Christ child.

All other holy places in this shrine of Christendom were blacked o' too, and filled with the gloom of war time.

But no feeling of futility was apparent among the hundreds of pilgrims at the Church of the Nativity.

Instead, peace was their message, peace on earth and good will to all men.

Italian Prisoners Mark Christmas In Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Dec. 25 (AP)—Camped in tents behind barbed wire, hundreds of Italian prisoners taken by the British in Egypt's western desert offensive were given a real taste of Christmas in the Holy Land today.

A Catholic chaplain attached to the British army arranged special midnight masses for the prisoners who also received holiday food prepared by a former New York hotel chef appointed especially to cook for them.

Second Contingent Arrives

A second contingent of Fascist captives arrived in Palestine yesterday and marched through Haifa's streets today.

Many of them expressed surprise that Haifa was still standing, since they said they had thought the Italian air force had demolished the city completely.

An Italian corporal among the new group said Fascist troops in Egypt had known nothing of Italian reversals in the Greek campaign.

Christmas Day At The Front Described By An Eyewitness

Nurses Sing Carols But There Is No Tree In Snow-bound Greek Hospital In Albania

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Correspondent

Somewhere on the Southern Albanian Front, Dec. 25—Candles burned in stone shrines along a darkened mountain road behind the Greek front lines; snow piled up on gun emplacements and soldiers struggled through waist-deep drifts to bring their comrades shells and food this Christmas Day.

This is written in an army hospital reeking of disinfectants and crowded with men. Some arrived on Christmas Eve, in jolting, battered ambulances. Others came in today. Now they lie in places on the floor.

Just twelve feet outside the hospital entrance is a bomb crater, reminder of an Italian air raid. But no Fascist bomber could fly through today's snowstorm to this station.

Some months ago this building was a school. Now, on the blackboards of its classrooms, wounded soldiers have scrawled cartoons depicting their military victories, embellishing them with soberly poetic epitaphs. Attendants bandaged half a dozen wounded men.

"Thank God that up to now we have had enough medical supplies," the surgeon said.

The freezing weather has taken a toll among both Greeks and Italians. It swells the flesh on men's limbs and cracks the skin open in bloody seams.

"If there were only enough wool socks and mittens for our men at the front," a medical officer said, "we would not have so many casualties."

Christmas celebration? Last night—Christmas Eve—nurses sang carols for the patients. But there was no Christmas tree.

"We Greeks decorated trees for New Year's, not Christmas," the officer explained.

He pointed to a picture of Christ, in cardinal and gold colors, propped up on his table.

"We pray God to save Greece," he said.

Swiss Celebrate Christmas With Bigger Rations

Blackout Rule Also Relaxed for Day in One of Least Afflicted Lands of Europe

BERNE, Dec. 25 (AP).—Neutral Switzerland eased up on her rationing and blackout restrictions today for what probably was the fullest Christmas celebration in continental Europe.

Lights glowed on snowy Alpine slopes and in the valleys throughout Christmas Eve and on into Christmas morning. Thrifty citizens tucked napkins under their chins for huge dinners, as dividends from government ration cards allowed them a bit of cream and a bit more butter for the holidays.

The German-speaking Swiss were better off than Germans of the Reich; the Italian-speaking Swiss had an edge on the Fascists and the French-speaking Swiss outdid their French neighbors as far as the Christmas celebration was concerned.

But there was the shadow of war shortages even in Switzerland. Everywhere were such telltale warnings as a reminder to save every scrap of tinfoil which might come on bottle tops or Christmas package wrappings.

Generalissimo Henri Guisan, with an honor guard of torch-bearing soldiers and civilians, climbed through heavy snow to a church in the Swiss Jura Mountains to attend typical rural services.

Employees of the Swiss telephone, telegraph, radio and postal organizations worked overtime handling holiday messages from and to all parts of Europe. For Switzerland, since the war, has become the Continental communications center, with expanding radio links to the Americas and Asia.

Pope Prays for Return of Peace

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 25 (AP).—Pope Pius XII prayed today for the return of peace to the world after saying Christmas mass at 7:30 a. m. in the private chapel of his apartment. Then he read greetings from sovereigns and chiefs of state and received the children of his nephews for an exchange of gifts around a Christmas tree in the Papal Palace.

French Super-Cabinet Seen

Vichy Says Group May Direct Most Important Government Policy

VICHY, Dec. 25 (AP).—Informed sources said today there was a possibility a French super-cabinet might take over direction of the most important government policy. Navy Minister Admiral Jean Darlan, Gen. Charles Huntziger, War Minister, and Pierre-Etienne Flandin, Foreign Minister, were mentioned as possible members.

Darlan is in Paris for French-German negotiations, which are reported returning gradually to the stage they had reached before the ousting of Vice-Premier Pierre Laval.

Wire Cut, Nazis Fine City

VICHY, Dec. 25 (AP).—The newspaper "Depeche de Tours" said today the population of Orleans, in German-occupied France, had been fined 1,000,000 francs after a German army telephone wire was cut.

SPANISH BATTERIES HIT FRENCH PLANE

Five Occupants Killed as Ship Crashes in Mediterranean Near Gibraltar

RESCUE ATTEMPTS FUTILE

'Important Personality' Said, Without Confirmation, to Have Been Passenger

LA LINEA, Spain, Dec. 25 (AP)—Five occupants of a French military plane that was hit today by Spanish anti-aircraft fire were killed when the plane crumpled and plunged into the Mediterranean Sea.

Rumors that prominent French politicians were aboard the plane, which was believed to have come from French Morocco, could not be confirmed.

Spanish military authorities said the plane evidently was unable to find the Gibraltar airfield, where it was trying to land, and continued eastward over Spanish territory.

Spanish batteries immediately found the plane, which broke up in the air and plumeted into the sea.

High seas prevented British and Spanish launches from going to the rescue.

A wing bearing French markings and part of the gasoline tank washed up on a near-by beach. The plane apparently was on an observation flight from a North African base.

It was believed the plane was seeking to land at Gibraltar, a few miles to the west.

Earlier a group of unidentified planes flew over La Linea and drew anti-aircraft fire.

U. S. Embassy Clerk At Paris Declines To Comment On Her Detention By Nazis

Lisbon, Dec. 25 (AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Deegan, of Asheville, N. C., the United States Embassy clerk at Paris who was detained more than a week by German officials on a charge of aiding British officers to flee the occupied zone, arrived here last night with "no comment on all that I've been through."

She has been transferred to the legation staff here.

"My greatest worry was about what my child and mother were thinking. They will be happy to hear from me on Christmas Eve, and my greatest thought right now is how proud I am to be born an American."

9 Marines Quit Hospital, Hurt Fighting Italians

Brawl Followed Dispute Over Shanghai Cafe Table

SHANGHAI, Dec. 25 (AP).—Nine United States marines and three sailors from the gunboat Luzon, who were injured in a Christmas Eve fight with Italian marines in a Shanhai cafe, left the hospital today in time to enjoy turkey dinners.

Swollen jaws and missing teeth gave evidence of a free-swinging battle, but both sides refused details of the squabble, including the number of Italians injured. So far as could be learned, the clash was the outcome of a clash dispute over a table.

It was understood that the incident was settled amicably by American and Italian officers after military police of both countries had stopped the fighting.

Meanwhile, American churches were crowded for morning services. Sports occupied the afternoon for most Americans still remaining here.

Japanese Claim Navy Downed 1,928 Planes

Tokyo, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Imperial headquarters, in a Christmas summary, declared the Japanese navy's air force had down 1,928 Chinese planes since the outbreak of the war in July, 1937.

Of this number, the communique added, 1,670 "certainly" were lost and 258 were "probably lost," while the Japanese lost only 153 planes.

The report said the Japanese dropped, 8,519 tons of bombs in 20,814 raids on Chinese objectives in 1940.

The communique also said the navy had rendered innocuous 6,518 mines in the Yangtze and Pearl rivers, Bias Bay and waters off Swatow since July 1937.

Japanese Ambassador To Make Tour Of East

Tokyo, Dec. 25 (AP)—Domei, Japanese news agency, said in a broadcast today that Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, named last month as Japan's Ambassador to Washington, would visit Peiping, Nanking, Shanghai and Hsinking, capital of Manchoukuo, to obtain first-hand information on conditions in China before his departure for the United States.

Domei said Admiral Nomura would arrive in Hsinking by plane Friday.

Christmas Day Quiet At Free China Capital

Chungking, China, Dec. 25 (AP)—Free China greeted its fourth wartime Christmas with a spirit of quiet optimism.

No large celebrations were held here, even by the foreign community, because of an almost complete lack of luxuries and a feeling that wartime is not an occasion for merry-making.

China's foremost Christian, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, remained at home, but his Christmas was somewhat saddened by the absence of his wife in Hongkong, where she is receiving medical treatment.

The Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, gave a party last night to leading Chinese Christians, while Chungking's only turkey dinner was served aboard the United States gunboat Tutuila.

Japanese Electrify Walls Of Peiping

Peiping, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Japanese army published a Christmas Day order by Major General Hasegawa warning this city's million residents than anyone caught crossing the city's walls would be shot on sight and also that the walls were electrically wired to kill.

The order climaxed nearly a month of tension with the city under virtual martial law as a result of the assassination of a Japanese officer November 29 and large-scale desertions by Chinese "puppet troops" who joined guerrilla bands preying upon the Japanese.

Australians at Singapore

SINGAPORE, Dec. 25 (AP).—Australian War Minister Percy C. Spender arrived here today with Lieut. Gen. V. A. H. Sturdee, chief of the Australian general staff, to confer with British military officials. Australia "has a vital interest in Singapore," he said, "and we are proud to have Australians in the fighting services here."

TOKYO, Thursday, Dec. 26 (AP)—Emperor Hirohito, formally opening the Japanese Imperial Diet, told members today that "the prevailing unprecedented disturbances of the world appear to be endless; we, therefore, wish the entire nation to be perfectly united to assist ourselves in conducting the affairs of State."

The Emperor noted that 'intercourse between this empire and other treaty powers has become closer."

"The State Ministers," he said, "are instructed to introduce before the Diet the budget for the 1941-42 fiscal year and for temporary military expenditure. You are requested to deliberate on and approve it in a cooperative spirit, paying attention to the current serious situation."

After a brief session tomorrow the Diet will recess until Jan. 20.

WINDSOR FOR JUST PEACE

Duke in Radio Talk to U.S. Utters Prayer for Sane Settlement

The Duke of Windsor in a Christmas radio message to the United States last night uttered a prayer for a settlement of the European war based on "justice, sanity and good will," according to the National Broadcasting Company.

The former British King, now Governor of the Bahama Islands, expressed the hope that "the end of hostilities be not too far distant" and prayed that God grant to those in power "wisdom and vision to prepare for the colossal readjustment that looms ahead."

The Duke, speaking from Nassau over the combined N. B. C. networks, expressed the "sincere good wishes" of the Duchess and himself to the people of America, to whom he said they feel very close. The Duke said:

"Great Britain has again become entangled in the strifes and quarrels of the Old World, where the teachings of the church and the message of Christmas have not been heeded, and where leaders of great peoples have stirred up in the peaceful masses feelings of hatred which fundamentally they neither feel nor understand."

British Ship Reports Being Pursued And Shelled By Submarine

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—A run for her life by the British steamer Everleigh to escape the shells of a pursuing submarine was told today in two terse distress signals.

In her first appeal for aid the 5,222-ton freighter reported she was being shelled by the submarine approximately 650 miles west of the northern tip of Scotland. Three hours later Mackay Radio picked up this message from the vessel at 10.50 A. M. (E.S.T.):

"Still being shelled and chased by submarine."

The position given—latitude 59.20 north, longitude 21.20 west—was about forty miles northeast of the spot where the ship was first attacked.

Hitler Visit To Channel Coast Guns Reported

British Radio Says News Came From Slip Overheard In German Broadcast

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—The British radio reported tonight in a broadcast heard here by CBS that Adolf Hitler apparently had visited the Channel coast during the day.

It said the information came from a "slip" overheard in a German broadcast that included a speech of welcome when Hitler visited a battery of long-range guns "such as occasionally toss shells across the Channel."

Nazi Ship In U. S. Port Receives Many Gifts

Two Truckloads Delivered To Arauca, Tied Up In Florida, From This Country And Germany

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Dec. 25 (AP)—There was Christmas joy aboard the German freighter Arauca even though the forty-four crew members had not seen their families for more than a year. The motorship has been tied up here since last December 19, when she barely made port ahead of a pursuing British warship.

Two truckloads of gifts were delivered for distribution to the men as they gathered around a decorated tree in the salon. Capt. Frederic Stengler said the presents came from all parts of the United States and from Germany. Many, he added, were sent by unknown persons.

"I am overwhelmed, as are my men, at the generous gestures on the part of so many American citizens in sending the presents," the skipper declared. He distributed an $8 bonus to each member of the crew.

Mattern Is in Montreal With Gift Bombing Plane

Arrives With Christmas Present From California Workers

MONTREAL, Dec. 25 (AP).—Jimmy Mattern, veteran American flyer, dropped down to near-by St. Hubert airport today, bringing the British Empire a Christmas present.

Mattern landed early in the afternoon, piloting a big camouflaged Hudson bomber—gift of the workers of the Lockheed Vega plant in California to Great Britain. The ship, Spirit of Lockheed Vega Employees', functioned perfectly all the way from Burbank, Calif., where 10,000 persons gathered to watch the take-off, Mattern said.

With Mattern in the twin-engined 1,200-horsepower bomber was Maurice de Smet as co-pilot and engine mechanic. From Detroit to Montreal, the last leg of the flight, the plane also carried another American pilot who was making a survey of flying conditions between the two cities.

PEACE MOVE BY U.S. URGED BY WHEELER

Senator Wants Attempt Made Before Britain Gets New Assistance

Montanan Says Administration Should Stop Evading Neutrality Law

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 25—A call for a determined effort by the United States to "force peace in Europe" was sounded today by Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) as he returned to the Capital to prepare for the session of Congress opening next month.

"The President should make a determined effort to bring the warring nations of Europe together," said Wheeler. "He should insist that a just peace be worked out.

"There are two views about the European war prevalent in Washington. First is the group which wants to see the war continued until the German Government is exterminated. And they want to see that done even if it means total war on our part. . . . Second, there are those of us who want to see Great Britain win. . . . But we believe that peace could be brought about at this time . . . if a sincere effort is made."

Calls Aid Evasion Of Law

This effort, the Montanan said, should be made before any additional aid is granted to Great Britain. In speaking of assistance to that country, he reiterated previous assertions that he regarded the President's plan to lend or lease arms as "an evasion of our Neutrality Act."

"Our people are not gullible enough to believe that the munitions will ever be returned or replaced," he said. "They know that if Great Britain would not pay us what she owed us after the last war she not only would not, but could not, replace the property we would lease her now.

"This Administration ought to stop seeking to evade the law—either the letter or the spirit—relating to neutrality. . . .

"If the officers of the Government, whether they be high or low, set an example by evading the laws, we should not complain if there is a wholesale breakdown of respect for law and order in the country."

Wants A Just Peace

"The President should insist that a just peace be worked out," the Senator continued. "In my judgment, this Government of ours could force peace in Europe at this time."

Wheeler was the second Senator in two days to advocate steps looking toward possible peace. Senator Tydings (Dem., Md.) suggested yesterday that the United States ask Great Britain and the Axis powers for a statement of their peace terms, so this country could determine for itself whether there was any basis for negotiation of a "just peace." Tydings emphasized that he was not advocating any "peace of appeasement."

There was no indication, however, that the Roosevelt Administration considered the time ripe for any overtures.

Sends Message To Fleet

Admiral Harold R. Stark said in a Christmas message to the fleet:

"We must exert every ounce of our national energy to insure that the words 'too late' are not chalked up as the final reckoning on our own national scoreboard.'

"Excellent progress," the chief of naval operations reported, is being made on the two-ocean navy.

"We often speak of the cost of preparedness," he said, "but it is trivial compared to the cost of unpreparedness as witnessed and now realized by many nations abroad. We must not repeat their mistake."

Says Roosevelt Can Point Way To End World War

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, said today that "we will know exactly how to end this war" if President Roosevelt "takes us wholly into his confidence" next Sunday night.

The President is scheduled to speak at 9.30 P. M. that evening from Washington on "the present emergency." The address will be broadcast.

"President Roosevelt is going to tell the country how and what he feels about aid to Britain," Marshall said in a statement issued here and published in the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette, of which he is editor.

Will Know How To Act

"If he takes us wholly into his confidence, we will know how best and most quickly to act in behalf of humanity everywhere. In short, we will know exactly how to end this war. And within weeks, if not days."

Declaring attempts had been made to "frustrate" and "injure" the No Foreign War Committee, Marshall continued:

"Slimily, sneakingly, in dark corners, in sordid centers of un-Americanism, in certain places of great power there proceed at this moment the schemings of men who would wreck the No Foreign War Committee. Why? The answer is a deadly one, and it, too, has been proved in every known and necessary manner. It will be made public if I am forced to take that action.

"There are people who for reasons other than those grounded in the welfare of the people of the United States and the world—all the people—want the United States not only to give away its defenses, but to give them away and then get into this latest chapter of Europe's endless political, ideological and economic war. . . .

Want To Keep America Out

The No Foreign War Committee is fighting only to keep America out of another chapter of a conflict born of individual and governmental ambitions, on whose altars humanity is sacrificed.

"Our committee knows," the statement added, "that once the belligerents of this world understand that Americans are for America first, second, third, last and always, and that they are willing and ready to fight anywhere for priceless principles, the symbols of which are Calvary and a crown of thorns, there will be lasting peace.

"But for our unwritten commitments prior to the resumption of war in Europe, more than one year ago, there might have been no resumption."

Charges U. S. Is Being Forced Into World War

Cincinnati, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Catholic Archbishop of Cincinnati, said today that a minority of ten per cent. who favor war "is forcing America subtly and cleverly into the world conflict," while the "majority of ninety per cent. favoring peace is standing by, silent and helpless."

Archbishop McNicholas spoke at a pontifical high mass.

"The ninety per cent. has in its power now, before it is too late," he said, "to select leaders in every State who will give, in their name, a most positive mandate to Congress to keep us out of war, both in Europe and the Far East."

Norse Prince And Princess Entertained By Roosevelts

Eat Typical American Dinner At White House After President Gives Presents To Children

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 25—President and Mrs. Roosevelt today entertained Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha of Norway at a typical American Christmas dinner.

The royal refugees and their three children—Harold, 3; Ragnhild, 10, and Astri, 8—were last-minute guests at the White House.

Princess Martha and the youngsters have been living on a near-by Maryland estate since they came to this country after the German invasion of their homeland. Prince Olav arrived Monday to spend Christmas with his family before going to Canada.

The Roosevelts invited the Norwegian youngsters "to come over and look at the tree" with the only two children spending Christmas at the White House this year—Frankie Roosevelt, 2-year-old son of Franklin, Jr., and Diana Hopkins, 8-year-old daughter of Harry Hopkins, former Secretary of Commerce.

The President was awakened at an early hour by Frankie and Diana, who wanted to know what Santa (impersonated last night by Mrs. Roosevelt) had left in their stockings.

Nine Other Stockings

Nine other stockings hung on the President's mantle. They were for President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Sara Roosevelt, the President's 87-year-old mother; Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt, his sister-in-law; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.; Harry Hopkins; Major Harry Hooker, a friend of the family, and Falla, 9-month-old Scottie.

Each contained a toy, candy and an orange or an apple.

Out of the President's sock came a toy that Falla eyed with concern, a six-inch mechanical Scottie. Falla received a rubber bone and rubber toys.

Attend Church

Earlier in the day, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, their family and guests attended services at the First Congregational Church. The service was sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and was participated in by 137 Protestant churches.

The President heard the Rev. William R. Barnhart, executive secretary of the Washington federation, say that "the church can only save suffering, struggling, bleeding humanity by uniting in a holy Blitzkrieg." In a "Christmas salutation" before the main sermon, Mr. Barnhart added:

"On this holy day dedicated to peace and good will let us remember that the church should always stand for reconciliation, not appeasement. Reconciliation involves atonement; we do not want appeasement because it can blink at evil."

Up To Humanity

Bishop Adna W. Leonard of the Methodist Church, who delivered the sermon, said it was up to humanity to rediscover Christ to end wars, abolish poverty and establish social justice.

The grown-ups at the White House opened their Christmas presents in the afternoon after dinner. There was a huge stack for the President. Gifts of food were given to orphanages and welfare homes.

As usual, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt talked to their absent children by telephone. Anna (Mrs. John Boettiger) was in Seattle, James in Los Angeles, Elliott in Fort Worth, Texas, and John in Boston.

President's Greeting

Last night, President Roosevelt sent forth a "Happy Christmas" greeting to the nation in an address warning against cynicism and defeatism and praying for a "peaceful chance" for humanity to strive for world betterment.

Lighting a thirty-foot Christmas tree at dusk near the White House, he observed sadly that except for little children, Christmas, 1940, could not be "merry."

Apparent In Speech

"But for most of us it can be a happy Christmas," he continued, "if by happiness we mean that we have done with doubts, that we have set our hearts against fear, that we still believe in the golden rule of all mankind, that we intend to live more purely in the spirit of Christ, and that by our works, as well as our words, we will strive forward in faith and in hope and in love."

The thought o' conditions in other lands where the Christmas spirit burns less brightly obviously hung heavily on the President's heart. This was apparent in his address to the throng of 8,000 and to those who listened to the nation-wide broadcast, and in some extemporaneous remarks preceding his speech.

In these Mr. Roosevelt proposed to have the tree and the spectators inside the White House grounds next year and to deliver his address from the White House porch, "if we are all here." The qualification recalled his remark upon leaving Warm Springs recently, when he expressed a hope to return in March "if the world survives."

The ceremony this year took place, as usual, in a park known as the ellipse between the White House and the Washington Monument, where a living cedar had been decked with ornaments and lights which sprang to vari-colored life when the President pressed a button.

"Progress Goes On Forever"

Declaring it "unintelligent" to be defeatist, Mr. Roosevelt said: "Crisis may beget crisis, but the progress underneath does not wholly halt—it does go forward."

He saw "a definite betterment" for the human race compared with the days when Charles Dickens wrote the "Christman Carol," which Mr. Roosevelt reads to his family every Christmas Eve, but he said there still was "much—oh so much—to do."

"Most of all we ask a chance to do it—yes, a peaceful chance to do it," he continued.

Wish To Do It "Voluntary Way"

"We want to do it the voluntary way—and most human beings in all the world want to do it the voluntary way. We do not want to have the way imposed on the world by the conquest of the world by the sword."

He intimated there was no isolation for anyone from wars, remarking:

"Mankind is all one—and what happens in distant lands tomorrow will leave its mark on the happiness of our Christmases to come."

The President drove to the ceremony with his wife and mother; his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.; Harry L. Hopkins, former Commerce Secretary, and the latter's 8-year-old daughter, Diana.

ATHENS, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Royal Air Force issued this communiqué today:

Valona airdrome [in Albania], with many aircraft on the ground, was successfully attacked by R. A. F. formations. The target, as well as the harbor and town, was covered with low clouds and our aircraft dived through them, taking the Valona defenses completely by surprise.

While a number of our aircraft bombed enemy aircraft on the runway, others attacked the hangars, airdrome buildings and aircraft. During this low-level attack the target was also machine-gunned. When our aircraft left the airdrome was enveloped in palls of smoke.

A cruiser which put up an anti-aircraft barrage was heavily machine-gunned.

From all operations our aircraft returned safely.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 25 (AP)—The text of a Royal Air Force communiqué:

Raids were carried out by bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. yesterday on the airdromes at Temimi and El Gazala in the Western Desert. All bombs fell well within the target area, but the full extent of the damage could not be observed.

Our fighters maintained active patrols throughout the day, but no enemy aircraft were engaged.

A large formation of enemy bombers escorted by fighters raided Solum, causing slight damage and a number of casualties.

In Italian East Africa an aircraft of the Rhodesian squadron, while on a pamphlet raid on Kassala [in the Sudan], met an enemy fighter and shot it down in flames.

Guna [in Ethiopia] was raided, bombs causing an ammunition dump to explode. Buildings were set on fire at Buri [in Eritrea]. At Heis storehouses and dumps were attacked and considerable damage caused by low-dive bombing.

Numerous reconnaissance flights were carried out with success. From all operations during the period under review there was no loss of R. A. F. aircraft or personnel.

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued the following communiqué today:

During daylight yesterday there was very little enemy activity over this country and no bombs were dropped.

The enemy front-line bases have been subjected to intense bombardments. In one air base explosions and fires were noticed.

The enemy bombed the city and port of Tripoli, causing some damage.

On the Greek front bad weather hindered operations. Attempted enemy attacks have been repulsed.

A detachment of our fighter planes, while on a protective cruise, actively opposed an enemy raid over Valona, machine-gunning and pursuing some Blenheim [British] planes, which withdrew from combat.

In East Africa, on the Sudanese border, one of our scouting parties was attacked by armed motor trucks on Dec. 23 and forced them to fall back with losses.

NAZI TROOPS TIGHTEN RULE IN RUMANIA

300,000 TROOPS SENT TO EAST VIA HUNGARY

Berlin Orders Bucharest to Speed Up Planes and Submarines for Reich—Show-down With Russia Now Is Expected.

Budapest, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Nazi leaders in Rumania were reported in diplomatic dispatches today to have ordered a big speed-up in Rumania's manufacture of war materials as crowded trains, carrying the vanguard of some 300,000 fresh German troops, rolled across Hungary into the Balkan kingdom of King Michael.

The vast movement of troops with artillery, bridge-building equipment, tanks and other motorized vehicles, stirred speculation on the possibility of a show-down between Powers with conflicting interests in the Balkans. Travelers arriving here reported passing lines of troop trains stretching for 100 miles.

The diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest said that two large Rumanian industrial plants would manufacture planes for Germany, while a submarine yard already in operation at Galati has been ordered to increase its production.

Gauleiter Is Appointed.

The mass shifting of troops and the speed-up order coincided with the appointment of Baron Manfred von Killinger, German Minister to Slovakia, to the same post in Rumania. Informed sources said that the baron was prepared to rule Rumania as virtual Nazi Gauleiter or district leader.

Although Germany has taken no hand in Rumania's civil administration thus far, the Bucharest reports asserted that the Reich was prepared to take over complete control.

The Turkish Minister to Bucharest, Hamdulla Submi Tanriover, arrived at Ankara, the capital of Turkey, to confer on the fast-developing Balkan situation. Some members of the Soviet Legation at Bucharest simultaneously prepared to leave for Moscow.

Reports from the Rumanian capital said that Russian Minister Lavrentiev for the last week has been engaged in a series of important diplomatic conferences there, and that Russian troops were concentrating on the river Prut.

Military experts estimated that Germany already had about 100,000 soldiers in Rumania, ostensibly guarding the oil fields and training the Rumanian army in modern methods of warfare.

To Continue Till January 31.

The first official disclosure of the new massed Nazi movement came in the announcement of the Hungarian Railway Administration that passenger train service would be specially restricted to clear the way for the passage of 1,160 troop trains between now and January 31—at the rate of 31 or 32 a day.

The disclosure followed closely upon news that Russian, German, Italian and Rumanian experts who had been conferring for nearly two months in Bucharest had finally gone home after failing to agree on control of the strategically important mouths of the Danube River—the Reich's supply line to the East. Officially it was said that the meetings would be resumed at the end of January, but informed spokesmen declared that there was a wide breach between the Axis and the Russian representatives, the latter firmly insisting on Soviet control of the outlets.

Reports from Bucharest quoted Soviet diplomats as declaring openly that the Red Army was preparing to occupy all the mouths of the Danube and the Rumanian province of Moldavia as far west as the Siretul River after the first of the year. The Rumanian police sought to stem an exodus of Moldavian people by denying what they called these alarmist rumors.

May Be Aimed at Greece.

These rumors, however, coincided with diplomatic reports of recent protests on the part of Moscow against "the general unfriendly Rumanian attitude," and observers recalled that similar protests to Bucharest preceded the Russian repossession of the Rumanian provinces of Bessarabia and northern Bukovina last summer.

Russia already controls the northernmost outlet of the Danube by virtue of heavy guns set up at Ismail, Bessarabia. The Rumanians have closed the Sulina and the St. George outlets except to shipping with special Rumanian pilots.

Diplomats here speculated that the new German troop movements may be connected closely with the Danube dispute—perhaps designed to re-enforce the Nazi position by a show of strength. But they also saw the possibility of action against Turkey in a German drive to the east, or of German aid to the hard-pressed Italians by attacking Greece through Bulgaria.

Delegates in Fist Fights.

The theory that the troop movements concerned Russia was given some color by reports of travelers that railroad traffic in eastern Germany was also being disrupted by the passage of troop trains toward the Soviet frontier and into Slovakia.

Rumanian Army officers were quoted here as declaring that in the event of open trouble between Germany and Russia, Rumania would co-operate actively with the Nazis. They pointed to notices in the Bucharest newspapers warning the public to take seriously Rumania's pledge of full military assistance to Germany.

Regarding the breakdown of German-Italian-Russian discussions to determine who should control the mouths of the Danube, diplomatic sources said that the Italian and Russian delegates had engaged in fist fights and refused to speak to one another when the conference broke up.

The Russians objected to Italian participation, contending that the Fascists had no interest in the Danube, but Mussolini's representatives announced that the Rome Government had purchased two small tugboats to fly Italian flags on the Danube.

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Dec. 26—Concentration of Russian forces along the Rumanian frontier was reported under way today as Germany poured the initial units of 300,000 fresh troops into Rumania and ordered a speedup in the Balkan kingdom's production of war materials.

A spurt of diplomatic activity in southeastern European capitals accompanied this military activity, believed by some observers to presage a possible showdown between powers with conflicting interests in the Balkans.

The Russian concentrations were reported along the Prut river, which became the dividing line between Rumania and the Soviet Union after Moscow obtained Bessarabia and northern Bucovina from the Bucharest Government by ultimatum last June 27.

Pro-Axis Officers Retired

Diplomatic reports from Sofia tonight said that twenty-seven high-ranking Bulgarian army officers who wanted Bulgaria to enter the war on the side of the Axis had been put on the retired list by order of King Boris.

The officers are reported to have argued Bulgaria should fight the Greeks and the Turks in order to be rewarded by Germany with an outlet to the Ægean and large slices of Macedonia "after the Axis victory."

Boris' action was interpreted as in line with his steadfast refusal to compromise Bulgaria's neutrality. Some persons said that unless he changes his mind, the Nazis will have to attack Bulgaria in order to get at Turkey and Greece, or first obtain the monarch's abdication.

Reds Report Mysterious Bucharest Airport Fire

Moscow, Dec. 26 (AP)—Reports of a mysterious fire at the Bucharest airport and mounting death rate among children of Rumania appeared in the Russian press today.

The Government organ Izvestia said the airport fire was being investigated by Rumanian officials. Newspapers here previously have portrayed as sabotage reported explosions and fires in Rumanian oil fields.

Pravda said four out of every ten children in Rumania were dying of tuberculosis and malnutrition, and in a like vein Izvestia published a survey purporting to show extreme poverty and suffering among Rumanian peasants.

"Reply To Roosevelt Plan"

The army newspaper, meanwhile, interpreted the formation of a German-Italian-Japanese mixed commission to execute terms of the Axis triple alliance as a "reply to the new Roosevelt plan for aid to England."

The appointment of Lord Halifax as Ambassador to the United States was viewed as "a step to strengthen further American cooperation," both politically and militarily.

"The development of Anglo-American military cooperation has brought sharpening antagonism between United States and the Axis powers," the newspaper added.

Germans Take Big Guns And Tanks Into Rumania

Budapest, Dec. 26 (AP)—German troops moved across Hungary into Rumania today in special trains with artillery, bridge-building equipment, tanks and other motorized vehicles. The Hungarian railway administration announced passenger service would be "specially restricted" to clear the way for passage of 1,160 troop trains by January 31.

Under the German-ordered speedup in Rumania's war production, two large Rumanian industrial plants will be devoted to the manufacture of warplanes for Germany, diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest said. A submarine-building yard already in operation at Galati, these advices added, has been ordered to increase its production.

All this German military activity coincided with the shift of Baron Manfred von Killinger, Nazi Minister to Slovakia, to the same post at Bucharest. He is prepared to rule Rumania as Adolf Hitler's virtual Gauleiter (district leader), informed sources asserted. He formerly was consul general in San Francisco.

To Take Complete Control

Diplomatic reports from Bucharest said the Germans were prepared to take over complete control of Rumania's civil administration. Heretofore the approximately 100,000 German soldiers already in Rumania have been used only to guard vital sources of oil supply and to train the Rumanian army in modern methods of warfare, Germans and Rumanians explained.

The German troop movement became known following news that a stalemate had been reached at the Russian - German - Italian - Rumanian conference called to decide which nation or group of powers should control the all-important mouths of the Danube—Germany's supply line to the East.

Wide Gulf Reported

The conference recessed after two months and it was said officially it would be resumed at the end of January, but informed quarters declared there was a wide gulf between the Axis delegates on one hand and the Russian representatives on the other.

On the diplomatic front, the Turkish Minister to Bucharest, Hamdulla Submi Tanriover, arrived in Ankara today to confer with Turkish officials. Simultaneously, some members of the Soviet Legation in Bucharest prepared to leave for Moscow.

Russian Minister Lavrentiev was said in reports from the Rumanian capital to have been engaged in important conferences there for the last week.

Say Troops Are Moving

BERLIN, Dec. 26 (AP)—As regards foreign reports of substantial increases in German troop movements toward Rumania, German informants said today that more troops were moving in but that a layman could easily misjudge the amount of transportation required now even for small units of troops with heavy weapons.

Rumanian Rail Wrecks

Bucharest, Rumania, Dec. 26 (AP)—With Rumanian railways carrying especially heavy German military traffic, seven persons were killed and scores injured today in two passenger train collisions.

One occurred near Bucharest, the other near Timisoara. Police started investigations, suspecting sabotage.

German military trains are moving into the country from Hungary in great numbers.

SOFIA DEMANDS FOR GREEK LAND GIVEN ATHENS

"Bulgaria's" Territorial Claims" Delivered By Foreign Minister

[By the Associated Press]

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 26—The Bulgarian Government has "acquainted" Greece with the "character of Bulgaria's territorial claims," members of the parliamentary foreign affairs committee said tonight they had been informed by Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff.

They said that Popoff did not specify whether Greece was told before or after the start of the Italian war against Greece and that he also did not state what further action, if any, the Bulgarian Government intends to take.

Since the World War, Bulgaria has claimed an outlet to the Ægean Sea through the Greek port of Dede Agach (Alexandroupolis). This claim has been officially advanced by the Government.

Call For Macedonia

Individual deputies, political parties and their leaders also from time to time have called publicly for parts of Greek Macedonia.

It was learned that during a meeting of the parliamentary foreign affairs committee some deputies called on Popoff to line Bulgaria definitely with the Axis. Members said he failed to reply, but that he did promise to take "drastic action" against what he called the "growing Communist activity" in Bulgaria.

In this connection it was learned that handbills, pushed under the door of every house in Sofia, had urged Bulgarians to follow the policies of Soviet Russia and shun Germany, promising that Russia then would "reward" Bulgaria.

Britain Doubles Invasion Guard With Mist Blanketing Channel

Army Patrols Beaches With Machine Guns —Hitler at Front With Von Brauchitsch —Thames Raid Ends Yule Truce.

London, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—British guards on the channel coast were doubled today against the possibility of a lightning German thrust through the mist covering the now calm Strait of Dover.

Picked troops armed with machine guns and other automatic weapons combed the beaches and watched every cleft of the chalk cliffs of the Dover region.

Traffic along the coast was halted at barricades and drivers and passengers searched. Even soldiers and sailors in uniform were required to show identification cards.

Attack in Thames Estuary.

Meanwhile Britain's bomb-free Christmas holiday ended today when a single German plane made an afternoon attack on the Isle of Sheppey in the Thames Estuary. There was little damage and no casualties, the Government announced.

However, well into this third bombless night in London there was no sign of a renewal of the general German air attack on Britain.

No bombs have been dropped on London since the sirens last were heard at 1:20 A. M. Monday and the Royal Air Force refrained from activity over Germany since the night of December 23-24.

The only incident of the unofficial Christmas truce was the shooting down of a German plane off the Orkney Islands, off northern Scotland, by the fleet air arm and the capture of its four-man crew. Up until 2 P. M. today no German planes had crossed the British coast.

Warning Is Recalled.

Britons, however, recalled Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch's Christmas Eve address to German troops which was taken to indicate that Adolf Hitler's plans for an invasion of England by no means had been scrapped.

Meanwhile today the Supply Ministry announced that key men in the British arms factories took advantage of the Christmas Day recess from operations—and bombing—to do vital repair and maintenance work on machines which had seldom stopped since the industrial speedup following Dunkirk.

At one arms factory which the Germans reported bombed to bits, the workers went on with their jobs, the ministry added, after every pane of glass had been blown from the skylights, and that when rain began the women workers tied umbrellas above their machines and kept on with their duties.

LONE PLANE RAIDS ISLE IN THAMES AREA

British, Fearing Invasion, Double Guards Along Channel

Hitler Continues Yuletide Tour Of French Coastal Front

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 26—Britain doubled the number of her guards along the misty Channel coast today and men patrolled every beach against the possibility of a German attempt at invasion.

Fears that the two-day Christmas holiday from death had been used by the Nazis to cloak preparations for such a spring across the Channel were expressed by unofficial but well-informed quarters.

Military circles said there was "no change" in the situation along the coast; nevertheless, troops carrying machine-guns kept a ceaseless surveillance, coastal traffic was halted by barricades, drivers and passengers were searched and uniformed soldiers and sailors were required to present identification cards.

Dover Strait Calm

The Strait of Dover was calm.

One informant said the absence of British aerial activity over the continental invasion ports had given the German staff forty-eight hours to assemble the troops, material and planes for a great thrust if one was indeed in prospect.

For Britain the day was one of an uneasy peace. Bombs from a single German plane—the first since early Monday morning—fell but once during the day, one the Isle of Sheppey in the Thames estuary. Thus an unofficial Christmas truce was ended. The Government said there was little damage and no casualties.

Diversion Move Seen

Some informed persons here suggested that German troop movements reported in the Balkans had the objective of diverting British attention from the home front, adding that the Nazis used a similar strategem before falling upon Belgium and the Netherlands.

These sources scoffed at the speculation that the German troop movements presaged an onslaught on Turkey and Greece, through Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, to lift British pressure on the Italians in Libya.

If the invasion is to come, it will be fought largely with British weapons, Sir Walter Layton of the Ministry of Supply emphasized in an interview.

He declared the expected "avalanche" of United States-made armaments would not reach here until the late summer of 1941 and that the apex of American production would not be reached until the winter of 1941-42.

Hitler Continues Tour On French Coast Front

Berlin, Dec. 26 (AP)—Adolf Hitler made a Christmas tour along the north French coastal front and extended his visit through today, DNB disclosed tonight.

He visited units of the army, navy and air force and also of "the organization Todt," engineering units which built the German Westwall and now are said to be installing more heavy batteries along the Channel coast.

New Year "Watchword"

He told his soldiers, said DNB, that the watchword for the New Year is:

"Before us lies the freedom and future of our folks, behind us lie past experiences and in us lies the unswervable decision that out of this war shall come a better and more beautiful Germany."

The coastal batteries which he visited had their muzzles turned on England.

Presence Minimized

But the presence of both Hitler and Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, the German commander in chief, at the front does not necessarily mean an immediate attempt to invade England, authorized sources said.

They remarked that both were at the German Westwall last Christmas but that no attack in that sector took place then.

Such assertions, however, did not divert interest here from foreign reports of substantial increases in German troop movements toward Rumania. German informants conceded that more troops were moving in, but said a layman could easily misjudge the amount of transportation required now even for small units of heavily weaponed troops.

Britain Is Told U. S. Aid Will Be At Peak in Year

Victory Sure, Layton Says, 'if We Hold Through '41, but 'Don't Expect a Miracle'

LONDON, Dec. 26 (AP)—Sir Walter T. Layton, of the Ministry of Supply, told Great Britain today that "if we hold on through 1941" the volume of United States production of war materials will reach an apex next winter "and is a certainty of ultimate victory."

However, Layton cautioned "Don't expect a miracle from the United States."

The time element and the difficulty of making America realize fully the "scale of war effort needed" were two factors, he said, which should show the British that the full weight of United States armament could not be expected until the late summer of 1941, reaching "avalanche proportions" next winter.

Layton, former member of the League of Nations consultative economic committee and a delegate to the 1927 World Economic Conference, said America's participation in the fight to "overwhelm Germany" made the term "non-belligerent" rather than "neutral" applicable to the United States.

All plans for American aid, Layton said, must be made on the assumption that the non-belligerent status of the United States would not alter in the next six months.

Evidently seeking to dampen the British belief that a flood of armaments would arrive from the United States next spring, Layton told the press that United States War Department orders had been placed between last July and October and indicated it would "take a long time" for these and the British orders to mature.

"America entered the World War in April, 1917, yet the full weight of her armaments program was not felt until the winter of 1918-'19," he commented.

He hinted that the United States did not realize fully the scale of armament necessary for the defeat of Germany." As yet, he said, "no orders have been placed on the scale ultimately required for victory."

Layton, who has just returned from a mission to the United States, said American sentiment against sending troops abroad was "very deep," partly for humanitarian reasons and partly because many Americans felt the United States would be mixing in European affairs in which the nation had no interest.

Negotiations for the Ministry of Supply, he said, had led to the "financial problem" with which the Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador at Washington, was wrestling when he died.

Lord Lothian died, Layton said, in the belief that Britian and the United States had "one strategy" in the war.

He said the Ambassador aimed his final speech at countering a feeling of depression in the United States over the German bombing of Coventry and other cities. Layton said this feeling had been "diminished" by British successes in the Middle East and Greek victories in Albania.

U. S. Labor Acts to Spur Help for British Labor

Committee Is Formed Here, With Citrine as Guest

Formation of an American Labor Committee to Aid British Labor was announced yesterday at the Hotel Capitol at a luncheon of the League for Human Rights, Freedom and Democracy, at which Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, was guest of honor.

Sir Walter told 150 labor leaders, clergymmen and educators that the British had feared even worse punishment from the German air fleet than they had suffered.

"We feel ourselves comparatively lucky," he said. "Our endurance has been tried, but we never thought of surrender."

Sir Walter predicted that any German attempt to invade Great Britain would "result in disaster for Adolph Hitler."

"No people," he said, "were ever more anxious to get to close quarters with the invader."

He said the help Britain needed was "all the bombing planes the United States can send us." The formation of the American Labor Committee to Aid British Labor, he said, was a "fine underaking."

In announcing the establishment of the new organization, Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, said branches of the committee would be established in every city and town in the United States to give American wage-earners an opportunity to help their fellow-workers in Britain.

Britain Facing 7-Cent Cut in Meat Rations

Weekly Individual Purchase Likely To Be Reduced From 37 to 30 Cents

LONDON, Dec. 26 (AP). — Great Britain's individua' weekly meat ration is likely to be reduced early in January from purchases of 1 shilling 10 pence (about 37 cents) to purchase of 1 shilling 6 pence (about 30 cents), it was reported reliably today.

[Britain rations meat by price rather than weight. The 1 shilling 10 pence allowance buys about a pound and a half of beef.]

Pork, tripe, kidneys, liver and sausages, which hitherto have not been rationed, now may be. The fighting services, which until now have enjoyed larger rations, are expected to take a cut in proportion to that given the civilian population in the forthcoming new order by Lord Woolton, Minister of Food.

Lord Woolton turned down a suggestion that restaurant patrons should have coupons clipped from their ration books, the procedure in the World War.

A Food Ministry official said there might be a temporary reduction in the present allowance of two ounces of butter if convoys were delayed, but that "even so Britons will receive a larger fat allowance than any of the inhabitants of enemy countries or enemy-occupied countries."

He said the output of vitaminized margerine had doubled in the last few months and that the fats situation generally was "very rosy."

Bacon is the only other food, which, he said, might have to be curtailed early in 1941. The present ration is half a pound of bacon and ham a week.

British Admirals Shifted

LONDON, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Admiralty tonight announced the appointment of Vice Admiral John H. D. Cunningham as a Lord Commissioner (executive officer) of the Admiralty and chief of supplies and transport, effective April 1. He will succeed Rear Admiral Geoffrey S. Arbuthnot, who will go to the East Indies as commander in chief in May, replacing Vice Admiral Ralph Leatham.

MORE CANADIANS LAND

Sight No U-boat on Rough Voyage to England.

Somewhere in England, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—A new contingent of Canadian troops—the eighth large one to cross the Atlantic since the outbreak of war—arrived in their camp here today after having landed in a port on the west coast of England.

The Canadians, travel weary and many of them just recovering from effects of seasickness, said that their transports had been buffeted by mountainous seas more than half the way across.

None reported seeking a U-boat.

Empire Flying Unit In England

London, Dec. 26 (AP)—The first contingent of Australian airmen to complete training in Canada under the empire scheme have arrived in London. They will be posted with R. A. F. squadrons, but will retain their Australian identity.

Nazi Communique Reflects Truce

Berlin, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Christmas truce in the war was reflected in the German High Command's communique which consisted today of eleven words:

"The night preceding December 25 and December 25 no extraordinary events."

DNB, the official German news agency, reported today that during a British raid on Luneville, southeast of Nancy, France, on Christmas Eve, a bomb hit a hospital, killing twenty Frenchmen, and another set fire to and destroyed a convent freshly prepared for Christmas.

Nazis to Heat Shelters

Will Issue Permits for Purchase of Air Raid Cellar Stores

BERLIN, Dec. 26 (AP).—Germany's controller for steel and iron announced today that permits would be issued for the purchase of stoves, radiators and other heating apparatus for air raid cellars, but that they could not be used for other purposes.

This winter is the first in which the chilly shelters have been used much, since there was little bombing of cities last winter.

The amount of steel and iron for the hundreds of thousands of such cellars was not estimated, but it would be considerable because scarcely a house even in the smaller cities is without a cellar.

Wodehouse Works on New Book In 'Padded Cell' at German Camp

Held at Former Asylum, Writer Is in Good Spirits—Diet Develops 'Admiration' for the Potato—He Declines Favors

By ANGUS THUERMER

Copyright, 1940, by The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 26—P. G. Wodehouse, the imperturbable creator of the unexampled Jeeves, is cheerfully writing a book about American crooks these days in a room in a German civilian internment camp that once was the padded cell of a madhouse.

The British author's companions in confinement are truck drivers, coal heavers, Cambridge graduates, artists, some of His Majesty's consuls—an assortment of Britons picked up by the Nazis all the way from Brest-Litovsk, in Poland, to the English Channel, and from Kirkenes, in Norway, to the Brenner Pass.

Mr. Wodehouse was arrested in occupied France, at his villa in Le Touquet, on the Channel, during the German offensive last May. My visit to the Silesian camp where he and 1,100 other British subjects are now held inside double barbed-wire fences was the result of long argument with German officialdom, which finally gave its permission.

I found Mr. Wodehouse concerned with his new novel. He told me he was thinking of calling it "Money for Jam," and when I confessed that the phrase did not mean anything to a Middle Western American he exclaimed:

"That's what I was afraid of. What it means is money for nothing, or easy pickings."

Pleased to See a Visitor

The camp commander, a little Saxon colonel, had ordered the novelist brought to his office for the interview. Mr. Wodehouse came in smiling, pulled a battered old cap from his shining head, stretched out a hand and said:

"Well, my, my. It certainly is grand of you to come down to see me."

He was wearing a long, heavy tan bathrobe held together with a leather belt, a blue turtle-neck sweater, a tweed sports jacket, trousers and a pair of knit gloves. He carried a three-inch-thick stack of sheets of paper—the innards of the new book.

"Coming over here to East Germany came as an absolute blow to me," he said. "It all happened so quickly, you know, that I really didn't have a chance to leave France. Really, before I could do anything the war was over for me. By the end of May the whole thing was settled in my territory."

He told of the months during which he had to report every morning at 9 o'clock to the German police. In July he was sent along with other British prisoners to Loos and there, he said, they had their worst experience, as they were turned over to the French police, who treated them as criminals and allowed them only one hour in twenty-four outside a cell.

"The German commander came to inspect," the author said, "and went through that place like an east wind. He raised hell."

Shortly the prisoners—Mr. Wodehouse and his oddly assorted companions—were transferred to Belgium and from there to the present camp, a group of red brick buildings with barred windows, which formerly was an insane asylum.

Asked about his daily schedule, Mr. Wodehouse laughed and said, looking at the camp commander:

"Well, am I allowed to tell him?"

"Sure, why not?" the English-speaking officer replied.

The prisoners, Mr. Wodehouse said, have reveille at 6 A. M., dress and wash, have breakfast and then roll call at 9 A. M. After that they have a chance to see the doctor and are free to pursue their chosen activity until lunch time, since as civilians they are not required to do manual labor.

The men eat in three shifts in a dining hall.

"Immediately after roll-call I go over to 'The White House,' our amusement and concert hall," Mr. Wodehouse said, "to do some more work on the book, which I started here. It is about three American crooks who appeared in one of my other books and the scene, as usual, is laid in England.

Typewriter Lent by Officer

"This is the first time in thirty-five years that I have written a book in long hand. Oh, but now even that has stopped, as the commandant has been kind enough to lend me his typewriter."

Mr. Wodehouse, who obviously struck the right note with his German captors by his gracious bearing and cordiality, endeared himself even more when he refused to accept special housing privileges. The commandant, in view of Mr. Wodehouse's age (he is 59), his position in the world and the work he is doing, offered to remove him from a room with sixty other internees and place him in a private room. Mr. Wodehouse refused, saying he would stay with the others.

He has taken advantage of a single room in the amusement center, where he writes undisturbed each morning and afternoon. On our way to see the room, which has a high, barred window with double panes of glass, the commandant revealed it had been the padded cell.

Mr. Wodehouse laughed and remarked:

"I guess this book will be the first ever written in the padded cell of an insane sylum."

In order that the author might take back to his bunk a half-pound of American pipe tobacco, some soap and a can of baked beans, which were a present from The Associated Press, the little group went back from the commandant's office to the dormitory where Mr. Wodehouse is "bedded down" among the other British prisoners.

Heads the Camp Library

In the twilight the long room resembled anything but the villa from which Mr. Wodehouse came. Unshaded light bulbs hung down from the ceiling, and many of the internees were far from looking their best. Mr. Wodehouse, who is president of the camp library, said:

"I have my own library here—fourteen of my own books being read by my roommates. You can imagine how flattering it is to have fourteen men in one room reading your books at the same time."

He said that the early-to-bed schedule was "giving me health I never achieved in private life." As to the food, the same in amount and in quality as that given the German population, he said he was becoming "a great admirer of the German potato."

In view of Mr. Wodehouse's age and position, interested American parties have been interceding in his behalf with the German police authorities to get him outside the barbed wire and into a hotel where he merely could report periodically to the authorities. Their efforts so far have been in vain.

BRITISH ADMIT LOSS OF 36TH DESTROYER

Disclose Sinking Of The Acheron, Warship Of Latest Type

DEC 27 1940

English Food Ship Torpedoed Carrying Beef From Australia

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 26—The 1,350-ton British destroyer Acheron, called a "hush-hush" vessel when she was built in 1930 because she was fitted with extraordinarily high-pressure boilers, has been sunk, the Admiralty announced tonight.

On a trial run the Acheron established a record of fuel economy. Her boiler pressure of 500 pounds per square inch was said at the time to be sixty-six per cent. greater than anything previously attained.

No details of the action were given, nor was the date mentioned.

The loss of the Acheron brought to thirty-six the aggregate number of British destroyers officially acknowledged to have been lost since the war started.

Say Italians Lost 39 Planes

British List 9 R. A. F. Craft Downed in Greek War Nov. 7 to Dec. 21

LONDON, Dec. 26 (AP).—Italy lost at least thirty-nine airplanes to nine British losses in operations in the Greek-Italian conflict from Nov. 7 to Dec. 21, the Air Ministry news service reported today in giving details of Royal Air Force activities in support of the Greeks.

British airplanes, in addition to offensive and defensive patrols and attacks on Italian troop concentrations, airdromes and mechanized transport facilities, it said, severely bombed the Albanian ports of Valona, Durazza and Porto Edda, which the Italians had made their key bridgeheads from the Adriatic.

ADD-LONDON-DEC.26

ROYAL AIR FORCE FIGHTERS, THE AIR MINISTRY SAID, WENT INTO ACTION ON NOV. 18, "THE DAY ON WHICH THE GLADIATORS ARRIVED IN GREECE. THAT SAME DAY THEY X X X DESTROYED NINE ITALIAN AIRCRAFT."

VALONA WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN BOMBED ON FIVE DAYS OR NIGHTS IN NOVEMBER AND SIX TIMES IN DECEMBER, WHILE DURAZZO WAS ATTACKED SIX DAYS OR NIGHTS AND PORTO EDDA, TWO.

DEC 27 1940

THE MAIN DAMAGE TO VALONA, THE AIR MINISTRY REPORT SAID, "WAS THE EXPLOSION OF A MUNITION DUMP NOV. 11, SETTING ON FIRE OF TWO LARGE SHIPS DEC. 2, BLOWING UP OF A MUNITION DUMP DEC. 6, DAMAGING OF A LARGE SHIP DEC. 7, AND OF ANOTHER ON DEC. 10, AND THE BURNING OF BARRACKS ON THE 14TH, OF A WAREHOUSE ON THE 18TH AND OF PETROL (GASOLINE) DUMPS ON THE 19TH."

A FUEL DEPOT IN DURAZZO WAS REPORTED "COMPLETELY GUTTED" BY A FIRE STARTED NOV. 11, WHILE A 10,000-TON SHIP WAS HIT NOV. 24 AND A SMALL SHIP NEARBY SET ABLAZE. DOCK EXPLOSIONS WERE CAUSED ON DEC. 15 AND 16, THE REPORT SAID.

TWO DESTROYERS WHICH WERE SHELLING CORFU WERE BOMBED, AND DOCKS WERE DAMAGED IN ATTACKS ON PORTO EDDA, IT ADDED.

OTHER RAIDS, THE AIR MINISTRY REPORT SAID, CAUSED FIRES IN HANGARS ON THE TIRANA AIRDROME AND DAMAGED ROAD JUNCTIONS, WHILE A BRIDGE WAS DESTROYED DURING AN ATTACK ON A MOTOR TRANSPORT CONVOY BETWEEN LAKE OCHRIDA AND KORITZA.

ROOSEVELT ASKED TO DECLARE BOLD ANTI-AXIS STAND

White House Makes Public Telegram Signed by 150 Leaders.

Washington, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The White House said today that more than 150 prominent American citizens had urged President Roosevelt to "make it the settled policy of this country to do everything that may be necessary to insure the defeat of the Axis Powers."

The group, comprising editors, lawyers, authors, educators, actors, and religious and labor leaders, set forth their appeal in a telegram. They urged that all possible be done to promote "resistance to the plausible but fatal arguments of appeasement."

Evidently for the purpose of informing the President what they think a large section of the American people would like to hear in his Sunday night radio speech, the group said:

"We ask you to tell us what we believe to be the truth, that the materials of war and the military and naval and air strength we now have and the implements we can now produce are enough to make certain the defeat of the Axis Powers, so long as Britain is on her feet and fighting, but that with Britain down, they are not enough and may not in the future be increased enough to hold the whole world at bay."

Some of the Signers.

Among the signers of the wire were Hamilton Fish Armstrong, editor of Foreign Affairs; Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier Journal; Dr. William M. Agar, Columbia University professor and Catholic leader; Frank Altschul, New York banker; Henry Breckinridge, New York lawyer; John Stewart Bryan, president of the College of William and Mary, and Lewis W. Douglas, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company and former New Deal budget director.

Others were Douglas Fairbanks Jr., motion picture actor; Mayor Maury Maverick of San Antonio, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, mother-in-law of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh; Dorothy Thompson, columnist; Walter Wanger, motion picture producer, Frederick C. Walcott, former Republican Senator from Connecticut, and Dr. James R. Angell, former president of Yale.

Text of the Appeal.

The White House made public the following text of the telegram:

Dear Mr. President:

A too prevalent indifference and apathy toward what is happening in the world and the threat to our own vital national interests prompts us to write you this letter.

Many Americans understand the irreconcilable nature of the forces that are engaged on three continents and on many oceans. Many understand the dark consequences to us, to freedom and to democracy here, to the foundations of American institutions, should the Axis Powers gain the supremacy of the seas, but many, far too many, do not understand, a few do not want to understand.

If, before 1938, ignorance and lethargy and disbelief brought many European democracies to their grave and led the United Kingdom to the thin edge of disaster, so ignorance and lethargy and disbelief here are blinding us to our own peril. This ignorance, this lethargy and this disbelief must be swept away before it is too late. There may be only a little time left.

You led us splendidly during the critical days of late spring and early fall. We ask you to give us the same splendid leadership now.

We ask you to clarify once more, but perhaps in greater detail, the nature of the conflict which threatens to wipe out the sort of Christian civilization in which men may be free from the restraints of intolerance, from the fear of injustice and from the menace of arbitrary power.

Bold Warning Asked For.

We ask you to inform us, clearly and boldly, of the possibilities of English failure and of the consequences to us and to our children's children should Britain fail.

We ask you to tell us what we believe to be the truth, that the materials of war and the military and naval and air strength we now have and the implements we can now produce are enough to make certain the defeat of the Axis Powers, so long as Britain is on her feet and fighting, but that with Britain down, they are not enough and may not in the future be increased enough to hold the whole world at bay.

We ask you to make it the settled policy of this country to do everything that may be necessary to insure the defeat of the Axis powers, and thus to encourage here and everywhere resistance to the plausible but fatal arguments of appeasement.

To this policy we pledge you our unqualified support, and express our complete approval of your recently announced plan for lending armaments to Britain.

To your leadership the people responded before. To your leadership the people will, we believe, respond again. Your leadership is essential to the preparation of men's minds for what may be ahead of us.

Verne Marshall Warned Of Danger To His Life

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, said today that daily since formation of the committee he had received warnings that by taking the chairmanship of the committee he had endangered his life and the lives of members of his family. He has six children.

Because of the warnings, he said, he had written a lengthy codicil to his will specifying that any part of his estate which might be needed to finance investigation and fix responsibility for "any unnatural circumstances which might attend" the death of himself, members of his family, business associates or fellow committee members "is to be so used."

Marshall added that he had placed in his strong box "certain information which would facilitate any such investigation" as that referred to in his codicil.

Roosevelt May Offer Huge Plan To Build Ships

Reported Set to Ask Speedy Construction of Merchant Fleet to Supply Britain

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP).—President Roosevelt will propose soon, an authoritative source said tonight, that the United States quickly construct a large number of merchant ships to offset the heavy inroads made by Nazi planes and submarines on Britain's merchant marine.

The program, reminiscent of the one under which ships were built in record time during the World War, may be outlined by the President in his "fireside chat" Sunday night, or the announcement may await the convening of the new Congress next week.

Details were not disclosed, but a reliable informant said the program would be "extensive" and that it would fit into the plan which Mr. Roosevelt has discussed for leasing or lending equipment and supplies to Great Britain.

To avoid a "bottleneck" in marine engine production, this source continued, reciprocating engines would be used in the ships instead of turbines. The reason given for this was that some unused facilities for the production of reciprocating engines were available, whereas plants to turn out the more modern equipment were loaded with work and could not be expanded quickly.

It was not disclosed whether the proposed ships would be made available to Great Britain or vessels now coming off the ways for the American merchant marine would be released to the British and replaced in this country's fleet with the subsequent production.

In view of recent statements by Administration officials that Great Britain would be in great need of help next spring, there was widespread speculation that some of the current production or ships now laid up might be leased or loaned. Vessels whose keels have not yet been laid could not be completed by spring under any practicable speed-up, experts said, even if they were built of wood as in World War days.

That Federal agency has, since the beginning of 1938, started the construction of 179 new trans-ocean craft, comprising the first major addition to the merchant fleet since the end of the World War.

Of these, fifty-four have been completed and are now in service. On Nov. 1 this year a total of 181 merchant vessels, comprising a tonnage of 497,730, were under construction in this country to fill private and commission orders.

The additional construction to be proposed, it was said, would be on top of the order which the British assigned Dec. 19 to the Todd-California Shipbuilding Corporation of Richmond, Calif., and the Todd-Bath Iron Shipbuilding Corporation of South Portland, Me.

This order involves sixty freighters, to cost nearly $100,000,000. It did not wait upon completion of the lend-or-lease plan for American financing. The British had previously earmarked $50,000,000 in cash for the project.

U. S. Ready To Spend Millions On Pan-Am Bases Below Border

Air Fields In Central And South America Would Be Incorporated Into Defense Scheme

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Dec. 26—The United States War and Navy departments have opened negotiations to incorporate Pan American Airways' far-flung network of airports into the continental defense plans, responsible sources reported here tonight.

These negotiations embrace not only Pan American's facilities in Mexico, from which squadrons of warplanes could operate to defend the immediate coast lines of the United States in both oceans, but the company's fields and equipment throughout Central and South America.

As reported here, Washington contemplates investing millions of dollars jointly with Pan American in the construction of hard-surfaced runways, extension of existing runways, construction of underground fuel-storage tanks and enlargement of hangar space.

The outlay for the company's Mexican fields would entail between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000, it was estimated. Work, it was said, will begin as soon as possible, here and elsewhere.

At present there are no plans to build new bases in Mexico, and it was reported that only limited construction of new fields was projected in other republics.

The improvements to the fields will be designed to permit free operation of the heaviest United States bombers and fastest fighting planes from bases so adequately provided with fuel and repair facilities that an interruption of supply or communications lines would not handicap wartime operations.

The fundamental purpose of the Mexican and Central American improvements will be defense of the Panama Canal, one source said.

Technically, it was reported, the United States Government and Pan American Airways could undertake such a program without authorization from the governments of the countries where the bases are located.

Governments Being Consulted

Under existing agreements, Pan American Airways merely needs to notify the governments that such improvements are to be undertaken. Official approval is routine.

But, as the contemplated improvements would have not only a peacetime—but a definite wartime purpose, it was reported the Mexican and other governments were being consulted.

Detachments of United States warplanes now fly on weekly schedules from Texas bases to the Panama Canal Zone. As such flights have been authorized by Mexico and the Central American republics, no separate authorization for the passage of each flight is required.

Approves U. S. Request

It was understood some similar general authorization for these physical improvements and their use for training purposes by American warplanes would eventually be sought from all governments concerned.

The Mexican Senate today approved the request of the United States Government that American warplanes en route to the Panama Canal be allowed to land at Tejeria and Minatitlan air fields in the state of Veracruz.

Such flights at present are made non-stop from Tampico, at the northern tip of Veracruz, to Guatemala.

1 German, 9 Italian Ships Under Watch In Mexico

Mexico City, Dec. 26 (AP)—Sources in the Navy Department here said tonight that one German and nine Italian ships now at refuge in Tampico harbor were under close watch of port authorities in the belief that they would soon attempt a dash into the Atlantic.

These sources reported that new developments of anti-Axis sentiment in the United States had given rise to fears in Rome and Berlin that Washington might as the Mexican Government to seize or intern the vessels.

The German ship is the 9,660-ton Orinoco, only survivor of four Nazi vessels which sought vainly on two occasions during the past three months to escape to Europe.

On the first ill-fated dash, the smallest of the ships, the Phrygia, was scuttled by her crew when they sighted warships off the coast while the others returned to port.

Subsequently, the Rhein and Iderwald made another attempt and succeeded in reaching the open sea, only to be trapped by Allied destroyers off the coast of Cuba. These vessels also were scuttled.

Greeks Renew Push for Valona

Report No Opposition North of Chimara—Captive Reveals Heavy Italian Losses.

Athens, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Rain and snow slowed the fighting on the Albanian battle front today, but the Greeks reported that they continued their advance northward from Chimara along the Adriatic coast toward Valona without making contact with the main Italian line.

Over most of the front, engagements were of a local nature. The battle for Tepeleni, and Klisura in the central sector continued in intense cold and waist-deep snow.

In skirmishes on the northern front fortified positions were captured from Italy's vaunted Alpine troops, in the region west of the Drinos River, the Greek High Command said.

Valona, one of the principal bases used by the Italians in landing re-enforcements and supplies, was reported by an R. A. F. communique to have been left "enveloped in a pall of black smoke" after a successful British attack on Tuesday.

A captured lieutenant-colonel said that the Italians were suffering severely from the weather and the difficulty of getting supplies, and that many battalions were reduced from 700 to 200 men each because of losses. This officer, who commanded Bersaglieri units, said that many had died of cold while many others were hospitalized for severe frostbite.

Christmas bombing of Corfu by Italian warplanes, after British planes had showered the island with gifts, were stated by the High Command to have killed fifteen persons and wounded about thirty, mostly women and children.

The inhabitants had been told in advance of the British aerial visit. The presents, the British said, were in appreciation of the kindness shown to Royal Air Force flyers who have had to land on Corfu.

Greeks Capture Village.

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Greek patrols have entered the village of Lin on Lake Ochrida, fifteen miles north of Pogradetz, on the road to Elbasani, according to reports reaching here.

Report Attacks Repelled.

Rome, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Italian forces battling on the Albanian front were today reported to have beaten back Greek assaults in several sectors, inflicting considerable losses on the attackers and taking a number of prisoners, while Italian war planes, the Italian High Command asserted, bombed Greek naval bases "and enemy harbor installations involved in the operations under way."

The communique did not identify the objectives bombed nor the sectors where the Greek attacks were reported thrown back.

R. A. F. Reports on War.

London, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Italy lost at least thirty-nine airplanes, compared with nine lost by the British, in the Graeco-Italian conflict from November 7 to December 21, Air Ministry News Service reported today.

In addition to maintaining offensive and defensive patrols and attacking Italian troop concentrations, airdromes and mechanized transport facilities, it said, British planes severely bombed the Albanian ports of Valona, Durazzo and Porto Edda, which the Italians had made their key bridgeheads from the Adriatic.

Royal Air Force fighters, the Ministry said, went into action on November 18, "the day on which the Gladiators arrived in Greece. That same day they . . . destroyed nine Italian aircraft."

Valona was bombed eleven times, Durazzo six times and Porto Edda twice.

Albanians Reported Attacking.

In a broadcast picked up at New York by the National Broadcasting Company, the British radio declared today that London had received reports that "Albanian irregular troops were very active behind the Italian lines, cutting communications and attacking isolated detachments of the enemy."

"Some irregulars are said ever to have got into Tirana, the capital, and to have stuck up posters calling on the Italians to leave Albania," the announcer added.

Italians Captured By Greeks Put Toll Of Wounded At 45,000

Prisoners Say Fascist Troops In Mountains Suffer From Illness, Frostbite And Hunger

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 26—Italy's ill-starred war against Greece has cost the Fascists 45,000 men in wounded alone since the campaign began October 28, captured Italian officers estimated tonight as the Greeks thrust ahead through mud and snow north and northwest of Chimara, Albania.

The officers, talking to correspondents at the front, made no estimate of the Italian dead, but said the toll was extremely high.

One Black Shirt major reported his battalion lost one-third of its men in two weeks and received no reinforcements. Others made similar statements.

Italian prisoners arriving in Ioannina, Greece, from the front were described as being in a pitiful state, many of them barely able to walk as the result of illness, frostbite or hunger.

One captured officer said his men, surrounded in the Chimara region, were almost without food, even bread being scarce.

A lieutenant colonel said the bitter weather was causing severe suffering and that many Italian battalions were reduced from 700 men to 200 because of losses. He said many of his own men died of the cold and many were sent back to hospitals because of frostbite.

Fighting Of Local Nature

The fighting today was described by the Greeks as of a local nature, but the battle for Tepelini and Klisura in the central sector continued.

The Greek spokesman said that north and northwest of Chimara "Italian troops suffered another defeat," and "the enemy was thrown back on his abandoning line, which he held."

A new mountain height was taken by the Greeks there, the spokesman said.

[Reports reaching the Yugoslav border town of Bitolj said Greek patrols had pushed into the village of Lin, on Lake Ochrida, fifteen miles north of Pogradetz on the road to the central Albanian city of Elbasani.]

Confusion Indicated

During a Greek mopping-up operation in the Drinos river region, he said, "we captured five officers and sixty-five men belonging to five different units of three different branches of arms. This is evidence of the confusion prevailing in the enemy ranks."

Farther north, the spokesman said, the Greeks took some additional villages, although, he added, "conditions there are very hard—there are snowdrifts, mists and extremely bitter cold."

Notables Abducted

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 26—The Ministry of Home Security today announced that Italian troops, in retreating from Argirocastro, had abducted "forty-nine Greek notables." Their fate is unknown, it added.

Heavy Greek Losses Are Claimed By Italy

Rome, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Italian high command claimed successes on sea and land against the British today and reported inflicting heavy losses against the Greeks in the Albanian campaign.

Submarines operating in the Mediterranean and Atlantic Ocean, a communique said, sank a light British cruiser and two large steamers, the last two in the Atlantic, where another vessel was declared struck by a torpedo.

Amid heavy artillery exchanges and air bombing by Italian flyers, land forces of the Fascists were reported to have repelled British assaults on a desert post near Bardia, Libyan port, where 20,000 Italians are besieged by Britain's army of the Nile.

On the Albanian front, the Italians claimed they beat back Greek assaults in several unnamed sectors and bombed "enemy harbor installations in operations under way."

Greeks Ignore Christmas To Battle For Tepeleni

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Correspondent

Somewhere on the Southern Albanian Front, Dec. 25 (Delayed)—A heavy snowfall deepened the drifts in the mountains this Christmas Day and if the guns had only been quiet it would have been a pretty picture.

But there was no quiet. The Greeks were not stopping even for Christmas. They were attacking the Italian defenses around Tepeleni and Klisura, scrubby little Albanian settlements ten miles apart and not much to think of until you remembered that an officer said that whoever controls the mountains around them will control most of the southern front.

The Greek lines run through hard terrain and the faces of supply officers were gloomy as the snow came down, for this was making their problem just so much tougher.

Can See Coastal Mountains

Within sight of the slowly advancing troops lay coastal mountains where there was no danger of freezing to death and no snow.

BRITISH TROOPS TIGHTEN CIRCLE AROUND BARDIA

Italians Reported Striving Desperately to Break Up Coming Assault.

ACTIVE FIGHTING IN DESERT

Rome Tells of New Conflicts in East Africa—No Truce Observed.

Cairo, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The siege of Bardia entered its tenth day today with the Italian garrison facing steadily increasing pressure from British forces holding the battered Libyan port in a grip of steel.

Reports from the front indicated that the Italian air force was making desperate efforts to break up the British preparations for a final assault on the beleaguered town. Dive bombers were reported taking an active part in the defense, but the British said that they had proved largely ineffective.

British military spokesmen here emphasized that the lines around Bardia were being re-enforced steadily, and that British mechanized forces were continuing their activity in the desert south and west of the town, while the Royal Air Force concentrated on pounding Italian airdromes and coastal bases far to the west.

British General Headquarters declared in a communique this afternoon that the situation on the Libyan front was unchanged. On the Sudan frontier, the communique added, a British fighting patrol made a successful raid east of Kassala, returning with a prisoner and some equipment after inflicting a number of casualties.

Report Warship Hit.

Rome, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Italian Air Force has been bombing intensely the British troops and naval forces besieging Bardia and yesterday scored hits on a British warship along the North African coast, the Italian High Command reported today. The British mechanized forces operating south of Bardia were also effectively bombed, the communique said.

Heavy artillery exchanges were reported in the region immediately surrounding Bardia, where the Italians said one of their desert posts had repelled a British attack.

Aerial operations were said to have been carried on through Christmas Eve and Christmas. There was no other mention of the fighting in this zone or of casualties on either side.

The High Command reported patrol activity by the Italian ground forces in East Africa and aerial operations in which "enemy troops in tent encampments and marching columns were bombed with shrapnel bombs and machine-gunned." One Italian plane failed to return from these operations in the east, the communique said.

ITALIANS MASS AIR BLOWS ON BARDIA AREA

Attempt To Impede British Troops Surrounding Libyan Outpost

[By the Associated Press]

With British Forces Outside Bardia, Libya, Dec. 26—The Italian air force concentrated its activity in the Bardia region today in an attempt to impede the British land forces surrounding this Libyan outpost.

Italian bombing in other parts of the desert was at a minimum.

The British Royal Air Force continued the tactics it has employed since the start of the British offensive—heavy bombing of Libyan air fields to keep the enemy on the ground as much as possible.

No Holiday Truce

Although there was no holiday truce in this North African fighting, the bombing on both sides appeared somewhat diminished Christmas Day and night, and land fighting around Bardia was limited mainly to an artillery duel, now in progress five days.

The British batteries were being strengthened steadily by arrival of new guns.

New Air Chief Suspected

The generally greater Italian air activity in the last week, particularly the new tactic of concentrating the air bombardment, has led to a belief among the British that a new Italian air commander may have taken charge.

The general situation around Bardia was not changed much in the last few days, but all indications point to a real British drive to be opened soon on the estimated 20,000 Italians who are besieged there.

ITALY CREDITS U. S. WITH LIBYAN GAINS

Says Britain Fights Only With America's Aid.

ROME, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The United States was credited with the British victory over the Italians in North Africa today by the Italian news weekly Tempo.

The article said that the war had become a conflict between all Europe and the "Anglo-Saxon world," in which England continued to exist only because America was supporting her.

"In this world," said Tempo, "there exists materially only North America; not England, which lives and fights only because the United States makes it possible. The latest proof is the North African offensive, made possible only by the American neutrality which furnished tanks, airplanes, ammunition and artillery."

Fascist newspapers, including Premier Mussolini's own Il Popolo d'Italia, said that the only worthwhile part of Prime Minister Churchill's radio appeal to Italians on Monday was Mussolini's letter explaining why Italy was entering the war.

The letter was quoted in full, but the papers published only a summary of the speech itself, issued by the official news agency Stefani. This omitted Churchill's reference to the United States, the passage in which he blamed Mussolini for Italy's entry into the war, Churchill's own appeal for peace last May, and his suggestion that the Germans some day might invade Italy through the Brenner Pass.

CLAIM THREE SINKINGS

Italians List British Light Cruiser as One Victim.

Rome, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Italian submarines were credited by the Italian High Command today with sinking a British light cruiser in the central Mediterranean and two large steamships in the Atlantic.

The same submarine sank two ships in the Atlantic by shell fire and also hit a third vessel with a torpedo, the communique declared.

The sinking of the light cruiser was said to have occurred on December 21.

NAMING OF BRITAIN DENIED

De Valera Said Not to Have Been Specific in Yule Broadcast

DUBLIN, Ireland, Dec. 26 (AP)—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera in his broadcast to the United States last night made no specific mention of either Great Britain or Germany, according to the official text, and the Prime Minister's secretary said neither was named in the broadcast.

[A transcription of the broadcast in New York quoted Mr. de Valera as saying: "The overshadowing anxiety at the moment seems, however, to be today's possibility of incitement which would force our people once more against Britain and the British." A Columbia Broadcasting System spokesman, after rechecking the record of the speech, said it sounded clear on this point.]

As issued in Dublin, the speech read:

"The overshadowing anxiety at the moment is the day to day expectation of the possibility of a crisis which would force our people once more to battle desperately for their liberty."

THE SUMMARY, WITH SARCASTIC COMMENT APPENDED TO THE VARIOUS POINTS, WAS PUBLISHED CHRISTMAS MORNING.

STEFANI ADDED THAT IT WAS IRONICAL THAT CHURCHILL'S SUGGESTION THAT THE ITALIAN MONARCHY MAKE ITS VOICE HEARD COINCIDED WITH KING VITTORIO EMANUELE'S MESSAGE TO THE TROOPS OF TUESDAY WHEN HE SAID THAT "NO OBSTACLE AND NO DIFFICULTY MAY HALT THE GLORIOUS RISE OF ITALY."

Hanoi, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Sharp hostilities along the frontier of Thailand (Siam) and Indo-China marked the Christmas period of southeast Asia's undeclared war. The fighting was the heaviest in the past fortnight, French spokesmen said tonight.

Batteries on opposite banks of the Mekong River, in the vicinity of Thakhek, fought an artillery duel, they said. Thai gendarmes then made a raid on the French-controlled Mekong Islands. Indo-Chinese artillery retaliated by shelling the gendarmes headquarters.

There were further clashes in the south.

Nichi Nichi Also Hears Washington Is Being Asked To Hit Trade Further

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Friday, Dec. 27—Nichi Nichi, in its lead story today, quoted reliable sources as saying the United States Government had been urged "to advise American residents in Japan to leave not later than January 31."

The newspaper cited in this connection an increase in the number of scheduled calls by United States vessels at Japanese ports during January.

It said the American President liners Taft, Coolidge, Cleveland and Pierce are due during January, in contrast to the decrease in calls in recent months when most United States ships to the Orient went directly to Shanghai or Manilla without touching Japanese ports.

Further Pressure Hinted

The newspaper, which described its reports as "disquieting rumors circulated in the United States," also said the United States was being urged to extend its economic pressure on Japan by forbidding all American vessels to stop here after February 1.

From Kobe, the paper continued, 150 Americans already have withdrawn.

"The Japanese Government is taking a careful attitude and is making all preparation to meet any situation which may arise," the daily added.

Warning On Trade?

In New York, a British broadcast heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System quoted the Japanese Times, English-language newspaper in Tokyo, as saying:

"There may be a complete closing down of Far Eastern markets to American imports as a reprisal for American restrictions on Japanese imports."

The United States officers also denied that Italian authorities had officially apologized, but said they had "expressed regrets" for the incident, in which nine United States marines and three sailors were listed as slightly injured.

The Italians refused to say how many Italian marines were injured, but the newspapers reported twenty were battered.

The fight, which was said to have originated in a dispute over a table, was stopped by military police of both countries.

12,823-Ton Craft Reports Attack Off Ireland.

The British freighter Waiotira, a 12,823-ton refrigerated ship, radiod today that she had been torpedoed about 400 miles northwest of the Irish coast.

She was the third large food ship reported torpedoed in the last ten days.

Mackay Radio picked up this message from the vessel at 1:06 P. M.: "Torpedoed in 58.12 north latitude, 17.25 west longitude."

The Waiotira had been carrying beef from Australia to England. Owned by Shaw Savill & Albion Company, Ltd., her home port was Southampton. She was completed last year at Belfast and was one of the finest ships of her type. She was 516 feet long and had a beam of 70 feet. Refrigerated ships are expensive and not too numerous.

German Liner Hamburg Believed Sent To Bottom

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—The German liner Hamburg, once called the "floating athletic field," may have been sunk while operating as a raider off the Portuguese coast, Capt. Joel Gomes of the freighter Concalo Vehlo said today.

Captain Gomes said on his arrival here that he had sighted an empty lifeboat bearing the name "Hamburg" 200 miles due east of the Azores December 11.

The 22,177-ton Hamburg was laid up at Hamburg after an exciting flight from New York when the war began. British warships sighted her carrying French Line colors but she escaped in a fog.

Carried Crew Of 440

Built in 1926, she normally carried a crew of 440 men and had accommodations for 1,151 passengers.

Capt. Cornelius Arundel of the British freighter Haxby, which was sunk by a raider off Bermuda, said recently that the raider was a huge ship equipped for a three-year voyage of mine-laying and ship sinking.

Shipping men then believed that she might have been the Hamburg or her sister ship, the Deutschland.

Diphtheria Vaccine Leaves U. S. For Spain

Dixie Clipper Also Carries Toxoid Addressed To Red Cross At London

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Carrying sixty-four pounds of diphtheria vaccine, 6,087 pounds of mail and four passengers, only one of whom was on board for the through trip to Europe, the Dixie Clipper left today for Bermuda, Horta and Lisbon.

The other, 7,000 doses of diphtheria toxoid for children, was addressed to the British Red Cross, London.

22 Women Ask Spain to Free Victoria Kent

Seek Help for Lawyer and Feminist Whom Gestapo Sent Back From Paris

A letter appealing for the release from Spain of Victoria Kent, Spanish woman lawyer, former member of the Spanish National Assembly, and Director of Prisons in 1931 in the Republican government set up after the fall of the monarchy, was sent yesterday from New York to Don Juan Francisco de Cardenas, Spanish Ambassador to the United States. The letter was signed by twenty-two prominent American women.

Senorita Kent, according to information received by the women signatories, was caught in Paris when the German Army entered the city. At the request of the Franco government she was sent back to Spain by the Gestapo, and is now presumably locked up in one of the prisons of which she was once director.

Senorita Kent was not in Spain during the Spanish civil war, having been sent by the Republican government as counselor to the Spanish Embassy in Paris. She worked there during the civil war aiding refugees from Spain. She has always been an ardent feminist and was active in the movement to set up the Spanish Republic.

Descendant of a Briton

She is thirty-nine years old, the granddaughter of a British subject who settled and married in Spain. She received her education in Spain and speaks no English.

Word was received here that she had been returned to Spain through a letter from an undisclosed source in Europe. This was confirmed by a letter from the poetess Senora Gabriela Mistral, who wrote from Chile that she had received a cable informing her of the removal of Senorita Kent from Paris.

The announcement of the sending of the letter was made in the office of Miss Dorothy Kenyon, former Justice of the Municipal Court, at 285 Madison Avenue. It was said that the women signing the letter and others would help financially in bringing Senorita Kent to Mexico, Chile or Argentina, countries which have signified that they would offer her asylum, if her release from Spain is affected.

Gives U. S. Assurances On French Possessions

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—New assurances were given to the State Department today, Gaston Henri-Haye, French Ambassador, said that Martinique and other French possessions in this hemisphere represent no danger to the United States.

The Ambassador said he also explained to Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, the recent changes in the Vichy Government which included the ouster of Pierre Laval as Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister.

The Ambassador declined to go into details about this explanation, but he asserted "Marshal Petain is still Marshal Petain," thus indicating that Petain was continuing his previous policies regarding the extent of collaboration with Germany.

Henri-Haye said the new assurances about Martinique and other French possessions in the Caribbean did not result directly from the recent Vichy changes and asserted there were no developments of a serious nature to inspire the assurances.

CANADIAN FIRE KILLS ONE

Seven Others Hurt in Blaze at Wooden Navy Barracks

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Dec. 26 (AP)—One seaman was burned to death and seven others were injured, none seriously, in a fire that leveled three wooden navy barracks buildings early today. Authorities were hampered in their investigation by the absence of many men on Christmas leaves.

Starting on the second floor of one of the buildings, the fire spread so rapidly that many seamen had difficulty making their way to safety. Several of the last to leave said they had seen other men still asleep in their hammocks.

Navy men reported that the sentries on duty on each floor of the barracks would have had time to arouse the sleepers, and said several of the enlisted men, who helped firemen and volunteer bucket brigades battle the flames, had re-entered the buildings two and three times to recover their belongings.

Nazis Wait For French Hens To Lay Their Eggs

[By the Associated Press]

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 26—There is a popular story in France that as soon as a hen lays an egg, there's a German waiting to seize it and send it off to Germany, according to Malcolm Gibson, Worcester violinist, who has returned after twelve years on the continent.

His is the first information obtained first hand by a Worcester man who has lived under German domination. Here are a few of his impressions related today.

France places all its hope in the Vichy Government, and practically every Frenchman worships Marshal Petain.

France has no milk, no butter, no coffee, and little of other foods because of German commandeering.

The Germans are amazingly polite to everyone, including the French.

Spain is even now occupied by thousands of Germans, in civilian clothes, and is Europe's saddest country.

Paris is overrun by German officers, but German privates are rarely seen on the streets.

"There is no gasoline in France for civilian use," he said.

"The last night I spent in Paris in November," he added, "I spent in a cellar. The R. A. F. was over Paris again. They seem to be over France all the time and they have devastated the Channel ports. Marseilles, Bordeaux and others are in ruins."

New York, Dec. 26—The specter of rocket planes which could fly around the world in perhaps six hours promises to worry the statesmen arranging a peace at the end of the present war.

The vision is not wholly new, but it has been changing rapidly in the last few weeks.

In 1931, the Hungarian rocket scientist, Prof. Hans Oberth in Vienna, forecast rocket war planes which would fly the Atlantic in possibly one hour. He suggested that such planes would force the world, in self-protection, to outlaw all war.

Close To Practical Use

Now rocket motors are close to practical use, due to two American inventions this fall. It appears they may, like the airplane, creep up slowly on the public until some war lord suddenly cashes in on their potentialities for terror.

One invention is by Prof. Robert H. Goddard, Clark University, whose laboratory is remote Eden Valley, fifteen miles outside Roswell, N. M.

It produces one of the awesome things which strike the eyes of the few persons who have seen one of his rockets taking off. Before it rises, for a second or two, a jet of pure flame strikes down on the valley sand and rolls fifty feet along the surface as a billowing river of fire ten feet deep.

Can Melt Anything

This is the jet of fire which drives the rocket, spreading out as it expands in the air. That flame, at its point of exit from the motor, is about half the surface temperature of the sun. There is nothing on earth its heat cannot melt.

Its burning, eroding power has been one of the obstacles to building a rocket motor suited to sustained flight. But Prof. Goddard, in a recent United States patent, finds a new way to protect his motor.

This is by letting the fuel, gasoline and liquid oxygen, at around 300 degrees below zero, enter a firing chamber so that it is spread over the metal walls before it ignites.

Offers Protection

The film of liquid fuel is some protection against destruction by heat. A similiar spread of the cold liquid protects the nozzle through which the flaming jet exits.

The other American invention is a rocket motor for installation on present planes—not as the plane's main motor, but only for aid in starting or other emergency. E. B. Meyers, of New York city, made it.

This motor fires in intermittent explosions, instead of a continuous jet of fire. That gets around the eroding heat by leaving effective cooling periods between shots. Meyers uses a different fuel, carbon disulphide and nitrous oxygen. This is cooler than Goddard's fuel. It also has considerably less power.

200,000 Pounds Pressure

But even with less power each explosion may give up to 200,000 pounds pressure for a brief fraction of a second. That means a 200,000-pound forward kick, enough to aid a present-type plane in taking off.

The intermittent explosion proposal is an example of practical adaptations of already well developed rocket principles. Moreover, it is only one of numerous adaptations.

Italy has one, which has not been described but only mentioned in recent news reports.

Rocket ship reports from Britain are more specific. One of these, appearing in Science Observer, a New York city publication, told of an experimental English plane driven by compressed air.

Air is taken in through the ship's nose, compressed, heated to give it extra power, and then projected in a jet to turn a turbine propeller.

Adaptation Of Principle

This is an adaptation of the rocket principle. A more direct way of using rocket jets to drive turbines already has been invented by Professor Goddard.

He used a 5,000-degree jet of fire. Engineers had said this was impossible because the jet, they claimed, would melt the thin metal vanes, or fins, which like the blades of a waterwheel receive the force of the jet.

Professor Goddard's experiments showed that during the part of the revolution while the vanes are not in contact with the jet, they cool, and that the momentary contact is not enough to melt them.

Some engineers continue to say that a rocket ship is a practical impossibility, just as they once said airplanes were impossible.

Difficulty Suggested

An example of another "impossibility" which has been wiped out is a claim that it would be impossible to compress the huge amount of oxygen needed to feed rocket explosions.

This obstacle was put forward nearly twenty years ago, and Alfred Africano, engineer and member of the American Rocket Society, said that the argument has closed most of the scientists' minds even up to today. Yet this problem was solved years ago by using liquid oxygen.

Another seeming impossibility is the speed at which a rocket ship must get to traveling before its motor becomes efficient; that is, economical enough to be considered.

The ship must reach nearly the velocity of the jet of fire before its motor is efficient.

Christmas Truce Bolsters Up War Correspondent's Faith in Race

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

It was a grand thing to see a tacit Christmas truce observed over yonder—sort of bolsters up a fellow's faith in mankind.

Sure, any cynic could figure out plenty of trickery the belligerents could resort to during such a cessation of bombing. But personally I'm not willing to admit that human nature is so far gone as to use Christ's birthday in such a manner.

It's more satisfying to be one of those optimistic lightweights who believe that civilization isn't going to die despite its grievous illness. Reminds me of an incident in the world war during the bloody battle of Passchendaele.

It had been a terrible day. Men were dying by thousands and there was no end to the wounded. We war correspondents were at our evening meal—a gloomy affair, for we were dog-tired and dispirited by the awfulness of it all. One of the men spoke up, and his voice was bitter:

"The whole world has gone crazy with thhe war lust. Christianity is as dead as a door nail, and men are going out to slaughter one another for the pure joy of killing."

There was silence for a bit, and then Capt. C. E. Montague, the famous English writer—a kindly soul of great breadth of vision—answered with a story of a simple little scene he had noted that day at an emergency dressing station.

'E 'Adn't the 'East.

A wounded British Tommy came trudging in. He was leading a German prisoner who also was wounded—just a boy of 17 or so. Tommy had been in a hot fight and already had accounted for three or four of the enemy when he came upon the youngster. The boy was frightened but he managed to shoot Tommy through the arm, and then prepared to use his bayonet.

The Briton was seeing red by this time, and was as near the brute stage as he ever would get. He had been fighting hand-to-hand; he had killed, and here was another who was trying to kill him. However, Tommy threw his rifle down, closed with the German boy and disarmed him. Somebody asked the cockney why he hadn't killed the German.

"'You see, sir,' apologized Tommy, 'e was such a little beggar I didn't 'ave the 'eart to do it.'"

That was all, but it settled the argument.

There was an unofficial truce the first Christmas of the world war—a spontaneous affair arranged by the men themselves. They left their trenches ad fraternized—even played football in No-man's Land.

But the powers that be quickly put a stop to that sort of thing. The idea was that the boys were there to kill each other, and not to swap cigarettes and food from the Christmas boxes which they had received from home.

War and the Average Man.

"I've seen a lot of war at first hand, and the further I've gone the more convinced I've become that the average man of any civilized country hates bloodshed. Wars are made not by the people but by ambitious throw-backs to barbarism, who happen to be in position of control. You can't tell me that the father of babies, no matter what his race or nationality, gets joy out of dropping bombs on defenseless women and children.

All that being true, you'd think there ought to be some way of making peace. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, in a message to her people yesterday from her exile in London, said of peace prospects:

"Having followed the course of events with tense attention, I believe myself to be in a position to tell you that in recent months prospects have greatly improved."

It would be interesting to know whether she meant that prospects had improved because of Britain's recent successes, or whether she had something else in mind. Certainly on the surface it is difficult to see what factor there is which could bring about peace now excepting the collapse, or impending collapse, of one side or the other.

However, as has been said before in this column, I believe that peace is likely to come finally through the refusal of one of the peoples to march further through the valley of the shadow of death.

LONDON, Dec. 26 (AP).—An Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

A single enemy aircraft dropped bombs on the Isle of Sheppey (in the Thames Estuary) early this afternoon. Little damage was done and there were no casualties.

There is nothing further to report.

This morning's communique of the same two ministries:

There is nothing to report since the last communique was issued.

CAIRO, Dec. 26 (AP).—A British general headquarters communique:

Libya: No change in the situation.

On the Sudan frontier: One of our fighting patrols carried out a successful raid east of Kassala, inflicting a number of casualties on the enemy and returning with a prisoner and some equipment.

On the other fronts: Nothing of importance to report.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 26 (AP).—The German high command communique:

On the night preceding Dec. 25, and on Dec. 25, no extraordinary events.

Greek

ATHENS, Dec. 26 (AP).—The Greek high command communique:

Local successful operations enabled our troops to advance and occupy enemy positions. Prisoners were taken and a considerable quantity of war material fell into our hands.

A Ministry of Home Security communique:

There were no air raids on Greece today.

Italians during their flight from Argyrokastron abducted forty-nine Greek notables, whose fate is unknown.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 26 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

In the Cyrenaican (Libyan) frontier zone around Bardia, there were lively actions by enemy artillery batteries opposed by our batteries.

An attack against one of our posts in the desert has been repelled.

On the night of Dec. 24 to Dec. 25, and yesterday, an enemy front-line base was subjected to intense air bombardments. A warship was hit. Nuclei of mechanized forces in southern Cyrenaica, moreover, were effectively bombed.

On the Greek front, we repulsed attacks at various points, inflicting considerable losses on the enemy and capturing prisoners.

Some bombing formations hit naval bases and enemy harbor installations involved in operations under way.

During the enemy air raid on Valona reported yesterday, naval anti-aircraft defense shot down an enemy plane.

In East Africa, on the Sudanese frontier, there was activity by patrols and aviation. Enemy troops in tent encampments and marching columns were bombed with shrapnel bombs and machine-gunned. One of our planes failed to return.

The submarine Serpente, commanded by Lieut. Antonio Dotta, attacked an enemy naval formation in the central Mediterranean the night of Dec. 20-21, firing two torpedoes against a light cruiser, sinking it as ascertained by scouting planes.

The submarine Mocenigo, commanded by Capt. Alberto Agostini, sank two big steamers in the Atlantic Ocean with gunfire and hit a third with a torpedo.

17-Billion Budget Drafted for U.S., 10 Billions for Arms; Nazis Warn American Ships to Shun Ireland

President Plans to Double Defense Expenditures in 1941-'42 Fiscal Year

Revenue Estimated At $9,000,000,000

Administration Studying C.I.O. Proposal to Turn Out 500 Planes a Day

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—President Roosevelt was reported authoritatively tonight to have drafted a $17,000,000,000 budget for the coming fiscal year, including $10,000,000,000 for the armament program.

The President was said to have settled major details of the budget soon after he told reporters at a press conference that Budget Director Harold D. Smith was coming to the White House with the latest figures.

The $10,000,000,000 armament estimate was double that of the current year and easily the largest since World War days. If the Treasury pays out $17,000,000,000 in the fiscal year beginning next July 1 it will be the highest in American history with the single exception of the last year of the World War, when $18,522,895,000 was expended.

Plants Sought for Britain

Officials indicated that the budget was large enough so that no substantial changes would be needed to take care of the President's proposal to lease war material to Great Britain. These sources indicated that the principal expenditures on behalf of Great Britain in the next fiscal year would be in construction of factories and other facilities for the production of war material. This construction had been tentatively budgeted as American cost even before the President broached his "lease-lending" plan.

Since the "lease-lending" plan has not been approved by Congress yet, no estimates of its cost could be in the budget tables anyway, officials added, since laws define what can and what can not be in the budget. The President, however, may discuss the British aid question in the message which will accompany the budget.

The indicated figure of $7,000,000,000 for non-military spending in the next fiscal year is nearly the same as recent estimates of such costs this fiscal year. Henry Morgenthau jr., Secretary of the Treasury, recently submitted to a Congressional committee estimates showing that this year's costs would be $5,000,000,000 for defense and $7,000,000,000 for other items.

Estimates of Revenues

Less information was available today on projected Federal revenues, with guesses of officials ranging all the way from $8,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000. The midway figure of $9,000,000,000 has many supporters. If this figure should prove correct, the deficit might be $8,000,000,000, also the largest since the last year of the World War, when expenditures exceeded revenues by $13,370,638,000.

However, the President's revenue estimates will be only tentative and based on existing tax laws. Mr. Morgenthau already has asked for more taxes, and Treasury experts have been figuring on at least $1,000,000,000 of additional levies.

More revenue, officials said, might be sought through stiffening the new excess profits tax, increasing income taxes and adding to inheritance and gift taxes. Some Congressmen have urged a general sales tax, but Administration officials, especially the President, have opposed it.

NIGHT RAIDS CALLED EXTREMELY VIOLENT

Anti-aircraft Fire Is Almost Incessant as Truce Ends—Dover Area Is Shelled—British Pound Invasion Bases.

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Raiding planes assailed London tonight with incendiary and explosive bombs, putting an end to three days and nights of the unofficial Christmas truce in the Battle of London. There was almost incessant anti-aircraft fire.

[Private messages from London indicated that the raid was extremely heavy.]

Showers of incendiary bombs fell on one part of the London area and heavy explosions were heard.

A building housing an American concern was shaken and its windows were shattered. There was considerable minor damage from one blast, but there were no casualties.

[There were indications that this was the Associated Press Building at 20 Tudor street, previously bombed.]

Guests at a party in the basement of one big building continued to dance, although a high explosive bomb fell in the street a few yards away.

"The orchestra kept right on playing and no one missed a step," said one, "although everything shook and the room was filled with dust."

A bar near by was damaged badly and customers threw themselves on the floor to escape injury.

Flares were dropped in some districts of the London area.

Fog Hangs Over Channel.

Planes also were reported over a town in East Anglia.

Nazi aircraft passed over the southeast coast, traveling inland, for the first time since Monday evening. Others were heard leaving the coast, and it was assumed that these were R. A. F. bombers, off for new operations against the Germans.

Planes Patrol Channel

There was considerable air activity over the southeast coast today, it was reported from Deal. At dawn British reconnaissance planes were seen patrolling the coast and the Channel. In mid-morning a single German raider dropped a few bombs that fell harmlessly into the water near a small patrol vessel.

Meanwhile fog overhung the calm channel, across which flew British bombers pounding German-occupied bases, while German long-range guns shelled Dover. Observers called the weather ideal for invasion.

Almost simultaneously with the alarm in the London area, the Air Ministry announced succinctly that in the second day of the R. A. F.'s own daylight offensive, British bombs had fallen on the German submarine base at Lorient, France, and airdromes in Brittany on the invasion coast. All British planes returned.

A single Blenheim bomber of the coastal command attacking the French coast shot down one Messerschmitt fighter and severely damaged another, according to the Air Ministry news service.

Two Nazi Bases Blasted.

Last night the R. A. F. hammered the invasion ports of Bordeaux and of Le Treport, on the French coast, near Dieppe.

The revival of the air war was followed today by a burst of activity on the part of the German cross-Channel gunners, and the Press Association reported that a German warplane reached an area near London before noon today, but was driven back by anti-aircraft fire.

A joint Air and Home Security ministries communique said that an enemy aircraft had dropped bombs this morning on a town in southeast England, causing some damage and a few minor casualties.

The German bombardment of the Dover area, said to have been fairly intense, lasted from 4:30 A. M. to 7 A. M. The Press Association said there was neither damage nor casualties.

Le Havre Badly Battered.

The Air Ministry news service quoted today what it called "a statement from Le Havre" to the effect that British bombing of the French Channel port has been far worse than the bombardment there by the Germans last June.

"On one night in particular it was terrific," the statement said. "Before the British finished coming over we had spent eight hours in the cellar under an incessant bombing.

"The bombs fell like manna. Fires spread to half the hangars at Heroult. There was a gigantic conflagration lasting five hours. Now, as soon as night falls, people all go below ground, even the German soldiers."

An Air Ministry bulletin reporting on "fresh and heartening evidence of damage done in Germany and German-occupied territory," said that there was not the slightest doubt that considerable damage had been inflicted on refineries and factories in Gelsenkirchen.

The bulletin added that an oil refinery at Great Politz and a 3,000 horse power dynamo, petrol tanks and a gasometer near Stettin, on the Baltic, had been hit and damaged.

A factory at Hamm, credited with producing a large proportion of Germany's welding electrodes, was said to have been damaged so severely that production had ceased altogether.

The bulletin also said that damage to docks and warehouses at Hamburg was so enormous that there was virtually no movement of goods at this largest German port.

BOMBERS GIVE LONDON TASTE OF OLD RAIDS

Fire, Explosive Bombs Hit Capital For Hours After Three-Night Lull

700 Patients In Hospital Escape Although Building Is Damaged

By ALFRED WALL
[By the Associated Press]

London, Saturday, Dec. 28—The German air force delivered a short but serious blow at London last night which left no doubt that the tacit Christmas truce in this bitter air war is now only history.

For several hours flares, then incendiaries and finally heavy bombs fell in district after district. The "raiders passed" signal sounded at 11 P. M., but in the preceding hours, British sources said, the raid was equal in intensity to some of the heaviest attacks on London.

It was the first sign of bombing London has seen after three strangely quiet nights.

Some Killed In Shelter

There were casualties—it is not permitted to say how many. Some persons were killed and injured when a public shelter was hit. One woman, pinned under a gas stove with fire burning around her, joked for two hours with the rescue squad that finally got her out. She died a few minutes later.

Reports of damage came in from several areas after the crash of bombs and the thunder of the anti-aircraft had died down.

A London hospital housing 700 patients was damaged by two high-explosive bombs which fell near by, but no one was hurt.

A building housing an American firm was shaken, windows were broken and there was considerable damage of a minor nature. (This may have been the Associated Press Building, previously damaged by a bomb.) There were no casualties there.

Londoners Carry On

Through it all Londoners carried on, busses ran, trains clanked and puffed into stations and main thoroughfares were never completely deserted.

While the raid lasted, planes were coming almost continuously over one southeast town, headed for London, and others—presumably British raiders—were heard flying toward the Continent.

For nearly two hours at the height of the raid there was scarcely a moment when the air was not full of the roar of guns about the city's outskirts. At times they seemed to be all firing at the same time.

In the early stages, when flares were dropped, at least two went out in a shower of fireworks splutters when the gunfire caught them.

Civilians Put Out Fires

Incendiaries came down in showers, but they were all put out quickly—in many instances by civilians armed with sandbags.

Although other points in England were attacked, London appeared to have been the primary target.

In one area after the other incendiaries were dropped first, then high-explosive bombs. There seemed to be no formula for dropping the latter; sometimes they came in salvos; other times, singly.

One section was straddled frequently by strings of high explosives which hit a market, a restaurant and houses across several streets. Some persons were trapped in their ruined homes.

Partygoers Dance On

Guests at a party in the basement of one big building continued to dance although a high explosive bomb fell in the street a few yards away.

"The orchestra kept right on playing and no one missed a step," said one, "although everything shook and the room was filled with dust."

A bar near by was damaged badly and customers threw themselves on the floor to escape injury. Flares were dropped in some districts of the London area.

Nazi Guns Shell Dover

The day had been calm, save for a comparatively minor raid over the home counties surrounding London, during which high-explosive and fire bombs fell, and a two-and-a-half-hour bombardment of the Dover area by German big guns firing from across the Channel.

This long shelling was declared to have produced "no damage or casualties."

Earlier in the day, British pilots, back on day and night bombing assignments, assaulted the Nazi submarine base at Lorient, France, and attacked a series of German-held airdromes in French Brittany.

Second Day Of Action

It was the second successive day of daylight action by the Royal Air Force, for Thursday, and through Thursday night as well, the German-held base of Bordeaux, France, and the port of Le Treport were attacked, along with several German air bases.

[Although the British announced that the Germans had bombed the Island of Sheppey, in the Thames estuary, Thursday, the British action against Bordeaux was declared by authorized Germans not only to have had "no military or practical meaning," but also to have broken the unofficial Christmas-time truce.

[DNB reported that the Royal Air Force also had bombed the French coastal towns of St. Malo, Dinard and Lessay.]

The British Air Ministry announced that the attacks on Bordeaux were centered on an airdrome, and those at Le Treport on shipping.

A single Blenheim bomber of the coastal command, attacking the French coast, shot down one Messerschmitt fighter and "severely damaged" another, the Air Ministry news service reported.

Say British Broke Truce.

Berlin, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Authorized German spokesmen declared today that the Royal Air Force bombed Bordeaux last night in a way "that had no military or practical meaning."

"While the German air force undertook no war operations against the British Isles on the second Christmas holiday (St. Stephen's Day, December 26), British planes on that day and in the following night bombarded airports, port facilities and towns in occupied France," the High Command said.

Several French civilians were reported killed and some wounded.

German anti-aircraft fire, the Nazi spokesman said, drove the raiders away immediately and some bombers were reported so badly hit they undoubtedly failed to return. One bomber was shot down, killing one of the crew of four, they added, while the other three bailed out.

DNB, the official German news agency, said that among other towns bombed by the Royal Air Force along the French coast were St. Malo, Dinard and Lessay.

Authorized Germans said that the Christmas truce was limited to the two holidays, adding that the Germans had now renewed their attacks on convoys.

DNB declared that German planes made no flights over England yesterday or last night.

Informed spokesmen here reported that German long-range guns effectively shelled ships in the channel and the port of Dover today.

British Ship is Bombed.

Berlin, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—A British ship of 8,000 to 10,000 tons was hit today by two German bombs east of the Thames estuary, according to DNB, the official German news agency, which said that the vessel's boilers exploded.

This and other attacks on British shipping indicated that the air war had been resumed violently, [illegible]

Britain Restricts Re-Export to Eire Of Convoyed Goods

Feed and Fertilizer, Important to Cattle Industry, Included

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Britain placed restrictions today upon the re-export to Ireland (Eire) of several vital commodities brought across the Atlantic in ships guarded by British guns.

The Board of Trade, a government department, issued an order prohibiting exportation to Ireland without license of cattle feed, fertilizer, unmanufactured tobacco, oranges, lemons and several classes of tools—all items important to Irish economy.

Ireland is a big cattle exporter, but depends upon imports for feed and fertilizer. She normally imports about $10,000,000 worth of corn annually, and about $2,500,000 worth of fertilizer.

Under the new order, effective January 1, the Board of Trade can start or stop the flow of these commodities at will. Ireland has no other source of supply except Britain.

Many Britishers declare that Ireland, because of her refusal to furnish bases for British convoys, should be deprived of the products the convoys bring from abroad.

Ireland has declared her neutrality in the European war and refused the British the right to establish naval bases on her territory, contending her neutrality thereby would be compromised.

IRELAND CURBS GASOLINE USE, SUPPLY EBBS

Restrictions Follow British Move To Bar Certain Exports

Axis Pledge To Aid Eire Against English "Aggression" Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, Dec. 27—The Irish Government announced tonight restrictions on the distribution of gasoline "owing to unforeseen difficulties in connection with the maintenance of supply."

During the day Irish officials had accepted as a natural consequence of Britain's curtailed shipping a London prohibition against the exportation to Ireland without license of cattle feed, fertilizer, unmanufactured tobacco, oranges, lemons and certain tools.

"We won't starve," said one Irish official. "We are an agricultural country."

The British restrictions apply specifically to commodities which must be brought across the Atlantic in convoyed British ships.

Eire Restricts Gasoline.

Dublin, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Irish Government announced tonight restrictions on the distribution of gasoline "owing to unforseen difficulties in connection with the maintenance of supply."

During the day Irish officials had accepted as a natural consequence of Britain's curtailed shipping a London prohibition against the exportation to Ireland without license of cattle feed, fertilizer, unmanufactured tobacco, oranges, lemons and several classes of tools.

"But we won't starve," one official said. "We are an agricultural country."

Britain's use of her own ships for her own needs caused Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, in a Christmas broadcast to the United States, to appeal for American help "should the blockade grow tighter."

Ireland started building up reserves fourteen months before the war began and these have helped delay the pinch.

Germans Keep Ireland Within Blockade Zone

BERLIN, Dec. 27 (AP).—Karl Megerle, semi-official commenator for the German Foreign Office, told Ireland (Eire) and the United States today that Ireland will continue to be included in the Nazi blockade zone even if the American neutrality law should be amended to exclude Ireland from the specified danger zone.

Writing in the Boersen Zeitung, Megerle said:

"As a retaliatory measure for England's illegal blockade, Germany initiated a total blockade over England. The blockade area was defined with geographical exactness and was announced publicly."

"Whoever appears there, nevertheless, does it at the risk of exposing himself to war-like action. The German blockade declaration, now as before, is in full force and is being enforced determinedly * * * it is up to the Irish people themselves to decide whether their neutrality is served thereby." (Meaning exclusion of Ireland from the zone pronounced dangerous by the United States.)

Karl Silex, editor of the Deutche Allgemeine Zeitung, wrote in a similar vein.

Irish Get Axis Offer Of Aid Against British

LONDON, Dec. 28 (Saturday) (AP).—The Dublin correspondent of "The London Daily Mail" reported today that the Rome radio had offered full Axis support to Ireland in the event of "British aggression."

This was the radio's statement, according to the correspondent: "Should the Irish people be forced to defend themselves against British aggression, they can be assured of the full and whole-hearted help of the Axis powers. Besides this military help, the whole Catholic world would be on their side."

British Are Poised To Deliver Final Bardia Assault

English Delay Ascribed To Desire to Hold Down Troop Losses

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 27.—Fall of the beleaguered Libyan port of Bardia awaits only the go-ahead signal of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, military circles declared today as British planes and big guns continued their steady bombardment of the estimated 20,000 Italian troops encircled there.

These sources expressed belief that the town could have been taken at any time within the past few days by direct assault, but said the British commander was unwilling to sacrifice more troops than necessary.

Sir Archibald has been conducting his entire campaign in North Africa, during which the Italians were cleared out of Egypt in a lightning thrust that yielded more than 35,000 prisoners, on the policy of achieving the greatest gains with the least possible loss.

Pending orders for the final assault upon Bardia, the Royal Air Force sought to counter the attempts of Italian flyers to harass British ground forces by striking heavily at Fascist air bases far to the West.

Reports from the front indicated that every effort was being made to sweep the Italians from the air.

A recent increase in Italian aerial activity, as well as the tactics employed by the Fascist bombers, led to speculation among the British that a new air commander had taken charge on this front.

While the situation around Bardia apparently has not changed much in the last day or so, British mechanized units were said to be keeping the Italians' outer defenses under steady pressure, thus contributing to the general "softening up" process at which the aerial and artillery bombardment has been aimed.

British military men said the Italians were making no attempt to end reinforcements to Bardia or to withdraw troops and materials from that region.

Despite the lack of reinforcements, however, the Fascist garrison under Gen. Berti appeared determined to put up a fight to retain the stronghold.

Reports reaching Cairo said the Italians were moving some war materials from Italy to Libya, but no abnormally large shipments across the Mediterranean were reported.

Hundreds of horses and mules left behind by the Italians when they retreated from Egypt are still roaming the western desert in groups, seeking water and trying to graze on thorny shrubs, which are the only vegetation.

The British are rounding up some of these animals, but many have been so frightened by the sounds of battle that they are not easily caught.

Today's British headquarters communique was a single sentence: "On all fronts the situation remains unchanged."

Athens, Dec. 27—On snowbound peaks, Greeks and Italians were locked tonight in a furious battle for Klisura, fiercely defended mountain gateway through which the Hellenes' right flank seeks to fight into Tepeleni and on Valona in a coordinated drive with the coastal left flank.

In the Tepeleni area, a Government spokesman said tonight, the Fascists had been driven from several villages in battles on the high, cold terrain. Their retreat eastward from Chimara continued, he added, and in that sector the Greeks pressed an uninterrupted advance.

200 Prisoners Captured

A general headquarters communique claimed the capture of more than 200 prisoners, including some officers, and "many automatic weapons and mortars" in local operations on an unspecified front.

The importance of the Klisura Pass was emphasized by large reinforcements the Italians were reported to have concentrated there.

The Greek high command spoke only of "successful" local operations in its usual laconic communique and mentioned the capture of "a considerable quantity" of war material.

The Ministry of Home Security said the fate of 49 Greek notables "abducted" by Italians "during their flight from Argirocastro" was not known.

Its capture would open the route to Tepeleni, from where a road continues north-northwestward, to Valona, vital Adriatic port toward which the Italians have been falling back under pressure of Greek advances along the Albanian coast.

Italians Bolster Defense

"Realizing the great importance of the pass," a Greek military advice said, "the Italians concentrated as many forces as they could in their determination to frustrate at any cost the plans of the general staff.

"With each passing day, however, the battle is turning to the advantage of Greek troops."

As the fight raged on an ever-broadening scale, Greek forces to the north were reported to be threatening to cut the highway to Berat, objective in the right flank's encircling movement toward Valona.

Advance In South Reported

In the south coastal sector, the Greeks reported a continued advance against ever-stiffening Italian resistance. They said there were indications that the enemy was resisting furiously in an effort to gain time to prepare an elaborate defense of Valona.

Captured Italian officers estimated that the Greek campaign had cost Italy 45,000 wounded soldiers and a high death toll, which they declined to estimate. Many died of cold, a lieutenant colonel said.

With the British Forces Outside Bardia, Dec. 27—A "sacrifice garrison" of 20,000 Italians stubbornly held this besieged port tonight at the personal order of Premier Benito Mussolini, while thousands of their comrades threw up additional fortifications for a stronger stand at Tobruk, fifty miles to the west.

Italians captured by the British said Mussolini's order, that they be "ready to die" rather than give up Bardia, was transmitted by Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, North African commander now at Tobruk.

Exhorts Men To Rally

Gen. Francesco Berti, Bardia commander, noted for his ability to exhort his men to brave deeds, thereupon called on them to rally and redeem the Italian army's prestige by blocking the British advance into Libya.

Had it not been for il Duce's order, one officer said, Bardia would have been abandoned shortly after the fall of Salum on December 16.

Some prisoners echoed Rome radio broadcasts that Bardia would be a "second Alcazar," a reference to the ten-week siege of Spain' "West Point" at Toledo by the former Government forces during the Spanish civil war.

No Reinforcements Come

Although determined to put up a resistance rivaling the Alcazar's, the Italians apparently do not hold the hope that history will repeat itself and the garrison be rescued.

They removed all important military documents and some troops two weeks ago and since then have made no effort to reinforce the garrison except to send large air squadrons daily against the British besiegers.

Moreover, the preparations at Tobruk obviously are designed to form a secondary line of defense if Bardia falls, and the strategy appears to be for the 20,000 beleaguered men to fight for time to complete the task.

British Confident

The British, confident of taking Bardia, prepared to renew a withering fire on the pillboxes and dugouts about the port and the town itself, while the flyers went up and roamed far to the west in attacks designed to halt the harassment by Fascist bombers.

Examination of captured Italian material showed that while the amount brought into Egypt was greater than had been believed, much was of poor quality.

"Inherited From Garibaldi"

Trucks were mainly good, certain other machinery excellent, but many guns of the Libyan troops were as much as fifty years old and of some field pieces the British said they "must have been inherited from Garibaldi."

The Italians relied upon mules and horses to pull much of their equipment, and most of their infantry marched. The British forces, on the other hand, were wholly motorized.

A checkup likewise has proved Italian divisions numerically smaller than supposed, 14,000 men instead of 18,000, as once claimed by the Fascist command.

"Greek forces continued to advance and undertook a new offensive against the enemy, who tried to resist in his defense line," one dispatch said.

"The aims of our troops were accomplished without sacrifice, whereas the enemy suffered heavy losses in his effort to defend his ground inch by inch.

"Fresh Italian reinforcements lost morale as soon as they realized the Greek determination."

Another report described the battle in the Klisura sector as "of exceptional importance."

"Realizing the great importance of Klisura Pass, the Italians concentrated as many forces as they could in their determination to frustrate at any cost the plans of the general staff," this account went on.

"With each passing day, however, the battle is turning to the advantage of Greek troops."

Enemy Thrown Back.

The Greek spokesman said "Italian troops suffered another defeat" in the sector north and northwest of the captured town of Chimara, which is 30 miles south of Valona.

"An attack on the part of our units resulted in the enemy being thrown back and in his abandoning the line which he held and a height of considerable strategic importance," he asserted.

The spokesman said conditions on the northern front were "very hard. There were snowdrifts, mist and extremely bitter cold." Nevertheless, he added, the Greeks "advanced and occupied some villages" after local engagements.

Captured Fascist officers all spoke of the bitter cold and prisoners reaching Ioannina, Greece, from the front were said to be in pitiful condition because of cold and hunger.

One officer said he feared 700 prisoners of war were the only survivors of a crack Italian infantry regiment overwhelmed by the Greek advance on Chimara. (A regiment normally has between 2,000 and 3,000 men.)

"We departed from the rear 15 days before we were forced to surrender last Sunday," a lieutenant said. "For five days we were without bread. Many of our men were wounded or suffering frozen feet. Some of us stood in snow up to our hips defending advance posts."

One group of prisoners—27 officers and 80 men—arrived in Ioannina Christmas night and cried "Viva Greecia" when Greek troops gave them cigarettes.

Many Died of Cold.

A captured Italian lieutenant colonel said the bitter weather was causing severe suffering and that many Italian battalions were reduced from 700 to 200 men by losses. Many of his men died of cold, he said, and many others were sent back to hospitals because of frostbite.

Operations Severely Handicapped by Snow and Cold

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Dec. 27.—One of the fiercest battles of the Greek-Italian war was reported raging today in the Klisura sector of Albania, where the Italians were said to have concentrated huge reinforcements in an effort to defend a vital mountain pass gateway to the north and west.

A heavy snowstorm and bitter cold weather severely handicapped military operations, but reports from the front said fighting was developing on an increasingly broad scale both before the pass itself and to the north of Klisura, where the Greeks were declared threatening to cut a highway to Berati, farther north.

Despite the determined Italian resistance, the Greeks were said to have captured new positions along with Italian prisoners and war materials.

Advance Is Continued.

In the central sector, Greek military advices said bitter fighting continued throughout yesterday.

Resistance Stiffer.

In the coastal area, where the Greeks are fighting toward the vital Albanian port of Valona, the Greeks reported a continuing advance, but acknowledged that there, too, the Italians were putting up stiffer resistance. They said there were indications the Fascist forces were preparing an elaborate defense of Valona.

Fighting on the snow-carpeted northern front was said to be progressing, with Greek infantry attacks "on a fairly large scale" and with heavy artillery duels.

Captured Italian officers, talking with correspondents at the front said strong Italian defenses still lay in the path of Greek forces battling up the coast toward Valona. They estimated that the Greek campaign which began October 28 had cost Italy 45,000 wounded soldiers, but made no estimate of the number of dead, saying only that the toll was high.

The Royal Air Force reported it had carried out an attack on the coastal town of Krionero, about five miles south of Valona, bombing warehouses, buildings and railway lines. All British planes returned safely, despite a 10-minute encounter with nine "enemy" fighters, a communique said.

Italians Claim 3 British Planes

Rome, Dec. 27 (AP)—Three British Blenheim bombers were shot down in the Greek-Italian combat in Albania, the Italian high command asserted today, while artillery activity and local actions continued on land.

"Harbor installations, steamers in the harbor and objectives directly involved in the land operations were hit by our bombers," a communique said. The harbor was not identified.

"An enemy attack on one of our bases failed because of the quick intervention of our pursuit planes," it added.

Rome, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—An Italian seaplane effectively bombed an enemy submarine in waters off the Libyan coast yesterday, the Italian High Command reported today, adding that artillery actions and patrol activity continued on the North African land front.

The Italian Air Force, the communique said, was intensely active, carrying out bombardments of front line base batteries, mechanized equipment and ships in harbor.

"Fighter planes engaged in combat with a large formation of Glosters (British warplanes)," the communique continued, "three enemy planes were shot down. One of our planes failed to return."

Nazis Believed Asking Change In Vichy Rule

Ask Gesture Proving Good Will Prior to Renewal of Co-operation Talks

VICHY, Dec. 27 (AP).—Informed French sources reported today that suggestions from Premier Marshal Henri Petain as to how France and Germany could co-operate had been given to the Nazis, but that no reply had been forthcoming, apparently because of the German feeling that the "present atmosphere is unpropitious." The marshal's proposals were taken to Paris by Navy Minister Admiral Jean Darlan, who conferred with Otto Abetz, Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's representative there, and "other high German personalities."

Informed quarters at Vichy said no German reply was expected until after the New Year holiday. The German attitude was said here to be that it was up to France to do something to win back Germany's confidence. Abetz was said to have contended especially that certain men in Petain's government whom the Germans mistrust should be given their walking papers.

[Diplomatic advices reaching Berne, Switzerland, said Darlan had presented to Hitler himself a letter from Petain at a meeting somewhere in occupied France north of Paris. Hitler was on the French coast Christmas Day and Thursday, Berlin reported. The advices said it was understood Petain's communication conveyed to Hitler both an assurance of the French chief of state's desire to continue French-German collaboration and an explanation of his refusal to take Pierre Laval, former Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, back into his Cabinet.]

Fernand de Brinon, the Petain governments delegate in German-occupied Paris, came to Vichy today, and it was believed he might have brought the news of the German attitude. Admiral Darlan returned from Paris yesterday.

Hitler Gets Message

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 27—Navy Minister Jean Darlan, of the Vichy French Government, was reported today in diplomatic advices to have delivered personally to Adolf Hitler somewhere in German-occupied France north of Paris a letter from Chief of State Petain.

The contents of the letter were not learned, but they were understood to convey both reassurance of Petain's desire to continue French-German collaboration and explanation of his refusal to take the ousted Pierre Laval back into the Cabient. Laval had been Foreign Minister, Vice-Premier and negotiator-in-chief with Germany.

Darlan returned yesterday to Vichy after a two-day trip. Hitler was reported from Berlin to have been on the French coast Christmas Day and yesterday.

Nazi-French Collaboration

Vichy, France, Dec. 27 (AP)—Fernand de Brinon, the Petain Government's delegate at German-occupied Paris, returned to Vichy today, and it was believed he might have brought the German answer to suggestions from Chief of State Petain on how collaboration could be continued.

A meeting of the Cabinet Council, scheduled for this afternoon, was called off. Navy Minister Jean Darlan, who is thought to have Given Petain's views to the Germans, returned from Paris only yesterday. It was believed, however, that any action which the French may contemplate will be delayed several days.

III

Vichy's Budget

Vichy, Dec. 27 (AP)—Informed sources said today the Finance Ministry shortly would publish a budget of not less than 25,000,000,000 francs for the first quarter of 1941.

No new taxes are anticipated immediately, it was said, but because the budget includes only part of the German army of occupation it still was uncertain how the total budget figure would be met.

(The last exchange quotation for the franc was about two cents.)

Occupation Army Expensive

One of the heaviest drains on the French treasury is the cost of maintaining the German forces of occupation, involving a daily outlay of 20,000,000 marks (about $8,000,000).

The budget for the first quarter of 1941 compares with one of 54,937,000,000 francs for the same period last year while France was still at war.

The French budget for all of 1939 was 66,388,000,000 francs.

Vichy Assigns Gould Villa As Residence for Leahy

Envoy Is Expected to Reach France Jan. 3

VICHY, Dec. 27 (AP).—A villa here belonging to Frank J. Gould, wealthy American, was set aside by the French government today as a residence for Admiral William D. Leahy, newly appointed American Ambassador to France.

The villa was occupied until last June by Edouard Herriot, former president of the French Chamber of Deputies and one-time Premier.

Admiral Leahy, now en route to Europe aboard the American cruiser Tuscaloosa, is expected to reach Lisbon, Portugal Dec. 30 and probably will reach the French frontier Jan. 3.

Latin Sway Stated As Aim Of Spain

Madrid, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Spanish Government today set aside new funds to rush enlargement of Vigo harbor and simultaneously the Falangist newspaper Arriba declared that Spain aspired to be a great Atlantic sea power to protect both herself and Latin America.

Arriba said the idea was to build such a "powerful" Hispano-Americanism that the present Pan-Americanism (advocated by the United States) would no longer be "eulogized on the other side of the Atlantic."

When this plan is effected, the newspaper said without mentioning the United States, there will be no more "listening to the foreigner."

This statement about Spain's interest in Latin America recalls assertions made by Spanish commentators at the time Germany, Italy and Japan reached their tri-power pact to "shatter" any interference with their New Order in Europe and Greater East Asia.

The Spanish commentators, writing under a Rome dateline, hinted that the eventual peace settlement will restore to Spain "not only her national territories but also those colonial ones to which geography, economy and history entitle her."

At about the same time a German paper called Spain "a bridgehead to the South Atlantic."

BRITAIN COMPLETING NETHERLANDS' FLEET

Unfinished Warships Fled to Britain During Invasion

LONDON, Dec. 27 (AP)—A Netherland naval officer announced today that several unfinished Netherland warships, brought across the English Channel when the Germans invaded the Low Countries last May, were being completed in Britain and would soon go into action.

He added that the Netherland Navy, which is cooperating with the British Navy, would get one of the destroyers Britain received in the naval base deal with the United States. He said the Netherland fleet air arm had been equipped with modern machines.

He disclosed that most of the navy had escaped to Britain and that only three gunboats and two minelayers had been lost in action during the invasion.

Janes' Fighting Ships, British naval handbook, reported in 1939 that the Netherlands had four cruisers afloat, ranging from 3,350 tons to 6,670 tons, and three under construction, two of them of 8,350 tons and one of 3,350 tons. In addition, the Netherlands had eight destroyers with four building, twelve torpedo boats with thirty-two building, twenty-one submarines with nine building and seven gunboats building.)

Charles Fellowes Gordon, acting commander in charge of the British armed merchant cruiser Alcantara, which fought an indecisive running fight with a German sea raider last July of Brazil, received the Distinguished Service Cross "for good services in action," it was announced today.

Two British seamen were killed and seven wounded in the fight on July 29 and the Alcantara put into Rio de Janeiro for repairs.

Lieut. Comdr. Gordon married Sarah R. Colyer, a cousin of President Roosevelt. The President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, visited them in Aberdeen in 1934.

In addition, the statement said, naval aircraft had shot down fifty-two planes confirmed and ten unconfirmed and had damaged forty-nine during the same period.

New Type War Bonds To Be Issued by Britain

Wood Announces Issues, Says Money Is Imperative

LONDON, Dec. 27 (AP).—Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, asserting that Great Britain's need of money for war weapons was "imperative," announced tonight two new types of war securities.

Wood praised the "fine achievement" of raising £1,269,000,000 ($5,076,000,000) on national war bonds and other types of public loans to the government. "But I ask you for more," he added.

One of the new issues, 2½ per cent national war bonds, will go on sale on Jan. 2. They will be issued at par and will be repayable at par on Aug. 15, 1948, or, if the government gives notice, on or after July 15, 1946.

A new security called "3 per cent savings bonds 1955-*65" will go on sale on Jan. 2, along with the national war bonds. These also will be issued at par and will be repaid at par on Aug. 15, 1965, or, if the government gives notice, on or after Aug, 15, 1955.

The bonds will be issued through the Bank of England in multiples of £50 ($200), with a minimum subscription of £100 ($400). A smaller investor can buy through the post-office and trustee savings banks with a first payment of £25 ($100).

National savings certificates, 3 per cent defense bonds and facilities of the postoffice and trustee savings banks, will continue to be available, Wood said.

Stressing the urgency of the situation, the Chancellor declared:

"Our needs, particularly for the best weapons for our airmen and for all demands of modern war, are, I think, clear to all. They are, in fact, imperative."

Hungary to Cut Train Service With Rumania

Order, Effective Tomorrow, Linked to Movement of 300,000 Nazi Troops

BUDAPEST, Dec. 27 (AP). — All passenger-train service between Hungary and Rumania will be suspended from Sunday until Jan. 15, it was reported reliably today.

This was interpreted here as connected with the drastic curtailment of Hungarian domestic service to permit nearly forty German military trains to pass daily through Hungary en route to Rumania.

Germany is shifting nearly 300,000 soldiers along with considerable quantities of equipment to Rumania before Jan. 31, diplomatic sources here have reported.

SOVIET SEES OIL LAG AMONG BELLIGERENTS

Says Shortage Is 'Felt Sharply' —Axis to Discuss Rumania

MOSCOW, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Russian Army newspaper Red Star reported today that an oil shortage is being felt" sharply by all belligerents" in the European war.

Citing the German campaign of 1916 against Rumania as a precedent for a "march to oil," the army publication said:

"The impossibility of carrying on war without fuel makes oil not only an important means of war but also the aim of some special military operations.

"In the second imperialistic war the blockade of a rival's oil supply and occupation of oil deposits is quite an important factor in policy and strategy."

British, German and Italian bombings of oil deposits and refineries were examples of this, it was said, although the present situation in Rumania was not cited.

"The further development of military aviation, the growth of navies and the expansion of mechanized armies," the article continued, "are inseparably connected with the increase and expense of oil, the shortage of which already is felt sharply by all belligerents and many neutral countries. The longer the imperialistic war lasts the wider will be the development of operations and the more difficult will be the problem of supplying the war with its main source of energy—oil."

Pravda, official Communist organ, reported that plans were under way to increase production in the Soviet's important Baku oil region by the exploitation of resources under the Caspian Sea.

Raider Shells British Isle In Pacific

Attacker Displays Japanese Name And Colors

By the Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 27.—A sea raider sailing under a Japanese name and flying Japanese colors heavily shelled the British-mandated Island of Nauru shortly after daybreak today. It was announced by Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies.

Why a raider should single out this 5,400-acre atoll near the equator for a bombardment was unexplained. However, as a guano island, Nauru is valuable for its phosphates.

(As for the attack itself, British sources in London could go no further than Menzies' announcement, but they said a German raider is known to have been operating in that part of the Pacific in recent months. Even so, the reported display of the Japanese flag was unexplained.)

No Casualties Reported.

Buildings and a plant on the island were said to have been damaged heavily. (The type of plant was not specified but Nauru is known to have a radio station.) No casualties were reported, however.

"Nauru is entirely undefended against such an attack," Menzies declared in a statement, "and must be so under the League of Nations mandate.

"The enemy knows this fact which removes any justification for his action, which is a greater crime because it was made under neutral colors. The raider attacked under a Japanese name and Japanese colors—those of a country with whom we are at peace."

Former German Colony.

Nauru is a former German island which was surrendered to Australian forces in 1914 and which has been administered by British under a mandate approved by the League of Nations in 1920. It is an atoll surrounded by a reef which is exposed at low tide and lies in the Pacific about 2,200 miles southwest of Hawaii and only 26 miles south of the Equator. To the north of it are the Japanese-mandated Marshall Islands.

Nauru is chiefly valuable for its phosphate deposits of which it exports nearly 1,000,000 tons a year.

Its population in April, 1939, was 187 Europeans, 1,651 Nauruans, 29 other Pacific islanders and 1,516 Chinese.

On December 16 New Zealand Prime Minister Peter Fraser disclosed that wreckage of a small steamer had been found on the shore of Chatham Island, 350 miles east of New Zealand, and said there had been indications of a German raider operating in that area of the South Pacific.

At Honolulu a member of the crew of the City of Rayville, American steamship sunk off Australia, apparently by a mine, said he believed that three or four German surface raiders were operating in the South Pacific.

British Isle In Pacific Is Shelled By Raider

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 27 (AP)—A mysterious sea prowler sailing under the colors of Japan carried total war today to a tiny former German atoll in the western Pacific, heavily shelling the islet of Nauru at daybreak, the Australian Government announced.

The islet, almost exactly on the equator and lying south of the Japanese mandated islands, is mandated to the British Empire. Robert G. Menzies, Australian Prime Minister, announced that buildings and a plant (perhaps a radio station) were pounded badly, but there were no casualties.

30,24-6625

30.24-6625

Attack Laid To Enemy

He laid the attack directly to the "enemy," obviously meaning Germany. He said Nauru was completely undefended and "the enemy knows this fact, which removes any justification for his action."

Furthermore, he charged, the attack "is a greater crime because it was made under neutral colors. The raider attacked under a Japanese name and Japanese colors—those of a country with whom we are at peace."

Motive Mysterious

Australian officials did not attempt to explain the raider's motive in shelling Nauru, also known as "Pleasant Island." This eight-and-half-mile-long, 5,400-acre guano atoll is, however, a considerable exporter of phosphates, sending out nearly 1,000,000 tons a year.

Fewer than 3,500 people live there. It is some 1,300 miles northeast of the Australian mainland.

Germany annexed it in 1888, but the island capitulated to the Australian cruiser Melbourne during the World War.

Australia's War Role

Australia's increasing role in the British Empire's war effort is being underlined by the conquests of her troops in the western Egyptian desert and Libya, against the Italians.

Today Percy C. Spencer, Australian Army Minister, reached Singapore, great Far Eastern British naval-air base, and declared: "Our desire is that the three great nations facing the Pacific—the United States, Japan and Australia—live in amity." With him was the chief of the Australian general staff. Lieut. Gen. V. A. H. Sturdee.

Meanwhile, Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, commander in chief of Britain's Far Eastern command, arrived at Hongkong from Singapore.

Strategic Value Denied.

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—British spokesmen here said today that their only information on the shelling of Nauru was contained in the announcement of the Australian Prime Minister, Robert G. Menzies.

They declared that Nauru is a guano island rich in nitrates, but without strategic importance.

It was known that a German raider was operating in that general part of the Pacific in recent months, they added, and the Post Office announced that mails for New Zealand, the Cook Islands and Tonga, dispatched in the latter part of October, had been "lost through enemy action."

Tokyo, Dec. 28-(Saturday)-Both the government information bureau and naval sources refrained from comment today on press reports that a mysterious sea raider flying the colors of Japan had shelled the British mandated islet of Nauru yesterday.

The Australian Legations said it had not been informed officially of the incident.

Ships Heading for Fiji Are Ordered to Suva

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP).—Evidence that the British are making strenuous efforts to catch German raiders operating in the South Pacific was seen today in an announcement that all ships heading for Fiji Island ports must call first at Suva for orders.

Navy headquarters here said the new order becomes effective January 1.

Shipping circles said control of all vessels in the area would make it difficult for raiders to provision at small island ports.

It was also believed that British and Dutch naval forces had mined certain areas in an attempt to trap raiders.

Australia's Stand

Singapore, Dec. 27 (AP)—Australian Army Minister Percy C. Spender, on a flying visit to Singapore with the chief of the Australian general staff, Lieut. Gen. V. A. H. Sturdee, said in an interview today that "our desire is that the three great nations facing the Pacific—the United States, Japan and Australia—live in amity."

He said Australia considers Singeport, the British Navy's "Gibraltar of the East," to be "vital as a link in empire communications."

"Let there be no misapprehension about where Australia stands—with her empire at all times," he declared. "There never has been and never will be any basis of misunderstanding on this point."

He said that the European war had brought the United States and Australia closer, as shown by their exchange of Ministers, and that Australia had sent Sir John Latham as her new Minister to Japan as a sign of her desire for peace in the Pacific.

The steel-increase program was described as one of intensive and extensive development of ore deposits in order to have the industry emerge from dependence upon foreign countries for scrap. It also calls for arrangements for the supply of high-grade coal to operate steel-making facilities at the maximum.

Purchases of coal from China and Manchoukuo were indicated, with emphasis on more effective transportation.

Naoki Hoshino, president of the planning board, said that "the greatest importance is placed on speeding up the installation of ore-process machinery at works now equipped with blast furnaces.

channels for supplying war material to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's armies were seen in a Japanese communique today.

The communique from Japan's South China Seas fleet stated that along with extension of the Japanese blockade of China on Wednesday, naval forces, including airplanes, "started operations against Chungking supply routes and harbors along the southwestern coast of Kwangtung." It listed five towns where warehouses were bombed.

When Japanese troops withdrew from Kwangsi and southwestern Kwangtung provinces, it was claimed that they were no longer needed there because the entry of their soldiers into French Indo-China had nullified the value of the Chinese supply routes through the abandoned territory.

A survey of commercial circles disclosed a serious shortage of badly needed foreign raw materials and manufactured goods. Following the entry of Japanese forces into parts of Indo-China, British and other foreign ships ceased to call.

Because of the shortage of gasoline, the authorities here have threatened to requisition stocks because there is no prospect of replenishment.

The scarcity of toilet goods, clothing and other necessaries has forced a number of stores to close.

Tokyo, Dec. 27 (AP)—A revision of its material-resources-mobilization plan for the last quarter of the fiscal year ending next March 31 was ordered by the Cabinet today to meet the situation created by the tightened United States embargo and British pressure on trade between Japan and the Crown colonies.

The revision also aims at establishment of self-sufficiency in essential materials for the Greater East Asia sphere, it was stated.

It calls for an additional increase in steel production, a new rice-supply plan and other measures.

Japanese Return Loot

HANOI, French Indo-China, Dec. 27 (AP)—French officials reported today that a detachment of Japanese sailors had entered the warehouse of the American Far East Trading Company at Haiphong and hauled away a quantity of automobile tires and other merchandise in an armored car but returned all the goods after a protest had been made.

Quantities of American merchandise are stored here and at Japanese-controlled Haiphong, port on the Gulf of Tonkin. The refusal of Japanese authorities at Tonkin to permit their re-export has been a source of constant friction between the Japanese forces and American traders.

VICHY, France, Dec. 27 (AP)—France plans to send a delegation from Indo-China to Bangkok in an effort to settle the frontier dispute with Thailand [Siam], it was reliably reported today.

It is understood that Rene Robin, the head of an Indo-Chinese delegation that is negotiating with Japan, has been asked to lead the French negotiators to Thailand.

It also was reported that France had informed Japan, which offered to arbitrate between Indo-China and Thailand, that it would acccept no mediation.

A well-informed source said a shipload of arms from Japan en route to Thailand had turned back at the demand of Indo-Chinese authorities.

French in Philippines Unite

MANILA, Dec. 27 (AP).—A committee of Frenchmen residing in the Philippines was formed today to recommend ways and means by which Frenchmen here might join the de Gaulle "Free French" movement.

The committee is headed by Auguste Vabre, an engineer and a major in the French artillery reserve. A veteran of the World War, he came to the Philippines in 1937.

Vabre termed the Franco-German armistice of last June "shameful," and asserted the French regime at Vichy, in collaborating with Germany, "cares only for the realization of its despicable and petty political ambitions."

Free Frenchmen in the Philippines, Vabre said, "have made up their minds and are ready to help to the utmost the cause of Britain, which is the cause of France and of all free, peace-loving countries in the world."

Friends of Admiral Smeallie said he has been confined to the Naval Hospital at Canacao since December 11. Although much improved, he is not expected to resume active duty prior to sailing for the United States some time early in 1941 on a routine change of command.

U. S. Uses Food As Bait to Part Spain and Axis

Aid for Madrid Hinges on Pledge of 'More Friendly' Attitude to Democracies

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—American food shipments to hungry Spain now depend, it was learned authoritatively today, on whether the Spanish government, which has been collaborating closely with the Axis powers, adopts a "more friendly" attitude toward the United States and Great Britain.

30,24-6627

30.24-6627

Definite progress has been made in negotiations in Washington, London and Madrid in the last four months, it was stated, but a final decision may not be made until Viscount Halifax, the new British Ambassador, arrives here soon after New Year's Day.

Informed sources disclosed that discussions about food shipments have fluctuated from favorable to unfavorable with changes in the international situation and that the outcome still depends on the role Spain assumes in threatening developments in the Mediterranean.

Spanish officials approached Alexander Weddell, Ambassador to Madrid, early in September, it was learned, seeking an arrangement by which Spain, impoverished by the long civil war, could obtain American assistance in rehabilitating the country.

(Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, has stated several times that the question of aiding Spain involves only possible shipments of goods and that the United States has never considered making a cash loan to the Spanish government.)

The United States, it was learned, in pursuance of its "traditional policy of extending relief to meet urgent human needs" offered to send shipments of foodstuffs immediately and to discuss the question of shipments of raw materials, if the Spanish government would provide assurances of a more friendly policy toward Americans.

Just as the negotiations seemed near success, it was stated, Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner adopted a policy of closer collaboration with Germany and Italy and Ambassador Weddell dropped the subject.

In early November, the British, interested in achieving more friendly relations with Generalissimo Francisco Franco's government, proposed to ship wheat from Argentina and Canada to Spain. The British were interested primarily in inducing Spain to refrain from active participation in the Axis. They hoped particularly that Spain would not permit German troops to march across the country and attack Gibraltar.

The United States was asked to reopen negotiations, informed sources reported, by offering to provide food "as an initial step toward peaceful reconstruction of Spain."

The British, however, are not yet satisfied with assurances from Spain, and have not made any of the proposed food shipments. Before taking action, therefore, the United States is awaiting clarification of the situation.

FOOD FOR EUROPE GIVES OLAV PAUSE

Norwegian Says Question Is a Frightful One.

Washington, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Crown Prince Olav of Norway said today that whether the United States should send food to Europe was "a frightful question to decide" and that he could not give his personal opinion pending a Europewide study of the problem.

The Crown Prince added that, as far as Norway was concerned, there was no doubt that the Germans had requisitioned considerable amounts of foodstuffs and that the German army of occupation was being fed by Norwegian food.

"The Germans," he said, "are also clothing their forces in Norway with boots, underwear and other clothing taken from Norwegian stocks. They are living on the fat of the land, but how much longer that will be possible we don't know."

The Norwegian legation, coincident with the Crown Prince's remarks to a press conference, issued a statement reporting shortages in some basic foodstuffs.

The Germans are confiscating about 10,000 pounds of meat in Oslo daily, it said, making it almost impossible for Norwegian civilians to obtain bacon or meat, and eggs rarely reach public markets since they are requisitioned directly from farms.

"Fifty thousand Christmas cakes meant for hospital patients," the statement said, "were requisitioned by the Germans a few days before Christmas."

SAYS ROOSEVELT FAVORS WAR GROUP

Wheeler Asserts President Takes Them "To Bosom And Shuns" Peace Workers

Montana Senator Assails Telegram Favoring Any Step To Defeat Axis

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27 — Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) said today that President Roosevelt "takes to his bosom all of those who want war and shuns those who are talking of peace."

He was commenting on the telegram signed by 170 persons and made public by the White House yesterday which urged that it be this country's policy to do "everything that may be necessary" to insure defeat of the Axis powers.

Major Debate Looms

Wheeler declared that the sense of the telegram was "that we go to war."

"The significant thing about it," he said, "is that the White House gave out the statement, and it is significant that the White House never gives out any statement of any group that urges that it do anything it can to bring about peace.

The Senator's statement was another in a series of expressions at the Capitol which seem to indicate that an early development in the new Congress may be a major debate over American policy and the war.

In the last ten days, there have been successive suggestions from Senators Tydings, Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) and Holt (Dem., W. Va.) that the United States explore the possibilities of a negotiated peace in Europe. Wheeler, in addition, said the United States should try to compel a peace.

Roosevelt Keeps Silent

To these suggestions, Senator McCarran (Dem., Nev.) added a prediction today that "there will be a decided move in the Senate for restitution of real neutrality."

"Real neutrality," McCarran added, "does not result from furnishing the implements of war."

Thus far, President Roosevelt has kept silent on the demands.

The Chief Executive also declined to comment on the telegram he received yesterday.

Among those whose signatures were attached to the message were a number of persons prominent in education, industry, literature or other fields. The action was described as that of individuals and without sponsorship by any organization.

Wheeler asserted that the petitioners were "the same old crowd that has been urging us step by step toward the European war."

Analysis Of Group

"Analyze this group," he said, "and you will find some of those who are financially interested — international bankers with connections in Europe—former attorneys for the British Embassy, those who are emotionally affected by what is taking place in Europe and those who are more English than American.

"It is also significant that no farm, labor, mother or youth organizations are represented in the group.

"It doesn't take any courage for a group like this, who won't have to be in the front-line trenches, or who won't be leased or loaned to Great Britain, or won't do any of the fighting, to urge on the President that we go to war, because that is what the petition means in no uncertain terms."

GROUP REPEATS PLEA TO LIFT WAR-AID BARS

White Committee Executives Reaffirm Advocacy Of Law Modification

Maj. Gen. J. F. O'Ryan Assails Recent Declaration Of Chairman

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 27—Four members of the executive committee of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies today reaffirmed the committee's advocacy of the modification of statutes restricting American cooperation with democratic nations at war.

It expressed accord with the round-robin telegram sent to President Roosevelt yesterday urging him "to do everything that may be necessary" to defeat the Axis powers.

Statement Issued

The executive committee members issued the following statement:

"In reply to inquiries concerning the policy of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, we call attention to the official statement of policy of the committee unanimously adopted on November 26, 1940."

The Committee stands unqualifiedly and unalterably on that statement which it is expected will be reaffirmed and strengthend at a meeting of the policy committee to be held on December 30.

Letter Signed By 175

"The committee associates itself with a letter to the Uresident prepared by Lewis W. Douglas and President Conant of Harvard and signed by more than 175 citizens, including William Allen White and many other members of this committee.

"Indorsements of this letter have been going to the President from local chapters throughout the country."

In its November statement, the committee urged Congress "to assume a larger responsibility with the President" for aiding democratic nations at war and urged modification of acts tending to hinder our cooperation with them.

Allegiance Pledged

It also advocated increased American arms production, a supply of American merchant vessels to Britain, joint use of American and British Pacific naval bases, and joint protection by the two fleets of the Atlantic and Pacific.

Dr. Frank Kingdon and Herbert Bayard Swope, New York members of the committee's national policy board, claiming to speak for 16,000 members of the New York chapter, issued a statement today pledging allegiance to the national organization.

The statement declared the Philadelphia and Boston chapters concurred.

Assails Declaration

Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commander of the Twenty-seventh Division in France during the World War and former commander of the New York National Guard, meanwhile assailed a recent remark of the committee head.

In a letter to White, O'Ryan said that if White's declaration that "the only reason in God's world I am in this organization is to keep America out of war" was authentic, he could "consider this letter my resignation as a member of the White committee.

"What, in effect, you are advocating," O'Ryan wrote, "is that we await the possible death of the lone policeman (Britain) so that single-handed we may be forced to face the killer (Germany) swollen with confidence and possessed of the military resources of the entire continent of Europe."

More Advocate "All Aid"

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Lewis W. Douglas, former Director of the Budget and now an insurance executive, said in a statement tonight that numerous individuals had requested that they be associated with signers of the telegram urging President Roosevelt "to do everything" necessary to defeat the Axis powers.

Douglas, who with Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard, instigated the telegram, said such requests came from Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University; Frank R. Kent, columnist of the Baltimore Sun; the Rev. Wilson C. Cole, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Dean Christian Gauss, of Princeton, and A. Philip Randolph, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, among others.

NO-WAR GROUP ASKS PEOPLE'S PLEA TO F. D. R.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Dec. 27 (AP).—Verne Marshall, chairman of the No-Foreign-War Committee, tonight urged "the common people of this area" to permit use of their names to a telegram to be forwarded to President Roosevelt before his Sunday night broadcast.

The telegram, Marshall said, would answer the one made public at the White House yesterday in which 170 prominent Americans urged the President to do "everything that may be necessary to insure defeat of the Axis powers."

John Battin, managing editor of the Cedar Rapids Gazette, of which Marshall is publisher, told the United Press that by midnight 1,359 signatures to the telegram had been authorized by telegraph, telephone or personal call at the Gazette office. He said authorization had come from points all over the Middle West.

"The common people who furnish the cannon fodder, and the food when wars are fought, and who are taxed unceasingly," Marshall said in two radio broadcasts, "should not pray for those wars which are forced on them by governments and men whose greed for power and authority transcends all the principles of that sort of democracy to which Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson dedicated their lives."

KNUDSEN OFFICE WEIGHS C. I. O.'S AIRPLANE PLAN

Roosevelt Says Project for Mass Output Is Getting Serious Study.

DEFENSE BUDGET TO GROW

Ten Billions for 1941 Forecast—President Calls in Smith to Supply Figures.

Washington, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt told a press conference today that the C. I. O. proposal designed eventually to produce 500 pursuit planes a day by pooling the entire facilities of the automobile industry was being seriously considered by the administration.

The plan was submitted to the White House by C. I. O. President Philip Murray several days ago. It was drawn by Walter P. Reuther, director of the General Motors division of the United Automobile Workers, a C. I. O. union.

Asked about it today, the President said it was being studied by the new defense production office directed by William S. Knudsen, former head of General Motors. Mr. Roosevelt added that the plan had been undertaken with the utmost seriousness and fine purpose.

He said it was a question of industrial production that no one in the administration would have any opinion about until it was thoroughly studied, but he declared if such a plan could be worked out it would be very helpful and constitute a real contribution to the defense program.

It was a question of technical management, the President said, and at this stage if he were a commentator he would not be able to write much about it because it was beyond his ken.

Mr. Reuther's plan envisioned a 500-a-day output of all-metal pursuit planes within six months.

Silent on Other Questions.

Mr. Roosevelt declined to comment on a barrage of questions concerning the war and America's defense production.

Asked about a statement by a spokesman for the German Foreign Office that seizure by the United States of foreign ships interned in her ports would be considered a war-like act, Mr. Roosevelt replied that this country had no official spokesman.

The President said he had never heard of reports in the Japanese press that the United States would withdraw her ships from Far Eastern waters and also recall some consular officals.

Neither had he heard of a report that a sea raider flying Japan's flag had shelled a Far Eastern island under British mandate. He joshingly inquired whether it was an earthquake.

He said he did not think so in replying to another inquiry as to whether he had anything to do with the unofficial air bombing truce in Europe over Christmas.

Seek Ships for Britain.

Administration action to bolster Great Britain's hard-pressed merchant fleet meanwhile was reported imminent.

In authoritative quarters it was predicted that President Roosevelt would recommend soon that the United States speedily build a large number of merchant ships, in a program comparable to the record-breaking construction of world war days.

The project it was said would be extensive and fit into the plan which Mr. Roosevelt has discussed for leasing or lending equipment and supplies to the British.

It was not disclosed whether the proposed ships themselves would be made available to Great Britain or would be used to replace other tonnage which might be leased immediately.

Speculation continued in the capital, meanwhile, that the administration soon might take another step to strengthen the British convoys now striving to protect shipments of food and war materials from Nazi submarine and plane attacks.

Needs Many Destroyers.

Official estimates of the number of additional destroyers needed by the British ranged from 100 to 400, despite the fact that this Government already has traded fifty old world war destroyers for the right to lease naval and air base sites.

Some naval officers are opposed to the transfer of additional world war destroyers unless the United States gets in exchange something which possesses a military value comparable to the base sites. A corridor through Canada for a military highway to Alaska has been suggested as one possible consideration.

Other quarters suggested that the British might acquire light, speedy submarine chasers from the United States.

The navy now has three newly completed submarine chasers and two others nearing completion. They have a smaller operating range than destroyers, but can be built in much less time.

Plane Exports Declined For Month of November

Nazi Raids and Scarcity of Ships Blamed by U. S.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (AP).—A Commerce Department disclosed today that aircraft exports declined last month as compared with October, and informed sources explained that Nazi raids on shipping were hampering delivery of American warplanes to England.

The report said all exports of aircraft and parts in November were valued at $26,738,000, compared with $31,389,000 the month previous. The bulk in both months went to Great Britain. Persons in close touch with aircraft exports said a scarcity of shipping bottoms was a major explanation of the decline. They pointed to the toll of shipping taken by Nazi submarines.

The Commerce report gave no breakdown of figures, but other sources said that 291 planes were exported in November, aside from engines and spare parts, as compared with 334 in October. Of the November shipments, 241 were destined for England and a number of the remainder were billed to Canada. In October 279 planes were shipped to England and Canada combined.

Aside from the shipping scarcity, other explanations advanced for the November decline included changes in some models, especially the installation of more guns; weather conditions and shortage of navigating instruments hampering trans-Atlantic flights of long range bombers to England from Newfoundland. For December, shipments to Britain were reported on the increase by one trade estimate, December exports are expected to reach 350 planes, with about 275 destined for Britain.

Protested Contracts With Ford In Effect

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—War Department contracts with the Ford Motor Company, totaling more than $2,000,000 and criticized by labor representatives, were said today by department officials to be now in effect.

The contracts, for midget scout cars and passenger vehicles, were announced as awarded on November 27. There arose an immediate outcry from labor leaders and Sidney Hillman, labor member of the new office of Defense Production, challenged the awards.

Finding Appealed

Hillman protested that there had been a Labor Board finding of unfair labor practices against the company (which has appealed the finding). Labor officials have contended that Government contracts should require compliance with all Federal labor laws.

No one at the War Department would say specifically today whether the Ford contracts had been signed, spokesmen simply describing them as "in effect."

Policy Under Review

They added an explanation that the whole matter of defense labor policy was under review, and that, pending a final decision, the department was guided by a statement of general principles drafted by the Defense Commission in September and approved by President Roosevelt.

That statement said that all defense work should be executed "in compliance with Federal statutory provisions affecting labor wherever such provisions are applicable."

Army Ruling

Under this policy the War and Navy Departments have included in contracts a stipulation of compliance with the Walsh-Healey Act for hour-and-wage standards, but has omitted any such stipulation as to the Wagner Act guarantee of labor's right to organize and bargain collectively without interference.

Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, army quartermaster general, ruled on November 28 that the award of defense contracts was "not to be considered as barred by the single fact that proceedings under the National Labor Relations Act have been instituted or that findings of violations of the act have been made by the National Labor Relations Board."

Freighter Trident Shows Evidence Of Terrific Battering By Storms

Boston, Dec. 27 (AP)—Two weeks overdue, the British freighter Trident arrived today after a twenty-eight-day transatlantic crossing, showing evidence of terriffic battering from storms that smashed life rafts and carried away emergency steering gear.

One crew member—James McNeil, 26—was removed to a hospital for treatment of a badly crushed leg. He was hurt twelve days ago when heavy seas threw him to the deck while he was trying to clear away debris.

Seamen said that only three days were pleasant out of the entire voyage. In one seven-day period the vessel logged only fifty miles, badly straining her engines.

Canadian's Pants Burned Off In Battle Over Great Britain

Pilot Given Aid By "Shocked" Housewife After Being Shot Down In Dog Fight

DEC 28 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 27—How he walked up to an English farmhouse with his pants completely burned off after being shot down in a dog fight south of London was described today by Flying Officer W. Bruce Millar, of Penticton, British Columbia.

He is the first Royal Canadian Air Force officer to be invalided home from the Battle of Britain.

"I guess I really shocked that housewife who walked out to help me," he added with a chuckle.

Millar was shot down September 9 with a bullet in his leg and his plane in flames.

He said his squadron had gone aloft to break up a large formation of German raiders and that "a couple of bullets hit my gas tank and set it afire. One hit my leg, but that was nothing—like a slap on the thigh.

"I pushed the controls aside and tried to open the hood to bail out," he said. "Then I really got scared. The hood wouldn't open. I guess I dropped about 1,000 feet before I got that hood open, but it seemed like a thousand years."

Millar, who said he hoped to return to the English front shortly, obtained permission from the Dominion Government to come here.

Ranking Nazi Diplomat In U. S. Is Promoted

Hans Thomsen Raised Two Grades To Minister First Class In Recognition Of His Work

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Germany's ranking diplomat in the United States, Hans Thomsen, has been promoted to Minister of the First Class, one grade below that of Ambassador, it was disclosed tonight.

Thomsen, counselor of the German Embassy, has served as charge d'affaires since the Ambassador, Hans Dieckhoff, was recalled to Berlin in November, 1938, after the United States brought back its Ambassador, Hugh Wilson, from Germany.

In normal diplomatic procedure, Thomsen would have been promoted from Counselor to Minister of the Second Class. It was said in German circles that the raise of two grades was in recognition of his handling of diplomatic affairs amid tense relations of Germany and the United States.

U. S. Warship Launched 19 Months Ahead of Time

Vallejo, Cal., Dec. 27 (A. P.).—A $12,000,000 submarine tender, the Fulton, the newest addition to the country's defense, was launched at the Mare Island Navy Yard today, nineteen months ahead of schedule.

Mrs. Arthur T. Sutcliff, grandniece of Robert Fulton, who invented the steamboat, sponsored the 9,500-ton craft. She recalled Fulton's motto—"The liberty of the seas will be the happiness of the earth."

Army Has New Division To Build Atlantic Bases

Lieut. Col. J. D. Arthur To Head Engineers With Headquarters In Washington

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Army engineers disclosed today that a new engineering division, with Lieut. Col. J. D. Arthur in charge, has been set up to handle all army construction at the new Atlantic bases obtained from Great Britain.

Headquarters of the new division is in Washington. It contains four districts—Newfoundland, Bermuda, Jamaica and Trinidad.

In contrast to the eleven divisions in the continental United States, which are concerned normally only with navigation and flood-control projects, the new eastern division will handle all army construction work at the new defense outposts, including airfields, barracks and other buildings. So far, at least, the engineers will not supervise any naval work at the posts, officials said.

ARMY TO SEND TROOPS TO BASE

Force for Newfoundland to Leave in January.

Washington, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The dispatch of an initial army garrison to Newfoundland shortly will swell to 50,000 or more men the forces already in place to safeguard the Panama Canal and the new hemisphere defense line in the Atlantic.

The recent announcement that the Newfoundland base vanguard would depart early in January was accepted in military quarters today as evidence to man with a minimum of delay the string of offshore bases acquired from Great Britain.

The force will be the first sent to any of those bases. In Puerto Rico, and Guantanamo, Cuba, however, and at the Panama Canal itself, garrisons have been built up steadily by the army and marine corps.

May Use 100,000 Men.

Along the 4,000-mile, irregular triangular line between Newfoundland, British Guiana on the South American continent, and Panama, possibly 100,000 soldiers, sailors and marines soon will be stationed, on the basis of available estimates.

The exact size of the units destined for any of the advance bases is confidential military information now. It is no secret, however, that substantial reenforcements are to follow the first expedition to Newfoundland. The island's strategic situation on the shortest great circle route between Europe and America makes it a key to the defense of the industrial northeast United States.

Advance parties of army engineers are at work on the preliminaries at virtually all the other bases. Tomorrow is the date assigned for establishing a survey and construction headquarters at Georgetown, British Guiana.

The army's primary task is to defend the bases and set up air corps and other facilities. The navy has been at work in some instances for weeks, developing facilities for both warships and warplanes.

Hitler's Rumanian Move Seen as Strategic Backing for Invasion Plan

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

There are several reasons which might have impelled Herr Hitler to flood Rumania with German troops, but to me the most logical explanation is that he is trying to forestall a possible hostile Russian move during his projected invasion of England.

The Nazi Fuehrer needs every cunce of air power he can muster for this attack. He can't afford to have great numbers of warplanes drawn from this operation for use on his eastern front.

This fresh blitzkrief against Britain is the biggest thing left in Nazi strategy. Successful invasion is the only sure road to quick victory—and time is beginning to tread on Hitler's heels.

There's only one real possibility of outside military interference with the immediate Nazi program, and that lies in Russia. The Muscovites have been showing increasing coolness toward Germany—a change which has coincided with the military successes of Britain and her allies over Mussolini.

Clash Has Been Predicted.

Observers generally long have recognized the likelihood that Germany and Russia would go to war with each other sooner or later—probably sooner. The circumstance that they have been co-operating as a matter of expediency doesn't alter that the fact that their interests clash heavily and that they are natural enemies.

The causes underlying the hostility aren't new. Hitler long ago cast covetous eyes on the vastly rich Russian Ukraine. On top of that, and partly because of it, both nations desire control of the same territory in the Balkans.

At the moment they are seeking domination of Rumania and the three mouths of the great Danube, which forms a navigable waterway from the Black Sea clear to Germany, and thus becomes a lifeline of the Reich.

Russia made the surprise move of occupying Rumanian territory in June, and secured control of the northernmost of the three mouths of the Danube. Hitler countered by occupying the rest of Rumania and making it virtually a protectorate.

That brings us up to the present. Recently the Russians, Germans and Italians met in conference to try to settle control of the Danubian mouths. This attempt has just broken up without success. Indeed, fist fights were reported between the Bolshevists and the Fascists. To cap all this, reports from Bucharest quote Soviet diplomats as saying that Russia will occupy the mouths of the Danube after the first of the year.

If you have watched carefully you will have observed that many of Hitler's major operations have been planned to serve in two or more ways. The present move is an excellent example. Here is what it does for him:

Oil Wells Covered.

1. It provides a powerful strategic position either for defense or offense against Russia.

2. It is calculated to keep the Bolshevists quiet during the battle of Britain.

3. It completes Hitler's mastery of Rumania and insures his access to her oil and vast granaries.

4. It gives him a garrisoned base to maintain order in the Balkans.

5. It gives him a base from which he can take military action against any of the Balkan States, or can carry out his tentative project of forcing the Dardanelles so as to get at Britain in the Near East.

A HALF MILLION OF THEM

KEEP LONDON IN BREAD,

MILK AND PAPERS - -

AS THE BOMBS FALL (600)

BY DREW MIDDLETON

(ADVANCE) LONDON--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)- HALF A MILLION ORDINARY FOLKS-- BUTCHER, BAKER, BUS CONDUCTOR, POSTMAN-- DEFY THESE NIGHTS WHEN THE HEAVENS CRASH TO KEEP LONDON ALIVE.

DEC 28 1940

26

EACH NIGHT, THIS ARMY WITHOUT BANNERS OR MEDALS TAKES UP POSITIONS IN THE CRUELEST FRONT LINE OF WAR. EACH MORNING, NO MATTER HOW SEVERE THE BOMBING OF THE NIGHT BEFORE, THERE IS MILK FOR LONDON BABIES, BUSES RUNNING ON TIME FOR WORKERS AND FRESH BREAD ON THE TABLE.

I WATCHED THEM FOR EIGHT HOURS LAST NIGHT.

WATERLOO STATION IS A GHOST OF ITS OLD SELF, BUT A VERY ACTIVE GHOST. THE BLUE LIGHTS GLOW FEEBLY IN HUGE GLOBES AND, IN THE GLOOM, SOLDIERS, SAILORS AND AIRMEN CLUMP TO TRAINS, TO HOMES, TO THE Y.M.C.A. CANTEEN.

A ROUSING CHORUS OF "TIPPERARY" FOUGHT THE CRASH OF BOMBS AND GUNS AS I STUMBLED PAST THE CANTEEN TO THE SIGNAL TOWER.

INSIDE, THE SIGNALMEN, WITH THE PREOCCUPIED AIR OF CHESS PLAYERS, WERE GUIDING THE MOVEMENT OF SCORES OF TRAINS HAULING FOOD FOR LONDON'S MILLIONS. IT WAS QUIET THERE, EXCEPT FOR THE "TICK TICK TICKETY TICK" OF TELEGRAPH RECEIVERS.

A RESOUNDING CRASH WHICH SEEMED TO SHAKE THE BUILDING RAISED TWO COMMENTS:

"BIG FELLER - - FIVE HUNDRED POUNDER, I FANCY."

"HELL, THAT'S ONE OF OURS, A 4.5 (ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN) BY THE SOUND."

THEY WENT BACK TO WORK. FROM FAR OFF CAME THE LONELY TREBLE OF A LOCOMOTIVE WHISTLE AS ANOTHER TRAIN LOADED WITH FOOD TURNED INTO THE YARDS.

AT THE BIG POST OFFICE, 500 CLERKS WORKED QUIETLY.

BEFORE THEM LAY LETTERS AND PARCELS FROM THE DAY'S 800 TRAINS OF THE UNDERGROUND "POSTAL RAILWAY" WHICH CONNECTS THE MAIN RAILWAY STATIONS AND THE POST OFFICES.

NIMBLE FINGERS NEVER MISSED AS THE GUNS ROARED TO REPEL ONE HEAVY SORTIE BY THE LUFTWAFFE.

ONE OF THE DRIVERS HAD BEEN KILLED THE NIGHT BEFORE. THERE WASN'T MUCH TALK. MOST OF THE TIME THE GUNS WERE TOO LOUD TO HEAR ANYTHING ANYWAY.

THEN A FACTORY, WHICH HAS BEEN WORKING 24 HOURS A DAY SINCE JUNE...

RED LIGHTS GLOWED IN ALL ITS ROOMS. WHEN THEY FLICKERED THE WARNING "RAIDERS OVERHEAD" LAST NIGHT WORKMEN DRIFTED TO STEEL SHELTERS SCATTERED THROUGH THE FACTORY.

THE FLICKER STOPPED AFTER TEN MINUTES, AND THE WORKERS CAME OUT. A MECHANIC PICKED UP A CIGARETTE AND SAID, MILDLY, "RUDDY NUISANCE."

A STEADY STREAM OF LOAVES, ROLLS, FRUIT PIES AND MEAT PIES CAME OUT OF ONE OF LONDON'S BIGGEST BAKERIES.

WHEN I GOT THERE, MORE THAN 3,000 LOAVES ALREADY WERE ON THE WAY TO THE CONSUMERS, AND THE FOREMAN ESTIMATED HE WOULD TURN OUT ABOUT 2,500 FRUIT PIES BEFORE MORNING. THERE ARE ABOUT 350 MEN IN THE BUILDING NIGHTLY.

"SOMETIMES A CHAP DROPS OUT FOR A NIGHT OR TWO AND COMES BACK," THE FOREMAN SAID. "IT DOESN'T MEAN MORE THAN THAT HIS HOUSE HAS BEEN BOMBED. WE'VE GOT SOME PRETTY SORE PEOPLE IN HERE, MISTER. LOTS OF THESE OLD BLOKES WOULD GIVE THEIR EYES TO BE FIGHTING BACK."

I WALKED ACROSS WATERLOO BRIDGE IN THE MOONLIGHT.

BOATMEN GESTURED AT CHORUS GIRLS ON THEIR WAY HOME FROM WORK IN NIGHT CLUBS AND SPAT DERISIVELY AT THE SOUTHEAST, WHERE THE NOISE OF THE RAID STILL SOUNDED.

DRIVERS AND CONDUCTORS, MANY OF THEM WOMEN, JOKED OVER THEIR TEA AND TALLIED THE DAY'S RECEIPTS AT THE BUS STATION, AFTER A NIGHT'S RUN ON STREETS WHERE DEATH IS THE TRAFFIC COP.

ALONG PICCADILLY, SHELTER DWELLERS WERE COMING INTO THE STREET. DOWN BELOW, VOLUNTEERS FROM CHEAPSIDE AND MAYFAIR WERE DOLING OUT BREAKFASTS TO MEN WHO HAD SPENT THE NIGHT ON THE COLD STONE FLOOR OF THE UNDERGROUND STATION AND NOW WERE OFF FOR EIGHT HOURS' WORK.

AT THE CHIEF DEPOT FOR FRESH FRUITS AND VEGETABLES, MAGNIFICENTLY-PROFANE PORTERS UNLOADED TRUCKS AND FARM CARTS FROM THE COUNTRY, AND THE DRIVERS SWAPPED TALES OF THE ROAD THAT BEGAN: "A BIG ONE FELL MY WAY LAST NIGHT...."

30.24-6633

IN A QUIET BACKWATER OF THE STRAND, THERE WAS MILK AT A HOUSEHOLDER'S DOOR, A PAPER ON HIS MAT AND A BUS ON THE STREET OUTSIDE.

HITLER'S 'GESTURE'

IN RETURNING BODY

OF L'AIGLON

TO FRANCE (370)

24

(ADVANCE) BERLIN--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--GERMAN COMMENTATORS SAY THERE WAS NO MYSTERY UNDERLYING ADOLF HITLER'S RESTORATION TO FRANCE OF THE BODY OF L'AIGLON, ONLY SON OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. THEY SAY IT WAS INTENDED AS A GENEROUS GESTURE TO A DEFEATED FOE.

THEY SAY THE FUEHRER HAS THE GREATEST RESPECT FOR NAPOLEON BUT NURSES A HATE FOR THE HAPSBURG FAMILY, OF WHICH L'AIGLON'S MOTHER, MARIE LOUISE, DUCHESS OF AUSTRIA, WAS A MEMBER.

DEC 28 1940

HENCE, THESE GERMANS SAY, HE ACCEDED TO A LONG-STANDING FRENCH REQUEST FOR TRANSFER OF THE BODY FROM THE VAULT OF VIENNA'S CAPUCHIN CHURCH, AND REBURIAL OF L'AIGLON--"THE LITTLE EAGLE"--BESIDE NAPOLEON BENEATH THE GILDED DOME OF PARIS' LES INVALIDES.

THEY SAY THAT FRENCH-GERMAN RAPPROCHEMENT WAS MAKING SUCH STRIDES THAT HITLER'S "BEAUTIFUL GESTURE"--AS PROPAGANDA MINISTER PAUL JOSEPH GOEBBELS' NEWSPAPER DER ANGRIFF PHRASED IT--SEEMED TO FIT WELL INTO THE GENERAL PICTURE PREVAILING UNTIL THE ABRUPT DEPARTURE OF PIERRE LAVAL FROM MARSHAL PETAIN'S VICHY REGIME.

IN FACT, IT APPEARS THAT THE ORIGINAL PLANS FOR THE REBURIAL ENVISAGED PETAIN'S FIRST VISIT TO OCCUPIED FRANCE FOR THE EVENT.

(REPORTS FROM BERN, SWITZERLAND, SAID LAVAL'S INSISTENCE THAT PETAIN ATTEND THE PARIS CEREMONY EXPLODED HIS PATIENCE, AND THE AGED MARSHAL BLASTED LAVAL OUT OF THE GOVERNMENT.

(AS A RESULT, THE BUILD-UP FOR THE CEREMONY WAS SWAMPED BY THE VICHY EVENTS. PETAIN WAS NOT IN PARIS AND NEITHER WAS HITLER, ALTHOUGH THERE HAD BEEN REPORTS THAT THE FUEHRER PLANNED TO BE THERE HIMSELF, SIDE BY SIDE WITH THE OLD MARSHAL.)

EVEN BEFORE THE SHAKE-UP IN VICHY, HOWEVER, IT WAS EVIDENT PETAIN WOULD NOT COME TO PARIS IMMEDIATELY, AND GERMAN AUTHORITIES WENT AHEAD WITH RE-ENTOMBING THE BONES OF L'AIGLON DEC. 14--EXACTLY A CENTURY AFTER NAPOLEON'S BODY, BROUGHT FROM ST.HELENA, WAS BURIED THERE.

DEC 28 1940

--DASH--

NAPOLEON, LIKE HITLER, DEVELOPED A HATRED FOR THE HOUSE OF HAPSBURG. HE ONCE SAID HE'D RATHER SEE THE BOY STRANGLED THAN BROUGHT UP AN AUSTRIAN PRINCE.

THE BIRTH OF THE SON IN PARIS ON MARCH 20, 1811, SEEMED TO HAVE ESTABLISHED THE NAPOLEONIC DYNASTY, BUT IN THREE YEARS THE LITTLE CORSICAN CONQUEROR'S EMPIRE CRUMBLED.

NAPOLEON REPAIRED TO ELBA; HIS CONSORT AND SON WENT TO VIENNA. THERE THE TRAGIC SON FOR WHOM NAPOLEON HAD PLANNED SUCH BIG THINGS BECAME A PAWN IN THE COMPLEX GAME OF EUROPEAN POLITICS.

THE PRECOCIOUS, SENSITIVE YOUTH INHERITED HIS FATHER'S LOVE OF MILITARY AFFAIRS. LIKE HIS FATHER, HE ALSO WAS FRAIL OF BUILD, AND DIED OF TUBERCULOSIS IN 1832 AT THE AGE OF 21.

THE IRISH PORTS

WHY NEUTRAL EIRE WON'T HAND THEM BACK
TO BRITAIN (780)

BY D.L.PITKIN

(ADVANCE)-(DUBLIN-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-THE PEOPLE OF EIRE BACKED ALMOST TO A MAN THE DECLARATION OF THEIR AMERICAN-BORN PREMIER, EAMONN DE VALERA, THAT THIS NATION WOULD NOT JEOPARDIZE HER NEUTRALITY BY HANDING OVER ANY NAVAL BASES TO BRITAIN--WHICH WANTS THEM TO FIGHT GERMAN COUNTER-BLOCKADE SUBMARINES.

TO BEGIN WITH, THE CITIZENS OF EIRE--WHICH INCLUDES ALL BUT THE SIX COUNTIES OF NORTHERN IRELAND STILL UNDER BRITISH RULE--ARE DETERMINED TO REMAIN AT PEACE.

THE INVASION SCARE WHICH FOLLOWED THE COLLAPSE OF FRANCE HAD LARGELY PASSED OVER. EIRE HAD PREPARED TO FIGHT ANY INVASION, WHETHER IT CAME FROM GERMANY OR BRITAIN.

WHEN BRITAIN HELD OUT UNDER HEAVY AERIAL BOMBARDMENT DURING THE AUT PEOPLE BEGAN TO BREATHE EASIER, TO SIT BACK AND ENJOY THEIR IMMUNITY FROM BLACKOUTS, RATIONING AND BOMBS.

INFORMED OBSERVERS FELT THAT NO BELLIGERENT WOULD ATTEMPT AN INVASION OF EIRE EXCEPT AS PART OF A GRAND SCALE OPERATION INVOLVING ALL THE ISLES AND THAT, THANKS TO BRITISH STUBBORNNESS IN BEATING OFF AIR ATTACKS, SEEMED OUT OF THE QUESTION.

THEN BRITAIN'S PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL RAISED THE QUESTION OF THE IRISH PORTS. THE PEOPLE WERE QUICK TO SEE DYNAMITE IN HIS ASSERTION THAT BRITAIN'S INABILITY TO USE BASES OF THE SOUTH AND WEST COASTS OF IRELAND IN WARFARE AGAINST GERMAN U-BOATS "IS A MOST HEAVY AND GRIEVOUS BURDEN AND ONE WHICH SHOULD NEVER HAVE BEEN PLACED ON OUR SHOULDERS, BROAD THOUGH THEY BE."

CHURCHILL'S STATEMENT IN ITSELF WAS GENERALLY ACCEPTED AS "A SIMPLE, PERHAPS NATURAL, EXPRESSION OF REGRET"--AS DE VALERA SAID HE PREFERRED TO INTERPRET IT. WHAT BOTHERED PEOPLE WERE INTIMATIONS BY SOME MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH COMMONS THAT GERMANS WERE SECRETLY USING IRISH PORTS IN THEIR U-BOAT CAMPAIGN AGAINST BRITISH SHIPPING AND WHAT WAS CONSIDERED HERE A BRITISH PRESS CAMPAIGN "TO GET THE PORTS."

30.24-6635

THE IRISH WERE EVEN MORE ALARMED WHEN THEY FELT THE BRITISH PRESS WAS BEING RE-ECHOED IN THE UNITED STATES. MANY IRISHMEN PROBABLY WOULD HAVE NO OBJECTION TO GETTING INTO A WAR AS AN ALLY OF THE UNITED STATES, BUT AS AN ALLY IN ANY DEGREE OF BRITAIN-- NEVER!

AS DE VALERA SAID: "I WOULD HAVE REFRAINED FROM MAKING ANY COMMENT UPON IT (CHURCHILL'S STATEMENT), WERE IT NOT THAT IT HAS BEEN FOLLOWED BY AN EXTENSIVE PRESS CAMPAIGN IN BRITAIN ITSELF, AND RE-ECHOED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA-- THE PURPORT OF THE CAMPAIGN BEING THAT WE SURRENDER OR LEASE OUR PORTS TO BRITAIN FOR THE CONDUCT OF THE WAR."

A129

DE VALERA COMMENTED THAT IF IT WAS A "SACRIFICE" FOR BRITAIN TO RESTORE THE PORTS TO EIRE TWO YEARS AGO, IT WAS ONE TO BE FACED BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT AND PEOPLE.

DE VALERA POINTED OUT THAT EIRE HAD BEEN UNABLE TO BRING HER ARMAMENTS TO A STRENGTH INVOLVING THE RISK OF WAR.

"NOBODY WHO REALIZES WHAT MODERN WAR MEANS," HE SAID, "AND WHAT IT MEANS PARTICULARLY FOR THOSE WHO HAVE NOT SUFFICIENT AIR DEFENSES, WOULD HAVE THE SLIGHTEST DOUBT BUT THAT THAT POLICY (OF NEUTRALITY ON THE PART OF EIRE) WAS THE RIGHT ONE--APART ALTOGETHER FROM ANY QUESTION OF SYMPATHY WITH ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER.

"WE TRIED TO GET ARMS; WE SOUGHT THEM IN AMERICA, WE SOUGHT THEM IN BRITAIN, AND WE SOUGHT THEM ON THE CONTINENT EVEN, AND IT IS NO FAULT OF THE GOVERNMENT'S IF OUR ARMAMENTS ARE NOT SEVERAL TIMES STRONGER THAN THEY ARE.

"THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION OF THE HANDING OVER OF THOSE PORTS SO LONG AS THIS STATE REMAINS NEUTRAL....ANY ATTEMPT TO BRING PRESSURE TO BEAR ON US BY ANY OF THE BELLIGERENTS--BY BRITAIN--COULD ONLY LEAD TO BLOODSHED."

THE ONLY SIGNIFICANT CRITICISM OF DE VALERA'S STATEMENT CAME FROM J.M.DILLON, AN OPPOSITION LEADER IN THE DAIL. REMARKING "NO DEMANDS HAVE BEEN MADE UPON US," HE SAID, "IT SEEMED ODD TO MY EARS TO HEAR THE POSSIBILITY OF BLOODSHED BETWEEN TWO NEIGHBORS WHO ARE AT PEACE."

THE STRATEGIC IRISH PORTS WHICH BRITAIN WOULD LIKE TO HAVE BACK TO REFUEL HER FLOTILLAS AND AIRCRAFT ARE:

SPIKE ISLAND, COBH (QUEENSTOWN), COUNTY CORK, WHICH WAS FINELY PLACED TO ROUT U-BOATS IN ONE OF THEIR HAPPY HUNTING GROUNDS IN THE WORLD WAR. SCORES OF SHIPS INCLUDING THE LUSITANIA WERE TORPEDOED OFF THIS PART OF THE SOUTH COAST OF IRELAND;

BEREHAVEN, BANTRY BAY, COUNTY CORK, ON THE SOUTHWEST COAST;

FORT DUNCREE, LOUGH SWILLY, COUNTY DONEGAL, ON THE EXTREME NORTHWESTERN COAST OF IRELAND.

THE LATE NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, AS BRITISH PRIME MINISTER, HANDED OVER THE PORTS TO EIRE UNDER AN AGREEMENT RATIFIED IN 1938. THE BASES HAD BEEN NEGLECTED DURING A PERIOD OF DISARMAMENT. THEY HAVE SINCE BEEN MODERNIZED AND HIGHLY FORTIFIED, BUT SINCE EIRE HAS NO NAVY THEY HAVE NOT BEEN USED AS NAVAL BASES.

THESE BASES WERE SHARED BY AMERICAN NAVAL UNITS OPERATING WITH THE BRITISH AND FRENCH FLEETS DURING THE WORLD WAR. SINCE THE WORLD WAR, THE TRANSATLANTIC AIRPORT AT FOYNES ON THE WESTERN COAST OF IRELAND HAS GROWN INTO STRATEGICAL IMPORTANCE. ITS USE, HOWEVER, HAS BEEN CONFINED TO BRITISH AND AMERICAN COMMERCIAL AIRCRAFT.

DE VALERA DENIED CHARGES THAT GERMAN U-BOATS HAVE BEEN GETTING SUPPLIES OFF THE IRISH COAST DURING THIS WAR. HE DECLARED THAT "A MOST EXTENSIVE SYSTEM OF COAST OBSERVATION HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED HERE SINCE THE WAR" AND THAT THE CHARGE U-BOATS WERE BEING SUPPLIED OFF IRISH COASTS "IS KNOWN TO BE A FALSEHOOD BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT ITSELF." FRENCH FLEET REPORTED IN AFRICA

NAVY'S ORDERS SAID TO COME FROM PETAIN

Officers in France Told to Visit Colonies, Lisbon Hears.

MARSHAL CALLED DEFIANT

Seen Resisting Hitler Even at Cost of Liberty—De Gaulle Urges French to Fight.

Lisbon, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Travelers arriving from unoccupied France today reported that they had been reliably informed that Chief of State Petain had authorized a number of French naval officers to spend "vacations" in North Africa and that several French warships already had sailed there from Toulon.

[The Paris radio, in an announcement picked up here by CBS, said today that Gen. Auguste Nogues, Governor-General of French Morocco, and "his collaborators" had returned to Casablanca from an official visit to Vichy.]

The travelers connected these moves with Marshal Petain's "unabated decision to rule France himself, free from foreign impositions," to use their words.

"Petain would rather become a prisoner himself than give in to demands he considers against the interest of France, such as allowing foreign troops to pass through unoccupied territory," they declared.

Call to Arms by De Galle.

London, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, in a broadcast tonight, called on French North Africa—her leaders and her armies—to rise against the Axis in a battle which he said could bring a great Mediterranean victory.

"If French Africa arises at last to make war, we shall bring our part of the empire to co-operate with her," the leader of Free French forces declared.

The prepared address, possibly directed chiefly to Gen. Maxime Weygand, supreme commander in North Africa, which is still loyal to Chief of State Petain, said:

"All French leaders, whatever may have been their mistakes, who will decide to draw the sword which they have sheathed, shall find us by their side without excluding any one and without any thought of ambition."

The General added that "the Hun in Paris, Bordeaux, Rheims and Strasbourg, and the Italians pretending to dictate their will to the French nation, there is nothing else to do than fight."

French Cabinet Meets.

Vichy, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The French Cabinet met today and it was predicted beforehand that the ministers would hear a report by Navy Minister Admiral Jean Darlan on his Christmas trip to occupied France where, advices reaching Switzerland said, he delivered a personal letter from Petain to Adolf Hitler.

In this letter Petain was understood to have outlined the basis on which he would agree to collaboration with Germany.

Marshal Philippe Petain will broadcast to the youth of France at 5 P. M. (noon, Eastern standard time) tomorrow, which has been proclaimed "Youth Day" in the unoccupied zone.

Nazis Are Still Irked.

Berlin, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Authorized spokesmen indicated today that relations between Vichy and Berlin are not yet straightened out satisfactorily.

They said that the present relationship had not been endangered by the French Cabinet shake-up, but added: "The question of the future, namely co-operation as contemplated and planned with Pierre Laval (ousted French Vice-premier and Foreign Minister), cannot be discussed at present."

FIGHT, DE GAULLE URGES ALL FRENCH

Nothing Else To Do, Leader Of Free Forces Says In Broadcast Appeal

BY GODFREY ANDERSON

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 28—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of French forces still allied with Britain, exhorted all Frenchmen today to keep up the fight against Germany and told them a great triumph might be theirs.

As de Gaulle broadcast his appeal—declaring that if North Africa, Syria and the French fleet were fighting for France the Mediterranean battle would end promptly in victory—reports circulated in Lisbon that French naval forces may be gathering in North Africa.

Petain African Moves Reported

Travelers from unoccupied France said they had been informed reliably that the French Chief of State, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, had authorized some French naval officers to spend "vacations" in North Africa and that several French naval units already have been dispatched there from Toulon.

They linked these moves with what they called Petain's "unabated decision to rule France himself, free from foreign impositions," and his readiness "to become a prisoner himself rather than give in to demands he considers against the interest of France."

Exhorts French To Fight

De Gaulle urged all French leaders again to "draw the sword which they have sheathed," and promised that they "shall find us by their side without excluding anyone and without any thought of ambition."

"With the Hun in Paris, Bordeaux, Lille, Rheims and Strassbourg, and with Italians pretending to dictate their will to the French nation," he said, "there is nothing else to do than fight."

Disclosing that 1,000 Frenchmen—soldiers, sailors and airmen — have died for France since the armistice, de Gaulle exclaimed that "to treat with the enemies, to accept their control, to cooperate with them, is to betray the fatherland."

New Year's "Hour Of Hope"

The Free French leader repeated his organization's appeal to all Frenchmen, in occupied and unoccupied France, to observe an "hour of hope" New Year's Day.

By emptying the streets of their towns and villages during those sixty minutes, he said, they would observe a "huge plebiscite of silence" to show the Germans they still are regarded as enemies.

[The hour set is from 2 to 3 P. M. in unoccupied France and from 3 to 4 P. M. in occupied France. Because of the time difference—Berlin time is used in the occupied area—the observance would be simultaneous in both regions, from 8 to 9 A. M., E. S. T.]

Paris And Budapest Reports

Coincidentally, a broadcast from Nazi-occupied Paris, heard in New York by CBS, said Gen. Auguste Nogues, Governor General of French Morocco, and "his collaborators" had returned to Casablanca, Morocco, from an official visit to Vichy.

And in Budapest, informants said Petain had told the Nazis that if their terms for a final peace were unreasonable he would cut North Africa loose, with Gen. Maxime Weygand taking a large colonial army there over to de Gaulle's Free French forces and moving against Italian Libya in coordination with British action from Egypt.

Doriot Pledges Support To Petain, Bern Hears

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 28 (AP)—Jacques Doriot, strong Rightist leader, paid Vichy his first visit in months today and was reported to have pledged his support to Chief of State Petain.

According to diplomats at Vichy, Marshal Petain summoned Doriot and enlisted the aid of his tough French Popular party in an attempt to bolster his Government against opposition.

30.24-6637

30.24-6637

The marshal was reported also to have asked Doriot to cooperate with Gaston Bergery, independent Rightist leader whose bitter tongue used to be a thorn in the side of all Leftist and Centrist parties in republican France.

Both Doriot and Bergery were said to have pledged full support and both soon may be given official positions in the Government. The reported agreement puts an end to speculation that Pierre Laval, ousted Foreign Minister and Vice-Premier, was trying to enlist the Rightist leaders' aid in Paris.

Vichy to Shed Light On Mysterious Plane

Vichy, France, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—An official spokesman said today that facts would be announced soon regarding a mysterious plane, alleged to be of French nationality, which was shot down near Gibraltar Christmas Day.

He added that no French Ministers could have been aboard, as suggested by one foreign report. He also denied another report that the plane carried French aviators intending to enlist with the British.

Reports reaching Berne, Switzerland, said that Spanish anti-aircraft batteries and machine-gun crews at La Linea, Spain, fired on several planes of unidentified nationality that day and that one of the ships, a French observation plane, presumably from North Africa, was brought down.

Destroyed French Plane Reported De Gaullist

Craft Shot Down Near Gibraltar Identified By Vichy, Says German Radio

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—The German radio tonight quoted a report from Vichy, France, that the French plane shot down near Gibraltar on Christmas Day belonged to the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle instead of the French Vichy Government.

[An official Vichy spokesman said today that facts regarding the plane would be announced shortly.]

The German radio, heard here by NBC and CBS, said the plane was carrying delegates trying to land at Gibraltar.

FRENCH CHILDREN GIVE PETAIN SURPRISE YULE

2,000,000 Letters Transform His Home Into a Postoffice

VICHY, France, Dec. 28 (AP)—As a Christmas "surprise" for old Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain, France's children showered him with letters, and today the ground floor rooms of the Chief of State's residence looked like a postoffice.

Dozens of emergency secretaries are working on heaps of letters—2,000,000 of them—piled shoulder high. Almost every child in unoccupied France between the ages of 6 and 15 years had sent one.

The flood was started by a brief note to each school in the unoccupied zone suggesting that the children send pictures as a Yule gift to the Marshal.

Mostly, the letters contained drawings—youngsters' drawings of their houses, farms, schools or favorite animals to more ambitious projects, like panoramas of local beauty spots and such patriotic themes as one youth's view of Verdun, where Marshal Pétain "saved France the first time."

One school teacher apparently mistook "surprise" for "sacrifice," and her class sent in a small wooden shoe filled with notes explaining "sacrifices" the pupils made as a gift to the Marshal—"I ate my soup although I hate it" and "I put on my sweater without mama's asking me."

Many sent greetings. One little girl hoped all the Marshal's Ministers would love him.

"I give you half my heart and the other half to papa, who is a prisoner of war in East Prussia," wrote one child.

Another little boy just cut out a photograph of the Marshal and pasted it on a cardboard. "I draw very badly," he apologized.

100 Bombs a Minute Rained By British on German Ports

R. A. F. Roams From Norway to Biscay Bay Guarding Against Invasion Despite Balkan Move—London Is Spared.

London, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—British bombers battered the German invasion ports and artillery positions along the French coast tonight, while up until almost 9 o'clock London had escaped a visit from Nazi raiders.

Observers near the Strait of Dover estimated that the R. A. F. bombers above the French side of the channel were unloading bombs at rates as high as 100 bombs a minute in an unprecedented offensive against Germany's fighting bases which has been going on since Thursday, almost continuously, by day and by night.

Tonight's German inactivity over England seemed strange after last night's furious assault on London—followed by the R. A. F. attacks on German invasion and blockade ports along 1,000 miles, from the Bay of Biscay to the North Cape.

Fleet Air Arm Active.

Navy dive bombers joined the R. A. F. in raids on shipping, docks and air and sea bases, while available units of the fleet kept a weather eye on transoceanic supply lines.

"The shipping situation worries us as much as the threat of invasion," one source asserted. "We are running as much chance of being choked by the blockade before United States aid reaches its peak as we are of being knocked out by an invasion.

"You can take it we're not going to be diverted from the job of countering these two real dangers flat-out by any sideshow such as the reported German troop movements in the Balkans—whether that's a real move to strengthen the German position there or merely a red herring.

Britain's Latest Blows.

The Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, said that "it is plain that Hitler's whole and urgent purpose is to batter down the defenses of Britain before next summer," and added that "the people of Britain are at this moment dependent for their lives on keeping the sea roads clear enough of bandits to let a percentage of traffic pass."

There was very little German air activity over Britain today, an official communique reported, but a single raider caused some damage and a few casualties in Southampton.

The latest blows in Britain's aerial operations as detailed by the Admiralty and Air Ministry included:

1. Attacks by the R. A. F. on Nazi-held invasion ports, where unusual troops movements had been reported recently.

2. R. A. F. raids on docks, airdromes and submarine bases in German-occupied France. Coastal command bombers made two daylight attacks on the submarine base at Lorient today, scoring several hits.

3. A joint attack by the Fleet Air Arm and the R. A. F. on shipping and harbor works at Haugesund, Nazi-held harbor in Norway, in which dive bombers were said to have scored three hits that started fires and caused a violent explosion on a supply ship. Warehouses and jetties also were reported hit.

4. R. A. F. bomber attacks last night on numerous objectives at Cherbourg, Lorient, St. Nazaire and Bordeaux—all in France.

Power Station Is Bombed.

"At Lorient stores, barracks, drydocks and the power station were bombed and at Cherbourg the docks were straddled," the Air Ministry said.

"At Bordeaux bad weather made it difficult to find the target, but many bombs were seen to burst among the hangars. St. Inglevert airdrome and shipbuilding yards at St. Nazaire were also bombed.

"Our program of minelaying in enemy waters was continued.

"In all these operations two of our aircraft are missing."

The Air Ministry News Service said that the British had dropped heavy explosives among hangars at the Merignac airdrome near Bordeaux, and referred to Bordeaux and Lorient as German blockade bases. The Nazis send out heavy bombers from the Merignac airdrome to cover British trade routes, and submarines from Lorient, the news service declared.

Norway Bombed

DEC 29 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 28—Dive bombers of the fleet air arm and Royal Air Force warplanes attacked shipping and harbor works yesterday in the German-held Norwegian harbor of Haugesund, the Admiralty and the Air Ministry reported today.

An Admiralty communique said a supply ship lying at a dock was hit and set afire, while the Air Ministry said three hits were scored on an anchored merchant vessel, perhaps the same ship, in a dive-bombing and machine-gun attack, after which "fires broke out and there was a violent explosion."

Hits also were reported on warehouses and jetties.

Anti-Aircraft Gun Silenced

One of the British raiders dived low to silence an anti-aircraft gun with machine-gun fire, the Admiralty reported. All the planes were said to have returned safely.

(Haugesund is about thirty miles north of the large port of Stavanger on Norway's west coast and about 290 miles airline from the nearest point in Scotland.)

Part Of "Offensive-Defensive"

The raid was described by informed circles as part of Britain's "offensive-defensive" campaign against the threat of German invasion.

Haugesund and the shipping bases around Stavanger are regarded as among those which could serve the Germans in any move to invade England. Such an invasion, it is believed here, would come simultaneously from ports between the Bay of Biscay and the lower Scandinavian peninsula.

"A Hudson of the coastal command squadron hit a 4,000-ton German supply vessel in Haugesund harbor, Norway, with three bombs in a dusk attack."

The fleet air arm has made attacks recently on German-c[illegible] Norwegian ports.

London Damage

DEC 29 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 28—Wave after wave of German bombers attacked London last night in a raid which, while it lasted, equaled in intensity any yet made on the city. For four hours the raiders flew over, dropping incendiaries and then explosives in district after district.

A terse Government statement acknowledged that "a number" of people were killed and that "many dwellings were destroyed or damaged." Numerous fires were started, but they were dealt with "quickly and efficiently," the communique said.

Large Hospital Damaged

A hospital which cares for seven hundred patients was damaged by two bombs, which landed nearby, but no one was hurt.

A building housing an American firm was damaged. (There was some indication that this might have been the Associated Press building, previously damaged.)

The raiders also flew over other areas of the islands, among them East Anglia and the south coast.

Bombs dropped on the port of Southampton by a lone raider this afternoon did "some damage," it was announced.

Church, Hotel Hit

A survey today of the damage in London showed one church which seats 1,000 persons had been severely damaged. A hotel in an adjacent street was wrecked and many nearby homes were badly damaged.

Eleven persons were rescued alive from a shelter beneath a block of houses. A number were believed to have been killed.

"Could Hear Them Screaming"

A woman in an adjoining shelter said:

"We could hear them screaming for help, but couldn't do anything. Men were trying to hack their way through the wall dividing the shelters, but wardens came and told them to stop because the entire shelter might collapse."

In another previously bombed district, the building used by a firm working on a twenty-four-hour basis was rocked by a blast and most of its windows broken, halting night work in the main rooms.

In one district, eight horses were led out of blazing stables by men and women of the neighborhood.

Home Guards patrolled the streets to prevent looting in an area where shop windows and fronts had been blown out.

One rescue worker told of digging out a girl, 14, whose dead mother was beside her.

"She kept calling to us where she was," the worker said.

"We finally uncovered her with her face lying near the fire, which was still burning in the gate. She kept saying: 'Mum is just behind me.' Her mother must have been killed instantly."

BRITISH SMASH AT NAZI BASES ON CHANNEL COAST, DROP 100 BOMBS A MINUTE

Mighty Assault On Invasion Springboards Termed Equal To Any Ever Made On England—Glare Lights Shore From Calais To Boulogne

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 28—In an evident attempt to smash Germany's winter preparations for invasion of England, great squadrons of British planes loosed bombs upon the Nazi-held offensive bases and blockade ports in France tonight at a rate that reached one hundred a minute.

A declaration that the British objective apparently had been reached was made by a neutral air observer in close touch with the British air staff. He described the assault as "equaling in intensity anything ever delivered by the Germans on any British city or town."

DEC 29 1940

Coast Alight From Calais To Boulogne

"The whole coast from Calais to Boulogne is alight," one observer reported. It was Boulogne itself which was at the fiery core of the British bombardment—Boulogne, whose port is deep enough to accommodate heavy cruisers.

The port serves, too, as a German submarine base and a haven for the flat-bottomed invasion craft assembled by the Nazis.

This mighty attack, which was directed also at Nazi big-gun positions and reddened the French coast for miles, capped a series of assaults in progress almost continuously since Thursday.

London Quiet, Southwest Town Hard Hit

Late tonight there had been no raider over London, but a southwest town suffered one of its worst raids of the war.

Successive formations of German bombers scattered incendiaries and high explosives over all sections of that city. Two hospitals were hit and many stores and homes destroyed. The British Press Association reported, however, that the number of casualties was believed "comparatively small."

During the day there had been but one reported instance of German bombing in all Britain: At Southampton, where a single plane caused "some damage."

Roar Of Bombs Rolls Across Channel

But on the French side it was a vastly different story.

Watchers on the coast reported that British bombers were attacking in a mass assault from Calais south to Boulogne. The roar of heavy explosions rolled across the fog-ridden sea and flashes lit the skies.

German searchlight batteries lifted their white beams in scores; British parachute flares and flaming shells of German anti-aircraft filled the air.

A fire was blazing near the German big-gun stations at Cap Gris Nez; the glare could be seen plainly through the fog.

Second Phase More Violent

The British struck first soon after dusk and continued without an interruption until about 8 o'clock. There was a short lull, broken only by the roar of the motors of scores of bombers, and then a second and more violent phase began.

Soon, the sky above the French coast was bright with fires.

The resumption tonight of attacks upon the German bases followed plain warnings to the public here that a great and perhaps decisive struggle was at hand.

The threat of a Nazi spring across the Channel, said one informed source, was no more serious than Britain's shipping situation.

"We are running as much chance of being choked by the (German) blockade before United States aid reaches its peak as we are of getting a knockout blow on the chin by invasion," he added.

"You can take it that we're not going to be diverted from the job of countering these two real dangers flat-out by any sideshow. . . ."

The Evening Standard, which is owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, suggested a like view that invasion was but one twin of the perils facing Britain.

Hitler's "Whole Purpose"

"It is plain," said that paper, "that Hitler's whole and urgent purpose is to batter down the defenses of Britain before next summer. . . . The people of Britain are at this moment dependent for their lives on keeping the sea roads clear enough of bandits to let a percentage of traffic pass."

The new British bombing campaign was carried out Friday and through Friday night from Norway to southern France, over a thousand miles of German-occupied coast line, by many of the Royal Air Force in coordination with navy flyers. Then the R. A. F.'s coastal command returned twice today, the Air Ministry announced, to make new hits on the docks at Lorient, France. This U-boat base has been bombed four times in two days.

Results Of Earlier Foray

The announced results of the earlier and broader foray included these:

The harbor and shipping at Haugesund, Norway, dive-bombed and machine-gunned; a 5,000-ton German supply ship thrice hit and left erupting in flames and explosions; hits scored on harbor jetties and warehouses.

The docks at Cherbourg and Lorient and a major airdrome at Bordeaux, all in France, attacked; Lorient's stores, barracks, drydocks and power station hit and Cherbourg's docks straddled by falling bombs; shipbuilding yards at St. Nazaire, France, also bombed.

Merignac Aldrome Bombed

Subsequently, the Air Ministry also disclosed that the Merignac airdrome, near Bordeaux, was attacked with both incendiaries and "particularly heavy" explosives.

It is Merignac 'drome from which the Nazis have been sending out big bombers to cover British sea routes, and it is from Lorient that many of their submarines have been operating.

The wide pattern of this attack appeared especially significant, since it has been observed that in any attempt to land troops in Britain, Hitler might be expected to use his larger ships from Norway for the 300-mile run direct to Scotland, while along the English Channel the relatively flat seas might be traversed by barges.

New Night Patrols

On the defensive front, Britain now is attacking the problem of night raiders by new night patrols against the continental airports.

Under the new British plan, long-cruising fighter-bombers hop the Channel in the evening and dodge about the Nazi advance airports until the lights are flashed on for take-off or lands. Then they attack the field itself or attempt to catch the raiders off base.

Bombs cannot put these front airfields out of operation indefinitely, Britons explained, but some of them are normally summer airports and are hard to repair in winter weather.

Hammer At Short-Range Bases

This British-worked "airfield trouble" is believed here to have been partly responsible for the recent sharp reduction in the duration of night raids on the islands.

While the Germans gave London one of the heaviest poundings in weeks Friday night—an assault acknowledged to have killed "a number" of people, destroyed "many dwellings" and started many fires—it nevertheless was less than half as long as previous raids of similar intensity.

The great objective of the British patrol is to thin out the attacks from short range—to make the Germans fly as far to get to England as the British must to reach German objectives.

Dickens House Hit In Raid on Chatham

Becomes War Casualty As Housewives Fight To Get To His Fruit—And Take It

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—An orange and lemon seller was added to Britain's war casualties today.

When news spread that he was selling his wares from a barrow at Croydon, the man was surrounded by women who exchanged blows, knocked off one another's hats and screamed as they tried to buy the fruit.

Scratched and bleeding, the orange vendor fought his way out and called the police. When help arrived the women were gone and the barrow was bare.

Irish Remain Adamant

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, Dec. 28—The people of Eire backed almost to a man the declaration of Eamonn de Valera, their American-born Premier, that this nation would not jeopardize the neutrality by handing over any naval bases to Britain—which wants them to fight German counter-blockade submarines.

To begin with, the citizens of Eire are determined to remain at peace.

The invasion scare which followed the collapse of France had largely passed over. Eire had prepared to fight any invasion, whether it came from Germany or Britain.

When Britain held out under heavy aerial bombardment during the autumn, people began to breathe easier, to sit back and enjoy their immunity from blackouts, rationing and bombs.

Informed observers felt no belligerent would attempt an invasion of Eire except as part of a grand-scale operation involving all the isles, and that, thanks to British stubbornness in beating off air attacks, seemed out of the question.

Churchill Raises Question

Then Winston Churchill, Britain's Prime Minister, raised the question of the Irish ports. The people were quick to see dynamite in his assertion that Britain's inability to use bases of the south and west coasts of Ireland in warfare against German U-boats "is a most heavy and grievous burden and one which should never have been placed on our shoulders, broad though they be."

Churchill's statement in itself was generally accepted as "a simple, perhaps natural, expression of regret"—as De Valera said he preferred to interpret it. What bothered people were intimations by some members of the British Commons that Germans were secretly using Irish ports in their U-boat campaign against British shipping and what was considered here a British press campaign "to get the ports."

The Irish were even more alarmed when they felt the British press was being reechoed in the United States. Many Irishmen probably would have no objection to getting into a war as an ally of the United States, but as an ally in any degree of Britain—never!

As De Valera said:

"I should have refrained from making any comment upon it (Churchill's statement) were it not that it has been followed by an extensive press campaign in Britain itself, and reechoed in the United States of America—the purport of the campaign being that we surrender or lease our ports to Britain for the conduct of the war."

De Valera commented that if it was a "sacrifice" for Britain to restore the ports to Eire two years ago, it was one to be faced by the British Government and people.

De Valera pointed out that Eire had been unable to bring the armaments to a strength involving the risk of war.

"Nobody who realizes what modern war means," he said, "and what it means particularly for those who have not sufficient air defenses, would have the slightest doubt but that that policy (of neutrality on the part of Eire) was the right one—apart altogether from any question of sympathy with one side or the other.

Refusal Will Stand

"There can be no question of the handing over of ports so long as the state remains neutral. . . . Any attempt to bring pressure to bear on us by any of the belligerents—by Britain—could lead only to bloodshed."

The strategic Irish ports which Britain would like to have back to refuel her flotillas and aircraft are:

Spike Island, Cobh (Queenstown), County Cork, near U-boat's happy hunting grounds in the World War.

Berehaven, Bantry Bay, County Cork, on the southwest coast.

Fort Duncree, Lough Swilly, County Donegal, on the extreme northwestern coast.

The late Neville Chamberlain, as British Prime Minister, handed over the ports to Eire under an agreement ratified in 1938. The bases had been neglected during a period of disarmament. They have since been modernized and highly fortified, but since Eire has no navy they have not been used as naval bases.

De Valera denied charges that German U-boats have been getting supplies off the Irish coast during the war. He declared that "a more extensive system of coast observation has been established."

TEPELENI IS CAPTURED

Many Prisoners and Quantities of Booty Are Seized on Central Battlefront.

Athens, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—A Greek submarine attacked an Italian convoy in the Adriatic and sank three steamships, it was officially announced tonight. The submarine was said to have returned safely.

The submarine Papanicolis, the official statement said, encountered the convoy in the Adriatic and, despite the fact it was guarded by Italian destroyers, fired all her torpedoes at effective range.

The three ships sunk were said to total between 25,000 and 30,000 tons.

[Jane's Fighting Ships lists the Papanicolis as one of six submarines in the Greek Navy. She displaces between 575 and 775 tons, carries a normal complement of thirty-nine men, is armed with one 3.9-inch gun, an anti-aircraft gun and six torpedo tubes, and has stowage space for seven torpedoes.]

Tepeleni Falls to Greeks.

Meanwhile Greeks besieging Tepeleni on the middle Albanian battlefront were reported to have wrested domination of the town from the Italians with bayonet charges and shellfire.

Crumbling Italian resistance had brought the battle to the decisive stage, Greek dispatches said. Italian guns were said to be withdrawing from elevated positions back of the town, while the action of the Greek artillery was crushing the enemy.

"Their forts were literally destroyed by the continuous pounding of our guns," one dispatch said. "Our infantrymen stormed enemy lines with bayonets. The morale of the Italians is low as a result of the artillery fire. They could not face the bayonets and retreated. Many prisoners were captured and mortars, machine-guns, rifles and other material, horses and mules have fallen into our hands."

Preceded by Local Successes.

Earlier the Greeks had announced local successes and the capture of 200 prisoners and considerable war equipment.

The High Command, in a brief communique, failed to specify where the new gains were won, but reports from the front indicated that the sharp fighting in the vicinity of Kilisura, mountain gateway leading to Tepeleni and thence to Valona, was continuing.

The Ministry of Home Security announced that Italian warplanes had bombed a town in the Epirus sector of northwest Greece yesterday, but that there were no casualties or damage.

THREE TROOP SHIPS SUNK BY GREEK SUB

Italian Transports In Convoy For Albania Torpedoed, Athens Announces

BY MAX HARRELSON

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Sunday, Dec. 29—The daring stab of the Greek submarine Papanicolis, reported officially to have slipped inside a destroyer guard and sunk three Italian transports carrying troops and equipment, was followed today by Greek claims of new gains ashore.

The three ships, a Greek Ministry of Marine communique said, were part of a convoy moving reinforcements across the Adriatic from the Italian port of Brindisi to the Albanian port of Valona, an Italian foothold threatened by Greece's army.

Submarine Eludes Destroyers

The communique described the vessels as "large," to totaling between 25,000 and 30,000 tons, and said they were protected by "a heavy escort of warships."

"Sinking of the enemy vessels was followed by a chase of several hours by enemy destroyers, which dropped depth charges," it said. "As a result of the skillful maneuvering, our submarine faced the attack and then returned safely to port."

[Greece has six submarines, according to "Jane's Fighting Ships." It lists the Papanicolis as displacing 576 tons on the surface and carrying a normal complement of thirty-nine men. It mounts one 3.9-inch gun, an anti-aircraft gun and six torpedo tubes.]

Advance North Of Chimara

A two-sentence General Staff communique merely said: "There were successful local operations on a reduced scale. Prisoners were taken."

A Government spokesman, however, said that despite thickening weather "our troops have been able to advance north and northwest of Chimara, and a great distance from this town the enemy is defending himself in heavily fortified positions."

Fascists Forced From Heights

Against strong Italian resistance, the spokesman added, "methodical" Greek attacks have forced the Fascists from heights exceeding 3,000 feet, and compelled them to put up a running fight to cover their retreat.

In the region east of Chimara, he said, among prisoners taken was one captain and "quite important" materiel, including machine guns and automatic rifles not yet counted.

East of the Viosa river, the spokesman reported, "we captured more prisoners but the exact number is not yet known."

Other blows were reported on land. Italian resistance in defense of Tepeleni, on a junction of roads leading to the Albanian port of Valona, was said to be "crumbling."

Reports from the front said that Greeks besieging Tepeleni won domination of the town with bayonet charges and shell-fire and that the battle had reached a "decisive stage."

Under the pounding of Greek guns, it was said, Italian forts have been smashed, their artillery has been drawn back from elevated positions and their morale has been lowered.

When Greek infantry charged the Fascist lines with bayonets, one dispatch said, the Italians retreated, leaving behind prisoners, mortars, machine guns, rifles, horses, mules and other war material.

Rome Reports Attack On Greek Naval Base

Rome, Dec. 28 (AP)—Italian warplanes attacked the naval base at Preveza, on the west coast of Greece, the Italian high command asserted today, scoring "direct hits" on steamers in the bay.

Other bombing and fighter formations attacked "troops preparations and highway junctions" in Albania, a communique reported, while on the ground "enemy attacks have been repulsed by our decisive reaction."

Some prisoners and automatic arms were reported to have been captured.

BRITISH COUNT 38,114 ITALIAN TROOPS TAKEN

SOME UNITS SWEEP TO WEST

Prisoners Say Mussolini Orders Besieged Men to Stand as at Alcazar.

Cairo, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—British general headquarters announced today that 38,114 prisoners taken in the great offensive against Italian Libya had been counted.

They included 24,845 Italian officers and other ranks, the communique said. The remainder were non-Italian soldiers.

The British said that "the concentration of our forces investing Bardia is proceeding smoothly, while our artillery continues to harass the Italian garrison."

Bardia is a frontier base, just within Libya, now in its thirteenth day of siege. Captured Italian soldiers said that Premier Mussolini himself had ordered the garrison to be "ready to die rather than give up."

Clearing Road to West.

"Operations by our mobile detachments to clear the country to the westward are proceeding," the British communique said.

Italian prisoners predicted that Bardia would become a second Alcazar, referring to the long siege of the Infantry School at Toledo in the early days of the Spanish civil war.

Ship Shells British.

The defenders of the Alcazar were ultimately rescued, but the sacrifice garrison of 20,000 Italian troops at Bardia apparently have little hope of history's repeating itself.

The prisoners said that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, the Italian commander in North Africa, was hurriedly strengthening his defenses at Tobruk, fifty miles to the west, in preparation for an expected British attack there.

Rome, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command announced today that Italian motorized columns had destroyed a British mechanized detachment on the Bardia front with the aid of the air force, capturing crews of machines, while an Italian warship shelled the British along the Libyan coast.

The warship bombarded "armored detachments, dispersing enemy nuclei and silencing tractor-drawn artillery," the daily war bulletin said.

Italian bombing planes, the communique continued, kept British front line bases and mechanized equipment under effective attack while fighter planes maintained lively combats against those of the British. Three British planes were shot down while one Italian bomber failed to return, the High Command added.

Italians Warn U. S.

DEC 29 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 28—Virginio Gayda, the authoritative Italian editor, today warned American "interventionists" that if they sent supply convoys to Britain by way of neutral Ireland they would start "a spread of the conflict from Europe and the North Atlantic to the Western Hemisphere, the Southern Atlantic and the Pacific.

In his Il Giornale d'Italia, Gayda wrote that Japan, under her three-power pact with Italy and Germany, "is watchful and would not allow, without immediate reaction, extension of the European and Asiatic conflict."

Have Aid Pledge

(Japan, Italy and Germany are pledged to come to each other's aid if any one of them is "attacked" by a power not now party to the wars in the Western or Eastern worlds. This pact is considered generally to be directed against the United States.)

For this reason, Gayda went on, he did not see "exactly what interest American interventionists have in creating an open conf b een continents."

Sending of ships to Ireland with supplies for Britain, he said, would be "an open violatio of neutrality and therefore signify initiative of the United States in intervention in the war."

The "direct responsibility" for Axis "reaction" would fall on the Washington Government, Gayda wrote editorially in his Il Giornale d'Italia.

The newspaper declared that any United States ships which attempted to enter Eire's (Ireland's) ports with supplies for Britain would be exposed to the same attacks that British merchant ships now are undergoing.

The Nazi Warning

(Karl Megerle, semi-official commentator for the Germ Foreign Office, informed Eire and the United States yesterday that Eire would continue to be included in the Nazi blockade zone, even if it should be excluded by amendment from the danger zone specified in the American neutrality act. "Whoever appears there," he wrote in the Boersen Zeitung, "does so at the risk of exposing himself to warlike action.")

The Rome radio assured Eire of the support of Germany and Italy in the event of Irish conflict with Britain.

German Warning Stands

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP) — Authorized sources said today that official Germany had nothing to add to warnings issued yesterday by the inspired Nazi press to both Eire and the United States that Eire would continue in the German blockade zone, come what may.

These sources added that yesterday's editorials had been "carefully studied and found to present the problem in an excellent manner."

British Count 38,114 Captives As Siege Of Bardia Continues

BY EDWARD KENNEDY

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 28—The concentration of British forces about beleaguered Bardia was officially reported proceeding "smoothly" today, while British artillery thundered steadily at that vital Italian base in Libya.

Advanced motorized detachments went on clearing the country to the west, general headquarters announced, and four additional Italian guns were captured.

The number of Fascist prisoners of war in hand and counted was put at 38,114, some 16,000 of them non-Italians.

Bolstering Tobruk Defense

To these captives the British attributed two stories—that the Italian defenders of Bardia, ordered by Premier Benito Mussolini himself to "die rather than give up," would turn that base into a "second Alcazar," and that the Italian command was urgently strengthening the defenses of the port of Tobruk, to the west, in fear of any early British attack here.

The reference to Alcazar was to the ten-week defense of Spain's military academy at Toledo during the civil war by the forces of Francisco Franco.

Egypt Wants Voice In Terms

It was disclosed today that many Egyptians apparently feel that Egypt, although not formally at war, has contributed enough to the Italian rout—giving the British food, communications and fighting space—to have a voice in the peace negotiations which may follow.

Mohamed Mahmoud Pasha, a former Premier and head of the Liberal party, observed that Egypt had played "an important role," and thus "owes it to herself to gather its fruits and be represented at the peace negotiations."

In the press it is stressed that Egypt has lived up faithfully to her treaty obligations with Britain.

One phrase of Winston Churchill's recent speech in London—his remark that Egypt was "under British protection"—caused some uneasiness in Egypt, perhaps because the Arabic language uses the same word for "protection" and "protectorate."

This was allayed by the embassy's explanation that the Prime Minister was referring merely to the present treaty, under which the British have the right to have troops in Egypt and assume the obligation of the country's defense.

British Mechanized Unit Destroyed, Italians Claim

BY GEORGE JORDAN

Rome, Dec. 28 (AP)—Italy's high command announced today destruction of a British mechanized detachment and capture of its crews in a swift offensive thrust by an Italian motorized column in the sector of besieged Libyan Bardia.

Italian warplanes cooperated, it was stated.

Simultaneously, an Italian naval unit pounded British armored detachments along the coast with shellfire, scattering them and "reducing motor-transported artillery to silence," the communique contended.

"Lively" Aerial Combats

Effective bomber attacks on British front-line bases (presumably those encircling two Italian divisions at Bardia) were reported, and, it was stated, "our fighter planes maintained lively combats with those of the enemy."

[A British communique said that British planes during the same period engaged no Italian planes, although they made extensive patrols.]

An Italian plane was reported to have torpedoed and sunk a 5,000-ton steamer in the Mediterranean, but in the Atlantic "one of our submarines failed to return."

GAYDA WARNS U.S. ON SHIPS SENT TO EIRE

Says Action Would Spread War to This Hemisphere and Into the Pacific

ROME, Dec. 28 (AP) Italy's Virginio Gayda topped an Axis press offensive against the sending of American supply convoys to Britain by way of neutral Ireland with the assertion today that this would start the war spreading to the Western Hemisphere and the Pacific Ocean.

The editor of Il Giornale d'Italia said Japan, tied to Rome and Berlin by an "all for one and one for all" pledge against outside intervention in Eastern or Western war, is "watchful" and "with her large means and wide Asiatic influence, would not allow without immediate reaction an extension of the European and Asiatic conflict."

WOULD BLAME U. S.

"Direct responsibility," Gayda warned, would fall on the Washington government for the "reaction" which such "intervention" would provoke on the part of the Axis and Japan.

Gayda, like Berlin commentators, declared the dispatch of American convoys to Ireland would be an open violation of United States neutrality, tantamount, in the Axis view, to the beginning of United States intervention in the war. He indicated the Axis powers would make every effort to prevent such ships from reaching their destinations.

Gayda said he did not see why American "interventionists" wanted to "create an open conflict between continents."

By sending convoys to Ireland, these "interventionists," he went on, "would thus be the starters of the spread of conflict from Europe and the North Atlantic to the Western Hemisphere, the Southern Atlantic and the Pacific."

PLEDGES RECALLED.

President Roosevelt, he said, made "declarations in contrary directions on the eve of his re-election."

Only a few persons in American political circles want openly-declared intervention in the war by the United States, Gayda continued, but "a considerable number of important personages" desire to intensify aid to England while seeking to escape the responsibility and risks of direct war initiative.

Thus, he said, they hope to leave this responsibility to "the natural and necessary reactions of the Axis powers and Japan and thus create an alibi for whatever may happen."

"Naturally," Gayda asserted, "the American interventionists know they are heading deliberately toward the reactions of the Axis if they impose, with their American merchantmen and warships going directly toward the enemy to serve his war aims, a violation of the sea zone prohibited by the lines of the (Axis) counter-blockade."

Phillips Goes to Rome Tuesday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP)—William Phillips, Ambassador to Italy, said today that he would leave on Tuesday for Rome by clipper from New York. The Ambassador, who has been on sick leave in the United States for several months, came to Washington today to confer with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Italy's Food Decree in Effect

ROME, Dec. 28 (AP)—A law decreeing death penalties for extreme cases of food hoarding or destruction of prime materials and agricultural products became effective in Italy tonight. If the case does not produce a grave disturbance the offender will be liable to a penitentiary sentence.

Submarine Attack at Azores.

Punta Delgada, the Azores, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—A submarine of unidentified nationality fired a torpedo ineffectively today at a ship which had just left the harbor of this city in the Portuguese Azores.

The torpedo piled up on the beach near Santa Maria and exploded, damaging several houses.

The ship, flying the Panama flag, immediately put about and re-entered the harbor without mishap.

'Five Ships Sunk'

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP)—The sinking of four armed British merchant ships totaling 24,340 tons, and a fifth of 12,823 tons identified as the Waiotira, was officially credited by the high command today to two German submarines.

Also a German scouting plane was credited with dropping two heavy bombs on a merchant ship of 8,000 to 10,000 tons yesterday east of the Thames mouth. Informed sources said the vessel burst into flames and presumably sank.

(Mackay Radio intercepted a message Thursday from the Waiotira, saying she had been torpedoed about 400 miles northwest of Ireland.)

"Explosions, Large Fires"

A "few" British planes penetrated the German-held coastal region last night, the high command reported, but it said no bombs were dropped on German territory.

Large units of German warplanes were said to have attacked London last night with incendiary and explosive bombs. The high command claimed that "violent explosions and large fires" in the center and eastern parts of the city "proved the strong effect of the raid."

Channel Shipping Shelled

British ships which tried to approach German-held Dunkirk on the French Channel coast during the night were reported to have been shelled and turned north by long-range guns of the army and navy.

"Effective" fire on shipping in the Channel continued early this morning, informed sources added.

Three Planes Shot Down

DNB, the official German news agency, said three British planes were shot down in the North Sea yesterday during two unsuccessful raids on German patrol boats.

Two torpedo planes were shot down by anti-aircraft guns on the ships in the first attempted raid, the agency said, and a flying boat fell victim in the second raid soon after.

NAZIS CLAIM 37,163 TONS OF BRITISH SHIPS

Report Destruction Of 4 Merchant Craft And 12,823-Ton Waiotira

BY A. J. STEINKOPF

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 28—The destruction of 37,163 more tons of British shipping by two German submarines—four armed merchant ships and the 12,823-ton Waiotira—was claimed today by the German high command.

In addition, in a summary of Nazi activity of yesterday and last night, the high command confirmed earlier unofficial reports of the apparent sinking by a German scouting plane of a merchant ship of 8,000 to 10,000 tons east of the mouth of the Thames yesterday.

Other Blows Reported

These other blows against Britain were reported officially and unofficially:

An overnight raid of "strong effect" on London, where it was declared there were "violent explosions and large fires."

A bombardment by German naval guns and artillery which forced British ships to flee from an attempt to approach German-held Dunkirk on the French coast.

"Effective" fire by German long-range guns on Channel shipping, which continued this morning from the French coast.

Says "Few" Got Through

The high command, while acknowledging that "a few" British planes penetrated the German-held coastal region in the night, asserted that no bombs were dropped "on German territory."

DNB reported tonight that a fire that extended from three to five miles northeast of London's Hyde Park section was started by last night's bombing attack on the British capital.

Tanker Reported Hit

The whole eastern section of the city was particularly hard hit, the news agency said. A line northeast of Hyde Park for three miles would cut across the fashionable West End residential area.

Today's air activity over Britain, DNB added, was confined largely to reconnaissance and photographing, but various attacks were launched against British shipping. A tanker of 6,000 to 8,000 tons was hit several times and probably was sunk, DNB said.

Hitler Decorates Two Cruiser Commanders

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Two commanders of German auxiliary cruisers operating in "overseas waters" have been awarded the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross by Adolf Hitler, a German broadcast said today.

The two officers, recommended for decorations by Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, are Captains Krueder and Kaehler.

Seal, Reported Lost Last May, Captured By Reich, DNB Reports

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP) — DNB, official German news agency, said today that the German Navy is using a former British submarine, the 2,500-ton Seal, in operations against England.

DNB reported the submarine, her commander and her crew were captured afloat in the North Sea last May 5 after she had been incapacitated by a mine. The agency said the vessel was recommissioned in a German harbor.

The Seal, an undersea minelayer, was reported overdue and presumably lost by the British Admiralty on May 12. One of the Porpoise class she carried a normal complement of fifty-five men. Jane's Fighting Ships lists the Porpoise class tonnage as between 1,520 and 2,157.

NAZI COAL CARS SNARLED

Swiss Explain Traffic Delay During Holiday Season

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 28 (AP)—The breakdown of German coal cars passing through this country to Italy was partly responsible for delays in rail traffic during the holiday season, a Swiss National Railroads communiqué said tonight.

Some of these broken freight cars snarled traffic for several hours frequently on the famed St. Gothard line, the main artery through the Alps between the Axis powers.

The communiqué said the bombing of a railroad viaduct near Zurich by British planes on Dec. 22 also contributed to delays, as well as cold weather and increased holiday freight.

Belgium Under The Nazis

DEC 29

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels (Via Berlin), Dec. 28—Belgium's universities have reopened—but with German commissars to see that they do no wrong.

They sit side by side with the Belgian university heads in administering affairs of the institutions, and in addition lecture to the students on such subjects as "Germanistics," "Romanistics," international law and philosophy.

Among the most notable appointments was that of Capt. G. A. Walz, of the Munich University law faculty, as Commissar for Brussels University. Others were named for Ghent, Louvain and Liege universites.

The reopening of Ghent University found Dr. Adrian Martens, who once was under sentence of death as a World War traitor, occupying a professorial chair in the medical faculty.

The once obscure Flemish surgeon, who escaped punishment through a general amnesty, stayed out of the news for many years after the World War, but early last year was the center of a political controversy which caused the resignation of the then Premier, Paul Henri Spaak.

Trouble Over Dr. Martens

The trouble arose over the appointment of Dr. Martens to the Flemish academy—as a friendly gesture, Spaak explained, toward the Flemish people. It raised such a clamor, especially among World War veterans, that King Leopold had to intervene.

Later Dr. Martens was arrested by the Belgians as a fifth columnist.

Getting an education is only one of the problems confronting Belgians today. During the little kingdom's eighteen-day participation in the war last spring it was badly battered. It will take years to remove its scars.

A report by the commissary general for construction shows that some 150,000 private buildings, 3,000 factories 3,000 public buildings and 1,500 bridges and works of art were destroyed or damaged.

Here are the figures broken down:

Private dwellings—9,832 utterly destroyed, 24,156 seriously damaged, 116,710 slightly damaged.

Factories—352 destroyed, 839 heavily damaged, 1,66[illegible] slightly damaged.

Public buildings, including churches and town halls—235 destroyed 950 seriously damaged, 1,872 slightly damaged.

Also damaged were 1,445 works of art.

Add Damage To Roads

Add to all this 669,000,000 square yards of damaged or destroyed public roads and you have a general idea of what Belgium went through.

Progress in rehabilitation is indicated by the fact that railroad freight service is being restored and coal is available everywhere. Most of the country's rolling stock, which had been taken to France for safekeeping, has been returned.

Belgian food producers and processors have been put under central control similar to the German system, with a view to spreading food supplies equitably among the people.

The whole potato crop has been requisitioned by the newly created "Corporation of Agriculture" to check profiteering.

Late in November the Agriculture Ministry announced a program for a twenty-five per cent. increase in wheat and potato crop to rescue the country from a prospective shortage.

Political life, at a standstill since the Germans began their invasion May 10, is showing signs of reviving. The "National Legion," a political organization expounding an "authoritarian, cooperative state," has held meetings at which speakers lauded its advantages.

The Rexist party likewise is becoming active again. Leon Degrelle, its leader, who had been deported to France, returned recently and has resumed his denunciations of Freemasonry and Jews.

War Communiques

British

LONDON, Dec. 28 (AP).—The text of a communique from the Air Ministry today:

Yesterday afternoon, aircraft of the Royal Air Force carried out an attack on enemy shipping in the Norwegian harbor of Haugesund. One of our aircraft made a dive-bombing and machine-gun attack on a merchant vessel at anchor. Three hits were scored by bombs released from a very low level. Fires broke out, and there was a violent explosion.

A later communique from the Air Ministry:

Last night, aircraft of the bomber command attacked targets in the docks at Cherbourg and Lorient and the Focke-Wulfe airdrome at Bordeaux (all in France).

At Lorient, stores, barracks, drydocks and the power station were bombed, and at Cherbourg the docks were straddled.

At Bordeaux, bad weather made it difficult to find the target, but many bombs were seen to burst among the hangars. St. Inglevert airdrome and shipbuilding yards at St. Navaire also were bombed.

Our program of mine-laying in enemy waters was continued.

In all these operations, two of our aircraft are missing.

A Hudson of the Coastal Command squadron hit a 4,000-ton German supply vessel in Haugesund harbor, Norway, with three bombs in a dusk attack

Another Air Ministry communique:

Two attacks were made today on the L'Orient docks by forces of bombers of the coastal command. Hits were observed, and all our aircraft returned safely.

The Ministeries of Air and Home Security issued this communique:

Soon after dark yesterday evening, London was attacked by enemy bombers. During this attack, which lasted about four hours, many bombs were dropped in the capital. A few bombs also were dropped in East Anglia and southeast England and at one point on the south coast.

A number of people were killed and others injured, and many dwelling houses were destroyed or damaged. There were several fires, but they were all quickly and efficiently dealt with, and many of them were extinguished while the raid was still in progress.

A later Air and Home Security Ministries communique:

There was very little enemy air activity over this country today, but bombs were dropped by a single enemy aircraft over Southampton this afternoon, causing some damage and a few casualties.

An Admiralty communique:

Skua aircraft (dive bombers) yesterday attacked enemy shipping and harbor works in the Haugesund. One enemy supply ship, of 4,000 tons, lying alongside a jetty, was hit and set on fire. Hits also were scored on jetties and warehouses. One of the enemy's anti-aircraft guns was silenced by machine-gun fire. All our aircraft returned safely.

CAIRO, Dec. 28 (AP).—Today's Middle East R. A. F. communique:

There was little activity in the western desert yesterday.

A number of reconnaissance flights were made, and our fighters maintained active offensive patrols without, however, engaging any enemy aircraft.

In Italian East Africa, Assab was raided by our bombers, bombs straddling military stores and a large transport yard.

In the Kassala area a Rhodesian squadron carried out bombing and machine-gun attacks on enemy positions. Bombs fell in the target area; full extent of damage and casualties is not known.

Near Geraref the fighter aircraft of a South African squadron intercepted two CR-42's, one of which was shot down in flames.

All our aircraft returned safely.

A British general headquarters communique:

The concentration of our forces investing Bardia is proceeding smoothly, while our artillery continues to harass the Italian garrison.

Operations by our mobile detachments to clear the country to the westward are proceeding.

Prisoners counted to date since the beginning of operations in the western desert now number 38,114, of which 24,845 are Italian officers and other ranks. Four additional guns have been captured south of Bardia.

Greek

ATHENS, Dec. 28 (AP).—The Greek Ministry of Marine communique today:

On Dec. 27 the Greek submarine Papanicolis, under Lieut. Comdr. Milton Iatrides, attacked an enemy convoy in the Adriatic. The convoy carried troops and equipment from Brindisi (Italy) to Valona (Albania) under a heavy escort of warships. Our submarine commander with determination succeeded in destroying three large vessels of the convoy, totaling 25,000 to 30,000 tons.

Sinking of the enemy vessels was followed by a chase of several hours by enemy destroyers, which dropped depth charges. As a result of skillful maneuvering, our submarine faced the attack and then returned safely to her base.

The General Staff communique tonight:

There were successful local operations on a reduced scale. Prisoners were taken.

The Ministry of Home Security communique:

There were no raids on Greece today. According to reports from the appropriate police authorities, the Italians when retreating from Khimara abducted ten Greek officials. Their fate is unknown.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 28 (AP).—The German high command communique for today:

One submarine, of whose recent successes partial results already have been announced, reported sinking four armed enemy merchant ships totaling 24,340 tons. Another submarine sank the armed British merchant ship Waiotira, 12,823 tons.

After the Christmas holiday quiet, air reconnaissance and fighting activity of the German Air Force set in again in the course of Dec. 27.

One scouter hit an enemy merchant ship of approximately 8,000 to 10,000 tons with two heavy-caliber bombs east of the Thames Mouth. Last night larger units of German combat planes attacked London with numerous incendiary bombs and explosives of all calibers. Violent explosion and large fires in the center and eastern portions of the city proved the strong effect of the raid.

Long-range artillery of the army and navy during the same night shelled enemy ships which tried to approach Dunkerque, forcing them to turn northward. The enemy entered the costal region with a few planes, but without dropping bombs on German territory.

Patrol and protection vessels in the North Sea were unsuccessfully attacked by enemy torpedo planes. The vessels downed three planes.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 28 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Bardia front in the Cirenaican (Libyan) frontier zone, there was artillery fire.

In an action in combination with our air force, one of our fast columns destroyed an enemy mechanized detachment, capturing its crew.

A naval unit carried out artillery action along the coast against armored detachments, dispersing enemy nuclei and reducing motor-transported artillery to silence.

Our bombing planes continued to keep the enemy front line bases and mechanized equipment under their effective attacks during daylight yesterday and the preceding night.

Our fighter planes maintained lively combats with those of the enemy. One of our planes hit a 5,000-ton steamer in the Mediterranean with a torpedo and sank it.

Altogether, three enemy fighter planes were shot down. One of our bombers failed to return.

On the Greek front, enemy attacks have been repulsed by our decisive reaction. Some prisoners and automatic arms have been captured.

Bombing fighter formations followed one another against troops, preparations and highway junctions. The enemy naval base at Preveza (Greece) was attacked, with direct hits scored on steamships in the bay.

In the Atlantic, one of our submarines failed to return.

Great Force Reported Near Yugoslav Border With Heavy Equipment

BY CHAS. S. FOLTZ

BELGRADE SAYS: Germans mass more than full division of troops within few miles of Yugoslav frontier, military quarters report.

BUDAPEST SAYS: Massing of German troops in Rumania viewed as move toward "insurance" against British push in the Balkans and will be used against Greece only if Britain lands an invasion force.

[Story on Page 2, Column 1]

[By The Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Sunday Dec. 29. The mass movement of approximately 300,000 German troops across Hungary into Rumania continued throughout the night under screen of a newly imposed Hungarian censorship.

Reports from informed sources in neutral Yugoslavia said today that many fresh German units had moved into Timisorara in the Banat region of Rumania on the Yugoslav frontier—less than 100 miles' striking distance from Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital.

This Nazi movement, whatever its ultimate purpose, was being carried out with a thoroughness that ruled out any possibility of bluff in the opinion of Balkan observers.

All Kinds Of Equipment Moving

Pontoon bridge sections, light and heavy artillery, field kitchens, canned food stocks, medical supplies, and even spare railroad parts moved southeast under the guard of German railway police.

Reliable reports said motorized equipment of all sorts—including tanks, infantry transport trucks, ambulances and motorcycles—crossed Hungary atop flatcars.

Until yesterday it was believed generally that the German move meant either a further policing of Rumania or a safeguard against possible British moves northward from Greece. A Russian move south through Moldavia also was not excluded.

Pressure On Yugoslavia Seen

But the reports out of Belgrade not only gave credence to possible pressure on Yugoslavia from the Timisoara region but said that German columns were piling up on the frontiers of Yugoslavia in Southern Austria.

A shift of Italian troops from the Milan region toward Triste and other centers bordering Western Yugoslavia also was reported by these sources. The Trieste region recently was raided by British planes. It is in the upper Adriatic Sea, north of Albania, where the Italians are hard-pressed by the Greeks.

The only authoritative estimate of the number of German troops moving day and night through Hungary with their heavy equipment came from Budapest just before the censors tightened down on telephone connections with Switzerland.

Telephone Service Cut

An Associated Press dispatch telephoned from Budapest last night began: "Since the German forces began moving through Hungary in strength, censorship suddenly has increased." At this point the Budapest operator announced the line had "broken down."

Correspondents in the Hungarian capital also have complained of omissions in telegrams and radiograms and inability to maintain connections with other European capitals.

Appears To Be Unofficial

From the outside looking in, the censorship appears to lack official recognition. Budapest operators insist coldly that "your party does not desire to talk to you any more" or "your party's office and home telephones have all broken down."

Authoritative reports from Budapest move is Hitler's. Everyone kibitzing on Britain's side of the table is wondering what that move will be.

The British seemingly have reason for feeling that "something is in the air," other than the routine of a reciprocal stabs from airplane bomb racks at the other fellow's strong points.

For several days now Britain has buzzed with rumors of German activities all over the continent—rumors of Nazi troops pouring into Rumania, of German jack boots tromping the streets and squares of Italy, of Nazi threats to move into unoccupied France.

And all the while there have been those in high places and in low who

Nazi Move Reactions

BY ROBT. B. PARKER

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 28—With the advance guard of the new Nazi expedition of 300,000 troops already rolling eastward across Hungary, authoritative sources reported today that Germany plans to move against Greece by way of Bulgaria only if Britain tries to use Greece as the starting point for an invasion of Central Europe.

Germany, these sources said, will not move to aid the Italian forces now fighting the Greeks in Albania if the British refrain from landing troops in Greece.

Germany was understood by these sources to have let it be known in the Balkans that if Italy collapsed as the result of a Greek victory, the Nazis would make a definite peace with France.

Hitler's Point Of View

It was stated authoritatively that Adolf Hitler had agreed to let Premier Mussolini attack Greece last October only because he wished to divert Italy's attention from beaten France.

Germany was said to have been considerably embarrassed by Italian clamor for French territory when Hitler reportedly wished to give Marshal Philippe Petain, French Chief of State, easy terms so as to win the Vichy Government's full friendship.

The debacle in Albania, far from disquieting Germany, has made Italy keep quiet about demands in France, these sources said.

"Insurance Measure"

Mass movements of German troops and war materials to Rumania, which, it is estimated by observers, will give the Nazis nearly half a million men there by the end of January, were designed chiefly as an insurance measure, it was reported here.

Concentration of Nazi troops in southwestern Rumania was expected to put great pressure on Yugoslavia, possibly aimed at forcing the Belgrade Government to accede to German wishes.

These troop concentrations also were said to be designed as a brake on reported Soviet Russian designs to occupy Moldavia and the mouths of the Danube, as well as giving Turkey reason to think twice about fulfilling her treaty with Britain or increasing her help to Greece.

The first Turkish reaction to movement of a new German Army into Rumania appeared in the press today with emphasis that the situation was of direct concern to Soviet Russia as well as to the Balkan countries.

The newspaper Aksham, which often speaks the Government's mind, said that if Germany's move was not directed against the Balkans it could only be directed against Russia.

The Soviets were reported to have moved thirty crack divisions into Bessarabia on the Rumanian frontier.

It was said authoritatively that King Boris III of Bulgaria informed Hitler during a recent visit to Germany that he would abdicate rather than sanction the passage of German troops across Bulgaria toward Greece or Turkey.

in Greece and attempts to invade central Europe.

These German troops—there are expected to be nearly 500,000 in the Balkans by the end of January—are described as chiefly an insurance measure.

The mass movement of additional troops now is under way in earnest and there is drastic curtailment of domestic train services to clear the tracks in both Hungary and Rumania.

Troop Trains Jam Traffic

Since early this morning travelers between the two countries found available services cut to a single train daily.

Double and triple-tracked lines from the German-Hungarian frontier to Rumanian border stations were jammed with trains averaging sixty freight cars from the German State Railways. The locomotive of one train often was only 200 yards behind the caboose of another.

Hitler because he wanted to give the Petain Government easy peace terms and win Vichy's full friendship.

Now the Italian debacle in Greece and Albania, it was said, is far from disquieting to Germany.

If Italy collapses, Hitler is represented as ready to make a full settlement with France, taking only Alsace and Lorraine. Marshal Petain, today's informants asserted, has told the Nazis that if their terms are unreasonable he will cut North Africa loose, with Gen. Maxime Weygand taking a large colonial army there over to the Free French forces and moving from Tunisia against Libya in coordination with British action from Egypt.

Hitler's Forces Designed Also To Act As Brake On Soviet Russia

Budapest, Dec. 28—Authoritative informants reported tonight that the mass of men and materiel which Germany is sending to Rumania will be sent across Bulgaria to attack Greece only in the event Britain lands a force

The freight cars carried the traditional forty men with full equipment.

Besides guarding against a back-door thrust at Germany such as Britain attempted at the Dardanelles in the last war, the concentration in southwestern Rumania is expected by the Germans to put pressure on Yugoslavia and force that Government to accede to German wishes.

As Brake On Russia And Turkey

The German masses in Rumania also are designed to act as a brake on reported Soviet designs to occupy Moldavia and the mouths of the Danube, and to deter Turkey from implementing her treaty with Britain and increasing her help to Greece.

The Russians are reported reliably to have thirty crack divisions in Bessarabia, on the border of Rumania. And in Turkey today the inspired newspaper Aksham said the additional troops which Germany is sending to Rumania would "further damage" Soviet-German relations.

Hitler And Greek Affair

As for the Greek affair, reliable informants here say Hitler agreed to Mussolini's attack on his neighbor only because he wished to quiet Italian clamor for slices of French territory. This, it was said, embarrassed

Government Announces Minister To U. S. Was Relieved Of Post On Foreign Office Advice

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 28 (AP)—The resignation November 28 of John Pelenyi after seven years as Hungarian Minister to Washington finally was revealed to the Hungarian public today by the Government-controlled press.

The bare announcement the envoy had been "relieved of his post" by Regent Admiral Horthy "on the advice of the Foreign Office" was published.

In announcing his resignation at Washington, Pelenyi said he had planned to retire and would remain in the United States indefinitely.

In Washington diplomatic quarters it was believed he was dissatisfied with his Government's partnership in the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance, and reports in the Balkans at the time said the resignation had been brought about through Axis pressure on Hungary to name a man more willing to work for the Axis at Washington.

Istanbul, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The first Turkish reaction to movement of a new German army into Rumania, disclosed three days ago, appeared in the press today with emphasis that the situation was of direct concern to Soviet Russia as well as Balkan countries.

The newspaper Aksham, which often speaks the Government's mind, said that if Germany's move was not directed against the Balkans it could only be directed against Russia.

The newspaper said that Russia was not pleased when Germany first sent troops to Rumania and "a large number now can only further damage German-Soviet relations."

"Each German action in the Balkans brings not only the danger of shattering all Balkan peace," it said, "but also brings the threat of seriously affronting the Soviets."

SOVIET BORDER FIGHTS

Red Army Reported Wiping Out Two Bandit Bands.

Moscow, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Two bands of border trespassers were reported today to have been wiped out by Russian Army troops.

[The dispatch did not say on which frontier the clashes took place.]

A dispatch to Comsomol, the Communist Youth party organ, and Pravda, official Communist newspaper, said a border guard unit commanded by Semion Sakal accounted for both bands, killing the frontier violators and capturing their arms, munitions and smuggled goods.

The first clash was said to have occurred several months ago, when the Red troops met the bandits in hand-to-hand fighting in the mountains. The second, the dispatch said, had just taken place, with the troops routing the bandits from their volcanic hideout with rifle fire and hand grenades.

Raider 'A Nazi'

[By the Associated Press]

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 28—The sea raider which bombarded the British-mandated island of Nauru yesterday ran down the Japanese flag and hoisted the Nazi swastika before opening fire, the Navy Ministry announced today.

Navy Minister William M. Hughes, who made the announcement, said the raider appeared just before dawn off the 5,400-acre guano island, in the equatorial Pacific, and signaled with its Morse lamp:

Leaves Homes Intact

"Do not use wireless or I will shoot mast down. I am going to shoot at stores and phosphate jetties."

Hughes said the instructions were obeyed and the radio station was left intact. The raider fired on loading equipment, stores and fuel tanks, but left private houses untouched.

British Tars Get Bonuses

[By the Associated Press]

Shanghai, Dec. 28—Crews of British ships plying between Hongkong and India are being paid war-time bonuses because of the danger from Nazi raiders in the Indian Ocean, travelers returning from Hongkong reported today.

Two German merchant vessels equipped as raiders were said to have sailed recently from Kobe, Japan, and it is believed small German freighters which left Shanghai last week may have been carrying supplies for the raiders.

The travelers said Nazi raiders had sunk more than twenty Norwegian ships and attacked a number of British vessels recently in the Indian Ocean.

Only one sinking has been confirmed independently by foreigners—that of the 8,310-ton Norwegian tanker Ole Jacob, reported December 12 to have been captured in the Indian Ocean by a German raider flying the British Union Jack and to have been brought into Kobe by a prize crew.

Passengers aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Asia reported that on her last voyage to Hongkong, two weeks ago, the ship took four days instead of the customary two, going far off her course and zig-zagging constantly.

British naval sources refused to discuss the situation.

German Sea Raiders Reported From Indian To South Pacific

20 Norwegian Ships Said To Have Been Sunk—British Crews Get Bonuses On Hongkong-India Route

BY MORRIS HARRIS
[By the Associated Press]

Shanghai, Dec. 28—Stories of intensive German raider activity from the Indian Ocean to the South Pacific reached here today, along with reports that two Nazi merchantmen equipped as sea prowlers recently left Kobe, Japan.

[These came a day after the Australian Government's report that a sea raider bombarded the British Equatorial islet of Nauru in the Pacific, south of the Japanese-mandated Marshall Islands yesterday. The ship flew the Japanese colors at first, but ran up the Swastika just before it opened fire, the Melbourne Navy Ministry announced.]

Small Nazi freighters left Shanghai last week, possibly with supplies for the German raiders.

Travelers from Hongkong brought reports that more than twenty Norwegian vessels had been sunk and a number of British vessels attacked by raiders in the Indian Ocean.

Between Hongkong and India, it was said, British ship crews are getting wartime bonuses as a result of this sort of activity.

Passengers on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Asia said the ship recently took four instead of the normal two days to get from Shanghai to Hongkong, going far off her course and zigzagging to avoid raiders.

No Tokio Comment.

Tokio, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Both the Government information bureau and naval sources refrained from comment today on press reports that a mysterious sea raider flying the colors of Japan had shelled the British-mandated island of Nauru yesterday.

The Australian Legation said it had not been informed officially of the incident.

JAPAN ASKS FRENCH AMITY

Matsuoka Says Tol Will Not Take Advantage of Plight

TOKYO, Dec. 28 (AP)—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka asserted today that "Japan is in great sympathy with the present hard plight of France and has not the slightest intention of taking advantage."

Speaking at a formal luncheon given for the French and French Indo-China economic missions now negotiating here, the Foreign Minister declared that Japan "now is faced with pressing needs" which make a full understanding necessary in order that the "closest possible cooperation between the two countries may be realized."

He said he "earnestly hoped that Indo-China would cooperate in establishing the stabilization and prosperity of East Asia."

"The problems of Japan and Indo-China are complex and varied," Mr. Matsuoka continued, "but I am confident the negotiations will be crowned with success."

The French mission of four members is headed by Rene Robin, former Governor of French Indo-China, and the Indo-China delegation of sixteen members is headed by Jean Cousin, Director of Finance in the colony.

Negotiations prior to the arrival of the Indo-China delegation at Kobe Dec. 15 were held at Hanoi, Indo-China, with the Japanese Ambassador, Hajime Matsumiya, and Governor General Jean Decoux of the colony presiding.

Chinese Ship Sold After 3½ Years in Port; Scrap Cargo for Japan Caused Legal Battle

DEC 29 1940

By The Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28—A new chapter in the strange story of the little Chinese freighter Kwang Yuan has begun with the sale of the vessel to Sir Walter Carpenter of Sydney, Australia. It was said that the ship would be changed to Panamanian registry and would ply between west coast ports and the South Pacific.

Awaiting sailing orders for three and a half years, the Kwang Yuan has remained in San Francisco harbor, fully loaded with a $64,000 cargo of scrap iron, destined for Japan.

Meanwhile, her crew rioted and government officials in Tokyo, Chungking and Washington sought to settle questions over the Kwang Yuan's ownership and disposition of its cargo.

A lawsuit which eventually reached the Supreme Court of the United States resulted in a decision for China.

The vessel's original owners, Sudden & Christenson, sold the freighter to a Chinese company in 1937. She was then named the Edna Christenson, but the Chinese company renamed her the Kwang Yuan.

Subsequently, a Japanese company chartered the craft and loaded the cargo of scrap iron here for delivery to Japan. Three Japanese officers and a crew of twenty-three Chinese were put on board.

Her sailing was interrupted by orders from the Chinese consul, who refused to approve the departure of the ship with its scrap iron cargo, and the American Customs would not clear her.

Seven months later the Chinese crew rioted, chasing the Japanese officers ashore. Then came involved lawsuits in which Japanese and Chinese interests and their consular representatives battled in American courts over delivery of the scrap iron.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the vessel was the property of the Chinese Government, and, as such, could not be boarded for removal of the cargo without the Chinese Government's consent. The United States Supreme Court later refused to review previous decisions, tacitly upholding the Chinese.

Neighbors Can No Longer Just Step Across Border

Maine-New Brunswick Towns Must Observe New Rules

ST. STEPHEN, N. B., Dec. 28 (AP).—A long period of easy communication between the towns of St. Stephen and Milltown in New Brunswick, and Calais and Milltown in Maine, is ending. For many years the four border towns appeared almost like one large community, even sharing some public services.

War-time border-crossing difficulties began last July 1, but in September the rules were relaxed, permitting residents to obtain local cards which, with passports, allowed entry into the United States freely. These cards are being eliminated and, starting Jan. 1, crossings into the United States will be permitted only when strictly necessary. Special permits will be issued to commuters and doctors and others who must cross regularly.

END OF BRITISH CASH PREDICTED BY FALL

Washington Sources Say This Is Shown by a Preliminary Audit of Britain's Resources

PRESENT ORDERS COVERED

But Tremendous Future Buying of War Supplies Is at Stake, Capital Hears

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—A preliminary audit of British resources in the United States has revealed that Great Britain will run out of cash to pay for purchases of arms and munitions here "in the early Autumn" of next year, authoritative sources disclosed today.

The preliminary examination of Britain's financial condition, made by United States Treasury experts, established that the end of cash payments was approaching, it was stated. A more detailed study of the British Treasury's balance sheet" now is under way.

That detailed analysis, informed sources said, was being made to determine as precisely as possible British capacity to pay for purchases here and the probable calendar date on which British cash would be exhausted.

The Treasury's study also will provide answers to the questions President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau expect to be asked when Congress considers the problem of aid to Britain.

The British Government now is paying for war supplies with gold shipped from London, by funds received as payments for British goods, and by receipts from the sale here of British-owned dollar securities.

Can Pay for Goods Now on Order

Well-informed sources said that the British Treasury's balance sheet, made available to the United States Treasury experts, showed that Britain would be able to pay cash for all ships, planes and other war implements and supplies now on order, but could not pay cash for the tremendous future orders which Britain wants to give immediately.

The Treasury's analysis of British resources, it was believed, prompted President Roosevelt's recent proposal that the United States take measures necessary to insure a continuous flow of vital war materials to the British Empire when Britain no longer was able to pay cash.

The President suggested that the United States Government might take over all future orders for war supplies and lease or lend to the British Government the planes, guns and other material required.

He declared that the dollar sign should be eliminated from the question of American aid to Britain, and a mutually satisfactory settlement negotiated after the war.

Liquidation Now Under Way

The President emphasized that his proposal applied only to future orders, and he expressed the belief that the British had sufficient funds to pay for all war supplies for which they had placed orders.

An estimated $3,000,000,000 worth of war matériel might be lent or leased to the British under the plan, authoritative military sources said.

The British Government, through an office set up for the purpose, was now systematically liquidating British-owned stocks and bonds taken over by the British Treasury from British subjects, it was explained. The amount of Britain's receipts from that source cannot be known until liquidation has been completed.

The securities were reported being liquidated gradually, with the British officials and their brokers making every effort to take advantage of the market and obtain every possible dollar for their war effort.

The exact date the British run out of cash will be determined in part by the amount realized through sales of the securities.

PEACE PLEA BY 3,500 SENT TO ROOSEVELT

No Foreign War Group Asks Him Not to 'Lend or Give Away' Nation's Defenses

DEC 29 1940

NEW PLEDGES ARE SOUGHT

'Common People' Urge Him to Say on Radio He 'Will Keep Election Assurances'

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Dec. 28 (AP)—The No Foreign War Committee sent to President Roosevelt tonight a telegram, signed by 3,500 "common people," urging him "not to lend or give away the defenses of the nation."

The telegram described the signers as "thousands of the common people who furnish the cannon fodder and the food for war, who fight and die in wars forced on them by their governments, and who, in the last analysis, must pay for those wars."

They asked the President in his radio broadcast Sunday night "to tell them * * * that the assurances you gave them in the recent Presidential campaign will be kept, to the letter."

The telegram referred to a round robin of 170 prominent persons, who on Thursday urged the President to help sweep away "ignorance and lethargy and disbelief."

Text of the Telegram

The text of the telegram follows:

Two days ago there was released at the White House a telegram, signed by some 170 persons, designated as "prominent." The telegram urged you, as Chief Executive, to help sweep away the "ignorance and lethargy and disbelief" here in the United States which correspond to a condition existing in Europe prior to 1938, "brought many European democracies to their grave and led the United Kingdom to the thin edge of disaster."

May the No Foreign War Committee, in all respect, humbly add its request to the urgent plea of the 170 "prominent Americans?" If the people of the world ever are given by their governmental leaders the truth which they must have if they are to understand why great wars are fought, there will be no more great wars.

Consequently, the signers of last Thursday's telegram have driven straight to the heart of the renewed crisis with which all governments have been struggling since the Autumn of 1939. If you answer their plea, Europe's current phase of an interminable war will end within a few weeks.

Because of the telegram signed by the 170 "prominent Americans" and dispatched to you, the No Foreign War Committee sends this message, signed by thousands of the common people who furnish the cannon fodder and the food for war, who fight and die in wars forced on them by their governments, and who, in the last analysis, must pay for those wars.

The signers of this telegram are not "prominent." They are just everyday, red-blooded, patriotic Americans who are proud to confess that they always put their country—the United States of America—first in their every consideration of international events and situations. Next they consider the interests of other countries and people, but invariably in the light of their own national interests.

They are humble but courageous citizens who believe that their country's foreign policy easily might be summed up in two words—"America always." It is their conviction that a mighty America, alive to the physical, material, moral and spiritual needs of this troubled world, might in fact give that constructive leadership to all peoples which you so frequently have said the United States must give if civilization is to be saved.

Ask About Campaign Promises

The many signers of this telegram from numerous States, respectfully ask you, Mr. President, to tell them, in your radio broadcast Sunday evening, that the assurances you gave them in the recent Presidential campaign will be kept, to the letter. They believed in you when you offered those assurances and they believe in you today.

After you have swept away our "'ignorance and lethargy and disbelief," said by the 170 signers of last Thursday's telegram to be endangering the United States as they endangered the strangled democracies of Europe, these common people will rise en masse to help you to end this war and all wars.

Once the people of the world are permitted to know what has been kept from them about the economic, political and ideological realities which are the real causes of Europe's and Asia's everlasting conflicts, those conflicts will cease for all time.

Then that "good neighbor" policy so commendably encouraged by you, as our President, will become a reality rather than a myth, the trade routes of the world be open to all countries, thus enabling their peoples actually to give democracy an opportunity for birth, development and permanency.

The signers of this telegram were asked to give it their approval as common people who realize that this war is not being fought for democratic principles, any more than was the 1914-1918 phase of the same war. The world had a twenty-year armistice after the Treaty of Versailles had proved that the chapter closed in 1919, of an endless war, most definitely had not been fought to save the world for democracy.

Also the signers of this telegram respectfully ask you, as their highest elected public servant and government leader, not to lend or give away the defenses of their nation as you propose to ask Congress that $3,000,000,000 worth of those defenses be loaned or given to Britain.

Hope British Ideals Will Win

We hope that somehow every genuine democratic principle for which Britain stands may survive this calamitous renewal of Europe's ancient war, no phase of which ever has been fought to promote or preserve the fundamentals of pure democracy.

Trusting that you are correctly informed when you repeatedly tell them that their own country's defenses are dangerously inadequate, and that all haste must be made in a furious effort to strengthen those defenses against some aggressor who may have designs upon this hemisphere, the common people of the great Middle West and many States outside that solidly American area, are fearful when they see so much of their defense equipment and material shipped overseas.

If England's plight is as critical as you tell us, there is possibility that she may be unable much longer to withstand aggressor attack upon her empire. Mr. Knudsen long delayed his admission that our defense program lags, a fact which observant Americans had known for months.

But now that we know of this lag which we are told is threatening to our security and peace, it is normal that we should worry about the dangers reportedly confronting us, here in the United States. Some of us find it difficult to believe that these dangers are as acute as pictured.

But, as good Americans, we should accept the word of our President. And we do. After you have spoken to us tomorrow evening, our "ignorance and lethargy and disbelief" doubtless will have been removed. And then, as the 170 prominent Americans said in their Thursday telegram, our democracy will have been insulated against such dreadful extinction as has overtaken democracies elsewhere.

There are some 3,500 signatures on this telegram, Mr. President. If it be your desire to have more signatures, in proof of the convictions, sincerity and Americanism of the common people of the Middle West and other States, and will so advise your secretary, Mr. Early, the No Foreign War Committee will be happy to send them along, by telegraph, prepaid.

A spokesman for the committee said 1,500 more signers' names would reach the White House by telegram in the morning.

MEAD WOULD HAVE U. S. TAKE ISLANDS

He Wants All Hemisphere Save Canada Free.

Buffalo, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—United States Senator James M. Mead, observing his fifty-fifth birthday anniversary today, told a Buffalo Evening News reporter that "I believe the time has come for the western hemisphere to become separate and independent from European political powers."

"This includes those islands in the Atlantic and the Caribbean and the foreign-owned possessions in Central America and northeast South America," Mr. Mead added.

"If we are going to defend the Monroe Doctrine and offer the aid of our protection to the cause of democratic government, control of these islands and possessions should be in our hands.

"I would look with favor upon the opening of negotiations with the several European countries with possessions in the western hemisphere in order to bring these under our jurisdiction."

He emphasized, however, that Canada was exempt from his proposal for a peaceful United States mandate over western hemisphere possessions.

President Advised on Speech

Wires Telling Him What to Say on the Air Tomorrow Pour In on Him.

Washington, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—As President Roosevelt worked today on the radio address he will make tomorrow night, a White House secretary said a great number of suggestions on what he should say about national defense and aid to Britain were coming from all parts of the country.

Stephen Early, presidential press secretary, classified some of them as evidently inspired by organization work and others as being spontaneous pleas from individuals.

Asked about a statement by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, that the White House was giving publicity before the speech only to warlike appeals, Mr. Early said "we are not getting anything from any one, except from an individual or two, who does not want to give aid to Britain."

[Mr. Wheeler will speak over the radio Monday night in opposition to Mr. Roosevelt's plan of furnishing war supplies to Great Britain.]

The President, desiring the fullest opportunity to work on his speech, made only two engagements for today.

William Phillips, Ambassador to Italy, called to say good-by before starting back to his Rome post, and William S. Knudsen, Defense Administration chief, conferred with him on new ship construction.

Never Saw the Like.

Discussing messages to the President, Mr. Early said:

"There have been quite a lot of suggestions for the President's speech coming in from the most unexpected parts of the country and from people really deeply interested in the situation.

"They want the President to adopt their ideas. It is unusual in that I haven't seen it happen before."

Asked whether any of it was organized propaganda, he replied: "Some of it does and some does not look like organizational propaganda. A good bit of organization work naturally is in it. There also are many suggestions coming in spontaneously from individuals."

The President's address will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10 P. M. tomorrow night. Mr. Early has predicted that it would be very clear and specific on aid to Britain.

The Cabinet was reported to have gone into an exhaustive review of the defense equipment production program and to have discussed appeals to the Chief Executive that he speak out boldly on the chances of an English defeat and what this would mean to the United States.

Such an appeal was addressed to the White House Thursday by 170 men and women who asked that "everything that may be necessary" be done to insure defeat of the Axis Powers.

It was learned officially last night that the President would deliver his annual legislative message to Congress in person before a joint session on Monday, January 6.

Mid-West to Be Heard.

It was announced at the headquarters of the No Foreign War Committee in the Hotel Lexington today that a telegram signed by many Mid-Westerners would be sent to the President before his speech tomorrow night asking him to keep the United States out of war.

Verne Marshall, chairman of the committee, appealed in radio addresses at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, last night for signatures to the telegram, it was said here. Officials of the local organization said they understood that the telegraphic response to Mr. Marshall in Cedar Rapids had been very heavy. Mr. Marshall is editor of the Cedar Rapids Gazette.

The No Foreign War Committee telegram will be in reply to a message sent to the President several days ago by a group of well known persons asking that this country do everything that may be necessary to insure the defeat of the Axis Powers.

ROOSEVELT WORKS ON SPEECH DRAFT

President To Give Fireside Talk On European Situation Tonight

Knudsen Confers With Chief Over General Program Of Defense Production

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 28—President Roosevelt worked long hours today on the report on defense and aid to Britain to be given the nation tomorrow night in a radio address which some officials believed would be his most important since the European war began.

As the Chief Executive revised a rough draft dictated on Christmas Eve, organizations and individuals continued to write and telegraph suggestions for the talk, and a prominent Democratic Senator—Wheeler, of Montana—issued a warning against going too far on the British help question lest the United States become embroiled in the conflict.

Mr. Roosevelt took the letters, data and memoranda, and a staff of stenographers to the huge Cabinet room so as to have ample working space.

Pauses Only Twice

He paused only twice during his work—once to receive William Phillips, who is returning to his post as Ambassador to Italy, and again to hear the latest report on defense production and related subjects from William S. Knudsen, director of the new office of production management.

Knudsen was reported officially to be interested in how a new and vast ship-construction program would be financed, but he told reporters this was not discussed and he merely was "reporting" on the general program.

When Mr. Roosevelt broadcasts from his study from 9.30 to 10 P. M. tomorrow over major networks it will be his fifteenth "fireside chat" since he entered the White House.

Denied Defense Waste

The last was on May 26, 1940. On that Sabbath day he denied that billions being spent for defense were "going down the rat hole," and begged the American people to give generously in aid of thousands of refugees running from Nazi invaders in Norway, Belgium, Holland and France.

Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, said today that all but one or two individuals who had written the President advocated aid to the British. Some of the suggestions, he added, evidently had been inspired by "organizational work." Others he described as spontaneous appeals from individuals wishing to have their ideas incorporated in tomorrow night's address.

"Quite a lot of suggestions for the President's speech are coming in from the most unexpected parts of the country, and from people really deeply interested in the situation," Early said. "It is unusual in that I haven't seen it happen before."

Expresses Opposition

While the President worked, Senator Wheeler expressed emphatic opposition to the proposal to lend or lease war equipment and supplies to England.

"If the President has the right to lease battleships, airplanes and munitions," the Senator declared, "he can lend the boys who are in the army, or who are being drafted now. One is just as legal as the other and one will lead to the other."

Wheeler said he would detail his reasons for opposing the plan in a speech to be broadcast nationally at 10.30 o'clock Monday night and by short wave to foreign lands.

Opposed To Credit

The Montanan said he was not opposed to furnishing the British all help possible under existing laws. He said he believed, however, that Great Britain had enough money to continue to pay cash for purchases here under the "cash and carry" neutrality statute.

In this connection, official sources disclosed that a preliminary audit of British resources in this country showed that Britain probably would run out of cash for purchases here by "early autumn" of next year.

Says Roosevelt Could Lend Men As Legally

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 28—Further opposition to President Roosevelt's "lend-lease" plan of furnishing war supplies to Great Britain developed today, with Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) announcing that he would broadcast his objections to the proposal Monday night.

The speech over a national NBC hookup at 10:30 P. M., will be rebroadcast to foreign countries by short wave.

Wheeler, who this week urged the Administration to "force peace on Europe," said he would discuss foreign affairs generally and the "lend-lease" proposal specifically.

"Then He Can Lend Troops"

Mr. Roosevelt suggested recently that the United States might lease or lend Britain necessary future war supplies, and arrange a settlement after the war.

"If the President has the right to lease battleships, airplanes and munitions," Wheeler said, "he can lend the boys who are in the army or who are being drafted now. One is just as legal as the other, and one will lead to the other."

Several of Wheeler's colleagues, including Senators Millard E. Tydings (Dem., Md.), Arthur H. Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) and Rush D. Holt (Dem., W. Va.), have suggested that the United States explore the possibility of effecting a negotiated European peace. President Roosevelt, questioned about the suggestions at a press conference yesterday, made no comment.

On the House side, Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep., N. Y.) declared in a statement that Congress would support the President "regardless of partisanship, on all feasible measures short of war, but will not follow him in any short cut to war."

Wheeler Favors Legal Aid

Wheeler also said that he favored giving the British all the aid possible under present statutes. He has contended, however, that any American move to transport supplies into the war zones would almost certainly involve this country in war.

Senators opposed to American intervention in the war were reported planning to meet informally to plan their strategy soon after the new Congress convenes next month.

Aluminum Rationing Plan Being Studied

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 28—Rationing of aluminum products was under consideration in Government circles today as a means of avoiding delays in warplane production schedules.

Authoritative sources reported that rationing was being studied as well as production priorities.

Under a rationing system, officials said, products ordered by a plane manufacturer who already had a surplus on hand might be diverted to another who had no such accumulation. This practice would be limited, however, to products that could be used by either—aluminum sheets, for example. Forgings made to special measurements probably would not be interchanged.

Priority Method

If priorities were imposed, these would determine the order in which aluminum products should be produced to fill defense contracts, as well as commercial contracts for civilian use.

The immediate supply of aluminum products for the swiftly expanding aircraft industry will be studied by the reorganized Defense Priorities Board, whose powers are being delineated in executive orders now being prepared by President Roosevelt.

Plane Plant Delayed

The aluminum problem came up in a recent announcement of the Northrop Aircraft Corporation, which holds $10,000,000 worth of defense contracts. Company officials said their schedule was being curtailed because of a shortage of aluminum products. Lamotte T. Cohu, general manager of Northrop, expressed belief that it would be September before increased facilities of aluminum production plants would be able to care for the aircraft industry's demands.

A spokesman for the Aluminum Company of America declared subsequently that there was no shortage of aluminum products for airplane production. The aluminum company could not make shipments "before we are asked for them," he said, adding that any temporary shortage at the Northrop plant either was being met or would be met shortly.

A29WX (WAR DEPT, DEF. PROBE, LABOR)

WASHINGTON,DEC 28-(AP)-BORROWING FROM BRITISH EXPERIENCE, THE WAR DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT THE POLICY OF "FARMING OUT" ARMS CONTRACTS TO SMALL FIRMS WOULD BE APPLIED VIGOROUSLY IN THIS COUNTRY TO DISTRIBUTE THE DEFENSE LOAD AS WIDELY AS POSSIBLE.

HOLDERS OF DEFENSE CONTRACTS WILL BE ENCOURAGED, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, TO SUB-LET SUBSTANTIAL PARTS OF THE WORK, AND EACH WILL BE EXPECTED TO SELECT HIS OWN SUBCONTRACTORS.

ANNOUNCING THE APPOINTMENT OF JOSEPH L. AND FRANCIS TRECKER, OF MILWAUKEE AS SPECIAL ADVISERS ON "FARMING OUT" METHODS, ROBERT P.PATTERSON, UNDERSECRETARY OF WAR, SAID THE POLICY WOULD BE EMPLOYED "MORE AND MORE" AS THE BURDEN ON LARGER FIRMS INCREASES.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT FIRST TURNED TO THE "FARMING OUT" PRIN-

CIPLE, KNOWN IN ENGLAND AS THE "BITS AND PIECES" POLICY, LATE IN THE SUMMER OF 1938 WHEN THE AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY THERE WAS ASKED TO SUBLET A MINIMUM OF 35 PERCENT OF ITS WORK ON GOVERNMENT ORDERS. PREVIOUSLY, THE BRITISH HAD PLACED THEIR RELIANCE FOR AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF NEW PLANE FACTORIES TOGETHER WITH EXPANSION OF EXISTING PLANTS.

CERTAIN COMPANIES ALREADY HAD ADOPTED THE SUBCONTRACTING PRINCIPLE WHEN THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT TURNED TO IT. THE VICKERS COMPANY, FOR EXAMPLE, THE DEPARTMENT SAID, WAS UTILIZING ABOUT 700 SMALL MACHINE SHOPS IN MANY PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID GERMANY ALSO HAS BEEN APPLYING THE FORMULA WITH "EVEN MORE INTENSIVE THOROUGHNESS."

THIS EXPLANATION WAS GIVEN OF THE GERMAN SYSTEM.

IN CONNECTION WITH ITS RURAL ELECTRIFICATION PROGRAM, THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT STIMULATED THE SALE OF PORTABLE ELECTRIC MOTORS OF FROM ONE TO TEN HORSEPOWER, OSTENSIBLY TO PROVIDE MEANS FOR THE ELECTRIC UTILIZATION OF FEED GRINDERS, MILING MACHINES, AND OTHER FARM APPLIANCES. AS FAR BACK AS 1937, SEALED CRATES OF MACHINERY WERE DELIVERED TO THESE ELECTRIFIED FARMS. THE OWNERS OF WHICH WERE TOLD TO HOLD THE CRATES IN STORAGE AS THEY CONTAINED MACHINERY FOR MAKING TOYS OR SOME OTHER SIMILAR PRODUCT.

WHEN THE MARCH INTO POLAND BEGAN, INSTRUCTIONS CAME TO UNPAC. CRATES AND TO SET UP THE MACHINERY. THE MACHINES TURNED OUT TO BE A DRILL PRESS, OR A PUNCH PRESS, OR A DROP FORGE TOOLED UP TO PRODUCE SOME SMALL PRODUCT NEEDED FOR ARMAMENT.

NEXT, SUPPLIES OF SEMI-FINISHED MATERIALS ARRIVED AT THE FARM AND THE FARMER WAS TAUGHT HOW TO MAKE A RIVET FOR USE IN AIRPLANE ASSEMBLY, OR HOW TO PUNCH RIVET HOLES IN A PLATE FOR TANK ARMOR.

A3QWX

A WAR DEPARTMENT SPOKESMAN SAID ADOPTION OF THE "FARMING OUT" PRINCIPLE IN THIS COUNTRY WAS IMPORTANT AS A MEANS OF BRINGING INTO USE RESERVES OF IDLE EQUIPMENT. IN ADDITION, HE SAID IT WAS HOPED IT WOULD HAVE THE EFFECT OF PREVENTING THE MIGRATION OF WORKERS FROM THEIR HOMES TO THE GREAT INDUSTRIAL CENTERS, THUS FORESTALLING SERIOUS HOUSING SHORTAGES.

DISCUSSING THE TRECKER APPOINTMENTS, OFFICIALS SAID THE BROTHERS WOULD SERVE AS DOLLAR-A-YEAR MEN. THEIR MILWAUKEE COMPANY WAS SAID TO HAVE "THE BEST FARMING-OUT RECORD IN THE WHOLE COUNTRY."

Maritime Commission Approves Sale of Matson Line's Makena

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Maritime Commission granted permission today for the Matson Navigation Company of San Francisco to sell the cargo vessel Makena, 2,729 gross tons, to John P. Goulandris of Greece and transfer her to Panama registry.

The commission required that a bond be posted to guarantee that the vessel would not be sold or transferred again within three years without commission approval.

The commission also approved the sale by Matson of the cargo vessel Mahukona, 2,512 gross tons, to the Navebras Corporation, Rio de Janeiro, and her transfer to Brazilian registry.

William H. Varley of Yonkers, N. Y., obtained permission to sell the yacht Shuttle to H. E. Moss & Co. of London, with transfer to British registry.

Sinking Of Tanker Charles Pratt Still Mystery To Owners

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—The cause of the sinking of the Standard Oil tanker Charles Pratt off the West African coast Saturday with the loss of two American seamen of its crew of forty-two remained a mystery tonight to officials of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

First word of the loss of the 8,982-ton tanker, which flew the Panamanian flag and was registered to the Panama Transport Company, a Standard Oil subsidiary, came last night in a terse message from the company's London office. The message said only that the vessel was a "casualty" and indicated that twenty-two men were thought lost.

Early today, however, a message from Capt. Eric R. Blomquist said all crew members had been saved except Arthur Duffy, wiper, of Bayonne, N. J., and Patrick Dougherty, seaman, of Philadelphia.

LAGUARDIA LIKENS WHITE TO LAVAL

Assails Head Of Allied Aid Committee For Keep-Out-Of-War Stand

Calls For Division Of Organization And "Deeds" To Help Win Conflict

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 28—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, chairman of the American section of the United States-Canadian joint defense board, said today the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies "had better divide."

In a letter to William Allen White, committee chairman, LaGuardia said:

"I read your statement saying what the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies would not do.

"Doing A Laval"

"Strange, when the going was good for the Allies, you and others were strong in saying what you would do. Now that the going is bad, you are doing a typical Laval.

"It occurred to me that the committee had better divide. You could continue as chairman of the 'Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies with Words,' and the rest of us would join a 'committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies with Deeds.' That at least would identify the division which I am sure your statement will cause."

White, in a statement copyrighted by the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance on December 23, said the only reason he was a member of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies was "to keep this country out of war."

White Opposes Repeal

White expressed opposition to repeal of the Johnson Act, which bars loans to debt-defaulting nations, and said it was "not true, even remotely, that we favor repealing of that portion of the neutrality law which forbids American ships to carry contraband into the war."

He added that "I have sat in all our executive councils, all our policy-making committees, and I have never heard war as an alternative objective seriously discussed by any official group of our organization at any time."

Vivien Leigh, Olivier Depart For England By Way Of Portugal

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 28 (AP)—Vivien Leigh, British-born Scarlett O'Hara of the films, and her husband, Laurence Olivier, sailed for Lisbon today aboard the American Export liner Excambion on the first leg of their return trip to London.

"I know London is not the safest place in the world right now," the actress said, "but it's still my home and that's where I want to be."

Olivier, a Briton, said he would offer his services to the Government.

(WX) INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

DEC 29 1940

ARMIES LIKE FOOTBALL TEAMS GROW "STALE" THROUGH LONG INACTION OR OVER-TRAINING. LOWERED MORALE, DECLINING ELAN, WANING FIGHTING ARDOR ARE MILITARY EQUIVALENTS.

AT A TIME WHEN ENGLAND IS BRACING IN EXPECTATION OF A GIGANTIC GERMAN ATTACK WITHIN DAYS OR WEEKS, THE QUESTION OF NAZI ARMY MORALE APPEARS TO BE BOTHERING HERR HITLER AND HIS TOP-FLIGHT GENERALS. THEY HAVE HAD A MILLION MEN OR MORE DAWDLING FOR MORE THAN SIX MONTHS ON ARMY-OF-OCCUPATION DUTIES IN NORWAY, DENMARK, THE LOW COUNTRIES AND FRANCE. WHETTING THEM BACK TO THE KEEN FIGHTING EDGE NEEDED FOR AN ATTEMPTED INVASION OF ENGLAND REPRESENTS NO EASY JOB.

NAZI TROOPS WERE FIRED WITH FANATICAL ZEAL AND TRAINED AND EQUIPPED TO THE MINUTE FOR THE BLITZKRIEG AGAINST THE LOW COUNTRIES AND FRANCE. SINCE COLLAPSE OF FRANCE LAST JUNE, THE MASS OF GERMAN TROOPS HAS SEEN NO ACTION. ONLY THE NAZI AIR FORCE, ANTI-AIRCRAFT AND COASTAL GUNNERS AND SUBMARINE AND TORPEDO BOAT CREWS HAVE HAD A SHARE IN THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN.

THERE HAVE BEEN INSISTENT WHISPERS FOR MANY WEEKS OF OFFICIAL CONCERN IN BERLIN OVER THE SITUATION. THE CHRISTMAS VISIT OF HITLER AND THE NAZI ARMY COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, GENERAL WALTER VON BRAUCHITSCH, TO THE CHANNEL FRONT MUST STEM OUT OF THAT SINCE IT DID NOT HERALD A NAZI "BLITZMAS" ATTACK ACROSS THE CHANNEL.

THE GENERAL TOLD HIS ARMY IT WAS "BURNING" WITH EAGERNESS TO COME TO GRIPS FINALLY WITH THE BRITISH AND SOON WOULD GET THE CHANCE. BOTH HE AND HITLER TOOK PAINS TO LET THE ARMY KNOW THEY WERE PERSONALLY SHARING ITS RISKS FROM BRITISH BOMBERS ON CHRISTMAS DAY.

IN RETROSPECT, THAT LOOKS LIKE AN EFFORT TO KEY THE TROOPS UP AGAIN FOR THE DESPERATE BUSINESS AHEAD OF THEM. THEY HAVE BEEN LEADING A MONOTONOUS LIFE FOR MONTHS. FRATERNIZATION WITH THE PEOPLE AMONG WHOM THEY ARE QUARTERED IS A SPECIAL PROBLEM WITH ALL ARMIES OF OCCUPATION. NAZI FORCES ARE MOSTLY BILLETED IN THE HOMES OF CITIZENS. DESPITE WAR-BRED ANIMOSITIES, RELATIONSHIPS DEVELOP UNDER SUCH CIRCUMSTANCES AND ON A SCALE INIMICAL TO KEEPING AN IDLE ARMY ON FIGHT-

ING EDGE. ORDER NO 1 FOR ALL ARMIES OF OCCUPATION INVARIABLY IS "NO FRATERNIZATION" BUT IT OCCURS.

NAZI COMMANDS IN OCCUPIED TERRITORY PROBABLY ARE FREQUENTLY SHIFTE. FOR THAT REASON. IT BREAKS OFF SUCH CONTACTS AND ALSO IS PART OF TRAINING RITUAL TO KEEP TROOPS PHYSICALLY FIT BY MARCHING. NAZI EFFICIENCY WOULD SEE TO THAT.

DEC 29 1940

A46WX

YET INVASION OF ENGLAND, IF HITLER DOES THUMB HIS TROOPS FORWARD, IS GOING TO REQUIRE A HIGHER DEGREE OF TROOP FIGHTING ELAN THAN EVEN THE BATTLES OF FLANDERS AND FRANCE CALLED FOR. IT MEANS CERTAINLY FAR HEAVIER BATTLE LOSSES FOR THE GERMANS AND THE VETERANS IN THE RANKS KNOW IT.

BLITZKRIEG EQUIPMENT AND TECHNIQUE CANNOT MINIMIZE CASUALTIES IN AN ATTEMPTED CHANNEL CROSSING AS THEY DID ON THE CONTINENT. THE ODDS OF POSITION AND EQUIPMENT WILL BE WITH THE BRITISH DEFENDERS, NOT WITH NAZI ATTACKERS. THE NUMERICAL ODDS ALSO WILL BE REVERSED.

BY AND LARGE, THEN, ANY EXTENSIVE LET-DOWN IN GERMAN ARMY ELAN DURING ITS MONTHS OF INACTIVITY WOULD BE A CRITICAL WEAKNESS IN THE SUPREME TEST LONDON BELIEVES IMPENDING. THE INVADERS WILL HAVE TO PENETRATE BRITISH SEA AND AIR DEFENSES IN THE CHANNEL, THEN CUT THEIR WAY ASHORE BY SHEER ABILITY IN HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING AGAINST HEAVY ODDS AND PROBABLY TERRIBLE LOSSES.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

ROME TODAY REPEATED BERLIN'S BLUNT WARNING OF YESTERDAY THAT IRELAND IS WITHIN THE NAZI BLOCKADE ZONE AND THAT AMERICAN SHIPS ATTEMPTING TO REACH IRISH PORTS WITH SUPPLIES FOR BRITAIN WILL BE SUBJECT TO WARLIKE ACTION.

THIS WILL HOLD TRUE EVEN IF THE AMERICAN NEUTRALITY LAW SHOULD BE AMENDED TO EXCLUDE IRELAND FROM THE DANGER ZONE.

THE COROLLARY TO THIS WARNING IS OBVIOUS. IF THE UNITED STATES HAS SHIPS SUNK AND DOESN'T LIKE IT, SHE CAN GO TO WAR ABOUT IT.

ASSOCIATED WITH THIS SITUATION, THOUGH NOT ACTUALLY A PART OF IT, IS BRITAIN'S IMPOSITION OF RESTRICTIONS ON LIFE-BLOOD EXPORTS TO EIRE (SOUTHERN IRELAND). THESE MEASURES WHICH, IF CARRIED TO THEIR FINALITY, WOULD PLUNGE EIRE INTO AN ECONOMIC CRISIS, BEAR THE EARMARKS OF BEING REPRISALS FOR THE REFUSAL OF THE IRISH GOVERNMENT TO GRANT BRITAIN NAVAL BASES FROM WHICH TO OPERATE AGAINST THE NAZI SUBMARINE MENACE.

THE RESULTING POSITION IS FULL OF DYNAMITE. IT INCREASES FEARS THAT ISSUES GROWING OUT OF THE WAR MAY RESULT IN THE RENEWAL OF THE ANCIENT ANGLO-IRISH FEUD WHICH THE WORLD HOPED HAD BEEN BURIED BY THE AGREEMENT OF 1938.

APROPOS OF THIS, PREMIER EAMON DEVALERA OF EIRE INJECTED A STRIKING REMARK INTO A CHRISTMAS DAY TALK WHICH WAS CARRIED BY THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM. IN THE COURSE OF AN APPEAL TO AMERICA TO HELP EIRE SECURE ARMS AND FOODSTUFFS, "SHOULD THE BLOCKADE GROW TIGHTER", HE SAID:

"THE OVERSHADOWING ANXIETY AT THE MOMENT SEEMS TO BE TODAY'S POSSIBILITY OF INCITEMENT WHICH WOULD FORCE OUR PEOPLE ONCE MORE TO BATTLE AGAINST BRITAIN AND THE BRITISH."

PREMIER DEVALERA DIDN'T AMPLIFY THIS STATEMENT, AND I'M NOT GOING TO TRY TO INTERPRET IT, BUT IT SEEMS TO SPEAK FOR ITSELF. IT PERHAPS IS NATURAL THAT MY MIND SHOULD FLY BACK TO SOUTHERN IRELAND'S BLOODY EASTER WEEK REBELLION AGAINST THE ENGLISH IN 1916, DURING THE WORLD WAR. I WAS IN DUBLIN AT THE HEIGHT OF THAT TERRIBLE CONFLICT, AND MR. DEVALERA WAS WIELDING A RIFLE FROM THE WINDOWS OF THE POST-OFFICE AS ONE OF THE LEADERS OF THE REVOLT.

THE DAYS OF REBELLION ARE PAST, FOR EIRE IS INDEPENDENT. BUT THE POSSIBILITY OF WAR BETWEEN THE TWO SOVEREIGN STATES IS PRESENT.

THIS CRISIS GOES BACK TO 1938 WHEN THE BRITISH AND EIRE NEGOTIATED AN AGREEMENT WHICH, AMONG OTHER THINGS, PROVIDED THAT ENGLAND SHOULD CLEAR OUT OF SOUTHERN IRELAND, TRANSFERRING TO EIRE BRITISH ADMIRALTY PROPERTY AND RIGHTS AT SEVERAL STRATEGIC BASES. THESE ARE BANTRY BAY, COBH (QUEENSTOWN) AND LOUGH SWILLY.

DEC 28 1940

AS9

THAT WAS THE LAST STROKE OF THE PEN NEEDED TO MAKE EIRE INDEED A WHOLLY INDEPENDENT UNIT WITHIN THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS.

ALONG CAME THE WAR AND THE GERMAN SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN WHICH IS RAISING HAVOC WITH BRITISH SHIPPING. MANY OF THE VESSELS HAVE BEEN SENT TO THE BOTTOM IN THE WIND-LASHED WATERS WEST OF IRELAND. ONE REASON ASSIGNED FOR BRITAIN'S INABILITY TO COPE FULLY WITH THIS MENACE HAS BEEN LACK OF THE IRISH NAVAL BASES WHICH, IN THE LANGUAGE OF BRITISH PREMIER CHURCHILL, HAS PLACED UPON ENGLAND A "MOST HEAVY AND GRIEVOUS BURDEN."

EIRE, FEARING INVASION AND COUNTER-INVASION BY THE BELLIGERENTS, HAS MAINTAINED RIGID NEUTRALITY, REFUSING TO ALLOW BRITAIN USE OF BASES. AT THE SAME TIME SHE HAS DECLARED A POLICY "THAT THIS ISLAND SHOULD NOT BE USED AS A BASE FOR ATTACK ON BRITAIN."

FEELING IN BRITAIN HAS GROWN BITTER. MANY PEOPLE HAVE DECLARED THAT IRELAND SHOULD BE DEPRIVED OF IMPORTS BROUGHT FROM ABROAD BY BRITISH CONVOYS. NOW--WITHOUT ANY SUGGESTION OF REPRISAL--BRITAIN HAS PLACED RESTRICTIONS UPON RE-EXPORT TO IRELAND OF SEVERAL VITAL COMMODITIES, INCLUDING FODDER FOR CATTLE, AND FERTILIZER. THESE CANNOT BE RE-EXPORTED WITHOUT SPECIAL LICENSE.

TO UNDERSTAND THE FULL FORCE OF THIS YOU MUST KNOW THAT CATTLE RAISING IS ONE OF EIRE'S CHIEF INDUSTRIES. SHE EXPORTS MOST OF THESE ANIMALS TO ENGLAND. BUT SHE CAN'T GET ALONG WITHOUT IMPORTED FODDER, AND ITS LACK WOULD CREATE A GRAVE SITUATION. CUTTING OFF OF FERTILIZER WOULD FURTHER AGGREVATE THIS POSITION, AND WOULD ALSO AFFECT THE FOOD SUPPLY FOR HUMAN CONSUMPTION.

ONE NATURALLY WONDERS WHETHER BRITAIN INTENDS TO USE THIS MEASURE AS A BIG STICK WITH WHICH TO SECURE THE NAVAL BASES. ONE ALSO WONDERS WHETHER MR.DEVALERA'S REPLY WILL BE THAT THE MATTER MIGHT BE ADJUSTED IF BRITAIN WOULD USE ITS INFLUENCE TO BRING ABOUT THE UNION OF ULSTER AND SOUTHERN IRELAND, WHICH THE PREMIER HAS BEEN SO ANXIOUSLY SEEKING BUT WITHOUT APPARENT PROGRESS.

NEW YORK, DEC. 28-(AP)-THE AMERICAN PUBLIC HAS "NEVER BEEN SO WELL INFORMED ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS AS AT THIS TIME OF WORLD CRISIS," DEWITT MACKENZIE, ASSOCIATED PRESS FOREIGN AFFAIRS WRITER, TOLD THE CONVENTION OF THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF TEACHERS OF JOURNALISM TODAY.

IN A SYMPOSIUM ON "UNDERSTANDING THE PROBLEMS OF THE FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT", MACKENZIE ADDED THAT "IT SEEMS TO ME THE AMERICAN CORRESPONDENTS DESPITE THE DIFFICULTIES OF THE SITUATION HAVE BEEN DOING A GOOD JOB."

DEC 29 1940

"WE MUSTN'T FORGET THE FUNDAMENTAL FACT THAT THE READER IS MAINLY DEPENDENT ON HIS NEWSPAPERS FOR EVALUATION OF FOREIGN NEWS," MACKENZIE CONTINUED. "THE AVERAGE READER ISN'T IN A POSITION TO EVALUATE THE NEWS HIMSELF.

"ABOUT THE BEST HE CAN DO IS TO DECIDE WHICH NEWSPAPERS AND WHICH FOREIGN WRITERS SEEM TO BE THE MOST TRUSTWORTHY AND THEN STICK WITH THEM. THUS OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO THE PUBLIC IS GREAT."

ASSOCIATED PRESS CHIEF OF FOREIGN SERVICE

(ADVANCE) EUROPE'S CENSORS ARE RELAXING THEIR RULES SOMEWHAT AND THE WORLD GETS MORE INTERESTING DETAILS OF WAR AND SCENES BEHIND THE LINES.

GREECE, UNOCCUPIED FRANCE AND ENGLAND HAVE MODIFIED SOME REGULATIONS. THERE IS NO EVIDENCE THAT THOUGHTS OF SANTA CLAUS HAVE TOUCHED CENSORS' HEARTS. IT APPEARS, RATHER, THAT SOME COUNTRIES HAVE LEARNED THAT TRUTH GETS OUT IN SPITE OF THEM AND THEIR INEFFECTUAL ATTEMPTS TO STRANGLE NEWS DAMAGES THEIR REPUTATIONS.

DICTATOR METAXAS IN GREECE HAS RUN HIS COUNTRY WITH A FIRM HAND FOR YEARS, SO THERE WAS NO SURPRISE WHEN MILITARY MINDS DECIDED THE OUTSIDE WORLD NEED KNOW OF THE GREEK-ITALIAN WAR LITTLE MORE THAN OFFICIAL NEWS. GREEK OFFICIALS ABROAD SOON TOLD THEIR GOVERNMENT THAT SUCH A SYSTEM HURT THE GREEK CAUSE AND METAXAS TOOK THE HINT. IN THE LAST FEW DAYS CORRESPONDENTS HAVE BEEN ALLOWED TO SEND NEWS THEY KNOW TO BE TRUE WITHOUT THE FORMER STRICT LIMITATIONS THAT CLASSIFIED EVEN LOCATIONS OF TOWNS AS MILITARY INFORMATION.

AT VICHY, THE SUDDEN REMOVAL OF VICE-PREMIER PIERRE LAVAL, DECEMBER 14, CHANGED CENSORSHIP THERE. THE GOVERNMENT CUT COMMUNICATIONS TO KEEP THE NEWS BOTTLED UP FOR A TIME BUT IT ACTED JUST A FEW MINUTES AFTER THE ASSOCIATED PRESS SENT OUT THE STORY.

LAVAL WAS IN COMMAND OF CENSORSHIP THERE. HIS CENSORS WERE FAIRLY LENIENT WITH NEWS EXCEPT WHERE IT DEALT WITH GERMAN ACTIVITIES IN AND AROUND VICHY OR WITH LAVAL'S OWN EFFORTS TO COLLABORATE WITH GERMANY. LAVAL'S DISMISSAL AROUSED MUCH COMMENT IN OTHER COUNTRIES AND IT MAY BE THAT SOME OF THE INTERPRETATIONS INFLUENCED THE VICHY CENSORSHIP AUTHORITIES TO BE MORE LIBERAL, SINCE THE STORY WAS BEING TOLD IN SPITE OF THEM.

ENGLAND'S LIGHTENING OF CENSORSHIP LIES CHIEFLY IN PERMITTING CORRESPONDENTS TO TELL WITH SOME DELAY WHAT CITY IS BEING BOMBED. FORMERLY IT COULD BE SAID ONLY THAT A "MIDLANDS TOWN" OR "A SOUTHEASTERN PORT" WAS BEING HIT. BERLIN, MEANTIME, ALWAYS TOLD WHAT ENGLISH CITY WAS UNDER FIRE. CORRESPONDENTS IN ENGLAND ALSO HAVE MORE FREEDOM NOW TO TELL OF THINGS THAT FORMERLY WERE CONSIDERED TOO MUCH LIKE MILITARY INFORMATION.

30.24—6653

A BRITISH MINISTRY OF INFORMATION CIRCULAR SAYS CENSORSHIP IS "ENTIRELY A MATTER OF SECURITY" AND EMPHASIZES THAT PASSAGE BY THE CENSOR "IS NO INDICATION OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S APPROVAL." IT ADDS THAT CENSORS FREQUENTLY PASS DISPATCHES CONSIDERED "UNDESIRABLE" SO LONG AS BRITISH SECURITY IS NOT INVOLVED.

GERMAN AND ITALIAN CENSORSHIP CONTINUES TO BE OF THE "RESPONSIBILITY" TYPE UNDER WHICH CORRESPONDENTS ARE FREE TO TELEPHONE THEIR NEWS TO A NEUTRAL POINT OR SEND IT BY WIRELESS WITHOUT INTERFERENCE. IF GERMANY CONSIDERS THAT A DISPATCH REVEALS MILITARY INFORMATION OR DISPLAYS A HOSTILE ATTITUDE TOWARD THE NAZIS THE CORRESPONDENT MAY BE EXPELLED FROM THE COUNTRY. UNDER THIS SYSTEM A CORRESPONDENT RESPONSIBLE FOR ANY SUPPOSED VIOLATION OF THE WRITTEN OR UNWRITTEN REGULATIONS IS CALLED TO ACCOUNT AND HE IS ASKED FOR A EXPLANATION. IF THE EXPLANATION IS UNSATISFACTORY GERMANY MAY EVEN EXPEL THE CORRESPONDENT, ESPECIALLY IF THE NAZIS CONCLUDE HE IS TOO HOSTILE A CRITIC.

DEC 29 1940

THE ITALIAN SYSTEM IS IDENTICAL IN METHOD, BUT NEWS IN ITALY IS WITHHELD AT THE SOURCE MORE EFFECTUALLY THAN IN MOST OTHER COUNTRIES.

WHILE CENSORSHIP GROWS SLIGHTLY LIGHTER IN SOME COUNTRIES, NEUTRAL SWITZERLAND LAYS THE GROUNDWORK FOR TIGHTER CONTROL OF NEWS. AT PRESENT THERE ARE NO REAL RESTRICTIONS ON SENDING NEWS FROM SWITZERLAND EXCEPT SOME COMMON-SENSE ONES, SUCH AS A PROHIBITION AGAINST ABUSE OF OTHER COUNTRIES, ESPECIALLY HER BIG NEIGHBOR GERMANY. HOWEVER, A NEW REGULATION GIVES SWISS CENSORS THE RIGHT TO CUT OR HALT NEWS TRANSMITTED THROUGH SWITZERLAND BETWEEN OTHER COUNTRIES.

JAPANESE CENSORSHIP STILL IS STRICT ON ANY DISCUSSION OF FUTURE POLICY, BUT IS NOT A BARRIER TO THE REPORTING OF EVENTS AND WHAT JAPAN'S PUBLIC MEN SAY OR DO.

NEWS OF THE BALKANS SUFFERS AT TIMES FROM THE ERRATIC ACTION OF MINOR OFFICIALS WHO CUT TELEPHONE LINES AND TRY TO KEEP NEWS HERMETICALLY SEALED BUT THEY GET DISCOURAGED QUICKLY, PARTICULARLY WHEN THEY LEARN THEY HAVE HALTED ONLY DETAILS AND THE CHIEF FACTS HAVE BEEN PUBLISHED.

THE DARK AREAS OF EUROPE ARE THE GERMAN-OCCUPIED COUNTRIES, POLAND, DENMARK, NORWAY, HOLLAND, BELGIUM, LUXEMBOURG, FRANCE AROUND PARIS AND THE NEW TERRITORIES ABSORBED BY SOVIET RUSSIA, BESSARABIA, LITHUANIA, ESTONIA, LATVIA AND RUSSIA'S PART OF POLAND. EVEN FROM THOSE REGIONS MUCH NEWS COMES BUT IT IS LATE AND IT SHOWS THE LACK OF FREE COMMUNICATIONS AND A FREE ~~PURSE~~. PRESS ⊙

(ADVANCE) BRUSSELS (VIA BERLIN)-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-BELGIUM'S UNIVERSITIES HAVE REOPENED--BUT WITH GERMAN COMMISSARS TO SEE THAT THEY DO NO WRONG.

THEY SIT SIDE BY SIDE WITH THE BELGIAN UNIVERSITY HEADS IN ADMINISTERING AFFAIRS OF THE INSTITUTIONS, AND IN ADDITION LECTURE TO THE STUDENTS ON SUCH SUBJECTS AS "GERMANISTICS," "ROMANISTICS," INTERNATIONAL LAW AND PHILOSOPHY.

AMONG THE MOST NOTABLE APPOINTMENTS WAS THAT OF CAPT. G.A.WALZ, OF THE MUNICH UNIVERSITY LAW FACULTY, AS COMMISSAR FOR BRUSSELS UNIVERSITY. OTHERS WERE NAMED FOR GHENT, LOUVAIN AND LIEGE UNIVERSITIES.

DEC 29 1940

THE REOPENING OF GHENT UNIVERSITY FOUND DR. ADRIAN MARTENS, WHO ONCE WAS UNDER SENTENCE OF DEATH AS A WORLD WAR TRAITOR, OCCUPYING A PROFESSORIAL CHAIR IN THE MEDICAL FACULTY.

THE ONCE OBSCURE FLEMISH SURGEON, WHO ESCAPED PUNISHMENT THROUGH A GENERAL AMNESTY, STAYED OUT OF THE NEWS FOR MANY YEARS AFTER THE WORLD WAR BUT EARLY LAST YEAR WAS THE CENTER OF A POLITICAL CONTROVERSY WHICH CAUSED THE RESIGNATION OF THE THEN PREMIER, PAUL HENRI SPAAK.

THE TROUBLE AROSE OVER THE APPOINTMENT OF DR. MARTENS TO THE FLEMISH ACADEMY--AS A FRIENDLY GESTURE, SPAAK EXPLAINED, TOWARD THE FLEMISH PEOPLE. IT RAISED SUCH A CLAMOR, ESPECIALLY AMONG WORLD WAR VETERANS, THAT KING LEOPOLD HAD TO INTERVENE.

LATER DR.MARTENS WAS ARRESTED BY THE BELGIANS AS A FIFTH COLUMNIST.

GETTING AN EDUCATION IS ONLY ONE OF THE PROBLEMS CONFRONTING BELGIANS TODAY. DURING THE LITTLE KINGDOM'S 18-DAY PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR LAST SPRING IT WAS BADLY BATTERED. IT WILL TAKE YEARS TO REMOVE ITS SCARS.

A REPORT BY THE COMMISSARY GENERAL FOR CONSTRUCTION SHOWS THAT SOME 150,000 PRIVATE BUILDINGS, 3,000 FACTORIES, 3,000 PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND 1,500 BRIDGES AND WORKS OF ART WERE DESTROYED OR DAMAGED.

HERE ARE THE FIGURES BROKEN DOWN:

PRIVATE DWELLINGS: 9,832 UTTERLY DESTROYED, 24,156 SERIOUSLY DAMAGED, 116,710 SLIGHTLY DAMAGED.

FACTORIES: 352 DESTROYED, 839 HEAVILY DAMAGED, 1,662 SLIGHTLY DAMAGED.

DEC 29 1940

PUBLIC BUILDINGS, INCLUDING CHURCHES AND TOWN HALLS: 235 DESTROYED, 950 SERIOUSLY DAMAGED, 1,872 SLIGHTLY DAMAGED.

ALSO DAMAGED WERE 1,445 WORKS OF ART.

ADD TO ALL THIS 669,000,000 SQUARE YARDS OF DAMAGED OR DESTROYED PUBLIC ROADS AND YOU HAVE A GENERAL IDEA OF WHAT BELGIUM WENT THROUGH.

PROGRESS IN REHABILITATION IS INDICATED BY THE FACT THAT RAILROAD FREIGHT SERVICE IS BEING RESTORED AND COAL IS AVAILABLE EVERYWHERE. MOST OF THE COUNTRY'S ROLLING STOCK, WHICH HAD BEEN TAKEN TO FRANCE FOR SAFEKEEPING, HAS BEEN RETURNED.

BELGIAN FOOD PRODUCERS AND PROCESSORS HAVE BEEN PUT UNDER CENTRAL CONTROL SIMILAR TO THE GERMAN SYSTEM, WITH A VIEW TO SPREADING FOOD SUPPLIES EQUITABLY AMONG THE PEOPLE.

THE WHOLE POTATO CROP HAS BEEN REQUISITIONED BY THE NEWLY CREATED "CORPORATION OF AGRICULTURE" TO CHECK PROFITEERING.

LATE IN NOVEMBER THE AGRICULTURE MINISTRY ANNOUNCED A PROGRAM FOR A 25 PER CENT INCREASE IN WHEAT AND POTATO CROPS TO RESCUE THE COUNTRY FROM A PROSPECTIVE SHORTAGE.

POLITICAL LIFE, AT A STANDSTILL SINCE THE GERMANS BEGAN THEIR INVASION MAY 10, IS SHOWING SIGNS OF REVIVING. THE "NATIONAL LEGION," A POLITICAL ORGANIZATION EXPOUNDING AN "AUTHORITARIAN, COOPERATIVE

30.24-6655

STATE," HAS HELD MEETINGS AT WHICH SPEAKERS LAUDED ITS ADVANTAGES.

THE REXIST PARTY LIKEWISE IS BECOMING ACTIVE AGAIN, LEON DEGRELLE, ITS LEADER, WHO HAD BEEN DEPORTED TO FRANCE, RETURNED RECENTLY AND HAS RESUMED HIS DENUNCIATIONS OF FREEMASONRY AND JEWS.

THAILAND THROWS BRAKE
ON MILITARY MACHINE

HOPES TO AVOID CHOICE BETWEEN BEING FOE
OR ALLY OF JAPAN (640)

BY C.YATES MCDANIEL

(ADVANCE) BANGKOK, THAILAND--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS) THAILAND'S LEADERS LABORED FOR NINE YEARS TO TRANSFORM AN EASY-GOING PEOPLE, DEVOTED TO THE ANCIENT BUDDHIST DOCTRINE OF PASSIVE INACTIVITY, INTO A NATION OF SOLDIERS PLEDGED TO THE MODERN IDEAL OF ACTIVE AND ARDENT MILITARISM.

NOW THESE SAME MEN ARE STRIVING TO BRAKE THE MOMENTUM OF THE MILITARY MACHINE WHICH THEY CREATED -- AND TO WHICH THEY OWE THEIR LEADERSHIP -- BEFORE IT CARRIES THEIR COUNTRY INTO MILITARY ADVENTURES WHICH THEY FEAR WOULD THREATEN THE INDEPENDENCE WHICH THE THAI ALONE OF THE PEOPLES OF SOUTHEASTERN ASIA HAVE BEEN ABLE TO MAINTAIN.

30.24-6655

THAILAND HAS 750,000 MEN UNDER ARMS AND AN ADDITIONAL 300,000 UNIFORMED, PARTIALLY TRAINED AND ENTHUSIASTICALLY NATIONALISTIC YOUTHS OF NEAR-ARMY AGE WHO WOULD BECOME PART OF THE REGULAR FORCES IN THE EVENT OF AN EMERGENCY. THE COUNTRY HAS A SMALL BUT UP-TO-DATE AIR FORCE AND MORE THAN THE BEGINNINGS OF A NAVY.

BUT THESE APPARENT EVIDENCES OF GROWING STRENGTH HAVE NOT BLINDED THE MILITARY CLIQUE IN CONTROL AT BANGKOK TO THE REALIZATION THAT THAILAND OWES ITS POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE TO THE GOODWILL OF NEIGHBORING POWERS BETWEEN WHOM IT HAS LONG SERVED AS A CONVENIENT BUFFER.

MOREOVER, THAI LEADERS HAVE HAD ONLY TO EXAMINE THE COMPOSITION OF THEIR MILITARY MACHINE AND SURVEY THE COUNTRY'S STRICTLY LIMITED NATURAL AND FINANCIAL RESOURCES TO REALIZE AND ADMIT THAT THEY ARE COMPLETELY DEPENDANT UPON THE OUTSIDE WORLD FOR PRACTICALLY EVERY ESSENTIAL OF A MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT WHICH AT BEST COULD NOT DO MORE THAN TRY TO PRESERVE THAILAND'S NEUTRALITY.

THAILAND (THEN SIAM) SURVIVED THE ERA OF EUROPEAN IMPERIALISM IN THE FAR EAST WITHOUT THE SUPPORT OF AN EFFECTIVE DEFENSE FORCE BECAUSE SUCCESSIVE MONARCHS ASTUTELY TOOK ADVANTAGE OF THE IMPERIALISTIC RIVALRY BETWEEN FRANCE AND BRITAIN. THE ARMY WAS LITTLE MORE THAN A COMIC OPERA AFFAIR THAT PROVIDED HIGH RANK AND EASY LIVELIHOOD FOR SIAM'S NUMEROUS ROYAL AND NOBLE SONS.

DEC 29 1940

LEADERS OF THE MILITARY COUP WHICH IN 1932 TRANSFORMED SIAM FROM AN ABSOLUTE TO A STRICTLY LIMITED MONARCHY LOST NO TIME IN REFORMING THE COUNTRY'S DEFENSE FORCES. HEREDITARY COMMANDS WERE ABOLISHED. COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE WAS INTRODUCED AND THE SYSTEMATIC TRAINING OF OFFICERS ORGANIZED. TO OVERCOME THE TRADITIONAL DISINCLINATION OF SIAMESE FOR MILITARY SERVICE, YOUTH CORPS WERE STARTED ALONG GERMAN AND ITALIAN LINES.

THAILAND HAS NO HEAVY INDUSTRIES AND VIRTUALLY NO RAW MATERIALS THAT CAN BE CONVERTED INTO THE SINEWS OF WAR, SO SHE WENT ABROAD FOR EQUIPMENT. SHE BOUGHT AIRPLANES FROM THE UNITED STATES; ARTILLERY FROM GERMAN AND SWEDEN; SUBMARINES, DESTROYERS, MOTOR TORPEDO BOATS AND SLOOPS FROM ITALY, JAPAN AND BRITAIN, AND SMALL ARMS FROM HALF A DOZEN COUNTRIES.

THE PREOCCUPATION OF THAILAND'S FORMER SUPPLIERS OF ARMAMENTS IN THEIR OWN WAR OR DEFENSE PREPARATIONS HAS NOW, HOWEVER, BROUGHT THE DEVELOPMENT OF THAILAND'S MILITARY MACHINE TO A STANDSTILL AND FORCED ITS BUILDERS TO TAKE STOCK OF THEIR COUNTRY'S NOW UNENVIABLE POSITION AS A BUFFER AND POTENTIAL BRIDGE BETWEEN JAPAN'S EXPANDING DOMAIN AND BRITAIN'S EASTERN EMPIRE.

BANGKOK OFFICIALS HAVE BEEN FORCED BY THE VERY NATIONALISTIC FERVOR THEY HAVE FOSTERED TO PERMIT PRESS AND PUBLIC TO CLAMOR FOR THE RE-COVERY OF THE "LOST" TERRITORIES IN FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

BUT THE LEADERS KNOW THAT ONCE THEIR LIMITED RESERVES HAD BEEN EXHAUSTED, THAILAND'S IMPORTED WAR MACHINE WOULD BREAK DOWN FOR LACK OF FUEL, SPARE PARTS AND MUNITIONS IF THEY RESORTED TO THE USE OF FORCE AND THE FRENCH RESISTED FOR MORE THAN A FEW WEEKS.

DEC 29 1940

THE WISER HEADS IN BANGKOK REALIZE, FURTHERMORE, THAT ANY VENTURE IN INDO-CHINA WOULD BRING THEIR COUNTRY INTO EITHER OPEN CONFLICT OR COOPERATION WITH JAPAN, AND THAT IN EITHER EVENTUALITY THAILAND WOULD BE FORCED INTO THE GENERAL STRUGGLE FOR POWER IN THE FAR EAST WHICH WOULD ENDANGER HER INDEPENDENCE.

THIS REALIZATION HAS STRENGTHENED HER LEADERS' DETERMINATION TO PURSUE A POLICY OF NEUTRALITY AND TO ARM THEIR ALREADY MILITARISTICALLY AWAKENED PEOPLE SUFFICIENTLY TO DISSUADE ANY OUTSIDE POWER FROM ATTEMPTING TO TREAT THAILAND AS A MERE PAWN IN THE LARGER SCALE MANEUVERING FOR DOMINATION IN EAST ASIA.

HENCE BANGKOK'S EFFORTS TO SEEK MATERIAL ASSISTANCE FROM ANY QUARTER IT IS OFFERED, PROVIDING NO COMPROMISING STRINGS ARE ATTACHED.

UNDERLYING ALL THAILAND'S ACTIONS AND POLICIES IN THE INTERNATIONAL FIELD, HOWEVER, IS HER HOPE THAT THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN -- BOTH LONGTIME SUPPORTERS OF THAI INDEPENDENCE -- WILL SUCCEED IN STRENGTHENING THEIR EASTERN DEFENSES TO THE POINT OF INVINCIBILITY BEFORE THAILAND IS FORCED TO CHOOSE BETWEEN BECOMING AN ALLY OR AN ENEMY OF JAPAN.

BY MAX BOYD

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON,DEC. 28-(AP)-DESPITE THE SPADE WORK THE UNITED STATES HAS DONE SINCE THE FALL OF FRANCE TOWARD BUILDING THE GREATEST MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD, THE END OF 1940 APPROACHES WITH DEFENSE EXPERTS STILL WORKING TOWARD AN END OF "INDUSTRIAL BLACKOUTS."

THE FLOW OF MODERN WEAPONS AND AMMUNITION TO THE ARMY IS A THIN TRICKLE. MANY PLANTS REMAIN TO BE BUILT. MILITARY PLANE PRODUC-TION IN JANUARY PROBABLY WILL NOT EXCEED 700. THE 50,000-A-YEAR

PRODUCTIVE CAPACITY SOUGHT BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS NOT IN SIGHT UNDER PRESENT SCHEDULES UNTIL WELL ALONG IN 1942, AT THE EARLIEST. IF THE TWO-OCEAN NAVY IS COMPLETED BEFORE 1945, IT WILL BE A MODERN MIRACLE.

CRITICS CONTEND THAT FAULTY ORGANIZATION IN WASHINGTON AND THE FAILURE OF EMPLOYERS AND WORKERS ALIKE TO MAKE SACRIFICES HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO THE LAGGING OF PRODUCTION BEHIND OFFICIAL EXPECTATIONS. BUT THE EXPERTS SAY THE BASIC REASONS FOR THE SITUATION ARE THE COUNTRY'S RELUCTANCE TO UNDERTAKE THE HUGE SPENDING UNTIL IT WAS DEEMED INDISPENSABLE, AND THE TIME IT TAKES TO BUILD A MODERN FIGHTING MACHINE. WINSTON CHURCHILL SAYS THE PROCESS REQUIRES FOUR YEARS. GERMANY TOOK THAT LONG AND ENGLAND IS HAVING A HARD TIME DOING IT IN LESS. THIS COUNTRY DID NOT VOTE THE MONEY FOR ALL-OUT ARMAMENT UNTIL MONTHS AFTER THE GERMANS EXPLODED THE MAGINOT MYTH IN MAY.

EXPERTS, HOWEVER, FIND SOME BRIGHT SPOTS IN THE YEAR-END DEFENSE PICTURE:

DEC 29 1940

THE FLEET, WHICH TRADITIONALLY HAS THE JOB OF PROTECTING THE COUNTRY IN AN EMERGENCY UNTIL THE SMALL STANDING ARMY CAN BE EXPANDED INTO AN ADEQUATE PROTECTIVE FORCE, HAS BEEN BUILT UP SINCE 1933 UNTIL IT IS NOW THE WORLD'S LARGEST. ITS CREWS HAVE BEEN INCREASED IN THE LAST YEAR FROM A LEVEL CONSIDERED DANGEROUSLY LOW TO VIRTUALLY FULL FIGHTING STRENGTH.

OFFICIALS HAVE PLACED 85 PER CENT OF THE ORDERS NECESSARY TO CARRY OUT THE $17,692,227,930 DEFENSE PROGRAM APPROVED BY CONGRESS DURING 1940. THE MAGNITUTE OF THIS PROGRAM CAN BE GRASPED BY COMPARISON WITH THE ESTIMATED COST OF ALL THE PRODUCTS OF THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY IN 1939. THE FIGURE FOR THAT VAST MASS PRODUCTION SYSTEM WAS $2,300,000,000.

DEFENSE OF THE PANAMA CANAL AND THE VITAL INDUSTRIAL AREAS ALONG THE EAST COAST HAS BEEN SIMPLIFIED BY ACQUISITION OF THE RIGHT TO LEASE AIR AND NAVAL BASES IN BRITISH TERRITORY GUARDING THE ATLANTIC AND CARIBBEAN APPROACHES TO THIS CONTINENT. IT WILL TAKE MONTHS AND EVEN YEARS TO DEVELOP THESE BASES FULLY, BUT FLOATING FILLING STATIONS MAY BE ANCHORED THERE NOW TO SERVICE SUBMARINE AND PLANE PATROLS.

THE ARMY HAS BEEN REORGANIZED IN LINE WITH EUROPEAN DEVELOPMENTS, ITS MANPOWER INCREASED GREATLY AND THE NATION'S FIRST PEACE-TIME SYSTEM OF COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING GEARED TO PRODUCE 800,000 CITIZEN SOLDIERS IN THE COMING YEAR.

THE PRESIDENT HAS CONCENTRATED AUTHORITY OVER DEFENSE PRODUCTION IN A FOUR-MAN COUNCIL HEADED BY WILLIAM S.KNUDSEN, THE PRODUCTION GENIUS BORROWED FROM GENERAL MOTORS. THIS GROUP HAS APPEALED TO INDUSTRY AND LABOR TO "ROLL UP THEIR SLEEVES". FEW PERSONS CLOSE TO THE DEFENSE EFFORT DOUBT THAT THE COUNCIL'S CREATION WILL SPEED VITAL DECISIONS AND IMPRESS THE PUBLIC WITH WHAT KNUDSEN CALLS "THE TERRIBLE URGENCY" FOR SPEED.

DEC 29 1940

AT THE END OF THIS YEAR OF SPREADING VIOLENCE AMONG NATIONS, 16 MONTHS AFTER THE START OF THE WAR IN EUROPE, THE COUNTRY'S DIFFERENT FIGHTING FORCES SKAPE UP AS FOLLOWS:

THE FLEET

TWO CRUISERS, ONE AIRCRAFT CARRIER AND 18 DESTROYERS WERE COMPLETED DURING THE YEAR. IN ADDITION, ABOUT 35 DESTROYERS WERE CONVERTED TO SPECIAL PURPOSES -- FAST TRANSPORTS TO SERVE AS "FIRE EXTINGUISHERS" IN CASE OF ATTACK UPON THIS HEMISPHERE, SMALL SEA-PLANE TENDERS AND THE LIKE. FIFTY DESTROYERS OF WORLD WAR VINTAGE WENT TO ENGLAND IN THE TRADE FOR THE RIGHT TO LEASE BASE SITES.

THE NUMBER OF BATTLESHIPS, PLANE CARRIERS, CRUISERS, DESTROYERS AND SUBMARINES AT THE START OF THE YEAR WAS 268 BUILT AND 78 BUILD-ING. AT THE END OF THE YEAR, AFTER THE DESTROYER TOTAL HAD BEEN REDUCED BY THE TRANSFERS TO BRITAIN AND THE CONVERSIONS TO SPECIAL PUR-POSES, THE FIGURES WERE 321 BUILT AND 370 BUILDING.

THE FIRST TWO OF 17 NEW BATTLESHIPS NOW STARTED WILL PROBABLY BE READY IN 1941.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS OF THE LAST YEAR, FROM THE STANDPOINT OF IMMEDIATE PREPAREDNESS, IS THE INCREASE IN SHIPS' COMP-LEMENTS FROM 85 PER CENT AT THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR TO A POINT NEAR 100 PER CENT. THE NEW CONGRESS WILL UNDOUBTEDLY BE ASKED FOR AUTHORITY TO INCREASE THIS TO 115 PER CENT, SO THAT TRAINED SEAMEN WILL BE READY FOR ADDITIONAL UNITS OF THE TWO-OCEAN NAVY AS FAST AS THEY ARE COMPLETED.

DEC 29 1940

ALREADY, THE MANPOWER OF THE NAVY AND THE MARINE CORPS HAS BEEN INCREASED FROM 158,614 REGULAR OFFICERS AND MEN AND A SMALL NUMBER OF RESERVISTS ON ACTIVE DUTY LAST JANUARY 1 TO 217,249 REGULARS AND 26,419 RESERVISTS ON DECEMBER 1, 1940.

IN ADDITION TO THE WARSHIP CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM, THE NAVY IS BUY-ING AND CONVERTING INTO AUXILIARY VESSELS LARGE NUMBERS OF MERCHANT SHIPS, YACHTS AND OTHER VESSELS.

AIR FORCES

TOTAL PLANE PRODUCTION IN THE UNITED STATES AT THE BEGINNING OF 1940 WAS 350 A MONTH. IN RECENT WEEKS, KNUDSEN REPORTED THAT THE HOPED FOR PRODUCTION OF 1,000 PLANES IN JANUARY OF THE NEW YEAR WOULD HAVE TO BE SCALED DOWN 30 PER CENT TO BE CORRECT.

OF THE ACTUAL OUTPUT, BRITAIN IS NOW TAKING THE LION'S SHARE OF THE TACTICAL PLANES--FIGHTERS, BOMBERS AND CERTAIN OBSERVATION PLANES. ASIDE FROM THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY OF GIVING THE BESIEG-ED COUNTRY ALL AID "SHORT OF WAR", THE REASON FOR THIS IS THE RELEASE OF IMMEDIATE DELIVERIES TO THE BRITISH IN EXCHANGE FOR LATER DELIVER-IES OF IMPROVED MODELS. FURTHERMORE, SEVERAL OF THE ARMY'S NEW FIGHTER PLANES, AMONG THEM THE CANNON-CARRYING BELL AIRACOBRA AND THE TWO-ENGINED LOCKHEED, ARE JUST NOW COMING INTO PRODUCTION.

AIRPLANE ENGINE ORDERS PLACED WITH THE PACKARD AND FORD MOTOR COMP-ANIES HAVE NOT YET HAD TIME TO PRODUCE ANY RESULTS. ADDITIONAL ORDERS BEING NEGOTIATED WITH BUICK AND STUDEBAKER ARE NOT EXPECTED TO PRODUCE ACTUAL ENGINES BEFORE 1942. NEITHER IS THE EXPANSION ORDER PLACED RECENTLY WITH THE ALLISON DIVISION OF GENERAL MOTORS, MAKER OF LIQUID-COOLED PLANE ENGINES. EXPERTS SAY IT USUALLY TAKES 20 MONTHS TO BUILD AN ENGINE PLANT AND GET ITS PRODUCT INTO FINISH-ED PLANES IN QUANTITY.

DEC 29 1940

FOUR MID-WESTERN ASSEMBLY PLANTS, TO PUT TOGETHER BOMBER PARTS MADE IN AUTOMOBILE FACTORIES, ARE YET TO BE BUILT. PHILIP MURRAY, THE CIO LEADER, HAS JUST PRESENTED TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT A PLAN OF THE UNITED AUTOMOBILE WORKERS TO PRODUCE 500 PLANES A DAY IN AUTO-MOBILE PLANTS, WITH ONLY SIX MONTHS' PREPARATION. THE REACTION OF PERSONS HIGH IN THE PRODUCTION SETUP IS THAT IT CAN'T BE DONE. WHERE, THEY ASK, WOULD YOU GET THE ENGINES?

THE NAVY AIR SERVICE, THE NAVAL RESERVE AND THE MARINE CORPS BEGAN THE YEAR WITH 2,145 PLANES AND, ELEVEN MONTHS LATER, HAD 2,435. THE NAVY HAS FIRST-LINE PLANES FOR ITS EXISTING CARRIERS

30.24 — 6659

BUT NEEDS REPLACEMENTS. ON DECEMBER 1, THE SERVICE HAD 5,917 PLANES ON ORDER. ITS TRAINING GOAL IS ABOUT 600 FLIERS MONTHLY, TO BE REACHED PROBABLY IN MID-1942.

THE ARMY AIR CORPS STARTED THE YEAR WITH ABOUT 2,500 PLANES AND IS ENDING IT AT LEAST 20 MONTHS AWAY FROM THE GOAL OF 18,000. THE NUMBER OF TACTICAL PLANES RECEIVED BY THE SERVICE IN NOVEMBER WAS LESS THAN 50. EXACT STRENGTH OF THE FORCE TODAY IS KEPT SECRET, ON THE GROUND THAT THIS IS INFORMATION OF VALUE TO AN ENEMY.

THIS GOVERNMENT IS RECEIVING A LARGER PROPORTION OF TRAINERS THAN TACTICAL PLANES AT PRESENT, BUT BOTH THE NAVY AIR SERVICE AND THE ARMY AIR CORPS WERE BEGINNING TO FEEL THE SHORTAGE OF TRAINING PLANES.

AFTER ENCOUNTERING DIFFICULTIES EARLIER THIS YEAR, THE AIR CORPS IS SIGNING UP AN AMPLE NUMBER OF VOLUNTEERS FOR TRAINING. ON THE BASIS OF EXPERIENCE THUS FAR, IT WILL BE LATE 1941 OR EARLY 1942 BEFORE TRAINING REACHES THE ULTIMATE RATE OF 12,000 A YEAR.

DEC 29 1940

THE ARMY

MANY LEAN YEARS FOR THE ARMY ENDED ABRUPTLY IN 1940 WITH A RUSH OF APPROPRIATIONS THAT TOTALED $6,600,000,000. IN ADDITION TO BUYING 18,000 PLANES, THE SUM WAS DESIGNED TO EQUIP COMPLETELY A PROTECTIVE FORCE OF 1,400,000 AND PROVIDE "CRITICAL" ITEMS OF EQUIPMENT FOR AN ARMY OF 2,000,000.

ROUGHLY 75 PER CENT OF THE TOTAL HAS BEEN OBLIGATED AND, INSOFAR AS NEW FACILITIES ARE CONCERNED, 95 PER CENT OF IT.

THE FIRST [illegible]LT UNDER THE PROGRAM IS SCHEDULED TO COME INTO PRODUCTION NEXT JUNE. THIS TIME MAY BE SHAVED SLIGHTLY, BUT EVEN IF IT IS THE POWDER WILL STILL HAVE TO BE PUT INTO SHELLS BEFORE IT CAN BE USED. IF ANY OTHER ELEMENT OF THE AMMUNITION IS DELAYED, THE FINAL PRODUCT WILL BE, TOO.

KNUDSEN REPORTED RECENTLY THAT 9,200 TANKS HAD BEEN ORDERED TO DATE IN THIS COUNTRY FOR THE BRITISH AND AMERICAN FORCES. SUBSEQUENTLY, THE CAPITAL HEARD REPORTS THAT 2,500 TANKS WERE ON THE $3,000,000,000 LIST OF ADDITIONAL BRITISH REQUIREMENTS THAT MIGHT BE FINANCED BY THIS GOVERNMENT AND LEASED OR LOANED TO JOHN BULL.

LIGHT TANKS ARE BEING PRODUCED NOW AT THE RATE OF FOUR A DAY AND MEDIUM TANKS WILL BE AVAILABLE FROM SIX DIFFERENT PLANTS BY MIDSUMMER. NOBODY IS TALKING OFFICIALLY ABOUT PROGRESS ON THE ARMY'S SECRET MONSTERS OF MORE THAN 50 TONS, BUT THE INITIAL CONTRACT TO PRODUCE THEM WAS LET NOT MANY MONTHS AGO.

AUTHORITIES SAY THAT NO GREAT INCREASE IN ROUNDED MUNITIONS PRODUCTION CAN BE EXPECTED UNTIL NEXT FALL, AFTER WHICH TIME THE OUTPUT WILL GROW CONSTANTLY.

DEC 29 1940

IT WILL TAKE THREE YEARS, HOWEVER, TO PRODUCE ALL OF THE STOCKS CONTEMPLATED UNDER THE EXISTING PROGRAM.

THE NEW CONGRESS WILL BE ASKED, OFFICIALS SAID RECENTLY, TO EXPAND THE PROGRAM FURTHER TO ASSURE AN ADEQUATE WAR-TIME FLOW OF GUNS, SHELLS, TANKS AND PLANES FOR LAND FORCES OF 4,000,000 MEN. THIS WOULD REQUIRE UPWARDS OF $400,000,000 FOR ADDITIONAL PLANTS.

THE SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM, UNDER WHICH 4,000,000 MEN ARE TO RECEIVE MILITARY TRAINING IN THE NEXT FIVE YEARS, HAS HAD ONLY A PARTIAL TRIAL RUN THUS FAR. BY THE END OF THE YEAR, OFFICIALS

EXPECTED THAT NO MORE THAN 20,000 SELECTEES WOULD BE IN THE ARMY. LARGE-SCALE INDUCTIONS ARE SCHEDULED FOR JANUARY.

NEVERTHELESS, THE ARMY HAS BEEN MORE THAN DOUBLED DURING THE LAST YEAR BY RECRUITING AND INDUCTION OF A PORTION OF THE NATIONAL GUARD.

ON DECEMBER 31, 1939, THE ARMY'S ENLISTED MEN NUMBERED 215,488. ON DECEMBER 6, 1940, THE FORCE HAD GROWN TO 560,000, INCLUDING 131,993 NATIONAL GUARDSMEN. TENTATIVE SCHEDULES FOR THE INDUCTION OF ADDITIONAL MEMBERS OF THE GUARD HAVE BEEN REVISED BECAUSE OF DELAYS IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF NEW ARMY HOUSING.

TO TAKE THE PLACE OF THE NATIONAL GUARD AND PROVIDE PROTECTION AGAINST SABOTAGE IN PUBLIC UTILITIES AND MUNITIONS PLANTS, FORMER SERVICEMEN AND OTHERS INELIGIBLE FOR FEDERAL SERVICE BECAUSE OF AGE OR OTHER REASONS ARE BEING ORGANIZED INTO STATE GUARDS. CREATION OF SUCH TROOPS IS WAITING IN SOME STATES UPON ACTION BY THE NEW LEGISLATURES JUST TAKING OFFICE. IF THE STATES WISH, THEIR TROOPERS MAY BE ARMED WITH FEDERAL RIFLES LEFT OVER FROM THE WORLD WAR

(ADVANCE) NEW YORK,DEC 28-(AP)-THE YEAR 1940 ADDED MORE THAN 1,000,000 HUMAN BEINGS TO WAR'S TOLL OF DEAD AND WOUNDED. TWICE AS MANY BECAME PRISONERS OF WAR OR SIMPLY "MISSING" -- ADDED TO THE VAST ARMY OF THOSE WHO DISAPPEAR WITHOUT TRACE IN TIMES OF CATACLYSM.

THE YEAR SAW ONE WAR ENDED, THAT BETWEEN SOVIET RUSSIA AND FINLAND, BUT NOT UNTIL IT HAD ADDED ITS UNTOLD THOUSANDS TO THE CASUALTY TOTALS.

WITH THE NEW YEAR, THE SPREADING EUROPEAN CONFLICT ROUNDS OUT ITS 16TH MONTH WITH ITS TOTAL OF DEAD, WOUNDED AND MISSING OR CAPTURED SOMEWHERE BETWEEN 3,000,000 AND 4,000,000.

THE WAR BETWEEN JAPAN AND CHINA, APPROACHING THE THREE-AND-ONE-HALF YEAR MARK, HAS CONTRIBUTED A SIMILAR TOLL OF HUMAN LOSS.

THESE ARE ONLY ROUGH ESTIMATES. MANY OF THE NATIONS WHICH HAVE BEEN AT WAR, WITH THEIR GOVERNMENTS IN EXILE OR TEMPORARY CAPITALS, CAN ONLY GUESS AT THEIR OWN LOSSES. ONLY BRITAIN, GERMANY AND ITALY OFFER DETAILED CASUALTY FIGURES, AND THESE IN EACH CASE ARE DISPUTED BY THEIR OPPONENTS.

IN THIS MODERN TOTAL WAR, CIVILIAN CASUALTIES SWELL THE TOTALS BY SCORES, EVEN HUNDREDS, OF THOUSANDS. BOMBS FALL ON HOMES AS OFTEN AS MILITARY TARGETS. IN BRITAIN THE WAR HAS CLAIMED MORE CIVILIAN DEAD AND WOUNDED--59,819--THAN THE TOTAL OF DEAD, WOUNDED AND MISSING, BUT NOT INCLUDING PRISONERS, OF ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE--40:330.

Calls Emergency For U. S. Serious as War Itself; Insists Strikes, Lockouts Be Outlawed

SAYS NO COMBINATION OF DICTATORS CAN WEAKEN AID-TO-BRITAIN POLICY

Pleads For Gigantic Speed-up of Arms Production; Brands Talk About Sending Army Abroad "Deliberate Untruth"; Denounces "Appeasers"

Washington, Dec. 29.—(AP)—President Roosevelt called on the nation tonight to become "the great arsenal of democracy," predicted flatly that the Axis Powers would not win the war and said that the United States now has "no right or reason to encourage talk of peace."

In a world-wide broadcast from the White House diplomatic room, the President repeatedly castigated the policies of Nazi Germany. If Great Britain should be defeated, he said, the Axis Powers would "control the continents of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, and the high seas."

GIVES TALK ON NATIONAL SECURITY RATHER THAN 'FIRESIDE CHAT ON WAR'

"It is no exaggeration to say," he continued, "that all of us in the Americas would be living at the point of a gun—a gun loaded with explosive bullets, economic as well as military."

DEC 30 1940

The fate of small nations in Europe, Mr. Roosevelt declared, "tells us what it means to live at the point of a Nazi gun."

The talk, for which the President received numerous suggestions and which he re-drafted seven times before delivery, was described by the Chief Executive as "a talk on national security" rather than "a fireside chat on war."

Calling for a gigantic speed-up of arms production, he said the notion of "business as usual" must be discarded and more planes, tanks, guns, and freighters rushed to completion.

"There will be no 'bottlenecks' in our determination to aid Great Britain," he said. "No dictator, no combination of dictators, will weaken that determination by threats of how they will construe that determination."

SAYS NATION INSISTS ON DEFENSE UNHAMPERED BY STRIKES, LOCKOUTS

The nation insists, he said, that there must be no strikes or lockouts in defense industries. Fears as to over-expansion of plant capacity must not block the program, he said. Moreover, the production of certain consumer and luxury goods will have to give way to defense production if and when the machines and raw materials involved are needed to carry out "our primary and compelling purpose."

Any talk about sending an army abroad is a "deliberate untruth," he emphasized, and the sole purpose of administration policy "is to keep you now, and your children later, and your grandchildren much later, out of a last-ditch war for the preservation of American independence."

Gibing at the Axis Powers, he declared that "with all their vaunted efficiency and parade of pious purpose in this war, there are still in their background the concentration camp and the servants of God in chains."

DISCLOSES 'SECRET EMISSARIES' 'ARE ALREADY WITHIN OUR GATES'

Concerning fifth columnists, he said that "secret emissaries" of "evil forces which have crushed and undermined and corrupted" so many other nations "are already within our gates," but the Government is "ferreting them out."

He struck out too at persons he termed "appeasers," saying that "unwittingly in most cases," they are "doing exactly the kind of work the dictators want done in the United States."

Pointing out that the British had "received invaluable military support from the heroic Greek army," the President declared that other "governments in exile" were helping and that British strength was growing.

"I believe that the Axis Powers are not going to win this war," he added. "I base that belief on the latest and best information."

Repeatedly the President referred directly to Germany and the Nazis. At one point, he declared that "the Nazi masters of Germany have made it clear that they intend not only to dominate all life and thought in their own country, but also to enslave the whole of Europe, and then to use the resources of Europe to dominate the rest of the world."

In his discussion of peace suggestions, the President said that in view of an "undeniable threat" from the Axis Powers "the United States has no right or reason to encourage talk of peace until the day shall come when there is a clear intention on the part of the aggressor nations to abandon all thought of dominating or conquering the world."

Mr. Roosevelt said it was "nonsense" to talk of "a negotiated peace" and asked: "Is it a negotiated peace if a gang of outlaws surround your community and on threat of extermination makes you pay tribute to save your own skins?"

Saying that a British defeat would bring "a new and terrible era" for the whole world, Mr. Roosevelt added that to survive in such a world "of brute force" this nation would have to become permanently a militaristic power.

"Frankly and definitely there is danger ahead—danger against which we must prepare," the Chief Executive continued.

"But we well know that we cannot escape danger, or the fear of it, by crawling into bed and pulling the covers over our heads."

Asserting that some European nations which had non-intervention pacts with Germany had been "attacked, overrun and thrown into the modern form of slavery," the President added that "the fate of these nations tells us what it means to live at the point of a Nazi gun.

"Various Pious Frauds"

"The Nazis have justified these actions by various pious frauds. One of these frauds is the claim that they are occupying a nation for the purpose of 'restoring order.' Another is that they are occupying or controlling a nation on the excuse that they are 'protecting it' against the aggression of somebody else. * * *

"Would she (Germany) hesitate to say to any South American country, 'We are occupying you to protect you from aggression by the United States?' * * *

"Any South American country, in Nazi hands, would always constitute a jumping off place for a German attack on any one of the other republics on this hemisphere."

The experience of the last two years, Mr. Roosevelt declared, "has proven beyond doubt that no nation can appease the Nazis."

"No man can tame a tiger into a kitten by stroking it," he continued. "There can be no appeasement with ruthlessness. There can be no reasoning with an incendiary bomb. We know now that a nation can have peace with the Nazis only at the price of total surrender."

Declaring that even the Italian people have been forced "to become accomplices of the Nazis," the President added: "At this moment they do not know how soon they will be embraced to death by their allies."

Negotiated Peace "Nonsense"

Mr. Roosevelt asserted that "American appeasers" ignore warnings found in the fate of conquered European nations and argue that "the United States might just as well throw its influence into the scale of a dictated peace, and get the best out of it that we can."

"They call it a 'negotiated peace.' Nonsense! Is it a negotiated peace if a gang of outlaws surround your community and on threat of extermination make you pay tribute to save your own skins?

"Such a dictated peace would be no peace at all. It would be only another armistice, leading to the most gigantic armament race and the most devastating wars in history. And in these contests the Americas would offer the only real resistance to the Axis Powers."

The Nazis, the President continued, often have proclaimed their superiority to other races, and he added that it was a "dangerous form of wishful thinking" to assume that the Axis Powers had no desire to attack this hemisphere.

"And most important of all," he continued, "the vast resources and wealth of this hemisphere constitute the most tempting loot in all the world."

The President said he wished to "make the direct statement to the American people that there is far less chance of the United States getting into war, if we do all we can now to support the nations defending themselves against attack by the Axis than if we acquiesce in their defeat, submit tamely to an Axis victory and wait our turn to be the object of an attack in another war later on. * * *

Policy Not for War

"Our national policy is not directed toward war. Its sole purpose is to keep war away from our country and our people."

This country, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, should aid "democracy's fight against world conquest" more greatly by rearming and by "sending every ounce and every ton of munitions and supplies that we can possibly spare to help the defenders who are in the front lines.

"It is no more unneutral for us to do that than it is for Sweden, Russia and other nations near Germany to send steel and ore and oil and other war materials into Germany every day."

All present efforts to speed up defense construction "are not enough," Mr. Roosevelt declared, and "we must have more ships, more guns, more planes—more of everything.

"This can only be accomplished if we discard the notion of 'business as usual.' This job cannot be done merely by superimposing on the existing productive facilities the added requirements for defense."

He appealed to plant owners, managers, workers and Government employes "to put every ounce of our effort into producing these munitions swiftly and without stint. * * *

Emergency "As Serious War"

"We must be the great arsenal of democracy. For us this is an emergency as serious as war itself. * * *

"We have furnished the British great material support and we will furnish far more in the future.

"There will be no 'bottlenecks' in our determination to aid Great Britain. No dictator, no combination of dictators, will weaken that determination by threats of how they will construe that determination.

"The British have received invaluable military support from the heroic Greek army, and from the force of all the Governments in exile. Their strength is growing. It is the strength of men and women who value their freedom more highly than they value their lives."

A small group of Government officials and friends sat in the diplomatic room with Mr. Roosevelt during the broadcast. Among them were his mother, Mrs. Sara D. Roosevelt; Secretary Hull, Secretary and Mrs. Frank Knox, the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Secretary and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau and their son, Robert; Secretary and Mrs. Claude Wickard, Major Harry Hooker, Senator Barkley of Kentucky and Mrs. Barkley, Clark Gable and his wife, Carole Lombard. The film stars were here for a day of sightseeing.

The Chief Executive closely followed his prepared text, although at several points he changed a word, or for emphasis, repeated one. He spoke slowly and deliberately, particularly at the beginning.

ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH LAUDED AND CRITICIZED

Capital Reaction To His Broadcast On Aid To Britain Varied

DEC 30 1940

McCarran Wanted "Positive Statement" Against U. S. Entanglement

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 29 — Immediate capital reaction to President Roosevelt's address tonight brought a mixture of praise and criticism.

Senator McCarran (Dem., Nev.) expressing disappointment that the Chief Executive had not made "a positive statement" that this country would not become involved "in foreign entanglements."

30.24 - 6665

He said he had hoped "the President would be more explicit with the people of the country as to what we were actually doing for national defense and as to what we were doing to keep out of foreign wars.

Arouses Fear, Says McCarran

"The speech was in keeping with the thought that arouses fear sufficient to make us believe that we are already in this war when, as a matter of fact, we are not.

"I think a positive statement from the President might have been made that we are not going to be involved in foreign entanglements and that we are going to look to our own national defense."

Senator Schwartz (Dem., Wyo.) said: "It does no harm to tell the truth, and that is what the President has done.

"It was a very able statement. It very clearly explains the actual facts and outlines a program that the American people will support.

"It will cut the ground from under a lot of isolationists who have not thought through the situation."

From Senator Johnson (Dem., Col.) came a statement that there was "nothing new" in the President's address.

Other comment included:

From Bulow And Murray

Senator Bulow (Dem., S. D.)—"I don't see how it exactly squares with pre-election pledges to keep this country out of war."

Senator Murray (Dem., Mont.)—"The great mass of American people will be in accord with his appeal. They will agree that the best way for our people to keep out of war will be to send every material aid to Great Britain."

Vandenberg's Reaction

Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.)—"The President made a powerful statement of his position. I agree with his denunciation of an appeasement peace. A demand for a statement of war objectives from belligerents would make it undeniably clear whether no other peace is possible. If so, there is clear need for all possible aid to England under the policy to which we are already committed.

"But the grave question of judgment always remains as to the extent to which we should use our defense facilities to build our own preparedness against a crisis in both oceans toward which we race. The grave question remains whether we shall stay short of war. I agree in any event to the demand for maximum defense production with a realism thus far sadly lacking.'"

Viewed As Reassuring

Representative Woodrum (Dem., Va.)—"It was a serious appeal to get the war materials to England. It was reassuring to have him say that troops were not to be sent, but ohterwise there appeared to be nothing new as far as Administration support for Britain was concerned."

Representative Michener (Rep., Mich.)—"There was not anything new in the speech and there was nothing specific as to the question before the people now—and that is the convoying of supplies to Great Britain—unless his words which sounded like we would 'send' those supplies really meant something."

"Nearer War," Capper Feels

Senator Capper (Rep., Kan.)—"The President's speech left me feeling that we are nearer—pretty close to war. I'm for keeping out of that war over there, I'm against any active participation. However, I approve all parts of his speech urging maximum national preparedness as rapidly as possible."

Senator Bankhead (Dem., Ala.)—"I think it was a very frank and courageous statement of his attitude."

"Strong, Logical," Says Ball

Senator Ball (Rep., Minn.)—"I think he made a very convincing, strong and logical argument for aid to England. I was disappointed that he did not give the public more facts on our present production and what it should be."

Senator Austin (Rep., Vt.)—"I thought that was just the right type of address that the people of America were looking for and I feel confident that it will encourage the British and the Greeks. One emphatic element in the speech was the clear statement of our position, that is that we intend to assist Britain to win this war by furnishing her with all the assistance we can short of sending troops."

Bloom Supports Appeal

Chairman Bloom (Dem., N. Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee—"President Roosevelt has made crystal clear the emergency that confronts the United States. . . . I support with all my heart the appeal of the President for all-out effort by all the people in pushing our own defense program to the limit."

Senator King (Dem., Utah)—"I approve of every word of it. It was a great speech, a patriotic one, and demonstrated that the President was cognizant of the dangers not only to the democratic nations of the world but to our own country because of the mad ambition of the totalitarian powers. In my opinion, the necessities of Great Britain, now the bulwark protecting the liberties of all democratic nations, including the United States, are more imperative at the moment than our own."

5,741 MORE CALL FOR NO FOREIGN WAR

New Signatories Are Others Of "Common People," President Is Told

VerneMarshallTelegraphs Roosevelt Just Before Fireside" Chat

[By the Associated Press]

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Dec. 29—Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, said in a telegram to President Roosevelt tonight that 5,741 more persons had authorized the use of their names in a plea against "involvement of their country in a foreign war."

A message to the White House yesterday bore "almost 6,000 signatures," Marshall said, adding that the new names included 3,500 members' names authorized by the Toledo, Ohio, Council of the National Legion of Mothers of America and 600 members of the Austin Womans Club, of Chicago.

From 'Common People'

Marshall wired the President shortly before he began his "fireside" chat to the nation that the new signatories "are more of the common people."

"They are the workers, farmers, housewives, small businessmen and other producers of cannon fodder, food and money necessary to the senseless destruction inflicted on helpless peoples by wars which they detest," the telegram said.

Names and addresses of the new signers, Marshall added, were in the committee's files and "available for scrutiny at any time."

Earlier today in Chicago, Mr. Marshall had asserted that the European conflict was "an economic, political, ideological war in which the lives of men, women and children are the pawns of governments which never yet have fought a great international war in Europe on which democracy hinged."

Urges Protests

"This is no war to save democracy any more than was the war of 1914-18," he added in a broadcast speech.

He urged Americans "who believe their country should be kept out of another economic, political and ideological war in Europe which it must pay for," to "protest" by telegram to President Roosevelt "against the involvement of this country in Europe's war and against the granting of credits which will never be repaid."

Marshall, who is editor of the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette, said the aims of his committee were:

"To prevent this country from being sucked into another economic war in Europe on the excuse and alibi that it is a war to save democracy; to prevent the Government of this country from giving away its defenses by a President who the other day said he proposed to do away with the 'fool, silly dollar sign' in consideration of aid to Britain."

Notes England's Credits

He said England had credits, aggregate and private, in this hemisphere of over $10,000,000,000 and "hasn't spent a third so far."

"Don't let anyone tell you Britain needs your money yet," he continued. "You are being propagandized to death. Stand up and fight for your independence and democracy.

"If he (President Roosevelt) gives away $3,000,000,000 worth of our defense materials and equipment to Britain, while there is still, according to his words, one-third of our people ill-housed, ill-fed and ill-clothed, I wonder what would happen to that one-third of our American people if they had that $3,000,000,000."

Denied Time On Air, Claim

Marshall opened his speech with an assertion that Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, "got time last night on the Columbia Broadcasting System, but I couldn't get any so that Mr. Agar might be answered before President Roosevelt went on the air tonight."

Agar, member of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, urged increased aid to Britain, in a speech on the Peoples' Forum, broadcast nationally.

Hiram W. Johnson Heads For Capital—'Off To Wars'

San Francisco, Dec. 29 (AP)—Senator Hiram W. Johnson departed today for Washington and the opening of the Seventy-seventh Congress with the remark that he was "off to the wars."

"The President said he hates war, so maybe he won't get in it," said the Republican legislator and veteran isolationist. "Of course, he's only going to have an army of 4,000,000 men. Maybe he'll send them down to Tierra del Fuego."

Johnson will start his fifth term as Senator when Congress convenes January 6. Representative Richard J. Welch, San Francisco Republican, also on the train bound for the Capital, said he hoped the President doesn't forget his campaign promises regarding war.

Dramatic Pauses Stress U. S. Might

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—By means of dramatic pauses, President Roosevelt emphasized in his radio address tonight that the American fleet is on guard in the Pacific.

Saying that the Germans and Italians were being blocked on the Atlantic side by British and the Greeks, Mr. Roosevelt said that "in Asia, the Japanese are being engaged by the Chinese in another great defense." Here there was a moment of dead silence until the Chief Executive measured out in slow words:

"In the Pacific is our fleet."

Then followed another punctuation of silence before he resumed his speech.

President Asked By Student Union To Keep U. S. From War

Rally Assails Evasion Of Johnson Act And Draft, But Urges Selectees' Pay Raise

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 29—Delegates to the American Student Union's national convention sent President Roosevelt today a telegram demanding "fulfillment of your solemn campaign promise never to plunge this country into European war."

The telegram, sent several hours before the President's fireside chat to the nation, asserted that "evasion of the Johnson Act to grant loan-leases on American goods and lives which you have indicated you will recommend tonight is against the will of American people."

"Can't Pull A Wilson"

"We say as American people are saying," the telegram concluded, "'You can't pull a Wilson on us.'"

The delegates told the President they would "defend our people, our country, and our democratic institutions against any attack from within or without."

The convention adopted a resolution urging repeal of the national selective service law, but proposed that meantime the selectees' base pay be raised to $40 monthly.

"Inevitable Outcome"

Another resolution said that "the inevitable outcome" of certain Administration policies was war. Listed were the transfer of destroyers and the sending of "bombers and half our war output" to Britain.

"In the Far East, despite headline embargoes, the United States has been supplying Japan with ever-larger quantities of war materials," the resolution said.

"Then we are told that we need a two-ocean navy to protect us from Japan. It is clear that the United States is helping Japan so that China will not become strong and independent and able to free herself of foreign interests, and yet is trying to threaten Japan enough to prevent her from encroaching on American imperial possessions."

Wheeler Warns Youth Rally Of Warmongers

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) asked young people tonight to "see to it that the independence of America is not surrendered to the warmongers and interventionists."

In a telephone address to the National Youth Anti-War Congress, meeting in Madison, Wis., the Montana Senator said "insidiously clever propagandists, well financed, are again selling the same bill of goods that was sold the American people twenty years ago."

Voices Of Sanity

"Spokesmen for real democracy," he continued, "are branded appeasers, fifth columnists and worse, all in a subtle attempt to silence the last remaining voices of sanity and common sense.

"Americans are being sold a strange and awful doctrine—the sterility of peace! Peace, we are being told, cannot be had now—maybe sometime in the distant future, but not now."

"Billions Tossed Around"

Wheeler said no one denied the need of preparedness, but asserted that billions for rearmament were being "tossed around as if they were pennies."

"Tremendous sums are being wasted," he said, "but that is the price we must pay for helter-skelter foreign policy, which never has made clear to the American people against what they are arming and what they are to defend."

ROOSEVELT PICTURES IRELAND UNDER REICH

Asks if Nazis Would Permit Her Freedom in 'Unfree World'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt indicated tonight that he believed Ireland would lose its freedom if the Nazis won the war.

After mentioning conquered nations of Europe, he said in his radio address:

"Analyze for yourselves the future of two other places even nearer to Germany if the Nazis won. Could Ireland hold out? Would Irish freedom be permitted as an amazing, pet exception in an unfree world?

"Or the islands of the Azores which still fly the flag of Portugal after five centuries? We think of Hawaii as an outpost of defense in the Pacific. Yet the Azores are closer to our shores in the Atlantic than Hawaii is on the other side."

[In his remarks about Ireland, the President interpolated the word "pet," which was not in his prepared text as distributed to the press.]

Whether the President was throwing out a hint to Eire or to Portugal was not known. British officials have been seeking to obtain bases on Irish soil from which to combat Nazi submarines, but the Irish have demurred on the ground that if they agreed they would be relinquishing their neutrality.

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Monday, Dec. 30—The British Broadcasting Corporation was reported today by CBS to be broadcasting frequent fifteen-minute German-language summaries of President Roosevelt's speech last night on American security.

Highlights of Address

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—Striking sentences from President Roosevelt's address tonight:

The nub of the whole purpose of your President is to keep you now, and your children later, and your grandchildren much later out of a last-ditch war for the preservation of American independence.

Never before since Jamestown and Plymouth Rock has our American civilization been in such danger as now.

The Nazi masters of Germany have made it clear that they intend * * * to enslave the whole of Europe, and then to use the resources of Europe to dominate the rest of the world.

The United States has no right or reason to encourage talk of peace until the day shall come when there is a clear intention on the part of the aggressor nations to abandon all thought of dominating or conquering the world.

The experience of the past two years has proven beyond doubt that no nation can appease the Nazis. No man can tame a tiger into a kitten by stroking it.

There is far less chance of the United States getting into war if we do all we can now to support the nations defending themselves against attack by the Axis than if we acquiesce in their defeat, submit tamely to an Axis victory, and wait our turn to be the object of attack in another war later on.

There is no demand for sending an American expeditionary force outside our own borders. There is no intention by any member of your government to send such a force.

The nation expects our defense industries to continue operation without interruption by strikes or lockouts.

All our present efforts are not enough. We must have more ships, more guns, more planes—more of everything.

There will be no "bottlenecks" in our determination to aid Great Britain. No dictator, no combination of dictators, will weaken that determination by threats of how they will construe that determination.

I believe that the Axis powers are not going to win this war. I base that belief on the latest and best information.

SAYS U. S. HASN'T RIGHT TO URGE TALK OF PEACE

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 29—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's "fireside chat" tonight:

This is not a fireside chat on war. It is a talk on national security; because the nub of the whole purpose of your President is to keep you now, and your children later, and your grandchildren much later, out of a last-ditch war for the preservation of American independence and all of the things that American independence means to you and to me and to ours.

Recalls 8 Years Ago

Tonight, in the presence of a world crisis, my mind goes back eight years ago to a night in the midst of a domestic crisis. It was a time when the wheels of American industry were grinding to a full stop, when the whole banking system of our country had ceased to function.

I well remember that while I sat in my study in the White House, preparing to talk with the people of the United States, I had before my eyes the picture of all those Americans with whom I was talking.

I saw the workmen in the mills, the mines, the factories; the girl behind the counter; the small shopkeeper; the farmer doing his spring plowing; the widows and the old men wondering about their life's savings.

Notes Great Danger

I tried to convey to the great mass of American people what the banking crisis meant to them in their daily lives.

Tonight, I want to do the same thing, with the same people, in this new crisis which faces America.

We met the issue of 1933 with courage and realism. We face this new crisis—this new threat to the security of our nation—with the same courage and realism.

Never before since Jamestown and Plymouth Rock has our American civilization been in such danger as now.

For, on September 27, 1940, by an agreement signed in Berlin, three powerful nations, two in Europe and one in Asia, joined themselves together in the threat that if the United States interfered with or blocked the expansion program of these three nations—a program aimed at world control—they would unite in ultimate action against the United States.

Made Aims Clear

The Nazi masters of Germany have made it clear that they intend not only to dominate all life and thought in their own country but also to enslave the whole of Europe, and then to use the resources of Europe to dominate the rest of the world.

Three weeks ago their leader stated "there are two worlds that stand opposed to each other." Then in defiant reply to his opponents, he said this: "Others are correct when they say: With this world we cannot ever reconcile ourselves. . . . I can beat any other power in the world." So said the leader of the Nazis.

In other words, the Axis not merely admits but proclaims that there can be no ultimate peace between their philosophy of government and our philosophy of government.

Opposes Talk Of Peace

In view of the nature of this undeniable threat, it can be asserted, properly and categorically, that the United States has no right or reason to encourage talk of peace, until the day shall come when there is a clear intention on the part of the aggressor nations to abandon all thought of dominating or conquering the world.

At this moment, the forces of the states that are leagued against all peoples who live in freedom are being held away from our shores. The Germans and Italians are being blocked on the other side of the Atlantic by the British, and by the Greeks, and by thousands of soldiers and sailors who were able to escape from subjugated countries.

The Japanese are being engaged in Asia by the Chinese in another great defense.

Of Vital Concern

In the Pacific is our fleet.

Some of our people like to believe that wars in Europe and in Asia are of no concern to us. But it is a matter of most vital concern to us that European and Asiatic war-makers should not gain control of the oceans which lead to this hemisphere.

One hundred and seventeen years ago the Monroe Doctrine was conceived by our Government as a measure of defense in the face of a threat against this hemisphere by an alliance in continental Europe. Thereafter, we stood on guard in the Atlantic, with the British as neighbors. There was no treaty. There was no "unwritten agreement."

Yet, there was the feeling, proven correct by history, that we as neighbors could settle any disputes in peaceful fashion. The fact is that during the whole of this time the Western Hemisphere has remained free from aggression from Europe or from Asia.

If Britain Goes Down

Does anyone seriously believe that we need to fear attack while a free Britain remains our most powerful naval neighbor in the Atlantic? Does anyone seriously believe, on the other hand, that we could rest easy if the Axis powers were our neighbor there?

If Great Britain goes down, the Axis powers will control the continents of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and the high seas—and they will be in a position to bring enormous military and naval sources against this hemisphere.

It is no exaggeration to say that all of us in the Americas would be living at the point of a gun—a gun loaded with explosive bullets, economic as well as military.

We should enter upon a new and terrible era in which the whole world, our hemisphere included, would be run by threats of brute force. To survive in such a world, we would have to convert ourselves permanently into a militaristic power on the basis of war economy.

Smallness Of Oceans

Some like to believe that even if Great Britain falls we are still safe, because of the broad expanse of the Atlantic and of the Pacific.

But the width of these oceans is not what it was in the days of clipper ships. At one point between Africa and Brazil the distance is less than from Washington to Denver—five hours for the latest type of bomber. And at the north of the Pacific Ocean America and Asia almost touch each other.

Even today we have planes which could fly from the British Isles to New England and back without refueling. And the range of the modern bomber is ever being increased.

During the past week many people in all parts of the nation have told me what they wanted me to say tonight. Almost all of them expressed a courageous desire to hear the plain truth about the gravity of the situation.

Danger Ahead

One telegram, however, expressed the attitude of the small minority who want to see no evil and hear no evil, even though they know in their hearts that evil exists. That telegram begged me not to tell again of the ease with which our American cities could be bombed by any hostile power which had gained bases in this Western Hemisphere. The gist of that telegram was: "Please, Mr. President, don't frighten us by telling us the facts."

Frankly and definitely, there is danger ahead—danger against which we must prepare. But we well know that we cannot escape danger, or the fear of it, by crawling into bed and pulling the covers over our heads.

Some nations of Europe were bound by solemn non-intervention pacts with Germany. Other nations were assured by Germany that they need never fear invasion. Non-intervention pact or not, the fact remains that they were attacked, overrun and thrown into the modern form of slavery at an hour's notice or even without any notice at all.

As an exiled leader of one of these nations said to me the other day—"the notice was a minus quality. It was given to my Government two hours after German troops had poured into my country in a hundred places."

Scores Pious Frauds

The fate of these nations tells us what it means to live at the point of a Nazi gun.

The Nazis have justified such actions by various pious frauds. One of these frauds is the claim that they are occupying a nation for the purpose of "restoring order." Another is that they are occupying or controlling a nation on the excuse that they are "protecting it" against the aggression of somebody else.

For example, Germany has said that she was occupying Belgium to save the Belgians from the British. Would she hestitate to say to any South American country, "We are occupying you to protect you from aggression by the United States"?

Danger In South America

Belgium today is being used as an invasion base against Britain, now fighting for its life. Any South American country, in Nazi hands, would always constitute a jumping-off place for German attack on any one of the other republics of this hemisphere.

30.24-6667

30.24—6667

Analyze for yourselves the future of two other places even nearer to Germany if the Nazis won. Could Ireland hold out? Would Irish freedom be permitted as an amazing exception in an unfree world? Or the islands of the Azores which still fly the flag of Portugal after five centuries?

Other Possible Aims

We think of Hawaii as an outpost of defense in the Pacific. Yet, the Azores are closer to our shores in the Atlantic than Hawaii is on the other side.

There are those who say that the Axis powers would never have any desire to attack the Western Hemisphere. This is the same dangerous form of wishful thinking which has destroyed the powers of resistance of so many conquered peoples.

The plain facts are that the Nazis have proclaimed, time and again, that all other races are their inferior and, therefore, subject to their orders. And most important of all, the vast resources and wealth of this hemisphere constitute the most tempting loot in all the world.

Secret Emissaries

Let us no longer blind ourselves to the undeniable fact that the evil forces which have crushed and undermined and corrupted so many others are already within our own gates. Your Government knows much about them and every day is ferreting them out.

Their secret emissaries are active in our own and neighboring countries. They seek to stir up suspicion and dissension to cause internal strife. They try to turn capital against labor, and vice versa.

They try to reawaken long-slumbering racial and religious enmities which should have no place in this country. They are active in every group that promotes intolerance. They exploit for their own ends our national abhorrence of war.

Trouble Breeders

These trouble breeders have but one purpose. It is to divide our people into hostile groups and to destroy our unity and shatter our will to defend ourselves.

There are also American citizens, many of them in high places, who, unwittingly in most cases, are aiding and abetting the work of these agents. I do not charge these American citizens with being foreign agents. But I do charge them with doing exactly the kind of work that the dictators want done in the United States.

Can't Appease Nazis

These people not only believe that we can save our own skins by shutting our eyes to the fate of other nations. Some of them go much further than that. They say that we can and should become the friends and even the partners of the Axis powers. Some of them even suggest that we should imitate the methods of the dictatorships. Americans never can and never will do that.

The experience of the past two years has proved beyond doubt that no nation can appease the Nazis. No man can tame a tiger into a kitten by stroking it. There can be no appeasement with ruthlessness. There can be no reasoning with an incendiary bomb. We know now that a nation can have peace with the Nazis only at the price of total surrender.

Some Ignore Warning

Even the people of Italy have been forced to become accomplices of the Nazis; but at this moment they do not know how soon they will be embraced to death by their allies.

The American appeasers ignore the warning to be found in the fate of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark and France. They tell you that the Axis powers are going to win anyway; that all this bloodshed in the world could be saved, and that the United States might just as well throw its influence into the scale of a dictated peace, and get the best out of it that we can.

They call it a "negotiated peace." Nonsense! Is it a negotiated peace if a gang of outlaws surround your community and on threat of extermination make you pay tribute to save your own skins?

Dictated Peace

Such a dictated peace would be no peace at all. It would be only another armistice, leading to the most gigantic armament race and the most devastating trade wars in history. And in these contests the Americas would offer the only real resistance to the Axis powers.

With all their vaunted efficiency and parade of pious purpose in this war, there are still in their background the concentration camp and the servants of God in chains.

The history of recent years proves that shootings and chains and concentration camps are not simply the transient tools but the very altars of modern dictatorship. They may talk of a "new order" in the world, but what they have in mind is but a revival of the oldest and the worst tyranny. In that there is no liberty, no religion, no hope.

On Proposed 'New Order'

The proposed "new order" is the very opposite of a United States of Europe or a United States of Asia. It is not a government based upon the consent of the governed. It is not a union of ordinary, self-respecting men and women to protect themselves and their freedom and their dignity from oppression. It is an unholy alliance of power and pelf to dominate and enslave the human race.

The British people are conducting an active war against this unholy alliance. Our own future security is greatly dependent on the outcome of that fight. Our ability to "keep out of war" is going to be affected by that outcome.

Urges Aid To British

Thinking in terms of today and tomorrow, I make the direct statement to the American people that there is far less chance of the United States getting into the war if we do all we can now to support the nations defending themselves against attack by the Axis than if we acquiesce in their defeat, submit tamely to an Axis victory and wait our turn to be the object of attack in another war later on.

If we are to be completely honest with ourselves, we must admit there is risk in any course we may take. But I deeply believe that the great majority of our people agree that the course that I advocate involves the least risk now and the greatest hope for world peace in the future.

Must Send Aid Quickly

The people of Europe who are defending themselves do not ask us to do their fighting. They ask us for the implements of war, the planes, the tanks, the guns, the freighters which will enable them to fight for their liberty and our security.

Emphatically we must get these weapons to them in sufficient volume and quickly enough, so we and our children will be saved the agony and suffering of war which others have had to endure.

Let not defeatists tell us that it is too late. It will never be earlier. Tomorrow will be later than today.

Certain facts are self-evident.

To Keep Army At Home

In a military sense Great Britain and the British Empire are today the spearhead of resistance to world conquest. They are putting up a fight which will live forever in the story of human gallantry.

There is no demand for sending an American expeditionary force outside our own borders. There is no intention by any member of your Government to send such a force. You can, therefore, nail any talk about sending armies to Europe as deliberate untruth.

Our national policy is not directed toward war. Its sole purpose is to keep war away from our country and our people.

On Rearmament

Democracy's fight against world conquest is being greatly aided, and must be more greatly aided, by the rearmament of the United States and by sending every ounce and every ton of munitions and supplies that we can possibly spare to help the defenders who are in the front lines.

It is no more unneutral for us to do that than it is for Sweden, Russia and other nations near Germany to send steel and ore and oil and other war materials into Germany every day.

We are planning our own defense with the utmost urgency and in its vast scale we must integrate the war needs of Britain and the other free nations resisting aggression.

'Realistic' Policy

This is not a matter of sentiment or of controversial personal opinion. It is a matter of realistic military policy based on the advice of our military experts who are in close touch with existing warfare. These military and naval experts and the members of the Congress and the Administration have a single-minded purpose—the defense of the United States.

This nation is making a great effort to produce everything that is necessary in this emergency—and with all possible speed. This great effort requires great sacrifice.

I would ask no one to defend a democracy which in turn would not defend everyone in the nation against want and privation. The strength of this nation shall not be diluted by the failure of the Government to protect the economic well-being of all citizens.

Workers' Responsibilities

If our capacity to produce is limited by machines, it must ever be remembered that these machines are operated by the skill and the stamina of the workers.

As the Government is determined to protect the rights of workers, so the nation has a right to expect that the men who man the machines will discharge their full responsibilities to the urgent needs of defense.

The worker possesses the same human dignity and is entitled to the same security of position as the engineer or manager or owner. For the workers provide the human power that turns out the destroyers, the airplanes and the tanks.

The nation expects our defense industries to continue operation without interruption by strikes or lockouts. It expects and insists that management and workers will reconcile their differences by voluntary or legal means, to continue to produce the supplies that are so sorely needed.

On Economic Side

And on the economic side of our great defense program we are, as you know, bending every effort to maintain stability of prices and with that the stability of the cost of living.

Nine days ago I announced the setting up of a more effective organization to direct our gigantic efforts to increase the production of munitions. The appropriation of vast sums of money and a well-coordinated executive direction of our defense efforts are not in themselves enough.

Guns, planes and ships have to be built in the factories and arsenals of America. They have to be produced by workers and managers and engineers with the aid of machines which in turn have to be built by hundreds of thousands of workers throughout the land.

Hails Cooperation

In this great work there has been splendid cooperation between the Government and industry and labor.

American industrial genius, unmatched throughout the world in the solution of production problems, has been called upon to bring its resources and talents into action. Manufacturers of watches, of farm implements, linotypes, cash registers, automobiles, sewing machines, lawn mowers and locomotives are now making fuses, bomb packing crates, telescope mounts, shells, pistols and tanks.

But all our present efforts are not enough. We must have more ships, more guns, more planes—more of everything. This can only be accomplished if we discard the motion of "business as usual." This job cannot be done merely by superimposing on the existing productive facilities the added requirements for defense.

Must Not Be Blocked

Our defense efforts must not be blocked by those who fear the future consequences of surplus plant capacity. The possible consequences of failure of our defense efforts now are much more to be feared.

After the present needs of our defense are past, a proper handling of the country's peacetime needs will require all of the new productive capacity—if not more.

No pessimistic policy about the future of America shall delay the immediate expansion of those industries essential to defense.

I want to make it clear that it is the purpose of the nation to build now with all possible speed every machine and arsenal and factory that we need to manufacture our defense material. We have the men—the skill—the wealth—and, above all, the will.

Appeals For Support

I am confident that if and when production of consumer or luxury goods in certain industries requires the use of machines and raw materials essential for defense purposes, then such production must yield to our primary and compelling purpose.

I appeal to the owners of plants—to the managers—to the workers—to our own Government employes—to put every ounce of effort into producing these munitions swiftly and without stint.

And with this appeal I give you the pledge that all of us who are officers of your Government will devote ourselves to the same wholehearted extent to the great task which lies ahead.

Arsenal Of Democracy

As planes and ships and guns and shells are produced, your Government, with its defense experts, can then determine how best to use them to defend this hemisphere. The decision as to how much shall be sent abroad and how much shall remain at home must be made on the basis of our over-all military necessities.

We must be the great arsenal of democracy. For us this is an emergency as serious as war itself. We must apply ourselves to our task with the same resolution, the same sense of urgency, the same spirit of patriotism and sacrifice as we would show were we at war.

No 'Bottlenecks'

We have furnished the British great material support and we will furnish far more in the future.

There will be no "bottlenecks" in our determination to aid Great Britain. No dictator, no combination of dictators, will weaken that determination by threats of how they will construe that determination.

The British have received invaluable military support from the heroic Greek army, and from the forces of all the Governments in exile. Their strength is growing. It is the strength of men and women who value their freedom more highly than they value their lives.

Says Axis Will Lose

I believe that the Axis powers are not going to win this war. I base that belief on the latest and best information.

We have no excuse for defeatism. We have every good reason for hope—hope for peace, hope for the defense of our civilization and for the building of a better civilization in the future.

I have the profound conviction that the American people are now determined to put forth a mightier effort than they have ever yet made to increase our production of all the implements of defense, to meet the threat to our democratic faith.

As President of the United States I call for that national effort. I call for it in the name of this nation which we love and honor and which we are privileged and proud to serve. I call upon our people with absolute confidence that our common cause will greatly succeed.

Italian Funds Are Poured Into American Securities

$20,260,000 Worth Purchased In 4-Week Period Ending Oct. 2—Asiatic Countries Selling Out

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 29—The Treasury reported today that Italy bought $20,260,000 of American securities during the four weeks ended October 2, accounting for nearly one-half of the total of such purchases by foreigners.

While Italy was making heavy purchases, Asiatic countries sold a total of $11,841,000, Switzerland disposed of $7,498,000 and the United Kingdom, $3,903,000. Total sales amounted to $50,517,000, against gross purchases of $47,761,000.

The net inflow of capital into the United States was $53,542,000 during the four-week period, and sent the total of short-term foreign funds here to an all-time high of $3,719,000,000. The actual increase in short-term funds was $52,076,000.

The major increases reported were: Canada, $14,853,000; Japan, $9,399,000; China, $8,015,000; Sweden $7,295,000; Philippines, $6,514,000; Argentina, $6,182,000; Mexico, $4,680,000; Finland, $2,788,000, and Germany, $2,619,000.

Switzerland reduced its funds here by $16,782,000. French funds were cut by $11,658,000 and those of Belgium by $3,007,000.

Foreign countries bought up $2,675,000 of their securities held in the United States, led by Canada, which repatriated a net of $1,186,000.

United States balances abroad were reported little changed. American short-term funds increased $8,179,000 in Japan and $3,389,000 in the United Kingdom and $1,332,000 in Italy.

Machine Guns At 1,000 a Day Is Plant's Aim

New 6½-Pound, Low-Cost Weapon Developed by New England Company

WORCESTER, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—Facilities for the mass production of a new-type submachine gun, with all the fire power and effectiveness of the Army's standard weapon in this category but weighing 50 per cent less and costing only a third as much to build, were announced today by Joseph P. Carney, president of the recently reorganized Harrington & Richardson Arms Company. He predicted an output of 500 such guns a day by Feb. 1 and double that number by April 1 "if present expectations are realized." In large quantities, the weapon could be built for $50, no more than the cost of a good shotgun.

The six-and-a-half-pound Reising submachine gun, as the new weapon is called after its inventor, Eugene G. Reising, has been undergoing field-service tests for some time by both the British and Canadian governments, as well as by various police departments and home-guard units, Mr. Carney said. While he admitted that his company as yet has "no quantity contracts with anybody," he expressed confidence in its ability to sell all the new weapons it can turn out.

"Right now we are getting more orders than we can handle from police departments that have tried out the gun and want immediate deliveries," he said.

Mr. Carney added that Harrington & Richardson is now building a still lighter version of the Reising submachine gun for the Ordnance Department of the Army, a five-pound weapon that will use the newly-developed .30 SM-1 ammunition instead of the .45-caliber rimless automatic pistol cartridges employed in standard submachine guns. This will be ready for test by Feb. 1, he said. Both it and the present Reising gun fire from a twenty or fifty cartridge clip magazine at the rate of 500 shots a minute.

"Our submachine guns can be manufactured by mass-production methods comparable to those employed in the automobile industry but previously considered impossible for an arm of this kind," Mr. Carney said. "That's why we can turn them out so quickly and so cheaply. We are backing our faith in this gun with our own time and money. Intensive tests at various government proving grounds have convinced civilian experts of its effectiveness and superiority. Steels and other materials for the first 20,000 guns are already pouring into our plant.

"With the rapid development of modern, mechanized warfare, there has arisen an unprecedented need for large quantities of a light, powerful automatic weapon firing standard .45-caliber pistol ammunition and capable of commanding an area at short and moderate ranges.

"Until quite recently, heavier submachine guns have been adequate for this purpose. But military authorities now hold that more intensive distribution of this lighter type of weapon among troops is tactically desirable. A lighter, less expensive, more easily and quickly produced gun is, therefore, required. . . . The Reising gun, due to its patented delayed-recoil mechanism, will not 'climb' off the target and can be fired automatically from any position. . . . It is effective at ranges up to 300 yards and transforms the rawest recruit into a deadly, one-man machine-gun nest."

War Communiques

British

LONDON, Dec. 29 (AP).—The text of a communique from the Air Ministry today:

Last night, in bad weather, formations of bombers of the Royal Air Force attacked oil targets at Rotterdam and Antwerp and the invasion ports of Boulogne and Cherbourg. Lorient was again attacked and a large fire was observed. Two of our aircraft are missing.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued this communique:

Enemy bombers made a short but sharp attack on a town in southwestern England soon after nightfall yesterday. A number of fires were started and some damage was done, but the fires were soon brought under control and the damage was not extensive.

There were very few casualties.

A later Air and Home Security Ministries communique:

There has been some slight enemy air activity over this course during daylight today. Bombs were dropped in a town on the Suffolk coast this morning and in towns on the Kent coast this afternoon.

These damaged some houses, but no casualties are reported. Bombs were also dropped at a place in northwest England. A small number of people were killed and others were injured.

ATHENS, Dec. 29.—The communique of the British Royal Air Force in Greece:

Shipping and objectives on the foreshore at Valona were bombed successfully yesterday by R. A. F. aircraft despite extremely bad weather conditions.

One heavy bomb was seen bursting approximately fifty yards from a large ship, but other results were not observed, owing to low clouds. All bombs, however, fell in the target area. From all operations all our aircraft returned safely.

CAIRO, Dec. 29 (AP).—Today's British general headquarters communique:

Libya: In the Bardia area, our artillery have again been active with comparatively little response from the Italian garrison.

Sudan: Southwest of Kassala and east of Gallabat, our patrols, supported by artillery, have successfully harassed the enemy.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 29 (AP).—The German high command communique for today:

German surface vessels reported a successful attack on a strongly protected convoy in the north Atlantic. They sank one 6,000-ton steamer by gun and torpedo fire and heavily damaged another.

In a short fight, an enemy heavy cruiser covering the convoy was hit several times and broke off the battle. Our own ships were not damaged. A submarine under Comdr. Stockhaufsen reported total sinkings on a long cruise of 46,000 tons of enemy shipping.

In the course of armed reconnaissance yesterday, one plane bombed the Southampton dock works. During the last night, light groups of bombers attacked a port city on the English Channel coast.

No bombs were dropped in German territory last night. Bombs dropped in occupied territories produced no noteworthy damage. Anti-aircraft brought down one enemy plane.

Greek

ATHENS, Dec. 30 (Monday) (AP).—Today's Ministry of Home Security communique:

Enemy aviation yesterday bombed Preveza. A few casualties among the civilian population and slight damage to houses resulted. Likewise, Corfu and Lefkas were bombed. There were no casualties or damage.

During the second month of the war, between Nov. 29 and Dec. 29, the following casualties were caused by Italian air raids:

1. Eighty-eight dead, of these twelve women, twenty children, five babies; 2. 296 wounded, of these twenty-eight women, fifteen children, fourteen babies; 3. sixty houses, one church wrecked in towns and villages; 4. The number of houses ready to collapse and therefore uninhabitable exceeds 100.

Last night's Greek high command communique:

Reduced patrol and artillery activity.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

In the Cirenaican (Libyan) frontier zone, there was increased artillery activity and patroling on the Bardia front. Actions by our fast-moving columns in co-operation with aviation destroyed some enemy armored cars in the desert region.

Two of our torpedoing planes attacked and hit a monitor and one destroyer.

One of our pursuit planes failed to return.

On the Greek front, actions were of a local character. Enemy forces were repulsed by our artillery fire.

Air squadrons hit important enemy supply bases in the Mediterranean.

In East Africa, there was artillery activity and actions by opposing cavalry patrols on the Sudan border.

A pursuit squadron made a successful raid from a low altitude, machine-gunning troops moving in trucks, setting fire to some vehicles. The squadron shot down four or five Gloster type (British) planes which they met.

Enemy planes bombed our places in Ethiopia without damage.

One of our planes failed to re-

London in Flames

CITY BATTLING FOR LIFE; HUNDREDS OF FIRES RAGE; WATER PRESSURE SLUMPS

Damage Runs To "Millions Of Pounds"—Casualties Feared Heavy — Famous Church Smashed—Nazi Planes Attack In Hordes

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, Dec. 30 (Via Transatlantic Telephone)—London in the battle of its life early today fought hundreds of towering flames set by waves of German bombers bent on reducing this ancient capital to a flaming skeleton.

Every fireman—thousands upon thousands—in the vast London area was called out and more thousands of volunteers joined in the battle in the debris-littered streets.

Low water pressure hampered their efforts, but a rainstorm sweeping in from the German-held Continent aided their efforts.

"Millions Of Pounds" Damage

Damage ran into "millions of pounds," and casualties were believed extraordinarily heavy in a pre-midnight raid that turned the horizon scarlet at dawn.

At the height of the raid, launched by hundreds of German bombers, ground workers working desperately to control the flames saw squadron after squadron of Spitfire and Hurricane fighter planes dive into the midst of the bombers under a roof of brightly illuminated clouds.

The German raiders sought refuge in those clouds.

Famous Church Smashed

One famous church designed by Sir Christopher Wren was smashed, but scores of hastily recruited messenger boys and janitors in the neighborhood dashed into the flaming structure and rescued many priceless relics just before the roof collapsed.

30.24—6669

The fires could be seen for miles—great pillars of flames that swept the clouds and illuminated the sky clashes between the attacking and defending planes.

Many witnessed this gripping battle despite the rain of explosive bombs dropped down toward the beacon fires.

Water Pressure Falls

Across this fire-swept panorama in the capital were the struggling shadows of the firemen and volunteers who were tossing hundreds of geysers of water and bags of sand on the flames. But there were so many fires that the water pressure went low. Many extra pumps were rolled into use.

Cable communications from London to New York were disrupted and wireless contact, too, for a time.

After a lapse of several hours the Associated Press correspondent succeeded in getting New York by telephone.

The intensity of the fires lighted the way for the raiders more than ever before.

Tons Of Explosives Dropped

Waves of bombers apparently carrying cargoes of incendiary bombs—and no explosives—attacked the capital just after dark. They hurled hundreds upon hundreds of blazing missiles to light the way for the raiders who shuttled ton upon ton of explosives over the city in their blazing wake.

Sensing another ferocious attack, London's millions darted down subway entrances to safety. Others took refuge in their backyard "Anderson doghouses," the steel huts distributed by the Government.

Hundreds of rooftop fire "spotters" stuck to their posts, and it is believed that many of these figured in the mounting casualty list.

Stick To Fire Bombs

Reports indicated that at least two waves of raiders dropped nothing but incendiary bombs.

Several "baskets" of fire bombs were loosed in one area.

Many streets were littered with hose as firemen worked amidst the falling fire missiles.

For hours after the alert sounded hardly a minute passed without the sharp crack of anti-aircraft fire and the crash of heavy bombs.

The first plane flew over the capital two minutes after the alarm sounded and dropped piloting flares.

Incendiaries Unleashed

Then the Germans unleashed incendiaries by the thousands, many wrapped in the "Molotoff breadbaskets"—large containers carrying fifty or one hundred fire bombs which spew them out as they fall.

Afterward the German bombers carefully followed with heavy bombs the patterns left by the incendiaries.

The anti-aircraft barrage stopped suddenly when R. A. F. fighters took up the defense. Machine gunning high in the night sky could be heard plainly.

Invasion Suspected

Whether the raid was in preparation for the long-awaited attempt at invasion or merely in retaliation for last night's R. A. F. attacks on the German-held Channel ports was anyone's guess.

[Other messages from London indicated that the building housing the Associated Press, at 20 Tudor street, in central London, was hit in the bombardment, but there were no casualties. Extent of damage was not given. This would be the third time that the (AP) building has been damaged by bombs, although not greatly.]

2 Hospitals Struck

Among the first reports from the Press Association, British news agency, two hospitals and a museum were listed as damaged.

At least one high-explosive bomb burst set off reverberations lasting a full two minutes.

The first planes came over as darkness closed in on the cold, foggy Dover Strait and the English Channel, where throughout the day the Royal Air Force had patrolled the skies, watchful alike for invading aircraft and any unusual signs of activity on the coast of France.

Explosives Dropped

Within a short time after the first Nazi planes roared past the capital's anti-aircraft guns high explosives were dropping on the city, some in the central part.

The R. A. F. patrol had kept Nazi activity at a low mark during the day. Bombs dropped in a Suffolk coast town and in towns on the Kent coast. Some houses were damaged but no casualties were reported.

A small number of persons were killed, however, and some injured by a raider in northwest England.

One German bomber was believed to have been shot down off the southeast coast by planes of the R. A. F. day patrol.

Raids On French Coast

The British Air Ministry touched on last night's violent raids on the "invasion" and "blockade" bases on the French coast only slightly today.

In spite of unfavorable weather, it declared, the R. A. F. bombed oil supplies at Rotterdam and Antwerp, the ports of Boulogne and Cherbourg and the submarine base at Lorient, France. Two planes were lost in the operations.

The Air Ministry service said the flyers espied through gaps in the clouds the explosion of their bombs at Lorient and at Boulogne.

BRITISH SINK NAZI STEAMER, CHASE RAIDER

Cruiser's Attack On Surface Craft Preying On Convoys Described

Vessel Sent Down Believed Supply Boat For Pocket Battleship

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 29—A British cruiser attacked and chased a "powerful enemy surface raider" preying on a North Atlantic convoy Christmas morning and, in the pursuit, sank a German vessel believed to have been the raider's supply ship, the Admiralty disclosed today.

The cruiser, the 10,000-ton Berwick, was damaged slightly, the Admiralty acknowledged. This was the second time within a month that she bore the scars of a sea battle, and the communique disclosed that she had been transferred from Mediterranean service against Italy to convoy duty in the Atlantic.

German Steamer Baden Sunk

Although the Berwick lost the raider—which may have been a German pocket battleship—she sank the German steamer Baden, an 8,024-ton vessel, apparently a supply ship for the warship, which was said to have taken at least one square hit itself.

The Admiralty acknowledged that one ship of the convoy "was hit and received slight damage" before the British escort gave chase.

[Today's German high command communique, apparently referring to the same engagement, said German surface vessels raiding a North Atlantic convoy sank one 6,000-ton steamer by gun and torpedo fire, and "in a short fight an enemy heavy cruiser covering the convoy was hit several times and broke off the battle." The German ships, it said, were undamaged.]

Five British Casualties

The Berwick, which was hit twice and lost seven men in a battle late in November against Italian warships off Sardinia, remains at sea as an "effective unit" of the British fleet despite her new damage, the Admiralty said. It acknowledged there had been five casualties.

This was the first indication that warships formerly used against the Italians in the Mediterranean had been shifted to the deeper waters of the Atlantic.

The question of strengthening protection for convoys crossing the North Atlantic is known to have been gravely considered by Britain's sea lords because of increasing submarine attacks.

But there has been nothing to suggest that first-class cruisers, such as the Berwick, will be used more extensively henceforth instead of auxiliary merchant cruisers and destroyers which have had the chief roles as convoy shepherds so far.

Sea Battle Described

Visibility was blamed in part for the Berwick's failure to close in on the German raider.

"The enemy withdrew at high speed as soon as he realized the convoy was escorted," the Admiralty communique related. "Our escorting force immediately gave chase and was able to engage the enemy at long range.

"The visibility, which had been variable, decreased rapidly until it was reduced to half a mile.

"One shell was seen to burst amidships on the enemy but it is not possible to state the extent of the further damages inflicted by our gunfire."

Baden Sets Herself Afire

During the pursuit in low visibility, it added, the Berwick encountered the Baden but she "immediately set herself on fire and had to be sunk by one of our warships."

An Admiralty spokesman adhered to the tradition of the "silent service," adding nothing to the matter-of-fact communique except that the raider apparently got far more than she expected when she encountered the Berwick.

Naval circles considered it unlikely that the Berwick's presence with the convoy was a deliberate trap since the raider was attacked first and the supply ship apparently was discovered accidentally later.

If the Admiralty had known that the raider was taking on supplies from an auxiliary, these sources said, it was improbable that a convoy would be allowed to pass that area until British warships first had cleared it.

Possibly Pocket Battleship

The Admiralty's description of the raider indicated that it may have been one of Germany's 10,000-ton pocket battleships, fast, powerful warships which can outrun any opponents they cannot outgun.

These ships, sisters of the defeated and scuttled Admiral Graf Spee, are known to have been used by the Germans for North Atlantic raiding. Germany entered the war with three.

Another possibility was that the unidentified raider was a 35,000-ton battleship. Germany launched two, the Bismarck and Admiral Von Tirpitz, just before the war and pictures recently were published which indicated one or both may be in service.

May Have Been Cruiser

It was possible also that the raider may have been a German cruiser. Most of them have a speed of about thirty-two knots, half a knot faster than the Berwick. The pocket battleships are slower.

The Berwick, completed in 1... ries three aircraft and mounts eight 8-inch guns as her chief armaments.

She is the first of the Kent class and can cruise more than 10,000 miles at speeds between eleven and fourteen knots—about convoy speed. Her radius at top speed is 2,300 miles.

Nazis Report Air And Sea Raids On British Convoys

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP)—A raid on a British convoy about 125 miles northwest of Ireland was reported tonight by the German Luftwaffe.

It was announced that a bomb hit a steamer of about 9,000 tons, causing a boiler explosion and smashing one side of the vessel. Returning flyers said the ship began to list and "it may safely be assumed it sank."

Reports British Ship Sunk

Earlier, the high command issued this communique regarding the war at sea:

"German surface vessels reported a successful attack on a strongly protected convoy in the North Atlantic. They sank one 6,000-ton steamer by gun and torpedo fire and heavily damaged another.

"In a short fight an enemy heavy cruiser covering the convoy was hit several times and broke off the battle. Our own ships were not damaged.

"A submarine, under Commander Stockhaufsen, reported total sinkings on a long cruise of 46,000 tons of enemy shipping."

240TH RAID TEARS PORT

Southwest England Town Heavily Bombed Saturday Night

A SOUTHWEST ENGLAND TOWN, Dec. 29 (AP)—Hundreds of persons were left temporarily homeless and a large number of shops were wrecked last night by the 240th and heaviest of German air raids on this particular town.

[British censorship forbids identification of the town, but from the circumstances it appeared to be either Plymouth or Southampton, which both are large port cities and naval stations, The Associated Press remarked.]

The raid, though short, was fierce and hundreds of incendiary bombs were scattered over all parts of the town. High explosives, some of heavy caliber, followed and fell on widely separated residential areas.

Quick work by spotters and civilians prevented many incendiaries from obtaining a hold, but at one time more than twenty fires were raging in different areas. All were brought under control before midnight.

Casualties were light considering the severity of the raid, authorities said. Nine bodies recovered from the debris of two homes brought the number of dead to ten. Some persons were injured seriously.

One street, a quarter of a mile long, suffered heavily. All sixty of its shops were damaged by fires or explosions.

Bomber Strikes in East Anglia

A TOWN IN EAST ANGLIA, Dec. 29 (AP)—Seven houses were wrecked partly when a raiding plane dropped four bombs today. The bombs fell in four adjoining streets in a working-class area, but only four cases of slight injury were reported.

British Pots And Pans Literally Take Wings

500 Tons Of Aluminum Utensils Will Be Melted Down For Conversion Into Airplanes

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—Before leaving the War Office recently to become Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden ordered 500 tons of aluminum pots and pans from army kitchens given to the Ministry of Aircraft Production—enough to make 500 airplanes.

STRANGE PLANES OVER EIRE

Craft Over Dublin and Coast Forts Draw Defense Fire

DUBLIN, Dec. 29 (AP)—A "multi-engined military aircraft" flew over Dublin and the Eastern Eire counties today three hours after an unidentified military plane was sighted over the Buncrana and Lough Swilly coastal forts, the Eire Department of Defense announced tonight.

Anti-aircraft defenses engaged the plane flying over the forts and it flew off in a northeasterly direction, the department said. Anti-aircraft guns south of Dublin fired on the plane and an "interceptor patrol" took off at once.

The plane disappeared into a "thick cloud before she could be identified," the statement added.

STANDARDIZED PLANE IS DOWDING AIM HERE

Briton Arrives in Canada—Not Concerned With Supply

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Dec. 29 (AP)—Sir Hugh C. T. Dowding, British Air Marshal and former chief of the Royal Air Force Fighter Command, declared on arriving here today that he was hopeful of arranging standardization of American plane products so they would fit "perfectly" into British requirements.

Sir Hugh was detached last month from his Fighter Command post at the special request of Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, and sent to the United States on a mission unexplained at the time of the British air shuffle. He expected to visit Ottawa a few days before going to Washington.

"I am not much concerned with the details of supply," Sir Hugh said.

Emphasizing his interest in standardization, he said, "It's not much use for them to send us over radio or other equipment which would have to be ripped out of the planes because it simply wouldn't work with our types."

His only comment on planes sent across the Atlantic by the United States was that the Hudson, a coastal reconnaissance aircraft, has been "very successful."

He said the length of his visit to Washington and other parts of the United States was indefinite. He left for Ottawa today.

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Dec. 29—Aboard the same vessel that brought Sir Hugh C. T. Dowding, British Air Marshal, here today were a group of technical experts and Air Ministry officials coming to Canada on missions which they chose to keep secret.

Nazi Troops Reported On Bulgarian Frontier

600,000 Now Declared To Be In Balkans—Sofia Tense As Germans Reach Danube

The vanguard of a vast German expeditionary force is reported at the frontier of Bulgaria. An atmosphere of extreme tenseness prevails as the Bulgars await the next move.

In Budapest, observers raise estimates of the number of German troops moving through Hungary from 300,000 to 600,000. In protest, Hungary's Minister of Agriculture, Michael Teleki, resigns.

Diplomats in Bern, Switzerland, indicate that a politico-military showdown in the Balkans is near.

[By the Associated Press]

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 29—The advance guard of part of the great German expeditionary force now fanning out in southeastern Europe reached the Bulgarian frontier today while Bulgars, in anxious tension, wondered where and how far it would spread.

Bulgaria is a potential avenue to Greece, Turkey or the Russian-dominated Black Sea.

Informed quarters said Bulgaria was likely to permit passage of German troops, under protest, recognizing the "futility" of armed resistance.

Troops Seen Taking Posts

Reports from frontier districts said fresh Nazi troops could be seen taking up positions, occupying barracks and arraying equipment at Giurgiu, on the Rumanian side of the border, across the ice-blocked Danube from Ruschuk.

Churning masses of ice in the Danube, some observers thought, may hold the Germans in check for a time even if the Berlin high command plans to send them into Bulgaria.

It is believed the Germans would be obliged to await either clear water permitting engineers to lay pontoon bridges or solid ice thick enough to support heavy mechanized columns.

Situation Grows Tense

The situation in Bulgaria grew tense after a period of comparative calm.

King Boris conferred with Premier Bogdan Philoff as political circles speculated on the possibility [illegible] man pressure would produce a Government crisis.

These quarters mentioned Interior Minister Peter Gabrovsky, former leader of the small Bulgarian Nazi party, as the possible head of a new Government if the present moderate regime should fall.

Bulgaria, apparently with Soviet Russia's support, has declined so far formally to enter the Axis military pact. King Boris is authoritatively reported to have informed Adolf Hitler on a recent visit to Germany that he would abdicate rather than sanction passage of German troops through his country.

The situation was complicated by an increase in Communist propaganda throughout the country.

Many Bulgarian reservists have been demobilized in recent weeks, the majority withdrawn from the Greek frontier. The number under arms now is estimated at not more than 100,000, as compared to 150,000 a few weeks ago.

Most of those now under arms are at the Turkish frontier since the belief is expressed in Sofia that Turkey would consider a German march into Bulgaria a provocative act likely to involve Turks in war.

600,000 Nazi Troops Reported In Balkans

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 29 (AP)—Estimates of the number of German troops moving across Hungary rose from the original 300,000 to 600,000 today as reports indicated that at least some of them might remain in Hungary. The bulk of them were bound for Rumania.

Hungarian and Rumanian censorship blotted out many details of the movement and destination, but there were enough confirmed facts to keep the Balkans nervous.

Hungary's Minister of Agriculture, Michael Teleki, resigned today because, it was reported, he differed with the Government over the mass movement of German troops through Hungary.

Dissension Reported

Other dissension within the Government also was reported, but it could not be learned whether more resignations might be expected.

There was no sign so far that the Germans planned to take a grip on Hungary as they already have on Rumania.

The thoroughness with which German army railroad technicians have taken hold of Hungarian rail lines between Slovakia and southeastern Europe indicated they plan to retain control until they have completed whatever campaign they may be organizing in the Balkans.

Hinge On Rail Towns

German mass movements of troops and material appeared to be hinged on the Hungarian rail towns of Nagyvarc, Nagyszalonta and Lohoshaza.

[The main Hungarian rail lines radiate in four lines south of Budapest. Two branch toward the west in the direction of northernmost Yugoslavia and Italy. The third goes straight south into Yugoslavia and the fourth forks eastward into Rumania.]

Reports trickling through the Rumanian censorship indicated that most of the Germans moved directly into camps and barracks previously prepared in western Rumania, between Arad and Timisoara near the Yugoslav frontier and along the southern Rumanian border between Giurgiu and the Black Sea opposite Bulgaria.

Roll Through Rumania

While thousands which arrived in the vanguard remained in Hungary guarding strategic rail centers, switches, bridges and tunnels, the mass rolled through into Rumania as fast as the rails could carry them.

One item of military equipment noted by Hungarians was huge guns described as the type the Germans have used to hammer England's Dover area from across the English Channel.

The Hungarians guessed that such guns might be installed either on the Dardanelles to destroy Turkish forts on the opposite side or at Salonika to prevent British landing attempts in that part of Greece—both provided that those are the Nazis' destinations and that they get there.

Nazis At Rail Lines

A noticeable increase in the number of German troops posted around rail lines in northern Budapest and on the city's outskirts occurred this morning.

Telephone connections with Switzerland were cut temporarily by the censor last night, and the censors' office called correspondents and "suggested" that they "refrain from saying that the Hungarian state railways were under German management."

Yugoslavs Stress Nazi Interest In Black Sea

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Belgrade newspaper Vreme, mouthpiece of the Yugoslav Foreign Office, commenting today on entrance of fresh German troops into Rumania, said "Germany has a great interest in trengthening her political and strategic position on the Black Sea."

"At the same time," the newspaper said, "the unsettled situation of new Rumania gives sufficient reason for Germany to safeguard in appropriate ways the political developments in that country.

"Therefore, the reinforcements which German garrisons in Rumania are receiving these days will be used, it seems, rather to consolidate the present order in the Danubian region than for operations south of Rumania."

Situation In Balkans Ignored By Red Press

Moscow, Dec. 29 (AP)—Pravda, Izvestia and Red Star—respectively, the organs of the Communist party, the Government and the Soviet Russian army—reproduced today an article on German industry taken from the Danzig newspaper Danziger Vorposten.

"Raw materials are exported into Germany in greater quantities than before the war from the Soviet Union, the Far East, the Near East and continental countries," this article said.

Pact Signed Last Year

"In the first place, we should point to supplies of oil from Rumania and Russia, iron ore from Sweden and cotton from Russia."

The first Russian-German trade agreement was signed August 20, 1939, just before the outbreak of war and negotiations are under way in Moscow for implementing the agreement. The volume of trade has never been made public here.

[There has been no official reaction in Russia to the great German troop movements under way in the Balkans.]

Red Star, in another article, commented on Italy's war position:

"The Italians apparently encountered great difficulties in transporting troops into Albania and are forced to limit themselves to defensive action and counter-attacks at isolated points."

Red Star asserted that the African war theater is of subordinate importance, but is largely dependent on developments in Albania which are "of decisive importance to Italy."

Iron Guard to Fight Hungary

The British radio, in a broadcast heard here yesterday by the Columbia Broadcasting System, said 5,000 Rumanian Iron Guardists, meeting at Cluj, near the new Hungarian border, had resolved to carry guerrilla warfare against Hungary until Transylvania was fully restored to Rumania, The Associated Press reported.

The British radio said reports from Budapest asserted arms were distributed to Iron Guardists without interference by authorities and that the meeting was attended by a special deputation from Bucharest with the approval of Horia Sima, Iron Guard leader.

Dictator Named By Italy to Rule On Food Front

Agriculture Chief Tassinari To Control Dinner Tables of Civilians and Fighters

ROME, Dec. 29 (AP).—Italy set up a dictator of the dinner table today with absolute control over appeasement of the national appetite. The man, chosen by a new law to regulate production and consumption, exportation and importation of food for civilians and fighting forces alike, is Minister of Agriculture Giuseppe Tassinari, forty-nine years old and perhaps Italy's foremost authority on agricultural economy.

The law, issued late Saturday night, was praised today by Virginio Gayda, editor of "Il Giornale d'Italia," as one which would meet a long-felt need for a "united command" on the food front.

The law decreed also death penalties for extreme cases of food hoarding or destruction of prime materials and agricultural products and tripled already severe penalties for violations of laws on pooling, wholesaling and distribution of food.

Under the new law, Tassinari, one-time professor of agricultural economy at the Royal University of Bologna and a Fascist since Premier Benito Mussolini's march on Rome in 1922, will take a census of food supplies, take charge of purchases of food from domestic as well as foreign sources, assign the armed forces their share and supervise both farmers and industrialists, in order to see to it that they produce sufficient food and convert it efficiently and without profiteering.

Tassinari also is authorized to call on the personnel of the Ministry of Guilds and the railroads and maritime agencies and automobile transport companies, which are under the Communications Ministry, as well as on the various armed forces, to help him.

Dividends of Italian firms will be limited to 7 per cent. This decree was published in the "Official Gazette" with another which increased by 10 to 20 per cent the tax on interest on bonds of private companies and various state agencies.

The law relating to dividends made company officers personally responsible and subject to fines varying from 500 to 2,000 lire ($25 to $100) and ejection from all executive positions for five years. The firms would be liable to a fine equal to the amount distributed in excess of 7 per cent.

The government, which recently reduced the number of passenger trains, announced that the reduced fares usually accorded to holiday groups would be discontinued next Wednesday. Foreign circles interpreted this as meaning the railroads were needed more extensively for transportation of war—(at this point the censor at Rome ended the dispatch).

SHAKEUP NEAR IN VICHY ORDER, DIPLOMATS HINT

Petain Said To Be Seeking To Prove Cooperative Spirit To Nazis

As A Result, Concessions In French Cabinet May Be Granted

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 29—A shake-up in the Vichy Government would not be surprising, diplomatic sources said tonight, as part of the efforts of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain to convince Germany he is willing to support French-German collaboration in all save military and naval affairs.

Sources here said that one of those likely to be sacrificed in order to compromise on the Germans' original request that Petain reinstate Pierre Laval as Vice-Premier would be Raphael Alibert, Minister of Justice.

Others whom the Germans would like to see at liberty from ministerial duties, sources here said, were Marcel Peyrouton, Minister of the Interior and "strong man" of the Vichy Government; Rene Belin, Labor Minister, and Pierre Caziot, Minister of Agriculture.

Refusal Is Expected

It is not regarded as likely, however, that Peyrouton would go, and Petain, indeed, has once refused to make such sweeping changes as it is indicated the Germans were reported asking.

With politics and diplomatic palaver out of the way, the terms of the French-German collaboration come to this:

The Germans would like France as an ally against Britain. They would like not only economic, financial and industrial collaboration, but military as well. They would like to have use of the French fleet and French bases, and they would probably take them were it not for Petain's strength in one direction.

The bulwark of that strength, Maxime Waygand and the army he has in French North Africa and Syria. He is pledged to support only Petain and not any succeeding Vichy Government without Petain.

Admiration For British

Less tangible, but none the less strong, is the increasing admiration many Frenchmen hold for British resistance.

Another important factor, diplomatic observers say, is that the French would prove difficult to rule as conquered peoples if the last vestige of independent France were gone and the country wholly occupied by Germany.

Petain, according to diplomatic reports, has stood firm for collaboration based solely on economic, financial and industrial matters. Such collaboration was said to be designed to open certain French resources, including agriculture, to Germany. Industrial cooperation, it was said, would exclude arms made in French factories of the unoccupied zone.

The Germans are reported to have accepted this last provision because German production at present is sufficient to meet German military needs.

France To Flower Again, Petain Assures Youths

Vichy, France, Dec. 29 (AP)—Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, Chief of State, urged all of France's young men today to abandon "destructive individualism" and learn teamwork to reconstruct their country. France, he declared, will flower again.

"My dear friends," Petain said in a broadcast speech for French Youth Day, "there is a symbolic juxtaposition in the severe winter which inflicts privations and suffering and the sad period our country is passing through.

"But, stronger than the winter, we hold intact our faith in the return of spring.

"Will Flower Again"

"Young Frenchmen, the France which today lies prostrate will one day flower again."

Petain said that in the "national revolution" which he heads the elimination of individualism was necessary for reconstruction.

"Every Frenchman must begin to forget himself . . ." he declared. "I don't ask you to shed your independence, but independence may be perfectly accommodated to discipline, while individualism invariably leads to anarchy."

VICHY-DEC-29

PAUL BAUDOUIN, SECRETARY OF STATE FOR PRESIDENCY OF THE COUNCIL, IN AN ADDRESS TO THE YOUTH REUNION OF LYON SAID "BY YOUR ARDOR TO SERVE, YOUR ACCEPTANCE OF COLD AND HUNGER, BY THE GIFT OF THE BEST OF YOUR BODY AND SOUL, BY VOLUNTARY DESTITUTION AND BY SUFFERING AND COMRADESHIP, YOU CAN WORK FOR NATIONAL RECONSTRUCTION."

"THE NATIONAL REVOLUTION IS NOT ONLY WITH YOU BUT FOR YOU," HE SAID.

FASCIST JOURNALS SPURN PEACE TALK

Editors Close to Italian Officials Say Axis is Deaf to Proposals.

STRESS WARNING TO U. S.

Insist Tripartite Powers Won't Allow American Vessels to Supply Britain

Rome, Dec. 29.—(AP)—The Axis Powers are deaf to any proposal of a negotiated peace, the Fascist press declared today, and stand ready to strike back at the United States for any new aid to Britain which they might deem an act of war.

The press asserted that Japan is expected to join Italy and Germany in any such reaction.

Il Popolo Di Roma said the three-Power pact between Germany, Italy and Japan "already has foreseen the Anglophile slipping of the United States and prepared the most adapted means to face it."

Japan's Foreign Minister, Hosuke Matsuoka, recently reaffirmed the "unequivocal validity" of this pact, the paper added.

"The Axis Powers, while desiring to limit the area of war, could not remain inert before any intervention in favor of England which violated the elementary rule of international law," Il Popolo Di Roma asserted.

Third Warning to U. S.

Dispatch of aid to Britain through Irish ports would "provoke prompt reaction from the Axis Powers," the newspaper Resto Del Carlino said.

(This was the third similar warning to the United States in a week.)

The assertions appeared in advance of President Roosevelt's Sunday evening fireside chat—an indication that his declarations of policy were anxiously awaited.

Italy meanwhile showed signs of intensifying her war effort, tightening various internal restrictions, principally food hoarding, for which the death penalty was prescribed in severe cases.

Il Popolo Di Roma asserted that American talk of a negotiated peace was intended either to restrain the war effort of the Axis, or, if rejected, to "convince the reluctant American people that war had become inevitable."

"Deaf" to Peace Proposals

It was this paper which said that the Axis was "necessarily deaf" to suggestions of a negotiated peace. Its editorial, considered by usually informed Italian sources to have been officially inspired, declared that such peace would benefit the "provocative democracies."

In this war, it said, one "wins or dies."

La Stampa of Turin contributed this, in part:

"The Axis powers, while condemning the profound injustice of the United States' attitude since the beginning of the conflict, have considered it opportune not to aggravate relations.

"Up to now the American flag has not been compromised in any open favoring of the English.

"Form has been saved even if it must be considered that England, without aid and incitement from overseas, already would have been forced to surrender.

"But there are limits which cannot be exceeded. The Axis already has had to take such an eventuality into consideration and forearm itself."

Cites Insurance Pact

The three-Power pact with Japan—a military alliance committing them to a one-for-all action against any new nation taking up arms against any of them—was part of the "precautions," La Stampa said.

Any American aid to Britain, by way of convoys to Ireland, would bring immediate reaction, the newspapers said. This, they held, would be an act of war.

(The official Italian radio, as heard by CBS, said: "It has been stated in various quarters that the United States has brought pressure to bear on Ireland so that that country would cede bases to the British Government.")

Il Popolo di Roma's editorial constituted a rejection of the suggestion voiced by certain United States Senators that President Roosevelt attempt to bring belligerents together in a "just" peace.

Il Popolo di Roma's editor is considered close to Foreign Minister Count Ciano, Premier Mussolini's No. 1 aide and occasional consultant with Adolf Hitler.

"The Axis powers find themselves in a moral and military position which makes them necessarily deaf to any negotiated peace or compromise of which the provocative democracies—which alone are responsible for the war and which are their relentless enemies—would be beneficiaries," the newspaper said.

Greeks Battle Toward Valona In 6-Foot Snow

Close In on Italian Posts Guarding Way to Port; Capture of Lin Reported

ATHENS, Dec. 29 (AP).—Greek forces were reported today to have edged closer to Valona, their next goal, by threatening Italian control at three points guarding the approaches to that southern Albanian port.

Operations continued to be slow, because of heavy snow, which has piled up to the depth of six feet in some parts of the northern front in Albania. A strong north wind has made the weather bitterly cold for two days.

At Tepelini, Greek machine guns were trained on the road connecting with Italian bases to the northwest. Tepelini is a junction of two roads leading to Valona.

The Italians still hold some heights in the Tepelini sector, despite the threat that their communications may be severed completely. The Greeks have reported capture of 200 prisoners and a large quantity of supplies in that area.

Capture of Lin Reported

The British radio reported on Sunday in a broadcast heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York, according to The Associated Press, that the Belgrade newspaper "Politika" said the Greeks had captured the town of Lin, described by the report as the "main objective between Pogradetz and Elbasani, Albania," on the northern front.

[The British radio said the Greeks outflanked the town after heavy fighting in the snow. Lin is on Lake Ochrida, on the Albanian-Yugoslav border and is about fifteen miles north of Pogradetz and thirty miles east of Elbasani.]

In the Klisoura sector, also a control point on roads in the southern fighting zone, the Greeks were said to have driven the Italians from their most important hill positions to a last line of defense in the valley.

This line was described as only a series of trenches and barbed wire entanglements which, the Greeks said, had been placed under heavy fire from the captured heights.

Counter-Attacks Crushed

One report said the Italians attempted several counter-attacks in the Klisoura sector but that all were crushed, partly with the help of a heavy bombardment of Fascist troops by Greek warplanes.

Along the coast, Greek advances were reported beyond Khimara.

"Our units are successfully attacking a group of heights which defend Valona," one report from that area said, "Already, some of our troops in this sector have overshot these heights and our artillery is shelling enemy defense lines."

A British Royal Air Force communique reported a Valona waterfront raid yesterday by R. A. F. planes despite "extremely" bad weather. Although results could not be ascertained because of low clouds, it said, one heavy bomb was seen bursting about fifty yards from a large ship, and all bombs fell in the target area.

Capture Of Town Of Lin By Greeks Is Reported

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—The British radio reported today in a broadcast heard by C. B. S. that the Belgrade newspaper Politika said the Greeks have captured the border town of Lin, described by the report as the "main objective between Pogradetz and Elbasani, Albania."

The British raido said the Greeks outflanked the important town after heavy fighting in the snow.

Lin is on Lake Ochrid, on the Albania-Yugoslav border and is about fifteen miles north of Pogradetz, i... about thirty miles directly east of Elbasani.

Greek Forces Repulsed By Gunfire, Rome Says

Rome, Dec. 29 (AP)—Military action in Albania was "of a local character," with Greek forces "repulsed by our artillery fire," the daily communique said today.

The communique added, without amplification, that Italian planes "hit important enemy supply bases in the Mediterranean," and said that one pursuit squadron had shot down four of five British fighting planes which they encountered.

BRITISH GUNS POUR SHELLS INTO BARDIA

Italian Gunfire From Besieged Base Reported To Be Slackening

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 29—British guns poured shells into the Italian base town of Bardia today in continued preparation for a final attack on the Fascist stronghold in northeastern Libya, fifteen miles from the Egyptian border.

The British said their guns met "comparatively little response from the Italian garrison."

While the British assembled men and materials for the coming big attack, their patrols far down in the Sudan "successfully" harassed the Italians southwest of Kassala and east of Gallabat, general headquarters reported.

Guns Back Up Patrols

The patrols were supported by artillery, the communique added.

Egyptian newspapers reported the discovery of a large number of banknotes especially printed for Egypt among the material abandoned at Sidi Barrani, first important Italian base town seized by the British when they began the African offensive early this month.

The notes presumably were to be put into circulation when the Italians entered Alexandria, it was said.

Planned To Set Up Puppet

Other captured documents disclosed Italian plans for administering Egypt, indicating they intended to set up a former Egyptian now living in Libya as a puppet governor.

After the Italians occupied Sidi Barrani, in Egypt, the radio station at Bari, Italy, broadcast in Arabic an announcement that the town was thriving under the Italians, with street cars running and banks and cabarets open.

Egyptians were greatly amused at the broadcast, since the town before its destruction consisted of about thirty houses.

Ansaldo Hails "Recovery" Of Duce's Army In Africa

Rome, Dec. 29 (AP)—Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's Leghorn newspaper, Il Telegrafo, told the Italian armed forces today that recovery by the Italian army in Africa had brought about a "recovery of spirits and energy" in the homeland.

Ansaldo said in a broadcast that both the British and the Italians were massing forces in North Africa for attacks and counter-attacks and that the situation in Libya is straightening itself out after fifteen days of fighting around Bardia.

"Relatively Stabilized"

He said "the relatively stabilized situation" on the Libyan front would not be allowed to "slide toward a war of positions" and that the British are "pulling all motorized equipment available to them even from Palestine to concentrate it against us and repeat the blow dealt against Sidi Barrani."

Today's high command communique said the defense of Bardia has developed into heavy artillery dueling and patrolling while in the near-by desert "fast-moving columns in cooperation with aviation destroyed some enemy armored cars."

The comparatively inactive East Africa front was marked by inconclusive artillery, cavalry and aerial activity while in the Mediterranean "two of our torpedoing planes attacked and hit a monitor and one destroyer."

Banknotes Italy Printed For Use in Egypt Seized

CAIRO, Dec. 29 (AP)—Egyptian newspapers reported today the discovery of a large number of banknotes especially printed for Egypt among the material abandoned at Sidi Barrani, first important Italian base town seized by the British when they began the African offensive early this month.

The notes presumably were to have been put into circulation if and when the Italians entered Alexandria, it was said.

Other captured documents disclosed Italian plans for administering Egypt indicating the Italians had intended to set up as a puppet governor a former Italian now living in Libya.

After the Italians occupied Sidi Barrani, which is in Egypt, the radio station at Bari, Italy, broadcast in Arabic an announcement that the town was thriving under the Italians, with street cars running and banks and cabarets open. Egyptians were greatly amused at the broadcast, since the town had consisted of only about thirty houses.

Spaniards Get Warning Not to Oppose Rulers

'Murmurers' Against Fascist Regime Are Fined

MADRID, Dec. 29 (AP).—Spaniards were told today by the official Falangist (Fascist) organ that they might stand on the sidelines if they wished, but that they must not attempt to sow confusion in the path of the "select majority" now working out Spain's destiny.

The warning in the newspaper "Arriba" followed closely the first exemplary punishment of "murmurers" yesterday, when two fines of 2,000 pesetas ($180) were imposed.

"Arriba" said the hour had come to prohibit "opinions and annoyances" from persons taking advantage of Spain's difficulties to grumble or spread confusing remarks about the men in power or about measures announced.

Spain Widens War Pensions

Madrid, Dec. 29 (AP)—An official decree today expanded pension provisions to include the widows, children and impoverished parents of all persons who lost their lives supporting the "Nationalist" cause in the Spanish civil war.

NEW YORK, DEC. 29-(AP)-AN ITALIAN RADIO COMMENTATOR IN A BROADCAST HEARD HERE BY CBS SAID TODAY THE ITALIAN RESISTANCE AT BARDIA, LIBYA, HAS FORCED THE "MUCH MORE NUMEROUS AND BETTER ARMED ENEMY FORCES TO MARK TIME."

"BARDIA HAS CARRIED OUT ITS PART PERFECTLY," THE ITALIAN COMMENTATOR SAID. "WHILE THE GARRISON AT BARDIA IS RESISTING, OUR LIGHTNING COLUMNS ARE CARRYING OUT LIGHTNING THRUSTS WHICH ARE DIRECTED AT X X X PREVENTING TROOPS ARMED WITH MODERN MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT, ADAPTED TO DESERT FIGHTING, FROM ARRIVING UNEXPECTEDLY IN SOME ZONE OF OUR DEFENSES."

(THE SURPRISE ELEMENT WAS REPORTED TO HAVE PLAYED A BIG PART IN BRITAIN'S INITIAL SUCCESSES AGAINST THE ITALIANS IN EGYPT WHEN THE OFFENSIVE BEGAN.)

Tokyo Stresses Importance Of Trade Parley With Indo-China Today

[By the Associated Press]

Bangkok, Thailand, Dec. 29—Large-scale hostilities flared again today along the French Indo-China frontier, and the Thai (Siamese) high command declared French forces retreated after two clashes.

The communique said the French left arms and ammunition behind when they were forced back yesterday in the Aranyapredes district.

A later engagement in which large forces of Indo-Chinese troops were said to have been involved was reported to have lasted two hours. Then, the communique said, the French again were repulsed with many casualties.

The communique reported also that the Thai navy had left for "defense measures" in the Gulf of Siam, south of the disputed frontier.

Indo-China-Japan Trade Conference Opens Today

Tokyo, Dec. 29 (AP)—The French Indo-China economic conference which begins here tomorrow is as vital to the welfare of Japan as anything which has occurred in recent months.

The importance of the conference lies in the rice paddies of French Indo-China. The 1939 rice crop was valued at $35,000,000.

The Government declines comment on results of preliminary conferences at Hanoi, capital of the French colony, but obviously leaders hope to arrange an exchange of Japanese manufactured goods for rice, needed because of Japan's drought, rubber (Indo-China's second most important export), tin, iron, manganese and ores.

Supply Cut Off

Indo-China's supply of these manufactured goods, previously obtained for most part from Europe, has been cut off.

A recent editorial in the Foreign Office-controlled Tokyo Times said the "chief importance of Indo-China in the Far Eastern economy is her rice producer position."

"Whoever holds Indo-China can dictate much of the Pacific policy as it touches the livelihood of many millions," the paper asserted.

Indo-China rubber exports in 1939 were valued at $25,000,000, with forty-two per cent. delivered to the United States.

Wealth Unexploited

Much of the riches of the French colony remain unexploited, and Japanese interest undoubtedly is partially due to these opportunities, with an eye always on the difficulties being experienced because of United States embargoes.

Japanese consider Indo-China an extreme instance of the wealth and resources of East Asia under control of non-Asiatic powers.

"Japan has objectives of vital and sheer necessity," Foreign Minister Yosiuke Matsouka commented yesterday. "I hope the French Delegates will deliberate, bearing in mind this particular aspect."

London Bankers Mix With Cockney Workers In Presence of Stalking Terror of a Blitzkrieg

People Facing Death From Hitler's Bombers Put Aside Petty Passions and All Classes Mingle Freely.

A story of what it means to live under the ever-present threat of death in England has been written by Milo M. Thompson, chief of the London Bureau of the Associated Press, who has lived there throughout the European war. He knows what it means to have his home and his office bombed and barely to miss being killed.

By MILO M. THOMPSON.

Total war such as London is experiencing today is not all bad. Something happens to people who, facing death, have put aside all the normal and petty expectations and ambitions. Their hope is not to have a better job, house, car or dress on some tomorrow, but to be alive.

Most trivial passions disappear at dawn and was found alternately when one faces as stark reality the possibility that all possessions, all freedom, even one's country, may no longer be his own in a few short months.

There is something sublime in the British reaction to blitzkrieg.

The limousine of the banker from the City loads up with Cockney workmen at a bus stop to speed them home. The maid sits in the mistress's parlor for her cup of tea at night.

The high and the low find they are actually just people whose knees can quake, whose hearts leap to throats, whose kinfolk are equally precious and whose possessions, large or small, are slipping.

In Presence of Stalking Terror.

In the presence of a stalking terror they feel the need of companionship and welcome whomsoever is closest, and great is their amazement to find that they like this. They find qualities they never suspected in each other.

We have an aging maid-of-all-work whose case, I think, illustrates one side of what the war is doing to people.

She is on a small government pension, earned by years of cleaning government offices. She had a husband once, but he went off to Australia not long after the other war. She possesses a tiny cottage, a cat, a tea kettle, a washtub and a cot.

There were a few speaking neighbors, but mostly her pre-war life was a lonely one of puttering about house and garden when she was not at her work. And at work she was never talkative.

Blitzkrieg created for her a new existence.

With the very first wave of bombings she fell heir to part of a family of refugees, two teen-age girls from a bombed-out family of ten children. She grumbled at first at the disruption of her peaceful existence, but in almost no time at all found herself as absorbed in that family's scattered affairs as if it were her own.

Invited to Join Circle.

She actually began to talk while she worked; suddenly there were things to say beside "Oh, that awful 'Itler and 'is hair-raids."

Thickening bombardment eventually made it undesirable for her to go home to her cottage at night and she began staying with us during the night raids. She visited her refugee girls and her house at odd daytime between-raid periods and on Sundays. The girls took care of her cottage.

She was far more nervous than we were, starting up in fright even at mere gunfire or at some queer sound made by a truck on the highway.

So it hurt our consciences to have her sitting alone in a corner of the kitchen, or below stairs in her own room, while we were before the fire in a strong room with battened windows. We asked her to come in and sit in the same room with us during the evenings.

She began to spruce up her appearance and she showed her appreciation in innumerable little helpful ways.

The third step in her regeneration came when our house was bombed. It was a horrid night when everything seemed to crash about one's ears and she lay terrified in bed amid debris, unable to find her slippers in order to negotiate the glass-strewn floor, bereft of light, freezing cold as the gale blew through the gaps where windows and doors had been.

But she was the first one to stir wringing her hands at the appearance of devastation upstairs and earnestly attacking the hopeless looking job of achieving order.

A period followed when no one could live in our house until window spaces were filled in, doors reset and utilities regained. So she went down the streets to spend her nights in one of the public shelters.

There she found a new world in which people like herself, talking her own language, laid their cots and pallets side by side, listened to a common radio which drowned out the gunfire, held long conversations about the affairs of the whole neighborhood, traded bits of information about the effect of the bombs, played cards; in fact had a nightly tea party until lights out time.

After that we could never win her back to staying in the house during the nightly raids. She was almost gay as she packed her little basket and set off in the gloaming to reach the shelter before the siren sounded.

At the crack of dawn and after the morning "all clear" she would be back, bubbling over with the news she had gleaned and repeating bits of conversation from the friends she had made.

For the first time in her life she had become a really social being and, for all her continuing moments of terror, she seemed to grow younger.

I tell this story, not because it is great drama, but because it is typical. It has been happening all over the London area.

She is also an illustration of that catlike devotion to home surroundings which convinces one the London people will die before they are frightened away from their home districts.

We have sometimes considered

30.24-6675

30.24—6645

establishing a rest home in the country beyond the London area and urged her, if we did, to go with us. She will not do it.

Just as the East Enders who, moved from their devastated blocks of tenements to the West End of London, inevitably filter back to their own broken neighborhoods, she steadfastly insists she is going to stay "home."

Jack of All Trades Needed To Run Office in London Now

Manager During a Blitzkrieg Must Be Everything From a Transport Expert to Father Confessor to Workers.

This installment is the second of a series of articles by Milo M. Thompson, chief of the London bureau of the Associated Press, describing life today in the British capital.

By MILO M. THOMPSON.

The successful business manager in Blitzkrieg London has to have the qualifications of a hotel proprietor, a building contractor, a referee, a father confessor, a transportation wizard, an advocate, a politician and an army captain. All this is in addition to the qualifications of his own special business, whether he manufactures tin cans, operates a department store or runs a press association office.

He has to operate a shelter in which many employees, caught by the raids, must sleep at night. That brings up problems of heating, lighting, ventilation, cot assignments, laundry and sanitary conveniences. Also involved is the supply of elementary cooking arrangements, particularly for making tea with an uncertain water supply.

The qualifications of a building contractor are called into play by many things. Shelters require modifications which call for workmen, bricks, cement and steel. It is no easy task to get them available together.

In our case, for example, we have had to send trucks to brick factories halfway across England in order to get supplies to keep busy the bricklayers already rounded up.

A Bomb Undoes the Job.

Then comes a bomb which smashes his [illegible] wrenches doors off hing[illegible] off part of his roof. It i[illegible]ive that repairs be made quickly, lest rain damage records, machinery and furniture. It is almost impossible again to find men and materials.

The referee's talents become useful when one nervy and unslept employee invites another into the alley to have his block knocked off because of some fancied affront.

The confessional is always in session.

The man whose home has been smashed by a bomb weeps on his employer's shoulder; the fellow whose wife or child or other near kin has been a casualty has to be brought around with fortifying words; the chap who sees bankruptcy staring him in the face because he can no longer reach work from the home he owns and cannot afford to rent a room closer to the office brings his problem for solution.

That manager who can arrange things that his employees get to work on time is a transportation wizard.

Some attempt to solve this problem by adjusting hours to allow for jams, halts and tie-ups. Others hire ployees who need help. Some of the bigger employers operate whole fleets of buses.

Where the Lawyer Comes In.

All a lawyer's argumentative ability comes into play when appeals must be made to government, which is most of the time. This is especially true in the news gathering business.

You may have to apply in writing or in person for permission to send a reporter anywhere; later you have to address a new set of appeals to censorship to prove it is safe to use the story.

All employers must do a deal of arguing to save from military levies the minimum essentials of a trained staff, even when their business is very important to the war effort. And arguments alone do not win. You frequently have to bring pressure to bear by enlisting persons prominent elsewhere in the government in your cause. You use what pull, what influence and what fear of superiors you can conjure up in order to win the point; in fact, all the devices of a professional politician.

Fortunate is the manager who has had army experience. The ARP unit of his own plant or building is a little army in itself, dedicated to watchfulness, to the disposal of incendiary bombs, the organization of stretcher, demolition and rescue parties.

The manager is a permanent "officer of the day" in his building or plant.

Beyond these he has no duties to perform but the things a manager would have to do in America, except maybe fill out a host of forms for army and navy, and satisfy the war risk and bombardment insurance people on changes in the salary and status of employees and damage done to the plant.

A bombing becomes interesting only when there is some definite freak, although some narrow escapes which have an element of the supernatural and unexplainable about them also are worth mentioning.

For instance:

There's one manager of an American company in London who rose up from bed in the dead of night, shook his wife and cried:

"We must get out of here"

He dragged her down the corridor, she thinking he was the victim of a nightmare. Then he threw her down and flung himself across her protectively.

Had Heard No Sound.

There came a terrific explosion. His body became inert.

He was rushed to a hospital, where doctors save him from bleeding to death.

On recovering he said he had heard no sound, but awoke with a suffocating feeling and the urge to get away. That was all.

The bomb demolished their bedroom.

I know of another case in which a dog suddenly began barking and pulled his master out of a room. A few moments later the room was wrecked.

My own case is one in point. My wife and I, with two members of the Associated Press staff, were driving into the city after dark when we were caught in the blitz.

At an intersection the green light winked out and the intermediate orange came on. It was a toss-up whether to race to beat the red or stop for it. The driver elected to go through. He doesn't know why.

Caught by Red Light.

A block away the red light caught us and two screaming bombs came down. One took away three-quarters of the roadway at the very spot where we should have been waiting for the light to change.

Bob Bunnelle of the Associated Press staff and his wife were in their tenth-story penthouse apartment when three bombs came down.

One exploded at the front door of the apartment house, playing hob with the lobby. The second put its crater at the street corner. The third whistled down right beside their window and exploded under it. The building trembled but the Bunnelles didn't lose a window or suffer a scratch.

Two friends of mine started from their apartment after a bachelor dinner to have a brandy in a hotel lobby. Just before they made the turn a bomb fell just around the corner. They lost their appetite for brandy and half crawled home.

Only the bores bother you with stories of their own private and particular bombs, now that most of us have had our own bomb experience.

The Unexplainable

A bombing becomes interesting only when there is some definite freak.

For instance:

There's one manager of an American company in London who rose up from bed in the dead of night, shook his wife and cried: "We must get out of here!"

He dragged the protesting woman through the door and down the corridor, she supposing all the time that he was the victim of a nightmare. At the corridor's turning he threw her down and threw himself across her protectively.

A Terrific Explosion

There came a terrific explosion.

His body became inert.

She felt liquid and supposed that the explosion had burst a pipe. Suddenly she realized that it was her husband's blood and struggled out, screaming. She dragged him to the street and help came. He was rushed to a hospital, where they attended to a slashed artery and saved him from bleeding to death.

The Barking Dog

He is quite conscious now, and recovering. But he cannot explain what happened. He heard no sound. He says he awoke with a suffocating feeling and the urge to get away. That was all.

The bomb demolished their bedroom.

I know of another case in which a dog which suddenly, in what seemed silence, began barking and pulling his master out of a room. A few moments later the room was wrecked. The master was safe.

My own case is one in point. My wife and I, with Hugh Wagnon and Joe Wurzel, of the Associated Press, were returning to the heart of the city from a bit of suburban business. We were in an AP car with our own driver. Unable to reach our destination before dark, we had been caught in the Blitz.

Gunfire was loud and rapid. Shells were bursting overhead. Naturally the dirver was "stepping on it" to get the trip over.

At an intersection ahead of us, the green traffic light winked out as we approached. The intermediate orange came on. It was a tossup whether to race to beat the red or stop for it. The driver elected to go through. He doesn't know why.

A block away the red light caught us and, as we slowed to a stop, two screaming bombs came down.

Whang And Crash

My wife slid off the seat and buried her face in the cushion.

I scrunched in the corner to get away from the window glass.

The men in the jumpseats ducked.

Whang and crash followed.

One of the bombs took away three-quarters of the roadway at the very spot where we should have been waiting for the light to change.

Million-To-One Chance

We tell ourselves that a direct hit is a million-to-one chance and recall that bombs can come amazingly close without destroying you.

Wurzel and his wife were in the little brick shelter in their garden when a bomb landed only twelve yards away. The whole shelter took a leap and settled back again. Nearby houses, including their own, were damaged.

Bob Bunnelle and his wife were in their penthouse apartment when three bombs came down.

Above The Damage

One exploded at the front door of the apartment house, playing hob with the lobby. One put its crater at the street corner.

The third whistled down right beside their window and exploded under it, where they could look down later into the yawning crater.

Tom Yarbrough, of our staff, made the personal acquaintance of a bomb on the street. It fell so close that it blew him off his feet and down into a cellarway. He was disheveled and bruised but otherwise unhurt.

There's probably no moral to all this except that, in Blitzkrieg as elsewhere, a miss is still as good as a mile.

London's Miracles Amid German Bombs

(Editor's Note—When Hitler promised England a "blood bath" and followed with his war from the air in an effort to terrorize the people, he failed to reckon with the British spirit of "carry on." This is strikingly evidenced in Milo M. Thompson's stories of life in England today. Other articles will follow. Tomorrow: "Underground Fashions.")

New York, Dec. 18—The present and eternity are no farther apart in London than a snap of the fingers.

Nevertheless, narrow escapes are only something to be discussed lazily with the walnuts and the wine, not such a shuddering horror as most Americans suppose.

London's Underground Fashions

ART. IV.

By MILO M. THOMPSON, Chief of the Associated Press London Bureau

(Editor's Note: The following is the fourth of a series of stories on present-day life in war-stricken London. Tomorrow: "Marketing in Bombland." Other stories will follow.)

New York, Dec. 19—"Ain't underground London wonderful?" It was my waiting taxicab driver who spoke. He had strolled from his cab to lean over a barrier and peer down into the crater of the bomb which hit the Associated Press building.

He saw workmen replacing a giant water-main valve which had been wrecked. The part they were putting in was about as big as the 550-pound bomb which had done the damage.

He saw a crisscross of gas mains undergoing repair and just freed of earth, debris and the mess made by sandbags, which, after effectively protecting part of the side of the building, had toppled in. And there were two separate families of multiple cable conduits.

Shelter Style

His exclamation was pat, but, to my mind, it would be still more pat applied to the life that goes on in the deep underground railway stations of London once night has driven the shelterers there.

Newspaper people are often caught off base by the night bombardment and, therefore, we frequently make an involuntary tour of the deep shelters.

It seldom fails to bring tears to my wife's eyes when she sees nursing mothers with their babies, young children, aged crones, bespectacled old men, stretched out on cold concrete.

Pageant Of Fortitude

To me, however, it is an endless pagent of fortitude and determination; and there is something inspiring in the way these people make a smiling best of a bad situation.

As the train stops first in one station, then another, another and another, you see successive tableaus involving new types of people, new postures of repose, new devices for amusement.

And sometimes I see it as a fashion show with living models answering the question: What are the best dressed shelterers wearing this season?"

So I'll tell you.

Quite obviously is is desirable to choose something warm, something loose, something in colors which do not show the dirt too plainly and yet with a touch of brightness to liven the otherwise too drab scene.

For warmth there is a predominance of sweaters and light overcoats and often a glimpse of woolen underwear. The old-fashioned shawl is quite good taste and the blanket worn Indian fashion is not frowned upon. Younger women prefer slacks to skirts, which climb above the knees. Some simply wear an old pair of a husband's or brother's trousers. A scattered few have ski suits; they are fortunate.

Looseness Desirable

Looseness is desirable because, after all, shelter clothes are meant to be slept in. The blanket bathrobe would seem to be a perfect garment, but it is almost never seen in the railroad shelters.

Unshod stockinged feet are prominent.

Few shelterers wear light-colored clothes. Pastel shades are definitely out. Muddy browns, dusty dark grays and oldish tweed mixtures are commonest.

Vivid Colors In Favor

But there has to be some color relief. That is supplied by the sweaters and scarfs and it is curious how many are wearing yellows and oranges as if they realized how these vivid colors save a shelter scene from having the aspect of a charnel house.

The more intelligently dressed women who do not have slacks or care to wear borrowed trousers use cotton or woolen hose, but silk stockings still outnumber these.

As To Accessories

Accessories are of the simplest. Jewelry is not worn. Instead of handbags women carry small square overnight cases, usually the worse for wear. The handbags and purses are inside the gasmasks and probably the best of the family jewels, too, if any, for these cases are carefully guarded and often form the base of the sleeper's pillow.

One's train comes at last to the end of the deep underground section and the show is over, but before we leave the subject it might be well to note what is being worn by the West End society women in their more perfumed shelters in the basements of apartment houses and such places.

In that area one finds the open-crowned, self-coiled stockinette turban preferred for guarding the hair, in colors to match the costume. One finds loose-belted corduroy jackets and slacks worn with silk-wool hose and wool-lined shoes.

Or so she hopes.

London And The War—

How Rations Work

(Editor's Note—What about food in England today? You will find the answer in the following article by Milo M. Thompson, another in his series of stories on life in that country. Tomorrow: "Evacuation Without Stampede.")

By Milo M. Thompson

Chief of the Associated Press London Staff

New York, Dec. 20—Suppose we take a market basket and go looking for food in my own little suburban shopping district of London today.

We take a double-deck bus almost at my door and pay three ha'pence (3 cents) for the ride that in prewar days was a penny one.

Some of the houses are not so tidy as they once were, due to broken glass, but no heap of wreckage stares at us on this particular ride.

The Five-And-Ten

We hop off at the English equivalent of the American "five-and-ten" store, a "thruppence and sixpence" store.

There is always something one needs in such a place. This crowded store has its food counters, too. They are full of canned soups, fruits, gelatins, fish, such as sardines and kipper snacks; malted milk, packaged cheese, jellies, self-rising flour, dried fruits and the like.

"Edible Offals"

But we are after sturdier stuff and go out again to the meat markets. It is early in the day and we find in the windows, below the roasting and stewing cuts of strictly rationed beef, mutton and veal hanging on their hooks, trays of unrationed "edible offals."

There are hearts, kidneys, liver, tripe and the like, and sausages which are half meat and half bread crumbs, the meat content of sausages being prescribed by law. One has to snap these things up quickly if one wants them, because the day's supply does not last many hours. But you may shop for offals where you please, whereas you must go for bacon, butter, sugar, cooking fats and fresh meat to the store at which you are registered.

Then The Bakery

Next comes the bakery. There is certainly no sign of want here. There are piles of bread—white, rye, whole wheat, raisin, malt (which is dark, sweet and excellent with tea) and even twisted seed loaves. There are innumerable rolls and buns. What is most alluring is the display of tea cookies, cakes and scones.

You would think war had had no real effect upon these things if you were making a quick tour, but we who live in London in peace as well as war can point out differences.

Bakery confections which took many eggs have diminished in number. The splendid sugar icings have disappeared from both cakes and buns.

Vegetables And Fruits

We choose a loaf of milk bread, a jelly roll, a squarish coffee loaf and a much decorated gateau. We spend the equivalent of 50 cents and are on our way to the vegetable and fruit market. It is just around the corner.

Here are white stalks of celery, bundles of fat leeks, heaps of watercress, the first winter crop of radishes. Here are baskets of mushrooms and bins of potatoes. Cabbages and cauliflower and big piles of brussels sprouts are prominent, and one may choose, if one will, fat "swedes," which belong to the turnip family but are much bigger.

On the fruit side are cooking apples, eating apples, desert plums and big brownish pears. It is late now for the more yellow, softer pears. There are still Jaffa oranges from Palestine. But lemons are few and expensive and bananas are disappearing.

Next stop is at the fishmonger's. Here we find dover and lemon sole, plaice, bream, hake, herring and cod. The Scotch salmon is too expensive to interest one who used to live near the Columbia river. Fat herring, lightly kippered, used to be always available, but it sometimes runs out these days. One can substitute smoked haddock, however.

Winkles And Shrimp

The villagers get scoopfuls of winkles and quarts of tiny shrimp for a treat. We find them too much trouble to dig out or shell. And Whitstable oysters at several shillings a dozen have little appeal to one who dreams of Chincoteagues and the fat big New Orleans variety.

But we waste time. There'll be guests tomorrow. We have to obtain some unrationed main meat dish, so we move along to the poulterer's and stand thoughtfully eyeing his resplendent pheasants, softly colored wood doves, grouse, ducks, geese and chickens. Near by are hanging large rabbits.

Thick Venison Steaks

The choice is hard to make, for fish, fowl and rabbit come on the menu with great frequency these days. We decide to have none of them, but make a special trip to another market district where we can get thick venison steaks to broil. They are not rationed, except by their price, and, this being a special occasion, that will not stop us.

Our regular grocer, with whom we are registered for the rational commodities, doles out the bacon, sugar and butter. We pick up some Cheddar, Cheshire and Chilvern cheese, since one can no longer get the Continental varieties. We also wheedle three precious eggs out of our grocer, who does what he can for his registered customers. Then we return to the bus stop for our 3 ha'pence ride back home.

Leaving London

By Milo M. Thompson,

Chief of the Associated Press London Bureau

(Editor's Note—Here is Chapter 6 in Milo M. Thompson's story of life today in bombarded England. Monday: "Shelters Can Be De Luxe." There will be other releases next week.)

New York, Dec. 21—There has been a substantial evacuation of London since Blitzkrieg began—completely without stampede.

At no time has there been any line of hysterical refugees stringing along the highways, their household goods piled in carts, their mattresses atop the family car. At no time has London ceased to do its business at the old stand.

Trains, busses and taxicabs have all the business they can handle as people go back and forth to work and shop and guard their property.

Countryside Groans

But the fact remains that a large percentage of London's population has been dumped upon the English countryside outside the London area—and the countryside finds it can scarcely contain it.

All you have to do to prove the point is try to rent a flat, a house or even a room anywhere in the interior of the island. Hotels will tell you they are booked full. Real estate agents will laugh in your face. You can go from door to door without no better luck.

To be sure, the situation in the country is not wholly due to the exodus from London.

Army Complication

The army has complicated the situation by commandeering all manner of small hotels and other large buildings for winter billeting purposes. A couple of million men under arms, many of them imported from the far reaches of the empire and from the lands of occupied Allies, can affect considerably such a situation, of course.

Londoners, nevertheless, are the biggest factor in the jam.

First there were hundreds of thousands of evacuated children—those children I used to see lined up on railway platforms wearing big tags. Then there were their mothers, and the mothers to be, and the lame, aged and blind, all removed and billeted in more or less orderly fashion and on a more or less voluntary basis by the Government itself.

Exodus Of Schools

Then there was the exodus of schools. Most of the private schools in the London area found quarters far away from the bombed areas. They took over unoccupied mansions or big resort hotels. Some of them took clusters of ordinary houses.

Behind them came a large number of purely clerical departments of London firms. They were custodians of duplicate records in some cases, providing reserve offices in the event headquarters "in town" should be bombed out. Certain small insurance and accounting outfits moved bodily to the small villages for the duration. Government departments themselves set up many provincial offices. This movement began before bombardment was an actuality.

Employe Rest Houses

The trek gained great impetus, however, in the early weeks of the rain of bombs. It had become immediately apparent to most of the business that there would be a disastrous let-down in employe efficiency and grave danger to employe health unless arrangements could be made for getting employes very frequently outside the zone of noise and nervousness for revitalizing sleep. The big companies began to establish employe rest houses.

I suspect, however, it was a drain of quite another character which has happened to people in my own little base the suspicion upon what has lost London for the present a very large percentage of its citizenry. I circle of freinds.

An army colonel, for example, came to me early in the Blitz to discuss the possibility of sending his wife and small son to America.

Said he: "I do not know what we may be in for, but I am in the army and I have two sons in the services. We are willing to give our lives for England. It seems logical and in no way unpatriotic to safeguard the youngest boy and keep our stock alive, and I believe his mother should go with him." That argument also has been potent in moving wives and young children to the safer parts of England.

30.24 — 6677

Neighbor Situation

A next-door neighbor of mine was a kind motherly woman who lived alone. Her husband died of natural illness in September 1939. Some months later her only companion, her daughter, was married and had to follow her husband to service posts. Even her aged pet dog died. There was no reason why she should remain in a bombarded area, so she went to live with friends in the country.

My daughter's school chum lived down the street with her widowed mother. The mother is an English woman who married a Canadian soldier in the previous war, followed him to Canada but returned home after his death some years ago to live on an income at home with her two daughters. One married. She held on at home with the other until the Blitz was weeks old and a bomb had fallen in her front yard. Finally she asked herself why she was remaining in London to risk death or to become a possible liability. So she went to the other side of the island.

I know two bankers whose wives are living together in a west country hotel. The husbands keep up the family apartments "in town." I know several British journalists who have sent their wives out of the area similarly (though the few remaining wives of American journalists insist upon remaining in London with their husbands).

One of my friends has three daughters in a province school, so his wife has taken a room in the same town to be near them.

London is no longer just a big sprawling city by the Thames. London is all over England. It is probably safe to say that if all of us who live in the area were wiped out in some furious and inescapable holocaust there would still be enough of London outside of London to move in immediately and make the "business as usual" signs continue to mean what they say.

Savoy Raid Shelter in London Can Be a Paradise for Sleeper

You Slumber Amid Silken Hangings on Beds of Luxury, but if You're a Snorer, You Literally May Get Your Neck Wrung.

This is the seventh article of a series on wartime London written by Milo M. Thompson, chief of the Associated Press bureau there.

By MILO M. THOMPSON.

One wearies of dreary stories of the shelters of bombarded London and it is time to give the other side of the picture.

Newspaper men who write of the squalor of Tilbury Arches do not sleep there, or in the other places where people huddle by thousands under begrimed blankets, doing with few sanitary conveniences. Reporters dash in and out of such places.

Perhaps the largest concentration of these fellows has been at the Savoy, famous to American tourists for its bar and floor shows patronized in pre-blitz days by the elite in white tie and tails.

One can still enjoy dining and dancing there, two floors below the main dining room in the specially bombproofed River Room, the windows of which, on the embankment side, are screened by thick fragment-proof brick walls. But I think the Savoy shelters, still further down, are one of the prime sights of blitzkrieg London.

Just Follow the Arrows.

If you are stopping at the Savoy and find the night too filled with gunfire, explosion quake and scream of bombs, you throw on your bathrobe and follow "To the Shelter" arrows down carpeted stairs.

Down you go to a haven under nine floors of steel and concrete and come noiselessly before a serious clerk who sends you to your allotted bed in care of a uniformed servitor.

You find there are four departments reached down softly-lighted corridors made by long, thick, silken hangings.

Turn to the right as you leave the check-in clerk and you go to the snorers' section.

Turn to the left and you pass in turn the departments for women, for men and for married couples. Each is a broad expanse of floor space filled with beds placed side by side in neatly regimented rows. These are the beds of luxury you read about in the mattress advertisements—soft and immaculate and complete with eiderdowns.

Air Is Freshly Conditioned.

The silken walls all about you and the freshly conditioned air make you forget this is communal sleeping. The dim lights help you also to forget the lacework of steel scaffolding designed to protect you from debris. The silence makes you forget war is on.

Take it from me, if you snore, you will be well advised to take the turning to the right. If you go to the quiet sectors, your night will be a hideous thing, despite everything.

The moment sleep comes and you emit the first sounds of a snorer's broadcast, you will find yourself suddenly awake, feel soft hands on your temples and catch, out of the corner of your eye, a disappearing shadow. It is the shadow of a vigilant nurse who reaches you quickly and silently, deftly grasps your head and expertly turns it.

That can go on all night.

In the snoring department on the other hand, you will listen to the night-long symphony by your neighbors until it, or your weariness, puts you to sleep.

Protective Isolation Assured.

The ever-present nurses and physicians add to the feeling of security silence brings. You know that the cougher and sneezer, who might spray you with germs in a shelter of another type, will get courteous but quick treatment or, if that fails, protective isolation.

There is no lack of modern conveniences in such de luxe shelters and you can be sure there will be watchful wardens at the door and a fire watch on the roof all through the night. I am sure the dreams in such places are usually of a land where there is always peace.

It is easy there to forget the hundreds of thousands cramped in their chill Anderson shelters; the millions who, like me, sleep rudely in ordinary basements, and the great army of those who are glad to have concrete subway platforms or the cobblestones under the arches below them if only they are safe from the death and dismemberment which comes from above.

London Stores Full And Raids Ignored

ART. VIII

(Editor's Note—A striking picture of the way in which Londoners "carry on" under Hitler's bombardment from the sky is given in the following story by Milo M. Thompson. His next will be "Bombed Out," in which he relates what happens when a home is hit.)

By Milo Thompson

Chief of the Associated Press London Bureau

New York, Dec. 21—The advertisement headline: "Salvage Sale—You Know Why" in a London newspaper means that somebody's store has had a bomb visitation but the censors are not yet permitted that particular bombing to be advertised publicly.

If you find it strange that people should be flocking toward the scene of a bombing carrying shopping bags, not running away from it carrying mattresses and the family valuables, there are ten thousand things which would surprise you in London.

Crowds Of Shoppers

Right now there are Christmas shopping crowds in Oxford street, Regent Quadrant, Knightsbridge and Kensington High street. And the show windows have the same "Santa's coming" look that you will find on any American main drag from New York's Fifth avenue to San Francisco's Post street.

To be sure, there's this difference: Sometimes you have to move up to a little three-by-five window to get the benefit of the full display, for much of the large plate glass is gone.

On the other hand, plenty of it is left, and attention is still paid to trick moving displays and to lighting effects which do their stuff right up to blackout time.

You might think to find inside the stores mostly the warming appliances and shelter conveniences which have been so greatly in demand during Blitzkrieg months.

If so, you will be amazed to see that delicately wrought Sheffield silver still glistens under the electric lights, that jewelry displays are as alluring and colorful as ever, and that pottery, china and glassware in new shapes and colors spread over whole departments.

There is no outward appearance of scarcity in the piece-goods and ready-to-wear departments. It is only when you seek a particular pattern or run into clothing materials cheapened by the rationing of wool and silk at the factories, that you feel the effect of war.

Perhaps it should be noted here that the production of cheapened fabrics does not extend to the export trade. The home folks are accepting less wool to the yard so that quality can be kept up for sale abroad to win the dollars and other foreign currencies which in turn will help win the war.

One thing which interests me greatly is the way the sports goods departments keep going. Whether you want a set of golf clubs, a billiard table, a soccer football, shiny new cricket wickets, a tournament croquet set of selected woods, an archery target or a canvas canoe for the Thames, it is all spread out before you.

And I have seen no very noticeable change in the art-material departments. You can buy a sketching chair complete with easel as readily as you can buy an extra blanket to use in your shelter.

All of England is not in the bomb-torn areas and gardens are as much loved as ever, even in London. The rose which withstands months of bombing is valued more than ever.

Susie Still Sews Socks

The departments devoted to knitting wools are larger than usual and just as colorful, though prices are higher. Yarn supplies are distributed among the stores only after enough is laid aside for the service departments.

Knitting goes on everywhere and sister Susie still sews socks for soldiers, notwithstanding she may live in the front-line trenches of this war while the soldiers are in peaceful rural areas. She also knits shelterwear for herself, in between the socks, scarves and balaclava helmets.

I suppose it seems shocking to some that a London woman should be in a pet shop seeking a showy toy for her Pekingese while several blocks away, in a rubbish pile that yesterday was a sturdy building, grim A. R. P. workers and army engineers seek bodies of the dead.

Determined To Carry On

But it is all part of the stubborn determination to carry on as usual and let Hitlerian terrorism upset no more of the usual procedures than is necessary. No good would be served by the woman with the Peke getting in the way of the methodical workers, wringing her hands and becoming a nervous wreck. And she'll probably be doing her stint in a canteen, driving an official car or reporting to her first-aid post or ambulance station by night.

Shopping in London these days goes on from store opening to store closing, and store hours have been adjusted so that both shoppers and salespeople have time to get to their shelters before the nightly bombing is too far advanced.

This was not so at the beginning of the Blitz. It was then the rule to usher out those customers who wanted out and herd the rest, with the employes, to store shelters, leaving only that part of the staff assigned to A. R. P. and fire-watch duties.

That was no go. It annoyed the patrons. It stifled business. It was letting Hitler disrupt everything, just as the English supposed he intended to. So most of the big stores began to keep doors open and to make use of store-wide signals or loud-speakers which advised all when there was really imminent danger. It developed that this danger was very rare in the daytime.

Even when the danger comes today, some stores merely evacuate the vulnerable areas. Shopping may continue elsewhere. You are unmolested if you are in the bargain basements. You are usually able to get your shopping done on the main or ground floors, sirens or no sirens.

How It Feels To Be Bombed Out

Man-made Tornado Has as Many Freakish Aspects as One of Nature's Own.

This article is the ninth of a series on the siege of London written by Milo M. Thompson, chief of the Associated Press bureau there.

By MILO M. THOMPSON.

I have been "bombed out." So have many of my friends. Some men on the London staff of the Associated Press have actually been bombed out as many as three times. It is by no means the worst thing which can happen to you in total warfare waged upon a metropolis.

Four things happen to buildings from bomb explosions: they may be merely damaged, their occupants may be bombed out, the premises may be demolished or they may be leveled.

"There's nothing over three feet high," they say when they try to describe to you a leveled buildings. It is the product of a direct hit by a high explosive bomb of the highest caliber. I have seen a whole block in that condition, more than once.

The demolished building is one so messed up that it has to be torn down and rebuilt. But the bombed out premises can frequently be made tenantable again. They are victims of concussion, of a man-made tornado as freakish as nature's.

Usually Happens at Night.

For every demolished building there are probably twenty-five from which the tenants have been driven, either permanently or temporarily. One experience, therefore, gives a fairly accurate picture of what has happened to tens of thousands among the ten million people in the London area.

It usually happens at night, when the bombardment is at its worst, and probably in the second stage of the night's attack, when the heavy stuff succeeds the incendiary bombs and showers of parachute flares used to develop targets.

You have long since retired from the blacked-out living rooms to the basement shelter, leaving doors unlocked in case the police or ARP men need to make hurried entrance and windows partly open to save the glass against some less-distant explosion.

The gurgling whistle of a bomb brings you up tensely, all nerves. The sound swells into a scream which is coming right at you.

You say inwardly, "Perhaps this is it," referring to that direct hit against which no ordinary shelter is proof, the thousand-to-one chance that this may be the end.

Comes a blinding flash and the earth heaves. You have a feeling that all your little world has suddenly been shaken into a pile.

Debris seems to be falling all about you. The air is sharply cold and dusty, almost unbearable. A gale seems to be whistling through the once cozy house.

Things continue to fall. Long after the crash of sound has been succeeded by a deep silence, that silence is broken occasionally by falling glass.

You have a desire to fly, but you keep your place by sheer force of will, knowing it is the safest place you've got, hoping that a collapse is not going to bury you next minute.

The next minutes pass like hours.

At last, you reach for the light switch and snap it, but nothing happens. As you fumble for the matches and candle on your bedside table, knocking off the first-aid kit and the candy intended to feed you if you have to be dug out, pieces of plaster slip from the bed to the floor.

Draperies Stir Eerily.

At last you make a light, find slippers and steal through a carpet of glass and plaster to view the scene.

Tattered draperies stir eerily at empty windows.

Doors have been crookedly wrenched off their hinges.

Here is a whole window frame pushed into the kitchen.

Yonder is a mullioned window looking like the billowing sail of a Spanish galleon.

The terrific wrench to the house has dislodged soot from all the chimneys which has swept three inches deep over some of the rugs and mingled with the glass and plaster dust upon all the furniture.

The locks of glass connecting doors have burst. An interior partition is out of plumb. There's a splash of water from a damaged pipe.

It is a mess which grows increasingly uncomfortable as the wintry winds blow through the house.

You do not know until later how the blast has scrambled the slates of the roof and ripped off many of them, leaving the rafters bare. Fortunately it is not raining.

When we were bombed out at our house we lost seventy panes of glass, including the heavy plate glass of the first floor rooms. Many of the window frames were started from their places. Most of the doors were damaged. Thick solid shutters had been splintered.

Rocks from the fernery out of doors had been thrown into rooms. The chrysanthemums in the conservatory were jumbled with the glass from its sides and roof. The food in the larder was so full of powdered glass that it had to be thrown away.

But you are grateful—grateful that you are just "bombed out" and not demolished—grateful at the many possessions which appear unhurt—grateful that you are at least quite alive and unhurt and able to begin again.

You can scarcely wait for daylight to begin.

Rural England Still Observes Formalities, Despite War

Even to Soup and Fish at Dinner Parties, Correspondent Discovers

(Tenth of a Series.)

By MILO M. THOMPSON,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—There was a time when one would no more take a week's holiday in England without packing along the "soup and fish" clothes and party frocks than wear a bathing suit in Westminster Abbey.

But when my wife, Patience, and I, after weeks of wearing duty in London's front line bombproofs and pockmarked streets, decided to seek a few days of recuperative respite in some distance shire, Patience packed up sturdy slacks and sweaters and I took my oldest, most comfortable tweeds.

We also took along our rations for the current week as a gesture of helpfulness: A joint of mutton, a small package of bacon, a little sack of sugar, 6 ounces of butter, even a full dozen of eggs to show our wholesouled pleasure at the invitation we had received.

Ours was the war complex and the London habit.

London, except in the night club zone, which caters to the city-locked hotel crowd, has put aside most evening entertainments which involve dress.

Entertainment Limited.

Instead of entertaining at dinner, when shells will be bursting and bombs falling, one entertains at luncheon.

Late at night one is in one's own shelter or at one's post. Night entertaining extends only to such few people as you can put up in your own family shelter—and that, of course, involves no dressing.

And in London, when you do accept the hospitality of a friend, you take along your rations as a matter of course. Your host and hostess may have all the money and influence of an Indian rajah, but they'll still have only the ounces of rationed commodities allotted to two, three or four persons, whatever the number in their family.

But in rural shires you find England again—the England which always dresses for dinner, makes something like a religious rite of tea and shines resplendently in gala attire when the glasses clink round the evening fire.

"Look!" exclaimed our hostess with a Zasu Pitts gesture of her hands as she viewed our eatables. "They've brought a dozen eggs! And there, beyond the garden hedge, are all those laying hens!"

"You'll never know," said another guest from London, "how much those dozen eggs mean."

She, too, had been up against the business of arguing with provisioner, dairyman and even fishmongers for two or three eggs at a time.

Dressed for Dinner.

It was while we were chatting in the sitting room before dinner that I began to suspect all was not well with our equipment. I noticed people dropping out of the party to begin to dress. When we, too, retired I suggested to Patience, who was in wool skirt and sweater, that, perhaps, she'd better put on the one dress-up dress she had packed.

"Surely that won't be necessary," she said. "You don't suppose they'd really dress, do you?"

"I'm afraid they will," said I, reaching for the darker of my suits and the only white shirt.

And they did.

A party had been planned for that night. Parties and teas and ex[illegible] been planned for every day, we found.

The wardrobes of those women in the hills, worn on these occasions, were positively amazing. And how Patience regretted the absence of those party costumes she had had no opportunity to wear, those dresses so carefully packed away in trunks put out of reach of bombs in the safest part of our basement!

The slacks were never worn. We saw no women in trousers in those parts. We had a feeling that, somehow, they frowned upon it.

The evening festivities were amazing to us. Glasses were filled and music played until long past midnight. There was great singing, too, for we were on the borders of Wales, among a singing people. But I am afraid we sat rather drowsily and were none too vivacious in the later hours, long past the time when, wearied of the racket of war, we would have been abed in our London shelter.

We took to dropping out of the daytime activities and taking long walks in the gorgeous autumn forest, filling ourselves with blackberries cold from the season's first frost which offered themselves all along the hedges bordering the lanes. We drank in the fresh rural air with never a taint of the smoke and dust of London. And we stopped gayly at wayside inns.

They knew about war, these inns, for war had stopped the usual stream of forest hikers and cyclists. One landlady told us she hadn't seen a hiker in two months. She was feeding, instead, refugees from London.

Otherwise it was all the old England, the pre-war England, the England of the song: "There'll Always Be an England."

If one did not meet truckloads of soldiers on the highroads and sometimes, in the dark, hear the distant rhythmic beat of German plane motors and the sound of far-off anti-aircraft fire, like the whispering memory of a dream of another existence, one could quite forget a war was on.

Don't Send Food Over to England

You Might Embarrass Recipient—Menus Show Cut But There's Enough To Eat

(Editor's Note: If you dropped in an English restaurant today you would find that although the menu has been sharply reduced there's still plenty of food, despite Hitler's "total" warfare. Monday's subject: "It's a gamble—getting to work.")

New York, Dec. 28—(AP)—Do not send food packages to England.

You will annoy the Ministry of Shipping and probably embarrass the recipient. He may be questioned on the theory he is trying to circumvent the rationing laws and the chances are he'll have to pay more to get your package out of customs and inspection than he'd have to pay for twice its equivalent in English foods.

Restaurant menus are not what they used to be, but there is one which will serve to illustrate the present situation. It comes from a place catering to the newspaper men of the Fleet Street area. Prices have been converted to the United States equivalent.

This is a typical menu and, if one studied it, eloquent of the food situation. While it indicates no serious want, it also shows what rationing and bombs have done to the food situation.

In prewar days there were half a dozen soups on this menu, several of them ready to serve. Today only the pea soup is freshly made. The consome is canned and you wait 10 minutes for its heating. Uncertainty of gas pressure and a limited number of emergency oil burners lead to making as few commitments as possible in this section.

The abbreviated entree list of these days is notable for its avoidance of scarce and rationed foods and its use of left-overs. The Vienna steak is a pat of ground meat from yesterday's roast. It is cooked like a hamburger steak but is more like a croquette in the eating.

The toad-in-the-hole is a braised lamb chop without bone pressed into a mound of mashed potatoes and splashed with gravy Sometimes this has an underlayer of pastry.

Sausages are not rationed. They are of limited meat content, but savory and fat and you get two broiled ones with your potatoes. Egg dishes have disappeared from the entree list.

Time was when you had several roasts to choose. Roast lamb with mint sauce, roast mutton with jelly and roast beef with Yorkshire pudding were always present. Now you have no choice, but nearly always you find one roast offered.

The omission of grilled meats shows how wary the restaurant is of pledging its kitchen burners. Frequently, however, a mixed grill or rump steak is on the list.

The vegetable assortment has shrunk from six or eight to two. One is always potatoes and the other some kind of greens like cabbage, brussels sprouts or spinach.

The list of hot desserts has been cut in half, but one can choose one of the standard cold dishes, like wine gelatine or fruit trifle (sponge cake plus a cornstarch custard plus gelatine with bits of fruit) but there will be no cream to pour over it now.

The English often choose a savory rather than a sweet for the end of a meal and the present list of savories is the standard one. It will probably endure while cheese, canned herring roe and canned sardines are available.

And it is always possible to call for cheese and biscuits (providing you'll take Cheddar or Cheshire cheese) or to have an apple or pear. The once-available French, Dutch, Swiss and Italian cheeses are gone. So are the tropical fruits.

The offering of only one hot beverage is another indication of the uncertain gas situation. Sometimes we have to take coffee with milk in it whether we want it black or not because that is the way it has been prepared. Usually a glass of milk is available, however.

With our lunch we take a roll or wedge of bread from the basket on the table and, perhaps, ask for butter, getting a thin pat the size of a quarter. It may be butter or it may be margarine.

There is no sugar on the table. One tiny cube three-eighths of an inch square comes with the coffee. If you do not use sugar, you present your cube to the man who does.

The cost of the average "business man's lunch" on this basis (you can figure it yourself) will be about 80 cents. The quality is about that of a 50 cent in America at a place halfway between the lunch counter cafe and middle class table service place.

You can eat cheaper at counters. A quarter will buy a cup of soup, a glass of milk and a sandwich. You can also spend $2 at a deluxe place and eat much more, but you'll still be held to one meat or fish dish, fare little better on butter and sugar and still miss things like cream.

London Commuting Game For Gamblers

ART. XII

(Editor's Note—This chapter brings to a conclusion the story of life in England under current wartime conditions, writen by Milo M. Thompson, who returned to the United States recently on his first visit since 1938.)

By Milo M. Thompson
Chief of the Associated Press London Bureau

New York, Dec. 30—If you are a good rummy player, putting your faith in combinations of cards which give you several chances, not merely one, of success, you will enjoy the gamble and adventure of going to work with me in London.

I am a commuter and I offer a typical experience because it will show what most Londoners face.

I have slept through the storm of the night, lulled by the grind-grind-grind of German planes overhead and wakened only half a dozen times by spasms of gunfire close enough to make the house tremble. A near-by bomb or two has made my dreams nightmarish and I am not quite rested when I leave the house an hour earlier than in peacetime days.

Post-Blitz System

We shall not choose the pre-blitz route under the chestnut trees and beside the typical English gardens to my suburban railroad station. If the night bombs have interfered with that line, which is part of the underground system, we shall have had the walk for nothing and lost time. That is like putting all our faith in the turning up of one card only.

Instead, we wait at our own corner for a bus bound in the direction of the city, hoping we shall not have yesterday's experience. Yesterday, because the railroad was tied up, all the busses in that direction were too full to stop and it was necessary, after four or five misses, to go in the opposite direction to the nearest town and take a roundabout southern railroad train to Waterloo station, then a bus to the office.

That alternate route offers two chances of success, but if we catch a bus in the right direction today we shall have four.

Trains Not Running

We are successful this time, and off on the gamble. Half a mile down the road our route parallels another part of the underground system and we watch the railroad closely. If there are signs of trains moving, we shall hop off presently near a station and take one.

But that doesn't happen today and we continue on to Hammersmith, a junction which offers three chances. There is the district line, which runs shallowly underground following the general line of the Thames river. There is the Piccadilly line which, after several surface stops, goes deep underground far out of reach of the bombs. There is also a terminal on the Metropolitan line which, however, is a rather out-of-the-way route for me and to be avoided if anything better offers.

We pile off the bus and dash into the station to have a look at the blackboard. Each station has one now to chalk up the temporary breaks in the service on the immediate line and connecting lines. Only eight or ten entries usually cover the early morning situation, but this time the signals are against us. Somewhere near by some debris of the night has not yet been cleared away. Both district and Piccadilly lines are tied up. They may be running in an hour or two, but we cannot wait.

Emergency Bus Ride

The near-by Metropolitan line is not overly encouraging, and we choose to hike five blocks across town to try the Central line, another deep underground, at Shepherd's Bush.

There's some technical difficulty here, something affecting the electrical current. So, instead, we are herded on an emergency bus for Marble Arch, beyond which point the subway is running, so the bus loader says.

It may be just as well we didn't catch the Piccadilly line back at Hammersmith today. That ride means a short bus ride at the office end and it was just the other day that slow movement in the tunnel made me miss a bus I sometimes take. A bomb caught it messily a few minutes later.

Besides, there happens to be an alarm on. Though we have lost count of sirens, can tell it by the helmeted ARP men at their doorway station and by the policemen wearing their gasmasks on their chests.

Takes Another Bus

The day is sunny and bracing. I am rather glad to be on the bus. There are no planes in sight, nor any sound of them. If they are in the area they must be at a distant end of it. I decide, when I reach Marble Arch, to take another surface bus to the office to enjoy the morning and avoid three blocks of walking.

I wait beside a shoe store, which still has plenty of plate-glass windows, for the right bus. It seems slow coming Then, suddenly, out of the upper blue, comes a swelling scream, a whoosh, a jarring explosion. A second one follows. The sound of planes overhead reaches me. Though the bombs have fallen two blocks away something takes the appeal out of the nipping air and sunshine and I walk briskly up the street and duck into the dismal bowels of the earth, content to ride the tunnel a hundred feet down and later grab a steel-domed taxi for that three blocks to the office. And so arrive, on time in spite of it all.

Knocks Wood

This is just a true picture of a Londoner going to work. My case is different from that of many of my friends only because I have more choices to make, more cards to play. During the blitz so far I have used all the six available routes and various combinations of them.

I congratulate myself that the trip which normally takes twenty-five minutes has never yet taken more than ninety.

I also knock wood at this point.

London 'City' Ravaged, Blow Worst Since 1666 Fire

Heart Of London In Blackened Ruins

DEC 31 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 30—The smashed, blackened ruins of many buildings littered London's ancient "City," the heart of the capital, today after Nazi bombs had rained down through the night in the fiercest fire raid of the war.

Scarcely a street in the busy business district stretching eastward from the Strand was unmarked by fire or undamaged by explosives.

Scores of landmarks were damaged or destroyed. Among them were the Guildhall and the church of St. Lawrence Jewry in the Guildhall yard, which Sir Christopher Wren built and where Dick Whittington worshipped.

At that, Royal Air Force night fighters were credited with saving London from still worse destruction.

Fires Fought With Dynamite

When the German bombers first flew over the city and scattered their incendiaries, ground defenses shot up a heavy anti-aircraft barrage. But their guns ceased firing as the glow of fires began to light the sky, and then fighter planes were heard high in the air swooping in to smash and scatter the German formations.

While firemen and police battled the flames with dynamite and tons of water, the R. A. F. patrolled the sky and gave them a chance to work unmolested by the explosive bombs usually thrown into fire areas.

Broad sections of London were hit, but the raid centered on the "City." The Government described the assault as a "deliberate attempt" to burn out Britain's hub of empire.

Great Fire Of 1666 Recalled

(EDITOR'S NOTE—"The City" is the ancient heart of London, around which the huge urban and suburban districts developed. It is a county corporate, and the other twenty-eight municipal divisions that make up the Administrative County of London are metropolitan boroughs. Situated on two low hills separated by the Walbrook Valley, the City covers only 678 acres, but it contains the great exchanges, money markets and business houses. The lines of ancient Roman walls determine, to some extent, the lie of its streets.

(The Great Fire of 1666 destroyed 13,200 houses in over 400 of the City's streets and courts, as well as 87 parish churches. When the section was rebuilt the great job was done with brick and stone, thus eliminating to a large extent the fire hazard always present in a city largely made of wood.

(That blaze of 1666 was the last really great fire in London. There were big fires in 1794 and 1861, but these were not comparable to the conflagration of 1666.)

Prelude To Invasion Try Suspected

By the time today's dawn lifted the blackout from the night of horror, only charred girders, smoking heaps of rubble, and bleak, blackened walls marked what had been scores of churches, offices, stores and other buildings.

But the British mobilized their fire-fighting reinforcements today and said they were ready for any German effort to devastate all London as a prelude to an invasion attempt.

The defense forces were confident that they could repeat what they called a successful battle against last night's conflagration, even though a sudden intensification of the aerial war was forecast by some observers.

Raids Henceforth Seen "All Out"

Both Britain and Germany, experts said, probably would go "all out" in coming air assaults. Neither side, they pointed out, has begun to use up its aerial resources and both now are producing far more planes than they are losing.

Britons expressed the conviction that the Nazis would never be able to force withdrawal from London by an ordeal of fire.

Fire engines still clanged through the streets this morning as office employes started to work, many to offices that no longer were there.

Shelter Housing 15,000 Imperiled

At the height of the attack, London's greatest shelter, housing about 15,000 persons, was ringed with fire and the building above it was aflame, but the fire fighters quickly got control.

The Associated Press Building was destroyed and St. Paul's Cathedral was endangered again by spreading flames. Commercial buildings were damaged in other parts of London.

Although the all-clear signal sounded shortly before midnight, the raid, which had started just after nightfall, caused more fires than any previous assault on London. Explosive bombs rained down after the incendiaries.

Greatest Threat Since The 1666 Fire

The fires were the greatest threat to the ancient "City"—

financial and commercial heart of London—since it was rebuilt after being laid waste by the Great Fire of 1666.

Rain, which swept over England from the "invasion strait" after London's water pressure began to fail at the height of the fire fighting, helped keep the flames in check.

St. Paul's, imperiled before by delayed-action bombs and fires, was saved when firemen, working through a hail of explosives which killed some of their number, prevented flames from spreading from neighboring buildings.

Death Toll Unestimated

Damage was expected to run into millions of pounds sterling. Casualties in the hard-hit financial center of London were said to be few, but the toll throughout the London area was unestimated.

A communique declared that "damage was done to many famous buildings" and said these included the Guildhall, scene of colorful civic ceremonial functions of the City of London.

Every fireman in London, aided by thousands of volunteers, fought the flames through the hail of explosives before midnight and then on past the red dawn. The communique termed their efforts "heroic."

It also declared:

"No Search For Targets"

"Last night the enemy dropped a large number of incendiary bombs on the City of London in a deliberate attempt to set fire to it. . . . There was nowhere any attempt to single out targets of military importance."

The raid followed a day of only scattered air activity over Britain. From soon after nightfall until just before midnight hardly a minute passed without the crackle of gunfire, the bark of anti-aircraft or the thunder of explosions.

Two whole waves of bombers apparently laden with only incendiaries swept across the capital, dumping single fire bombs and huge Molotoff breadbaskets which spewed 50 to 100 incendiaries over entire districts.

Thousands Watch Despite Peril

Fires broke out in the center of London, in business and commercial districts and in outlying areas. Then, as the fires spread, hundreds more raiders roared over and dumped tons of explosives by the wavering light of flames reflected back, blood-red, from the clouds.

With the first explosive fury of the assault thousands of Londoners dashed for subway and basement refuges, and thousands more took shelter in their back-yard Anderson "doghouses"—the little steel shelters furnished by the Government.

But despite the intensity of the attack thousands remained where they could look on, and many joined in the risky work of pumping water onto the flames or smoldering fires with sand.

Shelter Reported Hit

Casualties also were feared high at a trench shelter reported hit squarely by a bomb after a large number of persons had taken refuge there.

It was believed that bad weather might have been a factor in the failure of the raiders to continue the attack after midnight.

Authoritative sources said the weather over the continent became so bad late last night that raids by the R. A. F. were held to a small scale. British bombing squadrons were said to have ranged over German-occupied territory, but found visibility in most places too poor for accurate bombing.

Air Filled With Smoke

Londoners who went to work before daybreak groped through streets littered with burned timbers and hose lines and running with water. The air was filled with smoke.

Eighty horses were killed by one bomb which struck a brewery.

Four hundred persons were taken safely from a shelter in a church which was struck by a bomb.

St. Paul's New Danger

St. Paul's Cathedral for a time was ringed by fires and firemen used its yard as a base for hoses and fire engines in fighting blazes on Ludgate Hill. Several incendiary bombs hit the cathedral itself, but were extinguished.

The Cheapside district was blackened. Building after building became nothing but a scarred shell.

At one time during the fire, the roof of the Guildhall was a vast bonfire with the Union Jack still flying from its staff. The building, which houses the [illegible]poration of the City of London—t[illegible] city administration—was begun in 1411 and completed in 1430. It was damaged by the Great Fire of 1666 and rebuilt in 1866. Most of the historic art treasures in the building were saved.

St. Bride's Church Lost

Workers at the Press Association tried to save St. Bride's Church, which is in a courtyard near by, but incendiaries gained ground too quickly and the building was burned out. St. Vedast Church, in Foster Lane, suffered a similar fate.

Other churches damaged included St. Stephen's Coleman Street, St. Mary Aldermanbury and St. Andrew by the Wardrobe.

The ancient hall of the Girdlers Company in Basinghall street was badly damaged and the Central Criminal Court was hit.

Part of Londonwall street in the City was closed to the public because a tremendous mass of masonry from wrecked buildings lay across the roadway.

Christmas Goods In Streets

Leftovers from Christmas stocks tumbled out of broken store fronts.

"City" workers, equivalent to Wall Street clerks, had their black coats and striped trousers sprayed with water from loose hose connections as they stepped through the streets to the financial offices this morning.

Crowds of workers who were unable to reach their offices, or whose offices had been bombed, congregated at the corner of Londonwall and Moorgate, which became a sort of clearing house for the stranded.

The words were shouted by grimy rescue and demolition squads to Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who visited for two hours the wreckage of the "City," London's normally busy financial section, where scarcely a street was unmarked by fire or undamaged by high-explosive bombs.

As he left one deep underground shelter, a woman ran forward and asked:

"When will the war be over?"

Churchill replied, amid cheers:

"When we have beaten them."

"We Can Take It"

Churchill, accompanied by his wife, visited what is left of Guildhall and other historic city places damaged by a single enemy aircraft appeared over these islands, dropping bombs at one point in East Anglia and at a place in Kent. Damage and casualties were said to have been light.

Lack Of Watchers Assailed

In contrast to the night's fierce assault the Government announced tonight that during yesterday's daylight hours only a single enemy aircraft appeared over these islands, dropping bombs at one point in East Anglia and at a place in Kent. Damage and casualties were said to have been light.

Nazi Raiders Fail To Return To Attack—Bad Weather Blamed

[By the Associated Press]

London, Tuesday, Dec. 31—London's firemen, the dead in their ranks replaced by new recruits after Sunday night's devastating German raid, stood guard over this fire-blackened capital until dawn today, but not a single Nazi bomber was reported over Britain.

Bad flying weather was advanced as the only reason the German airmen did not return to carry on what the British said was a deliberate indiscriminate attempt to burn London to the ground.

Yesterday Britons defiantly cried: "Give it back to them; we can take what we have had and much more."

Demand For Reprisals

Out of the very heart of the capital blasted by the heaviest fire raid of the war rose the demand for reprisals.

Criticism of a lack of fire watchers on buildings was expressed generally.

The Daily Mail declared that the city's businessmen were "largely responsible for their own loss" and criticized "irresponsible property owners."

The paper called for swift Government action to compel employment of fire watchers on all buildings.

crunches under a man's weight. Where a few hours earlier printers and typewriters clattered, the only sound now is steam hissing from cracked radiators.

Thus stands the blackened ruins of the building which first was damaged on September 24, again on December 27 and reduced to a shell on December 29.

London Radio Station May Have Been Hit

Berne, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Commercial radio stations in neutral countries, including Switzerland and Yugoslavia, which normally work with the London station, reported today that London had failed to reply throughout the day. It was believed that German bombs may have hit it.

RCA Communications, Inc., reported its communications with London, interrupted during last night's heavy raid, still were silent today and said messages to Great Britain were being accepted with the understanding that there would be an indefinite delay.

Western Union said its services, disrupted for several hours last night, again were halted from 10:49 A. M. until 11:21 A. M. today. Commercial Cables (Postal) reported it still was in contact with Britain. The trans-Atlantic telephone was not affected.

Norse Ship Missing.

Shipping circles reported here today that the 6,732-ton Norwegian freighter Talleyrand was missing in the Pacific and believed to be the victim of a German raider.

The thirteen-year-old vessel was last reported in July. Advices from Shanghai say that more than twenty Norwegian ships have fallen victim to raiders.

Shipping officials also reported that the 5,811-ton Norwegian motorship freighter Touraine had been sunk in the Atlantic by a submarine.

The Touraine traded between New York, Norfolk, Los Angeles and Japan before the war.

Report Raider Foiled.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—A powerful enemy surface raider—possibly a German pocket battleship—was driven away from a North Atlantic convoy Christmas morning by the British cruiser Berwick, which hit the raider squarely once and also sank a German vessel believed to have been the raider's supply ship, according to the Admiralty.

The Admiralty said the 10,000-ton Berwick, recently transferred from the Mediterranean service, suffered slight damage and five casualties in the fight and, although the raider escaped, the 8,204-ton steamship Baden was sunk after being set afire by her crew.

Nazis Attack 3 Freighters.

Berlin, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—German bombers were reported today to have sunk a freighter 125 miles northwest of Londonderry, set another afire east of Harwich, and damaged a British minelayer.

The German High Command said both freighters, one of them estimated at 10,000 tons, were in convoys.

Reporters Flash Story of London Fire Raid As Associated Press Building Is Burned Out

By WILLIAM W. WHITE.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—We were doing a story on planes over Eire when last night's alert sounded and within a few minutes the first three bombs thudded on the roof above us.

"Incendiaries!" yelled a member of the staff of the Associated Press of Great Britain who was standing behind my chair.

Our men donned tin hats and rushed to the roof to fight the fire. Canadian Press men, whose offices were on the third floor, joined them.

Others grabbed files and books and headed for the basement shelter. From the shelter I telephoned two staff members, Alfred E. Wall and William J. Humphreys, at their hotel to tell them that the building was ablaze and that we'd probably have to get out.

They, in turn, advised Hugh Wagnon, acting chief of bureau, and staff members Robert Bunnelle, Tom Yarbrough and Drew Middleton. All headed for the office.

We put in three calls to the Fire Department, but they were too busy to help us, for other bigger fires were raging in the neighborhood.

"The building can't be saved," somebody yelled and we ran for it. Just as we dashed from the building, the lights in the shelter winked out.

Rush to Daily Mail.

We went first to the Daily Mail Building a block away and then a block and a half more through crashing bombs to the building occupied by the British Press Association and Reuters, a British news agency.

Soon we were joined by other staff members, who brought along photo equipment, a typewriter and some clothes.

Wagnon, Yarbrough and Edwin Stout, another staff member, arrived and helped save more equipment as soon as firemen permitted entry into the charred building. Wall and Humphreys stayed at their hotel to act as a central switchboard.

We soon set up temporary offices in the basement of the Press Association building and tried to tell our New York office that our building was burned out, but that we all were safe. The censor refused to let this information through immediately.

We managed, however, to keep a running story of the raid moving, though it was necessary to telephone our account directly to Western Union.

News Room Is Flooded.

At last the all-clear sounded and we went back to find the roof and top four floors of the five-story A. P. Building had been burned out. Water was inches deep in the news room and basement shelter.

With fires all around in newspaper row, flames broke out again in the A. P. Building soon after midnight and once more at 6:30 A. M., but soon were checked.

At daybreak we picked our way through choking smoke in the A. P. Building to survey the damage. Water cascaded down staircases and dripped on soggy newspaper files.

We learned then that our troubles were only beginning, for our regular channels of communication failed and Humphreys had to walk a mile to the Ministry of Information to telephone New York of our predicament.

Parts of historic Fleet street blazed heavily, but the news kept flowing.

True, there was some delay in cable transmission, since London offices of the cable companies are in the affected area, but the delay was not great and today cables were nearly normal.

Even as incendiary and high explosive bombs continued to fall, reporters moved to the comparative safety of the great concrete and steel Press Association Building and once more had the stories of the raid moving.

A. P. Morgue Is Destroyed.

Back in the A. B. Building, "morgue" records of tens of thousands of news stories—of the coronation and deaths of kings, of war and happier events—were destroyed.

The building, standing at Tudor and Dorset streets, had borne earlier scars of the war. Several weeks ago a high explosive bomb plumped into the street a few feet away, blowing out part of the basement and starting a fire which soon was put out.

Then again in last Friday night's heavy Nazi raid windows were broken and the structure generally was shaken, but the damage was minor.

Today daylight floods into what is left of the upper floors. There are great holes in the rear wall.

Concrete stairs still stand. A few steel filing cabinets went through the blaze intact.

There is a mass of tumbled girders, tangled wires. The floor

London Nurses Don Metal Hats, Douse Bombs

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 30.—They started bringing the casualties from London's fierce air raid last night into the hospital's receiving room long before midnight.

The air was heavy with the smell of blood and drugs. Each time the door opened you'd hear the "wham, wham" of the guns outside and the clanging of fire bells.

Women ambulance drivers helped the nurses carry in the stretcher cases. The wounded who could walk lurched in on the arms of friends or policemen.

The voices of doctors detailing injuries to nurses sifted through. "Multiple fracture of . . ." "Wham! Wham! . . . "Ready, nurse? We'll have to work on him right away."

I went out to a little room next to the operating theater. The guns were going hard outside and a block away flames were licking through the blackout curtains.

There were five operating tables, and each was busy.

One surgeon straightened up as they took his patient away. He looked expectantly toward the examination room. But the doors didn't open. Then he lurched into the room from which I was watching.

"A close one," he said. "Been watching? Like a film, what?"

He peeled off his blood-stained gloves and lit a cigarette.

We went out on the fire escape for a breath of air. The glare of fires lit the whole city. As we watched, six separate flashes of white spurted up.

"High explosives—no rest for the weary," said the surgeon, and went back inside.

Suddenly a door opened and a little old man, his mustache quivering, bawled:

"An incendiary on the roof."

No man could be spared. So three of the nurses grabbed buckets of sand, crammed tin hats over their head-dresses, and ran off to throw sand on the fire bombs.

"There's another old man watching on the roof, but often there are so many incendiaries he can't deal with them," said one of the nurses, "Poor man, it does make him so mad when we help him."

British Ship Calls for Help

But Soon Cancels Alarm About Mystery Craft—2 Other Vessels in Trouble.

DEC 31 19

The British freighter Nalgora, according to a message picked up by Mackay Radio today, is being trailed about 200 miles east of the Azores by a mysterious ship.

This report, received at 9:53 A. M. (Eastern standard time), came in after radio pleas for help flashed by two British freighters 600 miles off the coast of Scotland and in the principal submarine zone in the North Atlantic.

Ninety minutes after its call for help, the Nalgora canceled her raider alarm without explanation, indicating that she had met a friendly vessel.

The message from the Nalgora, a vessel of 6,579 tons, said: "Being traced by a mysterious ship in 37:22 north (latitude), 21:50 west (longtitude)." Before the war this ship was in the India-England trade.

Collision Is Indicated.

The S O S calls from the other freighters indicated that one had been in a collision. The other radioed that she was "making water fast."

The 6,402-ton City of Bedford, out of New York for England, radioed at 8:53 A. M. (Eastern Standard time) that she had collided with an unidentified ship, the Associated Press said, and the 5,342-ton Bodnant sent this message picked up by Mackay Radio at 8:53 A. M. (Eastern Standard time):

"Position 58:40 north (latitude, (21:38 west (longitude) making water fast in number 1 hold. Need immediate assistance."

The Bodnant did not give the cause of her trouble. Her position was close to that of the City of Bedford, indicating that they were in the same convoy. The Bodnant, a Liverpool freighter built in 1919, traded between England and Africa before the war. The City of Bedford is listed in Lloyd's Register of Shipping as a 430-foot vessel built in 1924 and owned by Ellerman Lines, Ltd., with the home port of Liverpool.

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)—Shipping circles reported today the 6,732-ton Norwegian freighter Talleyrand was missing in the Pacific and believed to be the victim of a German raider.

The 13-year-old vessel was last reported in July. Advices from Shanghai say more than twenty Norwegian ships have fallen victim to raiders.

Shipping officials also reported that the 5,811-ton Norwegian motorship freighter Touraine had been sunk in the Atlantic by a submarine. The Touraine traded between New York, Norfolk, Los Angeles and Japan before the war.

DNB, the official German news agency, said the Rolls-Royce plant was attacked by dive bombers, which scored several direct hits. Big explosions and fires were observed, the agency declared.

R. A. F. Bombers Attack Naples In Two Waves

London, Dec. 30 (AP)—The British Air Ministry's news service announced tonight that R. A. F. bombers attacked Naples Sunday night.

Quoting the Middle East air command, it said a two-wave attack scored direct hits on customs houses and jetties and set a fire near a customs jetty, but that weather conditions were so poor the pilots could not judge the full effect of the blaze. All planes returned safely, it was announced.

(The Italian high command announced that British planes raiding Naples had killed seven persons and that propaganda leaflets as well as bombs had been dropped.)

British Planes Bomb Naples

Seven Killed in Italian City—Leaflets Dropped Too by R. A. F.

Rome, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—British planes attacking in two waves were reported to have bombed Naples early today, killing seven persons and dropping propaganda leaflets as well as bombs.

The High Command said several persons were injured and civilian dwellings were wrecked by the explosives.

Weather Restricts R. A. F.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Royal Air Force bombers last night attacked an objective in Germany and also ports and airdromes in German-occupied territory despite bad weather, an official announcement said today.

"Bad weather over Europe seriously restricted our bombing operations last night," the announcement stated. "In spite of this, small numbers of our aircraft attacked an objective in Germany and also invasion ports and airdromes in enemy-occupied territory."

An Air Ministry communique added that "two of our aircraft are missing."

BLAZE DAMAGES BERLIN STATION

Explosion Heard Prior to Fire in Rail Terminal.

Berlin, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—A fire which officials said was quenched quickly damaged the luggage room and ticket offices of Berlin's Anhalter station early this morning.

Persons living in the vicinity said they heard an explosion prior to the blaze and pointed to smashed windows opposite the station.

Authorized persons said petroleum supplies for railway lamps in a room above the luggage room had been set afire, presumably by a short circuit.

Raid on Airports Reported

BERLIN, Dec. 30 (AP).—Two English airports were targets of a surprise attack by a single German bomber today, D. N. B. announced tonight. It said the bomber, swept low and set afire two planes on the ground, damaged six others and also damaged hangars and barracks.

German bombers were reported to have sunk a freighter yesterday 125 miles northwest of Londonderry, set another afire east of Harwich, and damaged a British minelayer. The high command said both freighters, one of them estimated at 10,000 tons, were in convoys.

The high command's communique said that "last night large combat plane units again bomb-raided London." Informed Germans added that the Rolls Royce Motor Works at Crewe, thirty-five miles southeast of Liverpool, also was a target of the night attacks. D. N. B. said the Rolls Royce plant was attacked by dive-bombers which scored several direct hits. Big explosions and fires were observed, the agency declared.

Some British planes were said to have struck at Germany and occupied territory during the night. The communique said two of these were shot down by anti-aircraft guns. The British bombs were said to have fallen harmlessly in fields or at sea.

Five Persons Killed In German Train Wreck

Berlin, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Five persons were killed and many injured today when a freight train crashed into the rear of a special train carrying troops on furlough near Rathenow.

The accident was attributed to faulty operation of a block signal.

CHURCHILL VISITS SCENE OF BOMBING

'We Can Take It!' Cheering Londoners Cry

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Cries of "We can take it!" greeted Prime Minister and Mrs. Winston Churchill this afternoon when they viewed the fire-ravaged sections of City of London.

Firemen perched on roofs and grimy demolition squads rested for a moment to cheer.

The Churchills visited what was left of the Guildhall and other historic places damaged by bomb-set fires.

The Ministry of Information said that city workers gave Mr. Churchill this message:

"Good old Winston! Give it to them back and remember we can take what we had and much more."

Dr. Johnson's Home, Memorial House, Burns

LONDON, Dec. 30 (AP).—Memorial House, where Dr. Samuel Johnson compiled his "Dictionary of the English Language" (1748-1755), was burned out in last night's bombing attack, but the first edition of the dictionary was saved.

The house stood in Gough Square, off Fleet Street, and was the lexicographer-essayist-critic's home for ten years.

GREEK FORCES HALT ATTACKS BY NEW TROOPS

Pound Last-stand Defense Lines on Road to Port of Valona.

SNOW RESTRICTS OPERATIONS

Athens Reports Fascist Bombers Raided Corfu, Levkas and Preveza.

Athens, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Greek forces have repulsed especially strong counter-attacks by fresh Italian troops in two sectors of the Albanian battlefront, reports from the front lines said today.

North of Chimara, where the Greeks are aiming at the key coastal base of Valona, they were reported to have "scored further local gains" after beating off "strong, desperate counter-attacks launched with newly arrived forces." In the region north of Klisura the Italians suffered "heavy losses," another dispatch declared.

The Greeks were reported continuing heavy shelling of Italian last-stand defense lines in the Tepeleni - Klisura sector from newly captured heights commanding roads north to the ports of Valona and Durazzo.

A government spokesman said the Greeks "have again attacked fortified positions which the Italians held and defended stubbornly," and finally have hurled the Fascists back.

"We have been able to push our lines forward appreciably," he declared.

Three more small villages were reported occupied. Operations were restricted, however, because of a new spell of intense cold and snow which piled in drifts six feet deep.

Italians were said to be clinging to some heights in the vicinity of Tepeleni, road junction town on the way north to Valona, but the Greeks said the road beyond Tepeleni was under their machine-gun fire. At Klisura, which commands a parallel road twelve to fifteen miles east of Tepeleni, the Italians were reported driven from important hilltop defenses and thrust back to a last line of trenches. Even those trenches were said to be under heavy fire.

Greeks Still Advancing.

The spokesman said counter-attacks by the Italians at Klisura and on the snow-clogged northern front near the Yugoslav frontier failed to halt Greek advances.

British flyers reported yesterday another raid of Valona, and the Greek Ministry of Home Security said Italian bombers attacked the islands of Corfu and Levkas and the port of Preveza.

The ministry's summary of air-raid casualties during the second month of the war showed a great decrease.

During the second month, from November 29 to December 29, eighty-eight persons, including twelve women and twenty-five children were reported killed, and 296 wounded. Sixty houses and a church were reported wrecked.

For the first month, 604 were listed as killed, with 8,070 wounded and 1,200 homes destroyed.

GREEKS TAKE 1,000 MORE PRISONERS

Report Capture Of Entire Battalion And Rout Of Ski-Troop Unit

Finnish Snow Tactics Declared Flop When Tried Out By Fascists

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Dec. 30—Italian troops in Albania took to skis today to battle the counter-invading Greeks, but the Greek high command announced that the experiment collapsed when the Fascists kicked off their runners and fled.

The scene of the action was not disclosed, but it was one of a series of local engagements in which the Greeks said they took more than 1,000 prisoners, including an entire battalion and its officers, and added to their store of captured Italian guns and supplies.

King Praises Army

With the Italians struggling afresh—and vainly, the Greeks said—to win back some of the Albanian soil they have lost, King George II of Greece tonight praised the achievements of his army in driving the Italians out of Greece and expressed confidence that the New Year would bring further successes.

"Our struggle will be hard," he said in a message to the Greek people, "but our reserves of morale are inexhaustible because a people who are determined to face everything and who do not forget its great traditions have a feeling of honor and human dignity so deeply rooted it never gives way."

Further Gains Scored

Dispatches from the front asserted the Greeks, after beating back newly arrived Italians, had "scored further gains" north of Chimara in a thrust toward the port of Valona, a base often raided by air.

Heavy losses were claimed among fresh Fascist forces in attempting counter-drives in the central sector north of Klisura.

Appreciable gains despite stubborn Italian resistance in the Tepeleni-Klisura area were announced by a Government spokesman. The remaining Italian "last-stand" defense lines there were reported shelled heavily.

A British Royal Air Force communique told of two raids yesterday on Valona.

Bomb hits on military stores, a motor transport park, buildings and a road leading to a jetty in the harbor were claimed.

The communique said pilots saw bombs fall among transports and troops on a highway. The raiding planes were said also to have machine-gunned a cruiser and cargo vessels. One plane was lost, but the British said its crew of two descended by parachutes.

The Greek Ministry of Home Security said enemy aviation yesterday raided Salonika, Preveza, Ioannina and the rural district of Cozani, inflicting but few casualties and slight damage.

Italians Report Greeks Hard Hit By Air Blows

Rome, Dec. 30 (AP)—the Italian air force, closely cooperating with the Fascist army and navy, has inflicted "very important losses" on the Greeks in recent days, a Stefani correspondent reported tonight from the Greek front in Albania.

A long Greek column on the march was attacked for four hours north of Koritza by groups of chasers which machine-gunned the troops, the Italian news agency's correspondent reported.

Groups of bombers "machine-gunned and hammered" zones around Vescopia, where Greek concentrations were seen, and a crossroad between Pogradetz, held by the Greeks, and Leschnica.

Other groups poured "tons and tons of bombs of various calibers on Preveza, where the enemy has the most advanced naval base," the correspondent said.

The high command said Italian warships shelled the western coast of Greece and Greek-occupied southern Albania "with destructive results."

Italians Shell Greece.

Rome, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Italian warships were reported today to have shelled the western coast of Greece and Greek-occupied southern Albania "with evident destructive results."

The Italian High Command said Italian flyers also bombed targets along the coast, striking especially at the Greek naval base at Preveza. A steamer in the harbor was said to have been damaged.

Greek attacks in Albania were reported repulsed and the Greeks were said to have suffered heavy losses.

The Italian communique said anti-aircraft guns shot down one enemy plane which attacked the Italian-held Albanian port of Valona yesterday. Italian fighter planes were said to have intercepted other planes in the formation, shooting down two of them.

HUNGARY CALLS MORE TO COLORS IN BALKAN CRISIS

Interpreted as Sign Nazis Expect Clash—Soviet Troops on Move.

30.24-6683

Budapest, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Hungary began mobilizing additional troops today in a movement reported as designed to lead to total mobilization by January 15.

This action was interpreted in some quarters as a sign of one more move in German preparations for war in the Balkans, where Hungary's army might help strengthen the German flank against Soviet Russia while the Nazis struck south toward Greece and Turkey.

Mobilization cards reached thousands of Hungarian men of military age last night and this morning. This coincided with reports of renewed Russian military activity on highways running from Lwow (Lemberg), in Russian Poland, to the Slovak frontier.

The flow of German troops and materials continued at top capacity on Hungarian and Rumanian railroads.

Many observers were of the opinion that Germany, now reported to be swelling the total of her forces in Rumania to some 600,000 men, is preparing her own Balkan army and the armies of her Balkan and central European allies for double duty—striking south against Greece and Turkey but at the same time protecting the northern flank against a possible Russian thrust.

This was taken to mean Berlin had not received Moscow's promise to stay neutral if the Germans drove deeper into the Balkans or, if such a promise had been given, that the Germans were taking no chances.

Adding to the Balkan tension was the presence of an advance guard of German troops on the Rumanian-Bulgarian frontier, and the resignation of Hungary's Minister of Agriculture, Michael Teleki, because of a reported difference with his Government over the mass movement of German soldiers through his nation.

Reports from Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, said King Boris III was expected to make an important radio speech on New Year's Day. It was believed he would give the nation the key to his policy on the presence of German troops at Bulgaria's front door.

Neighbors Bulgars, knowing well that their country constitutes a potential avenue to Greece, to Turkey or to the Russian-dominated Black Sea, wondered where and how far the steady surge of Nazi troops would spread. Informed quarters said Bulgaria probably would permit passage of German forces only under protest, recognizing the futility of armed resistance.

Route to Albania.

German troops moving to aid Italy in Albania might go through Bulgaria. King Boris was reported Saturday to have informed Adolf Hitler on a recent visit in Berlin that he would abdicate before permitting German troops to pass through his country.

King Boris conferred with Premier Bogdan Philoff yesterday and political circles speculated on the possibility of a government crisis. Minister of the Interior Peter Gabrovsky, former leader of the small Bulgarian Nazi party, was mentioned as a possible head of a new government should the existing regime fall.

At Giurgiu, Rumania, across the Danube river from Ruschuk, Bulgaria, German soldiers could be seen arraying equipment, taking up positions and occupying barracks, but some observers felt that churning masses of ice in the river might hold the Nazis in check for a time, even if the German High Command should order them into Bulgaria.

Nazis Move Big Guns.

While most of the Nazis troops rolled straight through Hungary into Rumania, reports circulated that some might remain in Hungary, where censorship blotted out many details. Hungarians reported that big guns of the type used in shelling Great Britain's Dover Coast from across the English Channel were included in the German equipment.

Bulgaria has withdrawn most of her soldiers from the Greek border and most of some 100,000 Bulgars now under arms are at the Turkish frontier, since Sofia is reported to hold that a German march into Bulgaria would be considered a provocative act by Turkey, a British Ally, and a step likely to involve Turkey in war.

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 30—With Germany pouring soldiers into Rumania at top speed, Hungary called more men to her army today in what some circles viewed as another phase of the vast Nazi preparations for war or any other outbreak in the Balkans.

Thousands of Hungarian men of military age were handed mobilization cards last night and today. This additional call-up coincided with reports of fresh Russian military activity on highways running from Lwow (Lemberg), in Russian Poland, to the Slovak frontier. General Hungarian mobilization was expected by January 15.

Aid To Nazis Indicated

The call-up was considered in Budapest political circles as a step in cooperation with the German military machine to protect the German Balkan flank in the event Russia showed an inclination to intervene in the turbulent southeastern European situation.

Reports from heavily censored Rumania gave further support to the view that the Nazis were preparing Balkan armies for double duty.

Bucharest was ordered to hold air-raid warning drills two hours each morning, and other reports said there was a serious oil shortage in the Nazi-occupied country, which is rich in petroleum fields.

No Special Precautions

While troops moved in other sections of the Balkans there was no sign of special military precautions in Bulgaria. However, it was reported additional reserves might be called up by mid-January, perhaps the year's entire conscript class.

King Boris III of Bulgaria, who is reported to have told Adolf Hitler he would step from his throne rather than grant German troops a free way across his country, is expected to make an important radio speech Wednesday.

That address, observers said, might give Bulgaria a tip on his policy regarding the German troops on his border.

Bulgarians Nervous.

Sofia, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Bulgarian political quarters watched the movement of German troops in neighboring Rumania nervously today, but expressed the hope Adolf Hitler's main purpose was to exert diplomatic pressure on surrounding countries.

Reports reaching Sofia said the Nazi forces were concentrating principally in the oil districts west and north of Bucharest, with other units taking up positions on the Bulgarian frontier near the Danubian port of Giurgiu and on the Danube along the Russian border in northern Dobruja. The Germans were reported also to have mined the mouth of the Danube, control of which the Russians were said to have been demanding.

Reports of sabotage in the Rumanian oil fields were believed to offer one explanation for the heavy concentrations there. Numerous oil fires of late were said to have been attributed to disgruntled Rumanian army officers.

Balkan News In Moscow.

Moscow, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The Soviet press reported Balkan friction today under the headline "Hungarian-Rumanian Polemic," but there was no Russian comment on developments.

Newspapers published dispatches by Tass, official Russian news agency, from Budapest and Bucharest describing disputes over northern Transylvania, the area transferred from Rumania to Hungary through Axis arbitration last August.

The Budapest report said the Hungarian press charged Rumania with counting on a victory of the Axis's enemies to get the area back. The Bucharest dispatch said the Rumanian press "continues to carry on an anti-Hungarian campaign."

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Rumania, Dec. 30.

The Rumanian railways announced tonight cancellation for an indefinite period of all trains except three expresses and thirteen local trains.

No official explanation was given.

No tickets are being sold to Budapest, Belgrade or Sofia.

All plane traffic also was stopped.

'Major Turning In War,' Is Turkish Reaction

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 30 (AP)—President Roosevelt's call for more United States aid for Britain was received enthusiastically by Turkish Government circles, press and the general public today and the official Ankara radio said it constituted a "major turning in the war."

A spokesman in Government quarters termed the speech "extremely strong and extremely promising for the outlook of democratic powers and their friends. It made an excellent impression in Ankara."

The greatest effect of the speech, the Ankara radio said, "will be upon the Vichy Government which is in a state of hesitation."

Peace Held Assured

Newspapers in Turkey expressed belief that despite reports of German troop concentrations in Rumania, peace in the Balkans was assured at least for the winter.

The newspaper Yeni Sabah will say in an editorial tomorrow:

"President Roosevelt has read the death sentence of the Axis countries.

"It is impossible now for Berlin and Rome even to dream of victory. . . . The speech will have an important effect on the destiny of the world. It was a fearful typhoon on the horizon of Berlin and Rome."

The newspaper Tan will say editorially that America has decided the result of this war, just as she did by entrance into the first World War.

On Oasis Repulsed, Italians Say

Rome, Dec. 30 (AP)—Italian defense forces repulsed a British attack on the Jarabub Oasis, southernmost Italian outpost on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, the Italian high command reported today.

At Bardia, artillery exchanges between British besiegers and the Italian garrison were said to be continuing.

The high command's communique said British planes bombed Italian war bases elsewhere in Libya "without damage."

Spaniards Report Caves Being Hewed in Rock as Storerooms

MADRID, Dec. 30 (AP)—Spanish news agency today reports from Algeciras, across the bay from Gibraltar, said large new supplies of munitions were arriving at that British fortress and other defense preparations were proceeding rapidly.

The reports said new caverns were being hewed out of the rock as storerooms for additional supplies.

Long Siege Held Likely

LONDON, Dec. 30 (AP)—British military circles said today that there was no reason to expect an early surrender of Bardia, beleaguered Italian base in Libya, because of lack of food and water.

"It has been a base for some time and is well supplied," it was said.

A continuing "artillery and aerial bombardment" of the town was reported.

PONTIFF HINDERED

But Those Hampering Relief Work Are Unnamed.

Vatican City, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The Vatican radio, without naming names, said today that Pope Pius XII had been hindered in his war relief efforts.

"During the last war everything seemed to be done to facilitate the work of charity of the Vatican," the broadcast asserted. "During the present war, despite all the Holy Father's efforts, everything seems to hinder this work."

NEW FOOD LAWS

Italy Drafts Rules and Names Ration Dictator.

Rome, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Agriculture announced today that it was drafting new rationing regulations to be issued soon, without indicating whether changes were contemplated in the amounts of rationed foods.

The announcement, made in advising consumers on procedure for obtaining the present rations for the first half of January, followed naming of Giuseppe Tassinari, Minister of Agriculture, as supreme dictator of Italian dinner tables.

He will see that farmers and industrialists produce enough food and that there shall be no profiteering

VICHY REPRIMANDS PRESS

Failure to Make Comments Upon 'Youth Day' Is Observed

VICHY, France, Dec. 30 (AP)—General dissatisfaction with the French press was reflected today in a semi-official reprimand of newspapers for their failure to publish anything but the official text on yesterday's "Youth Day" functions.

Chief of State Henri Philippe Pétain's address to the youth of the nation was a feature of the program.

The French press for some time has been limiting itself to reproducing identical texts of government communiqués and bulletins of the semi-official Havas news agency.

The reprimand is considered an expression of government opinion that the press admittedly has been hampered by excessive censorship and it was disclosed that specific restrictions would be reduced from 384 to ninety.

At the same time, "the fact that newspapers have fallen out of the habit of making comments" was deplored.

R. A. F. BOMBS BASES IN WESTERN LIBYA

Reports Fires Started At Tmimi, Italian Air Force Depot On Desert

Artillery Duels Continue Between British And Besieged Port Of Bardia

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 30—British bombers attacked bases in the desert west of Bardia and preparations were reported continuing "smoothly" tonight for an assault by land forces on the Italian-held Libyan port which has been under a two-week siege.

The R. A. F. Middle East command declared fires were started by raids last night on Tmimi, a Fascist desert air base. Planes were attacked, the communique added, but the extent of the damage could not be observed.

Gazala, Derna Bombed

Gazala and Derna, the latter an important port about 150 miles west of Bardia, also were attacked from the air, it said.

Artillery duels continued between the beleaguered garrison at Bardia and British forces. The British said intensity of the shelling had increased, but had failed to hamper operations.

London military circles have discounted the possibility of starving out the garrison at Bardia.

"It has been a base for some time and is well supplied," these sources said.

Nazi Circles In Chungking Report Craft Was Machine-Gunned And Destroyed

Chungking, Dec. 30 (AP)—Japanese warplanes machine-gunned and destroyed a grounded Junkers transport plane belonging to the Eurasia Aviation Corporation, a Chinese-German concern, at Chengtu Airfield today, German circles reported.

The passengers and crew escaped injury by diving into a shelter. Chungking itself was under an alarm, but no bombs were dropped.

A China National Aviation Corporation plane from Hongkong with several Americans aboard took a far western circuitous course over Sikang, formerly part of Tibet, before landing here. The normal five-hour flight took twelve hours.

BERMUDA-BRITAIN AIR MAIL IS LOST

Shipments By Steamer On 4 Dates Also Went To Bottom Of Sea

At Same Time English Admit U. S. Postal Dispatches Destroyed By Enemy

[By the Associated Press]

Hamilton, Bermuda, Dec. 30—A terse Government announcement today said that air mail dispatched from Bermuda for Britain on November 23 and 30 had been lost at sea, as had steamer mail dispatched on November 19, 26 and 27 and December 1.

The lost mail totaled 111 bags, including registered letters and parcels.

At the same time, the British General Postoffice announced in London that ordinary mail posted in the United States between November 11 and 14 and November 18 and December 6 had been lost "through enemy action."

Pan American Airways in New York reported that none of the mail carried by its planes between the United States and Lisbon, Portugal, was missing and that it obtained receipts for all mail taken off at Bermuda by the British censors or delivered to Lisbon.

This would narrow the loss of air mail to the route between Lisbon and England, which is traversed by British flying boats and land planes.

Perhaps significantly, Capt. Harold H. Balfour, British Under Secretary for Air, announced on December 18 that land plane flights to Lisbon had been resumed after suspension on November 11 due to undisclosed "difficulties." He said the twice-weekly flying boat service never had been interrupted.

Mexico Refuses German Protest On "Dictator"

Charlie Chaplin's Film Scheduled. Italian Propaganda Movie Also Billed

Mexico City, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Ministry of Foreign Relations has rejected an official German protest against the showing here of Charlie Chaplin's "The Dictator," it was learned authoritatively tonight.

The protest has been filed by Rudt Von Collemberg, German Minister. No Italian protest was made.

The picture is scheduled to open Wednesday. Billed to open Thursday is the official Italian propaganda picture, "Scorpio Africanus," which relates dramatic episodes in the history of the Roman Empire. Though the Italian picture is widely advertised, it was not learned whether a final permit has been awarded it.

Visits 'Japanese Base'

Colombian Warship Investigates Rumors, and Officials Are Silent

BOGOTA, Colombia, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Buenaventura correspondent of the newspaper "El Liberal" reported today that the Colombian warship McJunin had investigated rumors of a Japanese submarine base on the Colombian island of Malpelo, in the Pacific, 315 miles from Buenaventura, but that authorities were silent on the findings. The correspondent's account said the warship was accompanied to Malpelo Island by the private yacht Wahoo.

Informants familiar with the island said it was uninhabited. Rumors were said to have gone the rounds that the Japanese had established a base there and were in radio communication with the Japanese colony on the extensive Corinto plantation in the Department of Cauca.

Fists Fly In Uruguyan Chamber Of Deputies

Row Starts When Two Are Accused Of Wanting To Surrender Country To Nazis

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 30 (AP)—Two Herrerista party deputies, Montano and Vinas, came to blows today on the chamber floor with Socialist Emilio Frugoni, who had accused them of wanting to "surrender this country to the Nazis" because of their opposition to Government policies for establishment of defense bases in Uruguay.

Other deputies quickly separated the three.

Montano and Vinas had opposed the Government proposals because they asserted they were combating United States and British influence within Uruguay, but Frugoni declared that was not their real purpose.

HONORS FOR RED ARMY

Banners to Be Awarded to Units Making the Best Showing

MOSCOW, Dec. 30 (AP)—Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, Commissar for Defense, created today ninety-six special red banners to be awarded annually to Red Army units which make the best showing in military training.

The units are required to show an excellent record for 70 per cent of their members and good grades for the rest.

Appointment of three lieutenant generals and sixteen major generals chosen from Baltic military commanders also was announced.

Rationing of Soap Begun in Denmark

Copenhagen (via Berlin), Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Soap rationing began today in Denmark. Each inhabitant may have one bar of soap a month and each male adult one stick of shaving soap. The fat content of soap also was decreased from 80 to 60 per cent and laundries were obliged to cut their soap consumption by half.

St. Johns, Newfoundla... for lack of s... ...ient crews to take ... ...m across the ocean to England, the crew of the British freighter Dromore said today on arrival from ... ...se ports.

The Furness Lin... ...eamen, completing a voyage from ...verpool said they saw seven of the "four-stackers" at Halifax and four more at S... Johns.

On Convoy Duty

Others, however, already are on convoy escort duty in the Liverpool area, they said.

The men said both Liverpool and Manchester had been attacked heavily by air raiders, although Liverpool docks had suffered little damage, they added, because the port's anti-aircraft defenses were among the best in the kingdom.

In one German ...aid, the men said, 500 planes took part and an area within a half-mile radius from the center of the city had to be evacuated.

Replaces Newfoundland

The Dromore came here in the Boston-Liverpool service, replacing the Furness liner Newfoundland, which crew members said now is a hospital ship in the Near East.

The seamen asserted that 3,000 troops were leaving England daily for the Near East, supposedly in preparation for a rumored offensive against Italy.

BRITAIN BUYS PLANES OF PAN AMERICAN LINE

Baltimore Sun Reports Transfer of Three New Aircraft

BALTIMORE, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Sun said tonight that it had learned that three of Pan American Airways six new transoceanic flying boats now under construction had been sold to the British Government.

The sale had the approval of the United States Government, The Sun said, and "it is reported that the transaction was carried out at the behest of the State Department, as a means of further aid to Great Britain."

The planes are not designed for military use, but would be useful for long-range patrol flights over the North Atlantic. They are valuable especially for their load-carrying capacity and great range.

Sale price to the British was reported to be $1,000,000 per plane. The Sun said that it was testified at a hearing before the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington recently by Pan American Airways officials that the air line would pay the manufacturer $1,600,000 for all six ships.

The first of the six planes, being built at Boeing's Seattle factory, is almost ready for test flights, the paper said, and a British flight crew is on its way to the United States "to undergo a course of instruction in the operation of the aircraft."

Other crews are expected to be sent for instruction as quickly as the second and third ships are completed, The Sun continued.

Battleship Wyoming To Head Atlantic Unit

Former Training Vessel Being Remilitarized At Norfolk To Serve As Patrol Flagship

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 30 (AP)—The battleship Wyoming, used for a number of years as a training vessel for Naval Academy midshipmen and reservists, is now being remilitarized and will be used as the flagship of the base vessels of the Atlantic Patrol Force, it was learned today.

The work is being done at the Norfolk Navy Yard where, it is understood, new guns are being installed and magazines replaced.

A number of other base force vessels are being overhauled in the yard while other ships are being converted for use with the patrol force.

Wheeler Resumes Peace Drive

Montanan Calls Idea Of Nazi Invasion Of America 'Fantastic'; Compares Fears To War Trend of 1917

President Receives Praise for Sunday Speech But Senate Group Hits Efforts To Involve Nation

(Text of Wheeler's address is printed on page 2.)

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—Asserting that the idea of a Nazi invasion of America was "fantastic," Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D-Mont) tonight answered President Roosevelt's plea for greater aid to England with a call for immediate peace in Europe before, he said, America becomes involved in "the insanity" of war.

As a "working basis for a just peace," he suggested eight points:

Restoration of Germany's 1914 boundaries with an autonomous Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

Restoration of an independent France, Holland, Norway, Belgium and Denmark.

Restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France.

Restoration of German colonies.

Protection of all racial and religious minorities in all countries.

Internationalization of the Suez Canal.

No indemnities or reparations.

Arms limitation.

The Montana senator, long one of the Senate's most severe critics of the Roosevelt foreign policy, made his remark on the National Radio Forum of the Washington Evening Star. His address had been repeatedly referred to by his associates during the day as a reply to the talk Mr. Roosevelt made last night urging all possible assistance to England to keep the Axis powers from attacking America.

Invasion Too Gigantic

"Our independence can only be lost or compromised," Wheeler said, "if Germany invades the Western Hemisphere north of the equator. This would be fantastic—as it would require the transportation of at least two million men—with planes, tanks and equipment—in one convoy across the Atlantic. This would require two or three thousand transports plus a fleet larger than our navy—plus thousands of fighter-escorted bombers. Such a fleet cannot possibly be available. * * *

"Remember—Hitler has already been seven months in vainly trying to cross twenty miles. If Hitler's army can't cross the narrow English Channel in seven months his bombers won't fly across the Rockies to Denver tomorrow."

Where Mr. Roosevelt had spoken of a peace negotiated on a basis of the present war situation as one meaning Nazi domination of the other countries affected, Wheeler said that "the offer of a just, reasonable and generous peace will more quickly and effectively crumble Hitlerism and break the morale of the German people than all the bombers that could be dispatched over Berlin."

Quotes Lothian on Cause

Hitlerism, he said, can "be destroyed and banished from Europe only by destroying that which caused or maintains Nazism." He went on to quote Lord Lothian, the late British ambassador to the United States, as having said that the rise of Hitler was "in great measure" a "rebellion against the discriminations of the treaty of Versailles."

Asserting that the United States was "no longer trudging along the road to war" but "running," he added:

"Last night we heard the President promise that there would be no American expeditionary force [illegible] We received no promise[illegible] ships and sailors—and [illegible] and pilots—might [illegible] within the near future [illegible] the cauldron of blood [illegible] is Europe today."

If Mr. Roosevelt's logic were followed to its conclusion, he said, 'We ought immediately to break off diplomatic relations with Russia, Italy, Germany, Japan and other nations whose domestic and foreign policies we abhor."

"And where do we go from there?"

he asked. "Regardless of who is proclaimed victor in the present war—it cannot last forever. Peace—fleeting though it may be — will eventually come to Europe. At some time in the future representatives of England and Germany will sit around a table—some time they will agree upon peace—and until that day, the world suffers. Each of us from the President of the United States to the most humble citizen—should exert his effort for peace now. * * *

"We have reached a strange situation in America when those who advocate peace—who do not follow the party line—are branded appeasers and unwitting tools of the dictators. This still is a democracy—and American citizens whose beliefs vary from those of the government ought not to be howled down or intimidated. Free speech still belongs to all the people—not just to a few at the top.

Majority Oppose War

"I do not believe that the great majority of our people are eager to be embraced by war—and I call upon them not to be afraid to say so. I—for one—believe the policy advocated by the interventionists is insane because it will lead to total war—and war is insanity.

"Americans, do not let yourselves be swayed by mass hysteria. Do not travel again the road that you took in 1917. . . . . Has this war a sweeter odor than the last? Don't let yourselves be misled by the so-called notables. Numerically they are few—a few hundred—even though they command the newspaper headlines. But they do not speak for the mass of Americans. They do not represent labor, the farmer, the youth, the mothers or the fathers of America. The great mass of our people are inarticulate—but it is time you were heard. You must not be driven like sheep to the slaughtering pens.

End Unemployment First

"There is a war that I call upon to enter—a noble war which the royalty of Europe and our tory friends at home are unwilling to face—a war to end economic inequality and poverty and disease in this, the richest land in the world. America's war ought to be a war against industrial unemployment and low farm prices."

He went on to quote a famous statement of the President that a third of the nation was ill-clothed, ill-fed and ill-housed, adding that "unless and until this situation is corrected our democracy is in danger."

"Believing as I do in this thesis," he said, "I cannot help but feel that we should settle our own problems before we undertake to settle the problems of Asia, Africa, Australia, South America and Europe."

White House Pleased

The White House reported a highly favorable reaction to President Roosevelt's defense broadcast, but in the Senate criticism and praise were mingled, with Senator Clark (D-Mo) asserting that if the President had made the speech before the November election "he would have been defeated."

Stephen Early, White House secretary, said an extraordinary outpouring of messages followed Mr. Roosevelt's broadcast call to the nation last night to put itself on a wartime production basis. There were 100 indorsements of the Chief Executive's remarks to each message registering an objection, he said.

Early described the President as "tremendously pleased," and especially gratified that there had been praise from both Republicans and Democrats since the objectives he set forth in his address called for national unity.

Stimulates Debate

It was quickly apparent, however, that the address would stimulate, rather than still, the continuing debate at the Capitol, in the press and on the radio over the administration's foreign policy.

From Senator McCarran (D-Nev), also a frequent Administration opponent, came a statement that the President had raised a "warning signal—a danger sign" which would "make the American people more determined than ever that the United States will remain out of this war."

Clark and Senators Van Nuys (D-Ind), Johnson (D-Colo) and Holt (D-WVa) lunched today with Verne Marshall, head of the no foreign war committee. It was reported they discussed the President's address and gave preliminary study to the attitude Administration critics should take toward possible future foreign policy legislation.

Mongers Called 'Traitors'

On the Senate floor, Holt asserted that "war mongers now think they can push us into this war."

"People who seek to get us into this war—to send our sons to the blood saturated soil of Europe—are traitors," Holt shouted.

"The strategy today," he remarked later, "is to provoke the Axis powers to declaring war on us and then say we were attacked."

On the other hand, Senator Sheppard (D-Tex) said the President had "outlined the only course we can pursue."

Backed by Al Smith

In New York, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, often a critic of the President's domestic policies, said he was "heartily in accord" with the speech and called it "courageous, straight-hitting."

"He certainly put his finger on it," Smith added. "It remains to be seen whether the American people will regard it as addressed directly to them or just another speech.

"There is no use of talking about sacrifice unless it is transformed into action. Like everybody else, I'm waiting to be asked; I'm willing to make the sacrifice."

Ought To Quiet Down

He remarked that "these organizations ought to pipe down a little and not try to run the affairs of the country. There's a government in Washington for that."

He said he included the Committee to defend America by aiding the Allies and the No Foreign War Committee in his remarks and said that "all these committees" in their activities "sometimes furnish an argument that we are a disunited nation."

Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) said he thought that the President's talk was "notable in that it scouted the idea that an American army would be sent to Europe, but made no reference to naval aid, shipping or convoy aid and no reference to sending American armies to Western Hemisphere or Far Eastern points."

Failed To Define Result

"No true blooded American can be in other than thorough accord with the President's statements relative to the need for national defense," Gillette said. "But in my opinion, the President failed to define clearly how these defense preparations should be utilized, expressly stating that the extent and amount of aid to present belligerents is a matter for the government agents to determine.

"It was notable that there was no reference in the speech to 'aid short of war.' I believe that was the first time in a Presidential pronouncement that there was failure to allude to that limitation. The President also expressly added the category of merchant ships to the type of aid needed."

M'CARRAN WARNS OF 'DANGER SIGN'

He Says 'Arsenal' Proposal by President Should Spur Drive to Avoid War

AUSTIN PRAISES SPEECH

Sheppard Gives Enthusiastic Approval, but Clark, Idaho, Hits 'Trick' Utterance

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 (AP)—Congressional reaction to President Roosevelt's defense address continued today to range from unqualified applause to sharp criticism. Democrats, with few exceptions, gave it their endorsement, but comment did not follow strict partisan lines, several Republicans voicing similar approval. Other legislators spoke favorably of the speech with reservations, while a third group found fault for various reasons.

Senator McCarran, Nevada Democrat, a frequent administration opponent, amplified his comment today in a statement that the President had raised a "warning signal—a danger sign" which would "make the American people more determined than ever that the United States will remain out of this war."

"The danger sign in the President's speech was his statement that he wanted to make the United States an arsenal for warring European countries," the Senator added. "The United States can't violate principles of decency and international law without reaping the dire result—and the dire result is involvement in war."

Sheppard Wires President

Senator Sheppard, Texas Democrat, said that the President had "outlined the only course we can pursue." He added that he had sent to Mr. Roosevelt a telegram "congratulating him and telling him the American people are with him."

Senator Austin of Vermont, the acting minority leader, said his impression was that the President "kept his hands untied" on the amount of defense production to be sent to Great Britain and had left the Administration "free to take any position which our military necessities make obvious."

Mr. Austin, frequently a supporter of Administration foreign policies, added that the President had made clear it was "necessary for our own safety" to give Britain all possible assistance "short of sending troops."

At Rawlins, Wyo., Senator Hiram Johnson of California declined comment, saying he had not yet read the speech. He told reporters during a train stop that he was on his way to Washington "to help keep America out of war."

He added that he favored aid to Britain, but not at the risk of involving this nation in war.

Senator Gillette, Iowa Democrat, said that he thought the President's talk was "notable in that it scouted the idea that an American army would be sent to Europe, but made no reference to naval aid, shipping or convoy aid and no reference to sending American armies to Western Hemisphere or Far Eastern points."

Clearness Is Questioned

"No true-blooded American can be in other than thorough accord with the President's statements relative to the need for national defense," he declared. "But in my opinion, the President failed to define clearly how these defense preparations should be utilized, expressly stating that the extent and amount of aid to present belligerents is a matter for the government agents to determine.

"It was notable that there was no reference in the speech to 'aid short of war.'"

Senator Connolly, Texas, Democrat, said:

"I'm in favor of extending all possible aid to Great Britain. We don't need to wait until the fire burns our feet."

Senator Bunker, Nevada, Democrat, said:

"The President expressed the thoughts of the nation when he stated that Britain is fighting the battle of world democracy. It is the will of the people to aid Britain to the fullest extent so long as we can preserve American independence and build our own national security."

At Boise, Idaho, Senator Clark, Democrat, described the address as "a trick speech, calculated to lead the American people into war and ruin." He added that the "whole import" of the speech was "tricky," but declined to elaborate until he had studied the text.

Dies Advocates Caution

ORANGE, Texas, Dec. 30 (AP)—Representative Martin Dies, chairman of the House Committee investigating un-American activities, commenting today on President Roosevelt's defense address, said that he could not share fears that dictator nations ever would be able to conquer the United States from without.

ROOSEVELT'S TALK HAILED IN LONDON

Official Quarters Cite Stand Against Appeasement.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—It was said in British official circles today that President Roosevelt's fireside chat of last night was welcomed "as further proof of the courage and realism" of the attitude of the United States toward the European conflict. A spokesman described it as "one of the most powerful, logical indictments ever spoken." He said that the President's "recognition of the futility of appeasement was noted with especial satisfaction."

The spokesman added that a definition of the American role as an arsenal for democracy and the expression of belief in the ultimate defeat of the Axis would "be a source of inspiration and courage to the leaders and people of Great Britain."

He said the good will and promises of American assistance in gathering volume, and above all with the utmost speed, are of no less than vital importance to the people of Britain, "who are determined to continue the war no matter what the cost until the dangers that beset democracy are finally overcome."

The Evening Standard, published by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, said: "We bend to our task with new defiance and faith.

"President Roosevelt hurled his message with the fury of a thunderbolt," it said. "He required no rhetoric. His aim was to hunt illusion to its lair, wherever it might be found, and stab it to the heart so that all the world might know.

"He slew complacency which still believes the seas can protect America if some other Power but Britain rules them. He murdered appeasement with a last, sure-handed cut. He said two things plainly enough for every child to understand. There was danger ahead. It could only be averted if America made herself the great arsenal of democracy."

Italy Critical, England Hails Roosevelt Talk

Berlin Withholds Comment, Expects Hitler to Answer

By The Associated Press

Great Britain and most of the neutral nations yesterday received President Roosevelt's Sunday night speech with enthusiasm, while Italy was critical and Germany officially reserved comment pending further study.

Here, briefly, is how some of the nations viewed it:

BRITAIN—A spokesman called it "one of the most powerful, logical indictments ever spoken" and official circles saw in it "further proof of the courage and realism" of the United States' attitude toward the European war. Britain faces her tasks now "with new defiance and faith," said the Evening Standard, published by Lord Beaverbrook, aircraft minister.

GERMANY—Amid strict official silence, Nazi reaction could only be guessed—that the speech was regarded as of vital importance, but, for the present, Germany will stick to her policy of not being provoked into hasty action concerning the United States. Adolf Hitler has a translation of the text and, it is believed, when he is ready to break his silence Germany's attitude will be known, but not before then.

ITALY—Rome, too, was silent officially in an atmosphere of watchful waiting, but Virginio Gayda, well-posted editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, warned that the Axis powers' "tolerance" has limits, and called the President a "man of undeclared war against the Axis."

Meanwhile, he said, they are waiting "for events to take shape." The Fascist press had told its readers in advance that an important current of United States opinion "manifests considerable reluctance to be involved in war."

GREECE: The Greek press carried long accounts of the President's speech and the gist of them was that Italy had suffered a severe blow. Said the newspaper Estia, "Covert hopes of naive Italians and their idea that their threat could restrain or terrorize President Roosevelt" have been frustrated.

FRANCE: Government circles in Vichy were surprised and sympathetic, informed sources said, but the government was forced to maintain reserve because of unoccupied France's situation.

Observers considered the speech important because, they said, it permitted the President to group around the United States all powers still neutral, such as the Balkan states and Turkey. Some even expressed the opinion that the speech was the beginning of events which will demonstrate that the law of force can be defied by a great democracy and that a new situation for Germany has been created.

Although French newspapers still were restricted to 350 words for reporting the speech, informed sources called it an "historical act." Many Frenchmen waited to read the Swiss newspapers.

TURKEY: Mr. Roosevelt's call for more aid for Britain was received enthusiastically by Turkish government circles, press and the general public and the official Ankara radio said it constituted a "major turning in the war." The greatest effect of the speech, the Ankara radio said, "will be upon the Vichy government which is in a state of hesitation."

Newspapers in Turkey expressed belief that despite reports of German troop concentrations in Rumania, peace in the Balkans was assured at least for the winter.

The newspaper Yeni Sabah will say in an editorial tomorow: "President Roosevelt has read the death sentence of the Axis countries. It is impossible now for Berlin and Rome even to dream of victory."

CHINA: Political and press circles said that Mr. Roosevelt's mention that the American fleet was in the Pacific was regarded by them as an indication the United States was prepared to fight Japan if necessary. They termed the President's speech an "excellent New Year's gift" to China.

SWITZERLAND: The Basel National Zeitung, one of the leading Swiss papers, voicing virtually the only free, neutral European comment on the Roosevelt speech, called it the clearest affirmation yet that "the United States wants to defeat the Axis powers even if it does not wage war directly."

JAPAN—Unofficial Japanese sources said the President's reference to China's "great defense" indicated to them a commitment to further United States aid for Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's government. Official comment was not available.

Bulgaria Hail Speech

BULGARIA—The Bulgarian press acclaimed it as "historic." Many papers devoted two front page columns to a summary—more than ever before given to declarations of any foreign statesmen outside central Europe. However, many passages which might be offensive to the Axis powers were omitted.

MEXICO—The first newspaper to comment, Ultimas Noticias of Mexico City, said Mr. Roosevelt wanted to get the United States into the war "and this is terrible for those who, like ourselves, may be drawn into its orbit . . . From last night there has been initiated, without any doubt whatsoever, the universal war." In most newspapers, the speech was the top story of the day.

COLOMBIA—Press reaction was warm and favorable. El Liberal, one of Bogota's leading dailies, called the Presidents' attitude "extremely valiant."

ARGENTINA—Wherever Argentines gathered Mr. Roosevelt's speech was a topic of conversation yesterday, generally of approval, but no official or newspaper comment had appeared so far.

Chinese Are Heartened By Roosevelt's Speech

Chungking, Dec. 30 (AP)—Chinese political and press circles said today President Roosevelt's mention that the American fleet was in the Pacific in his anti-Axis speech last night was regarded by them as an indication the United States was prepared to fight Japan if necessary.

They termed the President's speech an "excellent New Year's gift" to China, and said his specific linking of the European and the Asiatic wars as a vast scheme for world domination on the part of Japan, Italy and Germany proved a long-held Chinese contention.

SCORES PEACE BEFORE DEFEAT OF AGGRESSORS

Reaffirms That Security Of U. S. Is Involved In British Victory

Al Smith "In Accord" With President; Urges Sacrifices By People

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 30—The policy board of the Committee To Defend America By Aiding The Allies, indorsing President Roosevelt's defense address, said today the committee stood against "any dictated or so-called negotiated peace effort before the aggressors are defeated."

"We stand unanimously against isolation, appeasement and defeatism," a statement by the policy board said. "We reaffirm that the vital security of our country is directly involved in the victory of Britain and her Allies.

"Representing the hundreds of thousands of the membership of our committee throughout the nation, we pledge continued and redoubled patriotic efforts in behalf of our national defense and aid for Britain and her Allies.

"We reaffirm the statement of policy as made on November 26 last."

The November statement said that "the time has come when Congress should assume a larger share of responsibility, with the President, for the policy of aid to the Allies." Revision o fthis country's international policy also was urged, including repeal or modification of "restrictive statutes which hamper this nation in its freedom of action."

The board also said that it had "associated itself" with Chairman William Allen White's telegram to the President Sunday night in which he said: "You have rallied America with a magnificent call."

Lewis W. Douglas, a member of the board, in a separate statement said that the President's address had won approval of many of the signers of last week's telegram to the President urging him to do "everything that may be necessary to insure defeat of the Axis powers."

Says Speech Will Give Courage To Free Men

Emporia, Kan., Dec. 30 (AP)—William Allen White, who organized the Committee to Defend America By Aiding the Allies, commented editorially today in his Emporia Gazette on President Roosevelt's Sunday night talk to the nation:

"The speech boils down to one sentence—the United States will be the 'arsenal of democracy.'

"That phrase will become the slogan of our great defense program that will arm democracy to fight for our cause. . . .

"It was a great speech. It will give courage to free men fighting all over the earth and to free countries in the dungeons of Nazi captivity. . . . Americans have reason to be proud of the voice that spoke for them."

Al Smith In Accord; Calls Talk Courageous

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith today expressed readiness to do his part to aid Britain after declaring himself "heartily in accord" with President Roosevelt's Sunday night speech.

The 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate observed his sixty-seventh birthday, receiving the press as is his custom.

Frequently in disagreement with Mr. Roosevelt's policies in the past, Smith called it a "courageous, straight-hitting speech."

"He certainly put his finger on it," Smith added.

"It remains to be seen whether the American people will regard it as addressed directly to them or just another speech.

"There is no use of talking about sacrifice unless it is transformed into action. Like everybody else, I'm waiting to be asked; I'm willing to make the sacrifice."

He remarked that "these organizations ought to pipe down a little and not try to run the affairs of the country. There's a Government in Washington for that."

He said he included the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies and the No Foreign War Committee in his remarks, and said that "all these committees" in their activities "sometimes furnish an argument that we are a disunited nation."

"If any group has a program they should submit it to Congress," Smith said. "In other words, there is too much 'whereasing' and too much 'be it resolved.'"

Senator George Terms Speed Call Reassuring

Atlanta, Dec. 30 (AP)—Senator Walter F. George (Dem., Ga.), chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, said in an interview here tonight that "the President's call for speed" in preparing defense of America "is reassuring."

The Senator, who also is a member of the Senate Finance Committee, was en route by train from his Vienna

(Ga.) home to Washington for the new session of Congress.

"Sometime ago," he said in commenting on President Roosevelt's address to the nation Sunday night, "I stated that the first line of our defense was in the American workshop and the speed with which we can prepare.

"The total defense of the nation is the test of assurance against our involvement in war. The President's call for speed along this line is reassuring."

Wood Calls It Personal Declaration Of War

Chicago, Dec. 30 (AP)—Gen. Robert E. Wood, acting national chairman of the America First Committee, in a statement today on President Roosevelt's address to the nation last night said in part:

"The President's reaffirmation of his determination not to send American boys abroad is welcome, but it has an empty ring in the context of a speech that is virtually a personal declaration of undeclared war on Germany.

"No longer is the President pledged to keep us out of war; his policy is now to keep us out of what he calls a 'last-ditch war.' Does this new phrase mean that we might fight a war in some foreign ditch now, while we are unprepared, to avoid war later?

"In view of all the pledges made during the campaign, we think the American people wanted to hear the President say clearly and without equivocation that we should contniue to give all possible help to Britain, but not to the point of involving ourselves in war abroad.

"They did not hear him say it.

"Instead, they heard him say we should do 'all we can.' Would that include war?"

ROOSEVELT'S TALK STIRS WARNING BY ROME SPOKESMAN

DEC 31 1940

Gayda Calls Tolerance of Axis Limited—Hitler's Reaction Kept Secret.

Rome, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, replied to President Roosevelt's fireside chat today with a warning that the "tolerance" of the Rome-Berlin Axis is limited. He called the President a "man of undeclared war fought against the Axis."

Writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, Gayda cited two specific actions which, he said, would mean open United States intervention for which no excuse could be created. But he indicated the Axis would not take any action until they had been put into effect.

The steps which Gayda said would bring America close to war were any attempt by American flag ships to force a counter-blockade or the cession to Britain of German and Italian ships now taking refuge in United States harbors.

Gayda asserted that, in itself, the President's speech had produced nothing new. He said it only confirmed the passage of the United States first from neutrality to non-belligerency and from that to a state "short of war."

"It is not without significance that President Roosevelt showed he gives due consideration to that current of American public opinion which manifests considerable reluctance to be involved in war," one high Fascist said.

Without Monday morning newspapers, Italians had to wait until the noon editions of the afternoon press for a 300-word summary of the radio talk distributed by Stefani, official Italian news agency, in which only fifty words were quoted directly from the President's text.

Although the Stefani summary reported President Roosevelt's warning of possible aggressive intentions of the Axis Powers in the Western Hemisphere, it failed to mention his reference to "tyranny" and to the "unholy alliance . . . to enslave the human race."

Covered Fully by Swiss.

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Switzerland's press, which has been careful to maintain neutrality since the start of the war, carried full and direct quotations from President Roosevelt's fireside chat today, but made no editorial comment. The entire first news page of Berne's conservative Der Bund, which frequently is used to interpret Government policy, was given over to the President's speech and a study of the American arms program.

Reaction in Vichy.

Vichy, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Some official French sources today described President Roosevelt's fireside chat as sensational, while other official comment tended to minimize its significance with assertions that he failed to present statistics on United States defense production to prove that "America's bite would equal her bark."

In some Government circles it was said that increased material for Britain from the United States had not yet compensated for losses by war and that only in increased United States production could results of the speech be judged.

Up to a late hour this morning French newspapers did not even have an official summary of the talk, but it was announced that a brief official version would be prepared for inclusion in afternoon papers. Publication of the full text was not permitted.

The broadcast was the main topic of conversation in French political circles, however, and reaction generally was favorable.

Featured in Madrid.

Madrid, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The only newspaper published in Madrid on Monday morning, the Monday Official Bulletin, prominently displayed today an account of President Roosevelt's broadcast, but made no editorial comment.

Predict New Aid for China.

Tokio, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Unofficial Japanese spokesmen said today that they considered President Roosevelt's speech a commitment to further assistance to China.

The President's reference to China's defense against Japan was interpreted as an indication that Washington already had decided on additional support for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Government and is not disposed toward conciliatory conversations on the forthcoming arrival in Washington of the new Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura.

The pointed references in the speech to the Rome-Berlin-Tokio pact were interpreted as meant to reply to repeated statements by Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka that this alliance is not aimed at the United States.

Official comment was not available.

Text of Senator Wheeler's Speech

DEC 31 1940

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—The text of the address by Senator Wheeler is as follows:

The views I express to you tonight are not the views of The Washington Evening Star, which has generously afforded me an opportunity to speak to you. They are not the views of any international banker, nor are they dictated by interventionists or war mongers.

The thoughts I am about to express are not based upon any fear of wild boasts of American conquest by Stalin, Hitler or Mussolini. I know that neither they nor their ideologies will capture the people of the United States or our imagination to the point that we would adopt fascism, communism or nazism as an American doctrine.

You and I are Americans—and as Americans, of course, we are interested in the well-being of the people of all the world. Coming, as we do, from the four corners of the earth, we know that our business, our race and our religion color our reaction to any European war. We know that today wars in Europe or Asia affect us economically, politically and emotionally.

We sympathize with the oppressed and persecuted everywhere.

Stresses Problems at Home

We also realize that we have great problems at home, that one-third of our population is ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad, and we have been told repeatedly, upon the highest authority, that unless and until this situation is corrected our democracy is in danger. I fully subscribe to this view.

Believing, as I do, in this thesis, I cannot help but feel that we should settle our own problems before we undertake to settle the problems of Asia, Africa, Australasia, South America and Europe.

As Americans, interested first in America, what is our present stake? Our stakes are our independence, our democracy and our trade and commerce. Every red-blooded American would fight to preserve them.

What is the best way to preserve them? There are two schools of thought. One group feels, as they felt before the last world war, that England is our first line of defense and that we must go to England's aid every time she declares war and that some European dictator is after rich loot in the United States, perhaps our not defeat. Remember, Hitler has already been seven months in vainly trying to cross twenty miles. If Hitler's army can't cross the narrow English Channel in seven months his bombers won't fly across the Rockies to bomb Denver tomorrow.

A Union of Nations Denounced

The only threat to our independence would be to join in some "union of free nations," so-called, in which we would be but a unit and out-numbered and out-generaled by our good neighbors across the sea.

Democracy! We cannot hold our democracy except by prosperity and improvement in the mechanics of democracy . This will not be aided by joining the war.

The cost of this war will come out of the millions of poor people, the common folk of the world who will toil for generations to pay the cost of the destruction.

War inevitably means back-breaking debt, blighted lives, bedeviled futures. War means the end of civil liberties, the end of free speech, free press, free enterprise. It means dictatorship and slavery, all the things we abhor in nazism, communism and fascism. It means Stalin or Hitler will have achieved their boasts for a totalitarian world without conquering America.

The President, in his speech last night, ridiculed the idea of a peace in Europe. Conceding all that he so eloquently said about "outlaws," the "concentration camps" and the "servants of God in chains," what about Russia and Joseph Stalin's communism? And have we not recognized Hitler and Franco? Did we not at least acquiesce in Mussolini and all his works?

If we follow the logic of Mr. Roosevelt then we ought immediately to break off diplomatic relations with Russia, Italy, Germany, Japan and other nations whose domestic and foreign policies we abhor.

Eventual Peace Is Visualized

And where do we go from there?

Regardless of when or who is proclaimed victor in the present war, it cannot last forever. Peace, fleeting though it may be, will eventually come to Europe. At some time in the future representatives of England and Germany will sit around a table. Some time they will agree upon peace, and until that day the world suffers. Each of us, from the President of the United States to the most humble citizen, should rowing anguish to millions of hearts. And how would they bring this to pass? They would take us in today as they did in 1917.

The Right Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker, writing for Harper's Magazine of March, 1918, said of American entry into the last war, quote: "Practically since the day war broke out between England and the Central Powers I became responsible for American publicity. * * * We established connection with the man in the street through cinema pictures of the Army and Navy, as well as through interviews, articles, pamphlets, etc. * * *

"We had reports from important Americans constantly, and established association, by personal correspondence, with influential and eminent people of every profession in the United States, beginning with university and college presidents, professors and scientific men, and running through all the ranges of the population.

We had our documents and literature sent to great numbers of public libraries, Y. M. C. A. societies, universities, colleges, historical societies, clubs and newspapers. It is hardly necessary to say that the work was one of extreme difficulty and delicacy." Unquote.

Attacks Educators' Action

Do Sir Gilbert's words in any way explain the war-mongering telegram to the President urging greater aid to Britain? Has British propaganda again reached the college and university professors? Twenty-nine educators signed the highly publicized wire that urged steps that would take the United States into war on the side of Britain.

And have you and I, "the man in the street," felt the insidious force of war propaganda through the movies?

Is there another Sir Gilbert Parker in the United States? Perhaps not, but there are a lot of foreign slackers, European royalty, princes and potentates, and their idolaters, who, instead of being wined and dined in high places in Washington and urging us to go to war, ought to be home fighting the battles for liberty and Christianity they so glibly tell us about. Poor things! As usual, they were forced to leave their country while their subjects had to remain to do the fighting.

My friends, it is this satanically clever propaganda that appeals to the Christianity, the idealism, the

"Aggressive" U. S. Designs

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec., 30—An Italian announcer on the Government radio station here tonight declared the United States "nurtures aggressive designs against Europe," but watchful waiting characterized the official Fascist reaction to President Roosevelt's anti-Axis speech last night.

Shipment of war materials to Britain under United States flags or surrender to England of Italian and German ships in United States port "would be regarded by the Axis powers as an open break of neutrallty tantamount to United States entry into the war," the announcer pointed out.

DEC

He said the Axis repeated its "indorsement" of the Monroe Doctrine, meaning that "Europe should keep its hands off America, and America should keep its hands off Europe."

"With great frankness," the speaker declared the Axis "would regard it as a very good thing" if all European territorial possessions in the Western Hemisphere were liquidated to the interests of those countries in America.

"Nor, as far as the southern Pacific is concerned, is there any objection whatsoever . . . if Australia and New Zealand elected to place themselves under the protection of the United States and Canada instead of Great Britain, together with all the southern Pacific Islands at present belonging to Britain and France."

The President's statement that a new order in Europe eventually would involve the United States in war, the announced said, was a denial by Roosevelt of "Europe's right to settle her own internal affairs."

Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor often reflecting Premier Mussolini's own views, said German-Italian "tolerance" had its limits.

Note! Each column continued on reverse side gold buried in the hills of Kentucky.

This group wants to repeal our Neutrality Act and the Johnson act. They want to loan our ships, our guns and our planes, even though it may involve us in the European conflict. They profess to believe it is necessary for the preservation of our country, our religion and civilization.

We were told the same things in almost the same terms before the last war.

Defense Group Is Considered

The other group feels that we should build our defenses to meet any emergency that may arise. But we do not believe that the preservation of the American people or our democracy depends upon any foreign nation. It is hard for us to defend ourserves, when our forefathers in the thirteen original colonies, poor, divided and weak, were not only able to conquer an army already in our midst but to build the greatest democracy the world has ever known.

Just as I love the United States so do I dislike Hitler and all that he symbolizes. My sympathy for the British is both deep and genuine and is exceeded only by the depth and sincerity of my Americanism. No anti-British feeling dictates my opposition to the evasion or repeal of the Johnson and Neutrality acts.

I am opposed to American convoy of British ships. I oppose all these because they lead us down that road with only one ending, total, complete and futile war. And Mr. William Allen White, chairman of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, agrees that the convoying of British ships by American vessels and the repeal of the Neutrality and Johnson acts would mean war for us.

Refers to President's Speech

Remember, if we lend or lease war materials today, we will lend or lease American boys tomorrow. Last night we heard the President promise that there would be no American expeditionary force but we received no promises that our ships and sailors and our planes and pilots might not at some time within the near future be cast into the cauldron of blood and hate that is Europe today.

Our independence can only be lost or compromised if Germany invades the Western Hemisphere north of the equator. This would be fantastic, as it would require the transportation of at least 2,000,000 men, with planes, tanks and equipment, in one convoy across the Atlantic. This would require two or three thousand transports plus a fleet larger than our Navy, plus thousands of fighter-escorted bombers.

Such a fleet cannot possibly be available. Certainly it cannot be trained efficiently before our two-ocean Navy is ready. It is not possible for the German Navy to prepare an effective plan for such an invasion which our Navy and Army with our air force can-exert his every effort for peace now.

Removal of Hitler, even the defeat of the German armies, will not destroy that which Hitler symbolizes. Hitlerism can be destroyed and banished from Europe only by destroying that which caused or maintains nazism.

Ask yourselves who and what were responsible for the real birth and growth of Hitlerism.

Lord Lothian, until his recent death, wartime Ambassador from Great Britain to the United States, said of nazism (I quote him):

"In great measure it was rebellion against the discriminations of the treaty of Versailles. * * *"

That wasn't some Nazi sympathizer; that was Lord Lothian speaking.

I firmly believe the German people want peace just as any people prefer peace to war. And the offer of a just, reasonable and generous peace will more quickly and effectively crumble Hitlerism and break the morale of the German people than all the bombers that could be dispatched over Berlin.

Peace Linked to Belligerents

A just peace is difficult, if not impossible, to abstractly define while war rages. It is too completely dependent on the attitude of the belligerents.

A working basis for a just peace might involve among other factors the following:

Restoration of Germany's 1914 boundaries with an autonomous Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

Restoration of independent France, Holland, Norway, Belgium and Denmark.

Restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France.

Restoration of German colonies.

Protection of all racial and religious minorities in all countries.

Internationalization of the Suez Canal.

No indemnities or reparations.

Arms limitation.

The United States is no longer trudging along the road to war. We are running. Some feel that we have gone so fast and so far that there can be no stopping—no return to complete peace except via war. But we are at peace and we can remain at peace if either one of two lines of action is pursued. First, Americans in greater number must firmly resolve and express themselves that we will fight no offensive war. And, secondly, we can remain at peace if the horrible European débâcle of death and destruction ends in the near future.

Though today we stand as close to the brink of war as we stood in January of 1917, some people still oppose a European peace. War mongers, sordid romanticists, reckless adventurers and some whose sympathies and sentiments are stronger than their reasoning powers would plunge this nation into war. Plunge us into a war from which we could gain nothing. Plunge us into a war that would destroy democracy, that would bring deep, harhumanity and the loyalty of the American people that take us to war. It is this that we must resist. It is this that we must cast aside if we truly love our country and democracy. We must remain at peace and dedicate ourselves to effecting peace for a war-torn world.

Demands Free Speech Right

We have reached a strange situation in America when those who advocate peace, who do not follow the party line, are branded appeasers or unwitting tools of the dictators. This still is a democracy, and American citizens whose beliefs vary from those of the Government ought not to be howled down or intimidated. Free speech still belongs to all the people, not to just a few at the top.

I do not believe that the great majority of our people are eager to be embraced by war and I call upon them not to be afraid to say so. I, for one, believe the policy advocated by the interventionists is insane because it will lead to total war, and war is insanity.

I say so now and I intend to continue to say so, even if at the end I stand alone.

Americans! Do not let yourselves be swayed by mass hysteria. Do not travel again the road that you took in 1917. You hanged Bob LaFollette in effigy because he opposed war—and lived to repent your action and put him in the hall of fame. fifteen years after the war, when the secret treaties were exposed, you realized that you had been duped. Has history suddenly changed?

Urges Appeal to Congress

Are the facts of yesterday no longer facts? Has this war a sweeter odor than the last? Don't let yourselves be misled by the so-called notables. Numerically they are few—a few hundred—even though they command the newspaper headlines. But they do not speak for the mass of Americans. They do not represent labor, the farmer, the youth, the mothers or the fathers of America. The great mass of our people are inarticulate, but it is time you were heard. You must not be driven like sheep to the slaughtering pens.

There is a war that I call upon you to enter—a noble war which the royalty of Europe and our Tory friends at home are unwilling to face—a war to end economic inequality and poverty and disease in this, the richest land in the world.

America's war ought to be a war against industrial unemployment and low farm prices.

Whether the stroke of twelve will usher in a really happy New Year tomorrow night depends upon you—and upon your sincere loyalty to Christian ideals. "Peace on earth to men of good-will" is a sacred cause for which we should pray and work. Let your representatives in Washington know that you have not surrendered the independence of America to war-mongers and interventionists, and God will bless America.

Berlin Tight-Lipped; Awaits Hitler Cue

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 30—The official German reaction to President Roosevelt's talk last night is Adolf Hitler's personal secret and until he breaks the silence no one—not even officials usually well-informed—can predict what Germany's attitude will be, it was indicated today.

This stand was evident to correspondents attending the daily press conference today.

Hitler Has Translation

From the atmosphere in political circles it was evident that Roosevelt's speech was considered to be of vital importance. It also seemed, for the time being, as if official Germany would stick to its policy of not letting itself be provoked into hasty action toward the United States.

But that is guesswork—nobody can with certainty anticipate Hitler's actions in vital moments.

The Führer is wont to take his time. That he already has a translation of the Roosevelt text in hand was admitted. That he is away from the noise and bustle of the capital is also known. But that is all that is known.

No sooner had the expected question about the Roosevelt talk been asked than a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said emphatically, underscoring every word: "Ich habe keinerlei Stellungnahme abzugeben." Literally, this means "I have no announcement whatever to make of the position taken," but the wording also permits of the translation: "I may not make any statement concerning the reaction."

Sticks To Same Words

Those present concluded that the spokesman failed to state the reaction not only because he had no instructions about it as yet, but because a strict injunction had gone out from the highest quarters that no one in official or semi-official position may say anything for the present.

Later attempts to elicit a reply by tackling the question indirectly or from varying angles met with the same apparently memorized German words.

Afternoon papers carried a brief summary of the Roosevelt speech, omitting the President's prediction that the Axis would lose the war. They devoted about the same amount of space to Senator Burton K. Wheeler's address to the National Youth Anti-War Congress.

U. S. Liner To Bring Nearly 1,000 From Orie

The President Coolidge Due To Sail Today From Shanghai Via Kobe And Yokohama

Shanghai, Tuesday, Dec. 31 (AP)—The American liner President Coolidge is scheduled to sail tomorrow for the United States via Kobe and Yokohama; where about 200 Americans will be added to the passenger list of nearly 800.

The President Coolidge brought 550 Americans here from Hongkong and is picking up 251 here, mostly missionaries and children.

Numerous other missionaries plan to go home on the President Pierce January 6 and the President Taft January 20, but many others are remaining at their posts or are slipping into the portion of China not occupied by Japanese troops.

U. S. ARMS-LENDING PROGRAM MAY INCLUDE GREECE AND CHINA

Morgenthau States Extent of Assistance Will Be Up to Congress.

HE HAS LUNCH WITH PURVIS

President Is Highly Pleased With Country's Reaction to Radio Speech.

Washington, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau disclosed today that President Roosevelt's lease-lending plan for financing war materials might apply to Greece, China and other countries.

Asked about lending airplanes and other materials to Greece and China, he said that the plan might apply to anybody. The extent to which the plan was used, he said, would depend on Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt said recently that instead of basing future aid to Great Britain on dollars, he favored lending on mortgaging weapons to the British, so that they could be repaid in kind after the war.

Mr. Morgenthau made the statement soon after returning from a White House luncheon to which he escorted Arthur B. Purvis, director-general of the British Purchasing Commission. The secretary, however, declined to discuss the meeting with the President.

Purvis Talk Was General.

Mr. Purvis told reporters afterward that it was a general talk on supply matters and the situation in London as he found it over there. He returned last week from England.

He said that he did not present any new British requirements to the Chief Executive and that the question of augmenting Britain's dwindling merchant fleet was not brought up.

The President also scheduled conferences with Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State, and with Capt. Allen Kirk, who has just returned from London, where he was naval attache at the American embassy.

President Shows Pleasure.

Meanwhile the President was described as tremendously pleased by the reaction to his defense address, in which he told the nation that it faced an emergency comparable only to war and that it must be the great arsenal of democracy.

Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, said that Mr. Roosevelt was gratified that leaders of both parties had praised the speech, because he had called for national effort and realized that it could be attained quicker and more effectively by unity.

Last night's address, Mr. Early said, brought a greater response than any other Mr. Roosevelt had made. Messages ran about 100 to 1 in favor of the views expressed in it, he added, saying that the total was not yet available.

Nothing More Specific.

Asked whether the President was likely to be more specific in future addresses than in the one last night, Mr. Early replied that he did not think Mr. Roosevelt would go into a statistical review.

He was asked whether Mr. Roosevelt had anything definite in mind, such as automobiles, when he said that production of luxury goods might have to be supplanted by production of war materials. Mr. Early asserted that he thought the President had nothing more specific in view than what he had said in the address.

As for the President's declaration that the idea of business as usual must be abandoned, Mr. Early said he thought that applied only for the duration of the emergency.

AIR MARSHAL TELLS CANADA OF NEW DEVICE

Sir Hugh Dowding Predicts System Will Be In Effect By Spring

Emissary Coming To Washington This Week To Discuss Planes

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 30—The nights of Germany's bombers are numbered, Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding assured Canadians today on his arrival here from London en route to the United States.

A method of frustrating the night bombers definitely has been found, Sir Hugh said, and the necessary equipment is being completed so rapidly that by sometime this spring the bombers' "whole weight and sting will have been removed."

Predicts Heavy Casualties

The former chief of Britain's fighter command added, "I don't mean to say that night bombing will cease entirely.

The odd bomber may come, but the casualties from heavy and concentrated attacks will compel them to desist from night bombing just as they were compelled to give up their policy of crashing through in daylight in preparation for invasion."

He warned that "the end of night bombing may greatly increase the menace of air attacks at sea, for the bombers diverted from our cities may be expected to seek other targets."

To Leave For Washington

Sir Hugh is conferring here with C. G. Power, Canadian Air Minister, and other officials, but plans to depart Thursday or Friday for Washington, where he will discuss means of standardizing plans and other air equipment manufactured for Britain.

The air marshal emphasized that he was "not going to Washington to lay down the law," but to seek greater coordination of British air-war needs with American production.

He said that "up-to-date knowledge of actual fighting conditions" would be placed at the disposal of American authorities.

DEC 31 1940

Praises U. S. Planes

Sir Hugh said that thus far comparatively few United States-built aircraft have been used in the R. A. F. fighter command, but expressed great interest in the latest United States types, which he said have the performance required of good fighters.

American planes are of great value to the coastal command, he said, and are, in fact, the best available for coastal patrol work.

Some American equipment, particularly navigational instruments, is better than British equipment, he said, and in other cases the reverse is true.

He showed great interest in the new United States Airacobra fighter and commended the Douglas dive bomber.

German dive bombers are good, too, he conceded, "but not pleasant things to be in if caught by a squadron of Spitfires."

MARSHALL SAYS U. S. SPURNED 1939 NAZI PEACE OFFER

'No War' Chief Terms Germany's Proposal Honorable and Just

State Department in Reply To Charges, Declares No 'Feasible' Plan Received

DEC 31 1940

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—Verne Marshall, Chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, reported today that high Nazi officials had proposed "honorable and just" peace terms to be negotiated at a White House conference a month after the war started but that the Roosevelt administration rebuffed the offer.

Marshall described the terms as constituting "a sound economic peace." He added that Americans "want the war won by whichever side can dictate a sound economic peace" to eliminate future conflict.

The German peace offer, Marshall said, was brought to this country by W. R. Davis, New York oil operator who Marshall said had sold expropriated Mexican oil to the Axis powers but only prior to the war. The offer, he said, was pigeonholed at the State Department.

State Department Replies

Tonight, the State Department issued a statement saying that, "Naturally individual citizens often volunteer to the State Department information and suggestions pertaining to some phase of international affairs" and that "these are always courteously received.

"Nothing, however, has come to the State Department on the subject mentioned which has proved feasible," the statement added.

"Furthermore, the government can only conduct important international affairs effectively through duly authorized and official channels created for that purpose."

Marshall, editor of the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette, recounted the details at a press conference when reporters quizzed him as to whether Davis was giving financial support to the No Foreign War Committee. The editor said Davis had offered to assist.

Marshall also was asked whether Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was a member of the committee.

"Colonel Lindbergh warned me repeatedly," he replied, "against letting his name appear publicly in our support. I said to him, 'The sooner you walk up Fifth Avenue as an executive of our committee, the happier I'll be'."

To further questions about Davis and his activities, Marshall related that the oil man went abroad by Clipper in September, 1939, "after a lengthy conference at the White House with President Roosevelt and Adolph Berle of the State Department," and that "the President knew what he was going for."

Efforts were made at Bermuda to stop Davis from proceeding, Marshall continued, but he succeeded in getting through.

"On Oct. 9 or thereabouts," Marshall's account continued, "Davis landed at Port Washington, N. Y., bringing a complete agenda as conceived and taken down in shorthand by several stenographers at a conference that lasted parts of three days. That's all I'm going to say about the conference.

"Davis delivered at the State Department the agenda for what appears to me would have been presented for the consideration of a peace conference.

"The document itself in plain words agreed that President Roosevelt would be the mediator at a conference in the White House. It indicated the identity of the plenipotentiaries who would be sent. Davis had it translated into English."

Given to State Department

"He notified the White House he was here. They asked him to submit it to the State Department. He declined, explaining he thought it should be placed only before the President. After jockeying back and forth all of one day, he finally agreed to take it to the State Department and submit it to Berle.

"Davis was so mystified by all these circumstances that he refused to give Berle the original document, initialled by all the high government officials of at least two governments who attended the conference on these peace proposals, but gave him a copy. Berle was exercised—he was mad.

"Davis didn't give him the original, but I know where it is, and I have a copy."

Marshall said that he believed the only copies were those held by Davis, the State Department, and himself but that "maybe a certain United States Senator" whom he did not name had one.

To queries about the terms of the document Marshall suggested that reporters apply to Berle but said he regarded the terms as "amazing because they were predicated entirely on a lasting solution to the economic differences which always have caused all wars."

"At that time," he emphasized, "only Poland had been bombed."

Proposes Easy Air "Bridge" Between Europe And America

Dr. W. H. Hobbs Offers Plan By Which Greenland Could Be Crossed Through Wind Holes

DEC 31 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Philadelphia, Dec. 30—An authority on Greenland today offered a plan for an easy air "bridge" over which fighting planes could pass back and forth between Europe and America with no water hop longer than 900 miles.

The plan involves crossing Greenland, now held by German-controlled Denmark.

It was put forward by Dr. William H. Hobbs, of the University of Michigan, who told the American Association for the Advancement of Science that he has discovered two big "holes" in the wind barriers that airmen heretofore have believed impeded flight over Greenland.

Discusses Wind Obstacle

One "hole," he said, could be used for east-west flights, and the other for the opposite direction.

Airmen using his route would first touch, or leave, the North American continent in Labrador. Other stops would be southern Greenland, Iceland (now temporarily in British hands) and the British Isles.

The wind obstacle is Greenland's centrifugal storms, supposed by scientists to be the key to weather of the Northern Hemisphere. The storms according to Dr. Hobbs, are seldom equaled elsewhere in intensity.

Above this whirl there is a strong wind rotating in the opposite direction. Knowing this and by choosing the right altitude it is nearly always possible, Dr. Hobbs said, to make a Greenland flight with a favoring tail wind.

Vital To Keep Canal Open

The American counterpart of France's great Maginot Line was described by a naval expert at today's meeting.

This line, according to Capt. G. S. Bryan, hydrographer of the United States Navy, can be outlined as a circle 2,000 miles or more in diameter, measured from the Panama Canal.

With a one-ocean navy and the threatening possibility of a two-ocean war in which all the countries of the Western Hemisphere would be threatened, maintenance of the canal as an open waterway for the passage of battleships and troopships is one of the most vital of defenses, he declared, and every effort is being made to protect it.

Until a two-ocean navy is built and ready for action, it is vital to Western Hemisphere defense to keep the canal open for quick shifting of vessels to and fro to meet threats from either European or Asiatic powers, Captain Bryan declared.

To emphasize the importance of naval and air defense of the canal, he pointed out that damage to the canal "might result in leaving a force in either ocean in a position of inferiority."

"The importance of the canal to our national defense would encourage an enemy to make an effort to destroy it or at least to render it inoperative," he added.

"Such a move, if successful, might alter the strategical situation enough to decide the outcome of the war."

The wealth of the West Indies and the rest of the Western Hemisphere from the Straits of Magellan to Great Slave Lake, in northern Canada, "has always aroused the cupidity of other countries," he said.

America's Maginot Line

The Maginot Line of the Americas worked out since acquisition of bases in British-owned islands, consists of a string of harbors and airports in Bermuda, the Bahamas, San Juan, St. Thomas, Antiqua, St. Lucia and Trinidad to provide a "feeler force" in the Caribbean.

Back of these are a group of deep-water harbors such as those in Jamaica, Guantanamo, Gonaives, Port Au Prince, Trinidad, the Gulf of Cariaco and Pozuelos Bay bases for a main force of warships and airplane carriers.

In the Pacific, "an invading force probably would seize a base on the Central American or Colombian coast, or in the Galapagos Islands," Captain Bryan said. To meet such a threat, the navy's light forces would be stationed along these areas to meet any attempts of invasion.

With the bases newly acquired from Great Britain, countries of the Western Hemisphere are in an excellent defensive position for interception of invaders, Captain Bryan declared, and in the Pacific the distances are so great that attacks by foreign battleships across the great southern circle route are strategically improbable.

EXPORTS TO JAPAN FROM U. S. INCREASE

Total $191,413,000 For Ten Months Of '40 Against $179,377,000 In '39

Sales Of Petroleum Products Also Show Gain For This Period

DEC 31 1940

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 30—American exports to Japan increased during the first ten months of 1940 in comparison to 1939, the Department of Commerce disclosed today.

For the ten months, latest period for which Department of Commerce figures are available, American exports to Japan totaled $191,413,000, compared with $179,377,000 last year.

Oil Men Increase Business

Far from losing their Japanese market, oil men increased their business across the Pacific. Total sales of petroleum products, mostly of California origin, totaled $37,672,000, compared with $35,761,000.

Averaging $3,750,000 a month, the prospect for the industry was some $45,000,000 or better in sales to Japan this year.

Japan spent more in American markets for crude oil than for any petroleum product, but decreased the total crude purchases more than 3,000,000 barrels. The shipments were somewhat less than 10,000,000 barrels sold for $13,275,000. That was nearly $4,000,000 less than value of shipments for the same period last year.

Iron And Steel Materials

Gasoline shipments of 1,749,000 barrels sold for $9,426,000—increasing more than $4,000,000 in spite of the shut-off of aviation gasoline. Fuel oil shipments decreased appreciably. Lubricating oils, while a little lower in volume, rose markedly in value.

Iron and steel materials, considerably in the limelight, increased in value of shipments to Japan, in spite of a big cut in scrap tonnage. Total value of iron and steel semi-manufactures of various groups was $33,788,000, compared with $33,308,000 last year. Steel manufactures exports to Japan went up to $3,651,000 from $1,885,000.

Figures Out on Arms Output

Defense Commission Reports 700 Planes a Month Are Now Being Turned Out.

DEC 31 1940

Washington, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The defense commission reported today that the nation's arms output was up to 2,400 aircraft engines, 700 planes, more than 10,000 semi-automatic rifles and 100 tanks a month.

The defense program, the commission said, already had put a million persons to work in the last two months, and "several million more will be needed by next November."

The agency likewise reported that it had approved contracts totaling more than ten billion dollars, and that the army and navy had awarded nine-tenths of these, including $3,300,000,000 for ships, $1,500,000,000 for factory expansion and housing, $1,500,000,000 for planes and parts, $600,000,000 for ammunition, $500,000,000 for guns and $400,000,000 for trucks and tanks.

These contracts, plus those placed by the British and other nations, commit American industry to produce 50,000 airplanes and 130,000 airplane engines, 9,200 tanks, 2,055,000 guns of all kinds and their ammunition, 380 navy ships, 200 mercantile ships, 210 camps and cantonments.

clothing and equipment for 1,200,000 men; 50,000 trucks.

Also under contracts are forty Government factories, among them the first mass-production tank factory in the world, five explosive plants, six ammunition plants, five machine-gun plants.

Gun contracts embrace 400,000 automatic rifles, 1,300,000 regular rifles, 17,000 heavy guns, 25,000 light guns, 13,000 trench mortars, 300,000 machine guns. Other contracts call for 33,000,000 loaded shells.

Another item was that a new fighting ship slides down the ways every twelve days to join the navy.

The report, designed to give the public a summary of the commission's work since its formation last May, was released not many hours after President Roosevelt informed the nation last night that armament production to date was "not enough" to meet the heavy demands and that "more of everything" was needed fast.

The commission said that in the last six months stock piles of such strategic materials as tin, antimony, manganese, tungsten, and chrome ore had been accumulated, production of synthetic materials encouraged, and expansion of facilities to produce aluminum, vital in the construction of warplanes, had been undertaken on a large scale.

War Communiques

British

LONDON, Dec. 30 (AP).—An Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

Last night the enemy dropped a large number of incendiary bombs on the City of London in a deliberate attempt to set fire to it.

Damage was done to many famous buildings, including the Guildhall and several of the City churches. St. Paul's itself was endangered but the neighboring fires were extinguished in time.

There was nowhere any attempt to single out targets of military importance.

Fires also were caused in other parts of the London area where damage was done to commercial buildings.

London's fire services worked heroically and with success throughout the night.

Casualties were few.

A government communique:

During daylight today, bombs have been dropped by single enemy aircraft at one point in East Anglia and a place in Kent. The damage done was slight and casualties few.

CAIRO, Dec. 30 (AP).—A British general headquarters communique:

Enemy artillery in Bardia was somewhat more active yesterday in reply to our continued harassing fire. Our troops sustained no damage or interruptions to preparations, which are proceeding smoothly.

On the Sudan-Kenya front, active patrolling continues.

A Royal Air Force Middle East command communique:

Enemy landing grounds at Tmimi, Derna and Gazala in the western desert were raided by bomber aircraft of the Royal Air Force yesterday. Fires were started at Tmimi and dispersed aircraft were attacked, but the full extent of the damage could not be observed. At Gazala and Derna, bombs straddled the targets.

Our fighters continued their offensive patrols, but no contact was made with enemy aircraft.

The remainder of this communique was identical with that issued in Athens.

ATHENS, Dec. 30 (AP).—A Royal Air Force communique:

Valona, chief enemy port in Albania, was attacked for the twenty-first and twenty-second times yesterday by bomber aircraft of the Royal Air Force.

In the first raid our pilots saw bombs exploding among transports and troops moving on a road near a jetty where a building was hit and a large fire started. Heavy anti-aircraft fire was experienced and enemy fighters attacked. The engagement lasted fifteen minutes. One of our aircraft was shot down, two members of the crew descending by parachutes.

The second raid was carried out in bad weather condtions, but various hits were registered on a road leading to the northern jetty, buildings were hit and a number of bombs were observed to burst in a motor transport park and military stores. Two cargo boats, a merchant ship and a cruiser were machine-gunned.

On the return flight a formation of enemy bombers was seen and fired at, but the aircraft took cover in a cloud before results could be observed.

With the exception of one aircraft lost in the first raid, all our aircraft returned safely.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 30 (AP).—The German high command communique:

The night of Dec. 28 combat planes attacked port facilities at Plymouth. Bombs caused fires and explosions.

In the course of armed day reconnaissance flights (Dec. 29), several war-vital objectives on the English east coast were bombed. Furthermore, one important industrial plant at Crewe suffered several direct hits in a dive attack.

East of Harwich a freighter of approximately 10,000 tons sailing in a convoy was set afire by bombs. Farther east and south, a minelayer was struck. During an attack on a large convoy 200 kilometers (about 125 miles) northwest of Londonderry, a freighter was hit so severely by a bomb that it listed and sank.

Navy artillery took under fire an enemy warship which tried to approach the Channel coast in the haze. After a few well-aimed salvos, the target could no longer be seen.

Last night larger combat plane units again bomb-raided London.

A few enemy planes last night dropped bombs on German and occupied territory, exclusively into open fields or the sea. Anti-aircraft guns shot down two enemy planes.

Greek

ATHENS, Dec. 31 (Tuesday) (AP).—A Greek ministry of Home Security communique:

Enemy aviation made the following raids on Greece yesterday:

Salonika—Two casualties, slight damage.

Preveza—No casualties, slight damage to buildings.

Janina—Small number of casualties, slight damage.

On rural district of Cozani—No damage or casualties.

Yesterday's Greek Army headquarters communique:

Local successful operations at various points. More than 1,000 prisoners were taken, including an entire battalion with their officers. Four guns and many automatic weapons, mortars and such material have fallen into our hands.

A section of skiers attempted to act, but was dispersed and abandoned its equipment and lost a number of prisoners.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

In the Cyrenaica (Libya) frontier zone artillery actions are continuing around Bardia. Some small English mechanized detachments which attempted to approach our works have been repelled.

In successive offensive actions our air force dropped shrapnel bombs and machine-gunned enemy mechanized forces. Numerous vehicles were damaged or destroyed.

In the Jarabub zone, an enemy attack was repulsed.

The English bombed some of our bases, without causing damage.

On the Greek front the enemy attempted operations of a local character, but was repelled with serious losses.

Formations of our bombing and fighter planes of two squadrons one after another attacked harbor installations, defense preparations and troops.

At Preveza, an enemy naval base, following a bombing action carried out with daring, fires and serious damage were caused to materials, harbor installations and a steamer in the bay.

Over Valona, naval anti-aircraft defense guns shot down a bombing plane in flames yesterday morning. Fighter planes intercepting a formation shot down two more enemy planes.

Naval units carried out an undisturbed and prolonged bombardment against enemy preparations along the Greek and Albanian coast with evident destructive results.

In East Africa there is nothing noteworthy to report.

The night of Dec. 29 to Dec. 30 enemy planes in two successive waves flew over Naples, dropping leaflets and some bombs in the city. Blocks of civilian dwellings were hit. Seven persons were killed and some wounded.

One of our submarines stationed in the Atlantic shot down an English bombing plane.

Reaction in France to Speech By Roosevelt Is Vital to Hitler

DEC 31 1941

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

One of the new and stern questions Adolf Hitler is facing today is what the French reaction is likely to be to President Roosevelt's declaration that "there will be no bottleneck in our determination to aid Great Britain," and that he believes "the Axis Powers are not going to win this war."

The French attitude, which has hardened toward Nazidom still further this last week end, is one of Der Fuehrer's great worries. That makes it one of the worries of the other two partners of the triple alliance—Italy and Japan.

Hitler is said to have been trying everything he could to cajole or frighten old Marshal Petain, French Chief of State, into giving the support of France to Germany against England. The Nazi Chief wants use of the still powerful French fleet, and he at least wants assurances that the armies in the French colonies won't make war against the Axis.

Petain has stood his ground stubbornly and with growing independence. Indeed, he is reported to have threatened to cut the French Colonial forces loose against the Axis if the Nazi demands are too harsh. It would be a grievous blow to Hitler should Marshal Petain throw the support of his navy and colonies to Britain at this crucial juncture, when Germany is maneuvering for position to administer the finishing blow to England by invasion.

At Inconvenient Moment.

And now, at a most inconvenient moment, comes the Roosevelt speech, making America the "arsenal of democracy." It is one of the last things which Hitler could have wished. It is one of the things which the triple alliance has been trying to stave off by threats of dire consequences if America doesn't cease aiding Britain.

What will the French reaction be? It is difficult to see how Hitler can find any answer other than that France's determination not to aid Britain's enemies will be immeasurably strengthened. Anything which strengthens Britain's chances to win must give added courage to France.

Why doesn't Hitler use force on France to compel acquiescence with his wishes?

Well, he could. Continental France is crushed and is under the hob-nailed boots of a vast German Army of occupation. Herr Hitler could exact terrible penalties for failure to co-operate. But with all that he is up against this proposition—you can enforce a considerable degree of obedience with guns, but you can't exact loyalty. Der Fuehrer couldn't make Frenchmen fight against Britain if they didn't want to—and as a whole they don't.

Needs Aid of French Crews.

It would avail him little to seize the vastly important French fleet, unless he could at the same time secure the services of the French officers and crews. He could scarcely man and operate those warships with German crews.

What is more to the point, any move of this sort likely would result in the great French colonies throwing their active support to England.

Gen. de Gaulle, leader of the Free French forces still allied to Britain, took advantage of the position at the week end to make an appeal to all Frenchmen to go to the aid of the Anglo-Allied cause. He declared that if French North Africa, Syria and the French fleet were fighting with the Allies, the battle of the Mediterranean could be won quickly.

The way things are tending, I think those who want France to lend her aid to Britain have a right to do a little wishful thinking. It perhaps would be a mistake to bank too much on active military aid, for Continental France is a prisoner in German hands, but it shouldn't be overlooked that Marshal Petain's refusal to join Hitler against Britain is a powerful, though indirect, assistance to the Allies.

LEAHY REACHES LISBON

Will Be at Vichy to Take Post as Envoy Probably Sunday

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 30 (AP)—Delayed three hours by a dense fog, the United States cruiser Tuscaloosa carrying Admiral William D. Leahy to his new post as Ambassador to Vichy, France, anchored in the Tagus River today after exchanging salutes with a shore battery.

As soon as the cruiser dropped anchor, the United States naval attachés at Lisbon and Vichy, Commander Ben H. Wyatt and Commander Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, boarded the ship and escorted the new envoy and Mrs. Leahy ashore. They lunched at the American Legation.

It was announced that Admiral Leahy probably would remain in Lisbon over the New Year and h[e] at Vichy probably Sunday.

HITLER SEES VICTORY NEXT YEAR; ROOSEVELT UNDER NAZI PRESS FIRE

JAN 1 - 1941

FUEHRER DENIES AIM TO CONQUER ALL THE WORLD

JAN 1 - 1941

Dictator Issues New Year's Messages to His Army and Nazi Party.

LAUDS TROOPS AND PEOPLE

Assails Democracies and Says God Has Placed Stamp of Approval on Reich.

Berlin, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler denounced the democracies and their capitalistic workings in a New Year's message today, and promised his fighting forces that 1941 would bring them victory against all odds.

"God up to now has placed the stamp of approval on our battle," he told the Nazi party and people in a long New Year's message. In a briefer message to his fighting men he promised that "the year 1941 will bring completion of the greatest victory of our history."

Although he made no mention in either message of President Roosevelt's Sunday night speech, calling for increased war aid from the United States to Great Britain, some observers saw his forecast as an answer to the President.

[In his broadcast Mr. Roosevelt said: "I believe that the axis Powers are not going to win this war. I base that belief on the latest and best information.]

Without mentioning Mr. Roosevelt, Hitler, nevertheless, matched against the President's warning of Nazi aims of world domination his own assertion that Italy and Germany had no such designs. Such statements he called "infamous lies."

Praises Courage of Troops.

The message, in the form of an Order of the Day, follows:

"Soldiers:

"In the war year of 1940 the National Socialist armed forces of the Greater German Reich won the most glorious victories of unparalleled greatness. With equal audacity the enemy was defeated on land, at sea, in the air. All tasks which I was compelled to demand of you were accomplished by your heroic courage and your soldierly ability.

"You have conquered the fighting forces of our opponents through the power of arms, but have conquered morally the territories taken possession of by you through your proud conduct and exemplary discipline.

"Thus, thanks to your high soldierly qualities, we have succeeded in a few months of world historic struggle in giving success supplementarily to the vain, heroic fight of the German armed forces in the world war, and definitely in eradicating the disgrace of oppression in the Compiegne Forest.

Predicts Victory in 1941.

"I thank you, my soldiers of the army, navy and air force, as your supreme commander, for your incomparable accomplishments. But I thank you also in the name of the entire German people.

"We remember the comrades who gave their lives in this struggle for the future of our people. We similarly think of the courageous soldiers of allied Fascist Italy.

"It is the will of the democratic war inciters and their Jewish-capitalistic wirepullers that the war must be continued. Representatives of the shattering world hope perhaps in 1941 still to achieve what they failed to achieve in the past.

"We are ready. Armed as never before, we stand at the door of the New Year. I know every one of you will do his duty. The Almighty, however, will not abandon those who, threatened by the world, determined with courageous hearts to help themselves.

"Soldiers of the National Socialist armed forces of the Greater Reich, the year 1941 will bring the completion of the greatest victory of our history."

What Hitler Said to Party.

Hitler's message to National Socialists said:

"The mighty and unique developments for 1940 had for humanity revolutionary significance, the full import of which will be realized only by later generations. . . . We who live in this time cannot but realize that Providence is stronger than individual men."

Hitler then said that when Germany recovered from the world war collapse, opponents as far back as 1933 employed every means to hinder her aspirations.

"Infernal hate" was manifested, not only against German goods, he added, but against the German people and "democratic papers even in the smallest lands" regarded it as their privilege "to scold the greatest middle European power, insult its leading men, ridicule its government and agitate for military violence against it." Every effort on the part of Germany to be co-operative in the society of nations was "repulsed with cynicism," he said, and Germany was exploited by plutocrats.

Generated a Psychosis.

"Characterless emigrants," Der Fuehrer added, "joined with Jewish parasites, who had left the Reich, cast suspicion on the German people and its leadership and thus helped generate a psychosis which sooner or later was bound to lead to war.

"For centuries some nations—headed by the English—have carried their wars over the world and robbed with force all they could gather, oppressed and impoverished great peoples totaling millions and, in such manner, built their so-called empires of blood and tears."

He denounced as stupid those "infamous lies" that "the German Reich or Italy intend to conquer the world, while in reality already existing world conquerors need wars to reap higher interest on their capital than before." It was these conquerors, he said, who "declared war on Germany. . . ."

He recapitulated his peace offer to Great Britain and France of October 6, 1939, and expressed scorn for "the practices of democratic war criminals," who, he said, label any German peace move as "weakness."

"When finally war was to begin, my last efforts to maintain peace were cast aside with the triumphant cry: 'It is now proven Germany is unprepared, and, therefore, now or never can easily be destroyed. . . .'

"The year 1940 brought a decision which in similar extent and tempo never before occurred in history."

Churchill's 'Babbling' Cited.

Hitler asserted that Prime Minister Churchill's "babbling revealed just in the right hour" that he had designs on Norway, so that German counter-measures could be made promptly.

"Lies and swindles" about the situation in Germany, Hitler said, started the Allies to occupy Belgium and Holland early in May to carry the war to the German border.

"German armed forces on May 10 countered these machinations in determination now to force a final decision in the west," he declared.

Hitler said that if the British ontend now that France stopped fighting unnecessarily, his retort is that the first to give up the battle in the west were the British divisions.

The action in the west demonstrated the worth of German arms to the world, he continued. But, he said, the home front kept pace with achievements afield.

After completion of the action in the west, he said, he appealed again to England to "end this senseless war."

"A wave of anger swept through capitalistic war profiteers," he charged.

Hitler Sees Social Unrest.

Now, he said, a feeling of nervousness is noticeable in the camp of Germany's opponents on account of the growing unrest of the peoples of those lands. He said that the "war agitators" were making "unscrupulous promises" to do something about social reforms after the conflict.

But the war now must go on to destruction of the elements responsible for it, Hitler continued.

"In 1941, the German army, marine and air force will be strengthened vastly and be better armed," he declared. "Their blows will demolish the last phrases of war criminals and thus bring about preconditions for real understanding among peoples."

Hitler said the issue was clearly drawn and "if Herr Churchill and associates now say their world cannot stand beside ours, that is his misfortune."

He then said that Italy faced a situation similar to Germany's and pronounced as childish any British hope for gains by incidental actions far removed from the central operations of the war.

Touching on the theme of total air war, he said Britain bombed German towns for three and a half months in "criminal night attacks" before Germany retaliated.

"Now this war will be carried on to its ultimate consequence—that is, responsible criminals are eliminated," he asserted. "It is no empty phrase, but bloody seriousness when we give assurance that for every bomb on us ten or, ifnecessary, a hundred will be returned."

This war will be won, not by luck but by justice, Hitler said.

"God up to now has placed the stamp of approval on our battle," he added. "He will not forsake us in the future, if we do our duty with courage and faith."

Newspapers Join Berlin Radio In Blasting White House Talk

Nazi Spokesmen Call President's Address 'Undignified, Weak and an Appeal to Lowest U. S. Instincts.'

JAN 1 1941

BY LOUIS LOCHNER

Berlin, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The German press, with a nod of consent from the Government, released today a torrent of caustic comment on President Roosevelt's latest suggestion to give every possible American aid to Great Britain.

With the appearance of explosive editorials on the subject, there was evidence on every side of tense emotions. But at the same time there were loud declarations that Germany would not permit herself to get unduly excited or allow herself to be "provoked."

There was a disposition to refer the whole controversy back to the "conscience of the American people." The attitude was that the United States knows how Germany feels—and that America has a chance to reflect before she is committed to a course more hostile to Germany.

[The Berlin radio also contributed this comment today: "The purpose of Roosevelt's speech obviously was, by painting a picture of non-existing dangers, to drag the United States into war at the side of England against the will of the American people and against the interests of the United States, into a war which practically already is decided. It is worthwhile to await reaction from the United States to the terrible danger such a frivolous policy of its President is likely to conjure up for the people guided by him."]

Press to Furnish Reply.

Informed sources said that the press comment, for the present at least, would constitute Adolf Hitler's reply to Mr. Roosevelt's speech.

Before the appearance of afternoon papers, the press attitude was outlined as calling the President's fireside talk "undignified in tone, weak in argument and not convincing," and "an appeal to the lowest instincts of the American people."

Mr. Roosevelt's alleged "co-responsibility" for the start of the war and his "responsibility for its prolongation" were emphasized by most of the influential German newspapers.

Some taunted him for trying to persuade the American people that the security of its powerful continent depends on the British navy.

In still other quarters, the President was accused of trying to pledge his nation to grave changes of policy before Congress had a chance to weigh every issue. But the fact that in the American governmental plan, Congress is a backstop which must approve fundamental policies was regarded as a comfort.

Case of Jitters Is Seen.

In other quarters Mr. Roosevelt's talk was pronounced "unstatesmanlike," while some commentators said that he was afflicted with jitters which caused him to conjure up goblins that don't exist. Repeatedly he was challenged on the score that he had misrepresented German aspirations to the American people.

The statement which German papers found most objectionable was the charge that Germany and Italy seek world domination. The press echoed an emphatic denial by Hitler himself of any such ambition and asserted that the Reich demands only human rights commensurate with its size, power and capacities.

The Lokalanzeiger commented: "Roosevelt is completely partisan, full of hate and astoundingly excited, despite the fact that neither Germany, Italy nor Japan ever did anything to Americans.

"But Roosevelt's nervousness is understandable, because he sees the war and its prolongation, for which he is responsible, are not working out as had been foreseen. . . . The situation of England must be very precarious if the President of the United States of America so completely disregards the rules of international courtesy."

Speculates on Sources.

Nachtausgabe made an oblique reference to the President's assertion that he had information that the Axis can't win the war, saying:

"Roosevelt picked words and phrases for his explosions of hate from newspaper articles and books of Jewish emigrants. Probably his 'secret material' concerning developments in the European war come from the same source."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said that, after soothing speeches during the presidential campaign, Mr. Roosevelt "now has let the cat—or to use his own form of speech, the Tiger of war hate—completely out of the bag." This newspaper further accused the President of falsifying history by misrepresenting important points of Hitler's policy.

In comment headed "bad conscience," Boersen Zeitung said:

"In time before the war Roosevelt was behind the scenes, an important stage director in a drama of enmity toward Germany."

Sees Germany Insulted.

The Nazi spokesmen giving a further preview of German press comment said that the Reich's newspapers furthermore say that the Roosevelt speech "neither politically nor from the viewpoint of its content caused any surprise," and would add: "It is remarkable, however, for its accumulation of partialities, untruths and insults to Germany and Italy."

The German press would further express surprise that 'The political leader of 120,000,000 people takes up such phrases of the Jewish press and makes them the subject of discourse to his people." The press, it was said, will also express surprise that Mr. Roosevelt takes Prime Minister Churchill as his model, despite the reaction which the British Premier's speech found in Italy.

Blames Bad Conscience.

Informed spokesmen reported that they expected the press to say in effect:

"One asks oneself how can the American President be so irritable when he is talking from a fireplace, where otherwise it is so 'gemuetlich' (comfortable)?

"We have one reply: It is the bad conscience of Franklin D. Roosevelt who realizes he is responsible for the situation wherein Britain finds herself today—a situation he himself realizes is hopeless.

"The speech is built on two untruths: First, the lie about aggressive intentions of Der Fuehrer on the American continent; second, the lie about an alleged attempt to acquire world dominion."

Charges Falsification.

The German press at Hitler's behest, it was learned, will further accuse the President of taking certain words from Der Fuehrer's address before the German workers on December 10 out of their socio-political context and even falsifying them. The press will argue that there exists no utterance of any German statesman, Hitler included, supporting the hypothesis of a desire to dominate the world. Germany, the German press has been instructed to argue, merely desires that living space which every nation of her size and culture has a right to possess.

Acting on precise instructions, the German press was further expected to accuse the President of not remembering American history in asserting that since the proclamation of the Monroe Doctrine there had been no European attack on America. It will remind the President, informed spokesmen said, of "British interference in the American civil war, the annexation of the Falkland Islands by the English, and the French expedition against Mexico in the Emperor Maximilian's day," and it will add that attacks on South America have always occurred from the North, and that the United States has interfered in Europe—especially in the world war. And it is the United States—so the argument will run—and not Germany, Italy and Japan which demands bases in South America.

At the same time, from the present handling of the German-American situation here, as it results from the President's talk, it seemed evident that Germany does not choose to be provoked.

From the viewpoint of strategy, informed spokesmen intimated, the press will hold that the President's speech is uninteresting because "American support of England, no matter in what form it comes, cannot delay—much less prevent—Britain's defeat."

Hitler Promises Total Victory This Year To His Troops And People

DENIES AXIS AIMS TO TRY TO DEFEAT WORLD

Says War Must Go On To Destroy Britain's "Responsible Elements"

JAN 1 1941

Nazi Press Lashes Out At Roosevelt For British-Aid Speech

BY ALVIN STEINKOPF

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 31—Adolf Hitler promised his fighting men and the people of the Reich today that 1941 would bring them total victory and, on a nod from his Government, the German press released a torrent of caustic denunciation of President Roosevelt's fireside talk on helping the British.

The explosive editorials were timed to coincide with two New Year's messages from the Führer—one to the soldiers and the other to all the Nazi party members—and with others from Hitler's chief lieutenants.

"Gott Mitt Uns"

Referring to Germany's traditional "Gott mitt uns" slogan, Hitler assured Germany that The Almighty is on their side and will stay there if the people keep their courage and faith. With words exceeding even his usual vigor of expression, he denied that Germany or Italy would attempt to conquer the world.

Apparently dropping his former theme of destruction of the British Empire, the Führer did declare that the war must go on to destruction of the "responsible elements."

Hitler did not mention Mr. Roosevelt. That was left to the press. But he did say accusation that he intends a world conquest were "infamous lies."

Excerpts From Message

Here are excerpts from the message of Hitler and his chief lieutenants:

Hitler (to the fighting forces)—"1941 will bring completion of the greatest victory in our history! . . . Almighty God won't abandon those who, threatened by the world, have determined with courageous hearts to help themselves. . . . The war must be continued, according to the will of the democratic war inciters and their Jewish-capitalistic wire-pullers. . . . We are ready! Armed as never before, we stand at the door of the New Year. . . ."

Hitler (to the National Socialists)—"Those infamous lies that the German Reich or Italy intend to conquer the world! . . . In reality the world conquerors already existing need wars to reap higher interest on their capital. These . . . are precisely those states which declared war on Germany. . . . In 1941 the German army, navy and air force will be strengthened vastly and better armed.

"Their Misfortune"

"Their blows will demolish the last phrases of the war criminal and thus bring about pre-conditions for a real understanding among peoples. . . . If Herr Churchill and his associates now say their world can't stand beside ours, that's their misfortune. . . . They won't destroy the German world. . . . Now this war will be carried on to its ultimate consequence—until the responsible criminals are eliminated. . . .

"It is in bloody seriousness that we give the assurance that for every bomb dropped on us, ten or, if necessary, a hundred will be returned. . . . This war will be won not by luck but by justice, . . . and justice is on the side of the people who fight for their threatened existence. . . . God up to now has placed the stamp of approval on our battle. He will not foresake us in the future if we do our duty with courage and faith!"

Praises Luftwaffe

Reichsmarshal Goering (to the air force): "You have fulfilled the word of hundred-fold retaliation!"

Marshal von Brauchitsch (to the army): "We shall defeat the last remaining foe! Forward with God for Germany!"

Grand Admiral Räder (to the navy): "Carry on with all power and the highest courage to the final victory, in steadfast belief in the future of great Germany!"

Propaganda Minister Goebbels (to the nation): "Schuschnigg boasted against the Reich two months before he was chased out of the Vienna Chancellery. . . . Benes had his trunk packed even while he declared he had a plan up his sleeve to save the (Czech) situation. . . . Polish statesmen still dreamed of victory before the gates of Berlin while the German guns fired Warsaw. . . . Two months before the French collapse Reynaud was . . . explaining solemnly how Germany would be divided. . . .

Britain "Bleeding"

"Does Mr. Churchill follow a different method today? . . . He speaks of the peace conditions he would lay before the Reich when the war is won, while actually the British Isle is bleeding from all its arteries. . . . 'Twas always thus. . . ."

There was every sign of tenser emotions over the American position, but, simultaneously, loud declarations that Germany would not let herself be "provoked." A disposition was evident to refer the controversy "to the conscience of the American people."

Many of the most influential papers in the nation stressed what they called Mr. Roosevelt's "coresponsibility" for the start of the war and his "responsibility for its prolongation." Some charged tauntingly that he was trying to persuade Americans that the security of their powerful continent depended on the British navy.

Other Accusations

Still others accused him of trying to pledge the nation to grave changes in policy before Congress has a chance to weigh every issue.

Commentators said his fireside talk was "unstatesmanlike" and that the President was afflicted with jitters which caused him to conjure up goblins which do not exist. Repeatedly he was challenged on the score that he had misrepresented German aspirations to the American people.

The statement which drew the most concerted fire was the charge that Germany and Italy seek to dominate the world. The press echoed Hitler's own emphatic denial of any such ambition, and said Germany demands only human rights commensurate with her size, power and capacities.

U. S. Part Belittled

Hitler's definite setting of 1941 as the year for victory brought many commentators to the conclusion that whatever America may do will have little bearing on the outcome of the war.

They believed that substantial American help would be too late to help Britain in any event and that once Britain is defeated relations with the United States should clarify rapidly because of repeated insistence that the Reich has no aspirations menacing to America in the Western Hemisphere.

The Lokal Anzeiger's headline on its Roosevelt comment was: "Roosevelt Derailed Again." A subhead was: "Unobjective Attacks With Jewish Plutocratic Background."

Roosevelt "Partisan"

"Roosevelt is completely partisan, full of hate and astoundingly excited," said the paper, "despite the fact that neither Germany, Italy nor Japan ever did anything to Americans. But Roosevelt's nervousness is understandable because he sees the war and its prolongation, for which he is responsible, is not working out as had been foreseen. . . .

"The situation of England must be very precarious if the President of the United States of America so completely disregards the rules of international courtesy."

The Nachtausgabe made an oblique reference to Mr. Roosevelt's prediction that the Axis wouldn't win the war. It said he "picked words and phrases for his explosions of hate from newspaper articles and books of Jewish emigrants. . . . Probably his 'secret material' concerning developments in the European war came from the same source."

World "Astonished"

Der Angriff, Goebbels' paper, said: "The whole world will be astonished that the boss of the United States of America is so nervous."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung: "Roosevelt has let the cat—or, to use his own form of speech, the tiger of war hate—out of the bag completely." The paper accused him of falsifying history by "misrepresenting" Hitler's policy on certain points.

The Boersen Zeitung comment was headed "Bad Conscience" and it said: "Before the war Roosevelt was behind the scenes, an important stage director in the drama of enmity toward Germany."

"Bold Undertatking"

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt regarded it as a "bold undertaking that the President of a power of the rank of the United States of America, with its boundless forces," should try to convince his people that their future security depends not on the force of their own nation but on the British navy.

This paper said the President tried to nail down his policy before Congress had a chance to study the difficult legal questions involved.

Official sources made it clear that the press alone will reply to Mr. Roosevelt for the time being.

Hitler's Call for Victory in '41

BERLIN, Dec. 31 (AP).—The text of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's order of the day to the German armed forces follows:

Soldiers!

In the war year of 1940 the National Socialist armed forces of the greater German Reich won the most glorious victories of unparalleled greatness.

With unequaled audacity the enemy was defeated on land, at sea, in the air.

All tasks which I was compelled to demand of you were accomplished by your heroic courage and your soldierly ability.

Deeds Were Incomparable

You have conquered the fighting forces of our opponents through the power of arms, but conquered morally territories taken possession of by you through your proud conduct and exemplary discipline.

Thus, thanks to your high soldierly qualities, we succeeded in a few months of world historic struggle in giving success supplementarily to the vain, heroic fight of the German armed forces in the World War, and definitely in eradicating the disgrace of oppression in Compiegne Forest.

I thank you, my soldiers of the army, navy and air force, as your supreme commander, for your incomparable accomplishments. But I thank you also in the name of the entire German people.

We remember the comrades who gave their lives in this struggle for the future of our people. We similarly think of the courageous soldiers of allied Fascist Italy.

New Year Will See Victory

It is the will of the democratic war inciters and their Jewish-capitalistic wire-pullers that the war must be continued. Representatives of the shattering world hope, perhaps, in 1941 still to achieve what they failed to achieve in the past.

We are ready!

Armed as never before, we stand at the door of the new year.

I know every one of you will do his duty. The Almighty, however, will not abandon those who, threatened by the world, determined with courageous hearts to help themselves.

Soldiers of the National Socialist armed forces of the greater Reich, the year 1941 will [illegible] ing completion of the greate[illegible] tory of our history.

NEW YORK, DEC.31-(AP)-THE BERLIN RADIO BROADCAST THE FOLLOWING COMMENT TODAY:

"THE OBJECT OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SUNDAY SPEECH IS PRACTICALLY IMPOSSIBLE (OF ATTAINMENT), IT WAS DECLARED IN BERLIN POLITICAL CIRCLES ON TUESDAY.

"ROOSEVELT'S LATEST UTTERANCES ARE ONLY THE COMPOSITION OF REMARKS WHICH IN NO WAY DIFFER FROM THE UNITED STATES PRESIDENT'S EARLIER SPEECHES. THE TONE OF THE SPEECH IS DESCRIBED AS UNOBJECTIVE, NERVOUS AND PARTLY INSULTING.

"IT IS LACKING IN ALL OBJECTIVITY AND IS BASED ON TWO CARDINAL UNREALITIES. ONE OF THEM IS THE ALLEGED CLAIM OF NATIONAL SOCIALISM FOR PREDOMINANCE IN THE WORLD AND THE OTHER IS THE ALLEGED AGGRES-SIVE INTENTION OF THE FUEHRER AGAI THE AMERICAN CONTINENT.

"ROOSEVELT'S ATTEMPT TO MAKE THE UNITED STATES PREPARED FOR WAR MUST BE REGARDED FROM THESE TWO VIEWPOINTS.

"PARTICULARLY CHARACTERISTIC IN THIS CONNECTION IS REGARDED IN BERLIN THE DISTORTION OF THE SPEECH WHICH THE FUEHRER MADE DEC. 10 BEFORE BERLIN ARMAMENT WORKMEN.

JAN 1 - 1941

"IN THIS SPEECH ADOLF HITLER DESCRIBED THE WORKING POWER OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE AS THE BEST COVER FOR GERMANY'S CURRENCY, AGAINST WHICH GOLD WAS UNIMPORTANT AND IN WHICH HE FURTHER SAID THAT HAND-IN-HAND WITH THIS WORKING POWER HE WAS ABLE TO BEAT ANY OTHER POWER.

"BERLIN POLITICAL SOURCES POINT OUT THAT A CONSIDERABLE MEASURE OF PROPAGANDISTIC DISTORTION WAS NECESSARY FOR READING IN THESE PURELY ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL POLITICAL WORDS OF THE FUEHRER SOMETHING IN SUPPORT OF THE ASSERTION THAT ADOLF HITLER WAS AIMING AT DOMINATING THE WHOLE WORLD AND WAS THREATENING PARTICULARLY AMERICA.

"AS REGARDS ROOSEVELT'S REMARKS CONCERNING THE MONROE DOCTRINE, BERLIN QUARTERS POINT TO THE FACT THAT SINCE CREATION OF THIS DOGMA NEITHER GERMANY, NOR ITALY NOR JAPAN EVER INTERFERED WITH AMERICAN AFFAIRS, BUT THAT ENGLAND VERY ENERGETICALLY INTERVENED IN THE NORTH AMERICAN CIVIL WAR, THAT SHE TOOK AWAY THE MALVINE (FALK-LAND) ISLANDS, THAT THE FRENCH INTERVENED IN MEXICO AND THAT THE UNITED STATES IN 1917 TOOK AN ACTIVE PART IN THE WORLD WAR.

"AS REGARDS THE ALLEGED GERMAN MENACE TO SOUTH AMERICAN STATES BY GERMANY OR HER ALLIES, IT IS REFERRED HERE TO THE FACT THAT SO FAR INFLUENCE THERE HAS ALWAYS BEEN EXERCISED FROM THE NORTH AND THAT TODAY THE UNITED STATES, WITH HER MILITARY BASES POLICY TOWARDS THE SOUTH AMERICAN CONTINENT, IS FURNISHING A TYPICAL EXAMPLE FOR POLI AL REFLECTION.

"THAT THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT IN HIS SPEECH TRIED TO CAST DOUBT ON ITALY'S TREATY OF LOYALTY TOWARDS GERMANY PROVES, ACCORDING TO POLITICAL CIRCLES IN BERLIN, THAT HE HAS NOT LEARNED ANYTHING FROM THE EXPERIENCES OF CHURCHILL, WHO BY ATTEMPTING TO CAUSE AMONG THE ITALIAN PEOPLE A FEELING OF MISTRUST AGAINST THEIR ALLIANCE WITH GERMANY, ONLY ACHIEVED THE STRENGTHENING OF THIS ALLIANCE.

"IN CONCLUSION BERLIN POLITICAL CIRCLES REFER TO THE INDISPUTABLE FACT THAT THE AXIS POWERS ALWAYS WANTED TO LIVE IN PEACE AND FRIENDSHIP WITH THE NORTH AMERICAN PEOPLE AND THAT THE LEADERS AND PEOPLES OF THE AXIS POWERS BY THEIR ACTIONS NEVER EXPRESSED ANY OTHER INTENTION.

"THE PURPOSE OF ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH OBVIOUSLY WAS, BY PAINTING A PICTURE OF NON-EXISTING DANGERS, TO DRAG THE UNITED STATES INTO WAR AT THE SIDE OF ENGLAND AGAINST THE WILL OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND AGAINST THE INTERESTS OF THE UNITED STATES, INTO A WAR WHICH PRACTICALLY ALREADY IS DECIDED.

"IT IS WORTHWHILE TO AWAIT REACTION FROM THE UNITED STATES TO THE TERRIBLE DANGER SUCH A FRIVOLOUS POLICY OF ITS PRESIDENT IS LIKELY TO CONJURE UP FOR THE PEOPLE GUIDED BY HIM."

Premier Says Nation Is Convinced It Will Recover "Right to Life"

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 31 (AP).—Premier Thorvald Stauning, in a New Year's Eve broadcast tonight, said, "we still have the conviction that this small nation with a thousand years of independence and culture will recover the right to life."

"For nine months," he said, "we've lived in a blacked-out country while the war torch burned outside our windows. . . . We live as an occupied country, but still as a non-belligerent country waiting and hoping for peace."

Britain Plans Defense Draft

Part-time Service for All Civilians Due—English to Get Less Meat in 1941.

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, announced tonight that the British Government was planning to make part-time civil defense work compulsory for every Briton.

Mr. Morrison made the announcement in a radio address calling on British men and women to form a civil defense home guard to defeat the menace of Nazi incendiary bombs by guarding property where they live or are employed, leaving the vast Fire Department forces free to fight the worst and most dangerous fires. The Government, he said, has decided on the principle of compulsion today and details are being worked out. The speech was made after demands had arisen in many quarters for compulsory fire watchers to defeat any repetition of Sunday night's devastating fire raid.

"We must quickly get to the point of organization and readiness where not a single incendiary bomb, wherever it falls, has a chance to take a firm hold," Mr. Morrison said. "Not a single house or building in our towns must be left uncared for. It is dangerous. Every group of houses and business premises must have its fire-watching party; every party must guard its own group of buildings."

Urged to Eat Less Meat.

Meanwhile Lord Woolton, Food Minister, in a broadcast today urged Britons to eat more home-grown potatoes and oats and warned that "we shall have to do with less meat in 1941."

Lord Woolton stated that the danger to food supplies now is much greater than in the last war and said that he was depending on the public's voluntary abstinence to prevent the need of rationing cheese.

"The enemy is making a direct attack on our foodships and is sinking quite a number of them and the danger is much worse than it was in the last war," the food minister declared.

He offered this further advice to householders: "We can do with less pastry . . . don't buy cheese unless you need it. Don't use it as an extra . . . go easy with the can opener and regard all your canned foods as an iron ration in case supplies break down at any time in your district."

Meanwhile the Admiralty announced today that 43,300 tons of merchant shipping were sunk as a result of enemy action in the week ending December 22. Eighteen ships were lost, it said, of which fifteen, totalling 32,849 tons, were British, and three of 10,451 tons, neutral.

Naval spokesmen commented that the lowered rate of sinkings the last two weeks indicated that the counter-measures taken against submarines would succeed in materially reducing the effects of their attacks.

The Shipping Ministry announced today that the British Government was requisitioning

'TO HELL WITH HITLER,' LONDON NEW YEAR'S CRY

JAN 1 - 1941

"Auld Lang Syne" Also Echoes From Fire-Charred Ruins Of City

Cheering And Singing Revelers Roam Streets In Blackout

[By the Associated Press]

London, Wednesday, Jan. 1—In the unrelenting darkness of the blackout but with the crash of German bombs missing, New Year revelers gathered today in the shadow of St. Paul's Cathedral and greeted 1941 with cries of "To hell with Hitler."

The merrymakers clambered over hose lines and, surrounded by the charred structures of buildings set on fire in the terrific Nazi assault Sunday night, sang "Auld Lang Syne" with smoke-blackened firemen still on duty.

Londoners Cheer, Sing

Londoners in the fashionable West End cheered and sang as the old year passed on.

The great ring in Piccadilly—its blazing lights of former years extinguished for the war—had its revelers' but most of the bomb-wearied residents remained indoors to toast the New Year.

Through the night, searchlights and anti-aircraft guns were idle in the peace which every Briton knew was only temporary.

Big Ben's twelve calm notes tolling the hour echoed through the city's streets.

Lull In Air Raids

The New Year began without a sign of German activity over Britain, apparently because of a continuation of bad weather which grounded bombers Monday night. The Dover Strait—pathway of bombers—was cloudy and foggy.

Behind the blackout curtains and double doors, night clubs were jammed with cheering, singing civilians and members of the armed forces, and there was many a quiet home celebration.

Hardly noting the "truce," if such it was, the Government busied itself with steps to compel every Briton to participate in defense work against fire bombs of the sort with which German raiders wrought so much havoc in London Sunday night.

Announcing this intention, Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, nevertheless urged the people not to wait for "all that," but immediately to form a civil defense home guard so that not a single building in British towns would be left unwatched.

All Subject To Orders

"Compulsion," he said in a broadcast, "will apply to everyone of every grade—managers and office workers as well as manual workers—as the needs of the situation may require. Factories and businesses of all kinds, large and small, will be subject to severe penalties for any neglect of their obligations."

Morrison said "you can stop a fire bomb from starting a fire" by smothering it, and the regular fire brigades must be left free to fight the big blazes.

"Every group of houses and business premises must have its fire-watching party," he said. "Every party must guard its own group of buildings. Each household must, if possible, provide at least one member, man or woman, for its party."

Forecasts Nazi Defeat

He forecast the "shrewd and crafty enemy" will be beaten.

This expression followed a declaration by Sir George Wilkinson, London's Lord Mayor, that the city's Guildhall never would have been destroyed Sunday night had small near-by fires been controlled more quickly.

Too, the press had sharply criticized "irresponsible property owners."

Upon the home defense front, Lord Woolton, Food Minister, urged that the people eat more home-grown potatoes and oats. He warned them "we shall have to do with less meat in 1941."

"The enemy is making a direct attack on our food ships," he added, "and is sinking quite a number of them and the danger is much worse than it was in the last war."

Despite this appraisal of the activity of the Nazis at sea, however, the Admiralty announced that for the week ended December 22 merchant shipping lost by "enemy action" was reduced- 3,300 tons against an average of 63,287. Naval circles said counter measures against submarines apparently were becoming more effective.

Tankers Requisitioned

The Shipping Ministry announced that the Government was requisitioning all tankers still under private control. The statement said all ocean-going merchant ships now had been requisitioned.

In a year-end press conference, a Royal Air Force official told American correspondents that American-made aircraft would prove a decisive factor in the air war in 1941.

He said Hitler probably would try to invade Britain in March and added: "But I do not think any invasion can succeed unless there is a condition of local air superiority on the German side."

German air activity over Britain yesterday was said by the Air Ministry to have been limited to isolated attacks by a single plane in Kent and Sussex, in which some houses were damaged and "a few" people injured.

2 R. A. F. Planes Shot Down, Germans Report

Berlin, Dec. 31 (AP)—Two of four British planes which flew over German-occupied territory this afternoon were shot down by anti-aircraft fire and the others were turned back after dropping bombs, which did no damage, informed German sources reported tonight.

No British Bells To Ring in New Year

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Ringing out the old year and ringing in the new will be just the ordinary midnight job of striking 12 for Big Ben.

There will be no carillon, for the pealing of British bells is now the signal of invasion. Big Ben, like other London clocks, continues therefore merely to strike the hours.

American radio listeners will be able to hear Big Ben at midnight (6 P. M., New York time) on a short-wave broadcast of the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Threshold of the Year" program. No special broadcast to the United States is planned, however.

British Assail Fire Watch

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP).—Demands for compulsory fire watchers on every London rooftop were voiced today as this battered capital mobilized its resources against any repetition of Sunday night's devastating Nazi fire raid.

The press criticized "irresponsible property owners" for failing to take adequate precautions against incendiary bombs and said many fires which did widespread damage could have been checked had they been spotted in time.

The Daily Mail declared the city's business men were "largely responsible for their own losses" and demanded swift government action to compel employment of fire watchers on all buildings.

Calls It Half of Battle

The Times said: "If compulsion were extended to bring every roof under observation, more than half the battle against fire raiders would be won in advance."

Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, now in Canada on official business, said last night that equipment now is being produced in England which would knock Germany's night raiders out of the sky at such a rate they would have to abandon that form of attack by spring.

"During the past autumn a method has been found of dealing with this night bombing menace and equipment is being completed rapidly," he said. "I confidently believe it will not be very long before all the weight and sting has been taken out of these night bombing attacks."

3,500 Axis Planes Reported Down

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP)—More than 3,500 Axis planes were shot down over Great Britain, the surrounding seas and the French coast in 1940, "the year of the greatest air fighting the world has ever known," the British Air Ministry news service announced tonight in a year-end review.

In addition, the review said, "a very considerable extra number * * * were so disabled or damaged by effective gunfire as to have been unable to reach home." In the same time, it said, Britain lost 1,059 fighter planes, but more than 400 of the pilots "lived to fight again."

The fighter [illegible]d was credited with the [illegible]n's share of the German and Italian planes destroyed, 3,090. Anti-aircraft gunners shot down 444 and barrage balloons and other units helped raise the figure of Axis losses to "well over" 3,500. Four out of every nine enemy planes shot down were bombers, the Ministry reported.

Since Sept. 1, the Ministry said, the anti-aircraft guns have brought down 334 planes, an average of nearly three a day, with seventy destroyed in a single week. They were shot out of the skies at an average altitude of 16,000 feet.

The monthly British tally of planes lost in air combat follows:

	Axis.	Britain.
January	4	9
February	9	0
March	3	0
April	9	1
May	357	146
June	143	59
July	212	49
August	957	297
September	957	318
October	211	118
November	189	53
December	39	9

No Raids Overnight.

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Bad weather conditions on both sides of the Channel last night grounded both the Royal Air Force and the German, it was believed here today.

Not a single German raider was reported over Britain from dusk to dawn, and today's British communique was limited to a brief: "Nothing to report."

The Royal Air Force—which has been engaged in almost nightly raids on the so-called Nazi invasion ports and other targets—also stayed home.

Business in London Carries On in Cafes

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP).—Street corners, coffee shops and restaurants replaced fire-ravaged offices today as the people of the City, which was subjected Sunday night to a fierce rain of incendiary bombs, attempted to resume normal business. Some executives held staff conferences on sidewalks. Others discussed business affairs in eating places, while their staffs waited outside for instructions.

To a man who asked directions to the bookshop of famous Paternoster Row, near St. Paul's Cathedral, a policeman replied: "There isn't any Paternoster Row."

U. S. PLANES SENT TO MIDDLE EAST

Have Proved Effectiveness After Flying Ocean.

JAN 1 - 1941

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—American aircraft, flown to England under their own power, are being dispatched to the Middle East in increasing numbers and have proved their effectiveness there already, a Royal Air Force spokesman said today. The disclosure indicated that the American-made planes might be in use against Italians in Africa or Albania or both.

The spokesman characterized as entirely incorrect British press statements that the American craft had proved inferior to British planes.

American aircraft will prove a decisive factor in the air war in 1941, he also told American correspondents.

Reviewing the war in the air during 1940, the spokesman said that day bombers had proved an inadequate weapon for the Reich.

The spokesman said that Adolf Hitler probably would try to invade England again in March, and added:

"I do not think any invasion can succeed, unless there is a condition of local air superiority on the German side."

BOMBER REVIEW

BRITAIN BEGAN A LONG-PREPARED PLAN FOR BOMBING INDUSTRIAL AND MILITARY OBJECTIVES WITHIN GERMANY ON MAY 15 AND "THEREAFTER OUR BOMBERS RAIDED GERMANY'S VITAL CENTERS ALMOST EVERY NIGHT AND OFTEN BY DAY AS WELL," THE AIR MINISTRY NEWS SERVICE SAID TONIGHT.

REVIEWING BRITAIN'S BOMBER OFFENSIVE FOR 1940, THE NEWS SERVICE SAID BRITISH BOMBERS "WERE WORKING ACCORDING TO A PLAN FROM WHICH THEY COULD BE DISTRACTED BY NOTHING EXCEPT AN URGENT NECESSITY AS WHEN GERMANS MADE PREPARATIONS IN THE CHANNEL PORTS FOR AN INVASION OF THIS COUNTRY OR A SUDDEN OPPORTUNITY AS WHEN GERMAN WARSHIPS CAME INTO THE OPEN SEA."

THE BRTTISH HELD TO THEIR PLANE EVEN AFTER GERMANY'S "INDISCRIMINATE ATTACK ON BRITAIN, THE NEWS SERVICE ADDED.

"BERLIN WAS RAIDED AGAIN AND AGAIN NOT BECAUSE OF ITS SYMBOLIC IMPORTANCE AS THE GERMAN CAPITAL BUT BECAUSE IT IS THE HUB OF ALL RAILWAYS OF CENTRAL EUROPE AND IS A GREAT INDUSTRIAL CENTER AS WELL," THE SERVICE SAID.

JAN 1 - 1941

LONDON, DEC. 31--(AP)--A NEW BRITISH ARMY -- "MILITARY MACHINE OF THE LATEST MODEL" -- WILL BE IN ACTION IN 1941 FOR "ANY PURPOSE REQUIRED," THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION SAID TONIGHT IN A REVIEW OF 1940.

WHAT HAPPENED IN THE PAST, THE REVIEW SAID, "WAS A PROLOGUE -- DECISIVE EVENTS ARE NOW TO COME."

"ALL GOES WELL WITH THE ARMY WHICH, THROUGH ITS ACTION IN LIBYA, HAS RECOVERED THE INITIATIVE IN THE MIDDLE EAST," IT ASSERTED.

IN 1940, THE REVIEW RECOUNTED, BRITAIN HAD TO WITHSTAND "THE GREATEST MILITARY STRAINS EVER IMPOSED ON HER," WITH THE WITHDRAWL FROM NORWAY SUCCEEDED BY "THE EVEN MORE DEPRESSING" RETREAT FROM DUNKERQUE ONLY TO BE FOLLOWED BY THE ITALIAN ADVANCE TOWARD THE SUEZ CANAL THROUGH EGYPT.

"BUT THREE DISASTERS, FAR FROM WEAKENING, ONLY HEIGHTENED OUR COURAGE AND STRENGTHENED OUR RESOLUTION," IT SAID, ADDING THAT THE GERMAN THREAT OF INVASION HAD BEEN "QUICKLY AND ADEQUATELY MET."

EQUIPMENT FOR 10 DIVISIONS WAS LOST AT DUNKERQUE, BUT REPLACEMENTS HAVE BEEN MADE SPEEDLY WITH THE RESULT THAT CONSIDERABLE NUMBERS OF UNITS HAVE BEEN SENT TO THE MIDDLE EAST AND ELSEWHERE FULLY EQUIPPED, THE REVIEW DECLARED.

"ALL TROOPS REMAINING AT HOME," IT ADDED, "ARE RAPIDLY APPROACHING THEIR FULL WAR SCALE."

RAIDS ON BERLIN DECLARED 'A JOKE'

British Must Be Using Light Bombs, Says Publisher Back From Tour

JAN 1 - 1941

F. W. Hickman Asserts Nazi Capital Is Only Slightly Damaged

[By the Associated Press]

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 31—Britain's bombing results in Berlin are "a joke," Francis W. Hickman, publisher of the Cotton Trade Journal, of New Orleans, declared today on his return from a tour through twelve European countries.

Arriving from Lisbon aboard the American Export liner Siboney, which carried 343 passengers, Hickman asserted that Berlin was only slightly damaged by British bombs.

"It's a joke," he observed, "I think the British must be using light bombs. One of the biggest surprises of my trip was that the British hadn't done much more destruction in Berlin."

Surveyed Cotton Situation

He added that during his trip, made to survey the cotton situation in Europe, he learned that Germany was "fairly well supplied" with cotton, that the Nazis had "made considerable purchases from Russia."

Italy, Hungary and Spain, Hickman said, were in "dire need" of cotton.

Traveling through Germany and German-occupied countries accompanied by a young Nazi army lieutenant, Hickman said Rotterdam, Holland, was the greatest damaged city—from bombing—he saw.

Tells Of Damage

"In an area in the heart of the city," Hickman recounted, "four square miles were leveled. There's nothing there. Less than six buildings were left standing."

Only one hotel was operating in the city, he added.

Hickman said all of the bridges in the city were left intact, "because the Germans got there first."

British bombing of Le Havre, France, has been "mostly in the city proper," Hickman asserted.

One-Fifth On Port

"Four-fifths of the bombs dropped by the British have landed in the residential areas," he explained, "and one-fifth in the actual port."

Three Associated Press foreign correspondents also returned aboard the vessel—Dwight Pitkin, Taylor Henry and William McGaffin. All have served in Paris and, after the fall of France, in London.

The ship was buffeted by an unremitting fifty-mile-an hour gale across the Atlantic, Capt. Wenzel Habel, master of the craft, disclosed.

Twice British patrol ships halted her.

Say London's Greatest Need Is Merchant Ships And Destroyers

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 31—England's situation in her single-handed war against the Axis powers, while far from desperate, is admittedly grave, three Associated Press correspondents who have gone through the entire battle of Britain agreed today on their arrival in New York.

The three, William McGaffin, Dwight L. Pitkin and Taylor Henry, who left England December 17, reached New York on the American export liner Siboney.

3-Point Analysis

In a three-point analysis of Britain's position as the old year ended, the correspondents stressed that:

Britain's greatest need is not airplanes, but merchant ships and destroyers to protect them against German and Italian surface raiders, submarines and coastal bombers.

against British cities have done surprisingly little damage to Britain's essential war industries.

British confidence in ultimate victory with American aid, far from being shaken by the punishment her cities have taken, has been strengthened one hundred per cent. by the Italian defeats in Greece and Libya.

"The surface raider and submarine have become a far greater menace to Britain than the night Blitz bomber," said McGaffin, a native of David City, Nebraska.

Taking Heavy Toll

"While the food situation in Britain is nowhere near as serious as it was in 1917, German raiders are taking heavy toll of convoys bringing needed imports to the embattled island.

"This, of course, adds up to a cumulative loss of merchant bottoms, but even more serious is the lack of warships to convoy the merchantmen.

"For example, as we passed through Bermuda we saw a convoy of eighteen vessels assembling. As possible protection there were only one armed merchant cruiser and two destroyers.

"From a food point of view it is fortunate that the British have stored stocks reported in well-informed circles to be sufficient for one year."

Believe They'll Need Aid

Pitkin, who was born in Altamont, Ill., said the British did not think it possible for them to lose the war, "but it will be difficult for them to win unaided," he added. "The British—both the man in the street and the authorities—make no bones of this.

"In fact they are so anxious for people in the United States to have a clear picture of their needs that the censorship, except for obvious military secrets, might be said to be almost non-existent.

"I have known the censorship in Spain, for example, both during the civil war and afterward, and there is no comparison.

"The reason partly, I think, is the overwhelming confidence you find among all classes of Englishmen from the London Cockney to Whitehall executives."

Three Chief Problems

Henry, from Mineola, Texas, said Britain's three main domestic problems were "conquering the night bomber; financing the war, and increasing production."

"Informed aviation circles are convinced that a night fighter is being developed which will be able to cope with the night bomb-raider," he said, adding:

"This same prediction has been made several times in the last two months, however, but has never materialized. It is hard to have faith in a weapon against night bombers when they still come over by the hundreds and the maximum brought down in any one night has been three.

"War finance is growing increasingly difficult with the cost of the war reaching up into the almost astronomical figure of about $60,000,000 daily.

Cost Of Living Up

"Added to this is a from twenty to thirty per cent. increase in the cost of living while the 'normal' lag has held down increases in wages to some fifteen per cent.

"One of the most frequent criticisms heard in England of the Government is its failure to take advantage of the emergency powers bill and use its dictatorial authority to mobilize the entire country for war production.

"Despite the fact England has some one million and a half men under arms exclusive of the home guard unemployment has increased since the war began.

"Part of this is due to bombing, part to bad management."

2-Week Drop In Ship Loss CheersBritish

Admiralty Sees Counter-Measures Successful in Meeting U-Boat Peril

JAN 1 - 1941

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Admiralty announced today that 43,300 tons of merchant shipping were lost due to "enemy action" in the week ended Dec. 22. Eighteen ships were lost, it said, of which fifteen, totaling 32,849 tons, were British, and three, with a tonnage of 10,451, were neutral.

Naval circles commented that the lowered rate of sinkings of the last two weeks indicated that countermeasures taken against submarines would succeed in reducing materially the effects of their attacks.

"So far," one informant commented, "the quantity of shipping destroyed by enemy raiders causes no undue alarm."

Weekly Loss 63,287 Tons

The average weekly loss during the war, excluding losses in the withdrawal from Dunkerque, was placed at 63,287 tons.

30.24—6703

The Shipping Ministry announced that the government was requisitioning all tankers still under private control. The statement said all ocean-going merchant ships now had been requisitioned.

The Ministry of Information, in a year-end review of the war at sea, declared that the pressure of sea power was "slowly sapping the strength of Germany." It declared, of the year which has cost Britain and her allies more than 3,000,000 tons of merchant ships, that there was no cause for despondency, "unpalatable as facts may be."

"Apart from help from America," it continued, "destroyers and escort craft are rapidly being added to the fleet, while, thanks to new construction and to neutral vessels now running in Allied interests, our mercantile tonnage is not so very much less than it was at the beginning of the war. . . . In spite of our heavy losses the great bulk of ships in our convoys continue to arrive. There is no great shortage of food in this country, no cessation in the flow of raw materials, no stoppage of the munitions coming across the Atlantic from America."

Navy's Task Stupendous

The last half of 1940, the review said, "saw the navy facing a stupendous task, the greatest that has ever confronted it in the whole of its long history."

"The British fleet in the Mediterranean," it said, "has been employed in a vigorous offensive, which has completely changed the situation in eastern Europe, if not in the whole world. It probably has altered the whole balance of naval power and directly affected the eventual outcome of the war."

Declaring that the "unremitting activity" of the Mediterranean fl[illegible] had "largely paralyzed" Italian sea power, the review declared the British now had "the full measure" of the Italians. Italy, it said, had been "timid and fearful" in the use of her fleet, and the Mediterranean was "anything but Italian."

"It is impossible to calculate the effect of British sea power upon the progress of the Greek campaign in Albania or the recent victories of the British Army advancing into Libya," it continued.

"But for the British Mediterranean Fleet, which has detachments in both the eastern and western basins, the Italian Fleet would have had complete control of the Mediterranean. . . . The French naval base in North Africa might have fallen into Italian hands. . . . Italy could have occupied the Ionian Islands, Crete, the Gulf of Corinth, Patras, Athens and Salonica through diplomatic pressure. . . . Italy could have sent strong expeditionary forces to Syria and have isolated Turkey. . . . Every nation in southeastern Europe would have been at the mercy of the combined strength of the Axis."

Now, said the review, Italy was cut off from the outside world, Libya was more a responsibility than an asset, the Dodecanese Islands were "vulnerable," and isolated Italian possessions in East Africa would eventually be "ours for the asking" and would be delivered over to their rightful occupants.

Stating that fifty destroyers came to Britain from the United States at an opportune time, the review commented that Britain still was "very short" of destroyers and escort ships for work that had to be done "everywhere." Even with the co-operation of the French, it asserted, the Allies had insufficient destroyers and escort craft for their "manifold needs."

Sea power was the hub upon which the whole of the Allied cause revolved during the year, the ministry said, and added that if British communications were cut, Britain could not carry on the war for more than a few weeks.

Zeal Reports Attack 250 Miles Northwest Of Dakar, Africa

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—Mackay Radio tonight reported picking up a radio message saying the British ship Zeal had been torpedoed about 250 miles northwest of Dakar, Africa.

The ship gave its position about 6.40 P. M.

Neither Lloyd's register of shipping nor Jane's Fighting Ships listed a Zeal.

Britain Honors High and Low in King's '41 List

Nurses, Firemen and Men in Fighting Forces Share With Nobility in Awards

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP).—King George VI selected Lord Camrose, sixty-one-year-old owner of London's Conservative "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post," to head his New Year's honor list today. Camrose, now a baron, was made a viscount.

The list, the second of the war, also created four new barons and three baronets and conferred other distinctions on men and women in many fields in which airplane, arms and ship production was prominently represented. It was the eighth honors list of the Monarch's reign.

The new barons created were:

Field Marshal Sir William Edmund Ironside, sixty years old, former chief of Imperial General Staff and former commander of the British Home Forces.

Lord Hugh Cecil, sixty-one, churchman, member of the distinguished Salisbury family and Provost of Eton since 1936.

Kindersley Honored

Sir Robert Kindersley, sixty-nine, who started work at fifteen for 10 shillings a week and lately captained Great Britain's voluntary war savings campaign raising more than £475,000,000 ($1,900,000,000).

Sir Boyd Merriman, president of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice which decides the fate of seized enemy ships and cargoes. He was the judge who gave the present duchess of Windsor her divorce from Ernest Simpson on May 3, 1937.

New baronetcies went to Sir William Coxen, seventy-three, former Lord Mayor of London, who raised £5,000,000 ($20,000,000) for war charities; Sir Kenneth Lee, sixty-one, former Director General of the Ministry of Information, and Hugh Lett, president of the Royal College of Surgeons.

The list, filling sixty-eight columns, included many naval and Royal Air Force recipients of awards. Among them was Capt. Lord Louis Mountbatten, the King's cousin, who was created a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order. Commanding a flotilla, he brought the destroyer Kelly safely to port in May after she was crippled by a torpedo and attacked by German warplanes. Again, in November, he brought the destroyer Javelin home after a torpedo and bomb attack.

Several women were on the honors list, four becoming Dames Commander of the Order of the British Empire. They were Irene Vanbrugh, seventy-three, veteran actress; the dowager Marchioness of Reading, chairman of the Women's Voluntary Services; Viscountess Craigavon, widow of the late Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, and Miss Marjorie Maxse, the latter for services to the Children's Overseas Reception Board.

The Order of Merit, which has only twenty-four members, was given to Professor Gilbert Murray, seventy-four, Greek scholar who was the Charles Eliot Norton professor of poetry at Harvard in 1926.

Privy Councillors appointed were Col. Douglas Brown, sixty-one, Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, and Sir Walter Womersley, sixty-two, Minister of Pensions.

Several officers stationed in the United States were recognized. Angus Fletcher, director of the British Library of Information in New York, and Sir Ashley Sparks, representative in the United States of the Shipping Ministry, were named Knights Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Joseph Goodreds, acting British Vice-Consul at New York, was appointed to the Order of the British Empire.

Additional Awards

Other awards were:

Companions of Honor—J. L. Garvin, editor of the Conservative "Sunday Observer," and Arthur Mann, former editor of "The Yorkshire Post."

Military Knight, Grand Cross, Order of the Bath—Gen. Sir Charles Bonham-Carter, former Governor of Malta.

Civil Knight, Grand Cross, Order of the Bath—Sir Eric Phipps, former Ambassador to France.

Knight Commander, Order of the Bath—Admiral John Tovey, fifty-five, commander in chief of the home fleet; Vice-Admiral Guy Royle, fifty-five, chief of the naval air services; Robert Raikes, former rear admiral of submarines; Sir George Edward-Collins, commanding the 18th Cruiser Squadron; Rear Admiral David Lambert, paymaster general at the Admiralty; Lieut. Gen. George Giffard, general officer commanding in west Africa, and Air Marshal Ernest Gossage, Air Council member for personnel.

Civil Knight Commander of the Bath—Sir Alexander Cadogan, Permanent Under Secretary of the Foreign Office.

Knights, Grand Cross, Order of St. Michael and St. George—Sir Harold MacMichael, High Commissioner of Palestine, and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, Ambassador to Japan.

Several nurses and fire brigade, police and municipal officials were appointed members of the Order of the British Empire for air-raid and civilian-defense work. The medal of that order went to many airplane-factory employees, postal officials, policemen, raid wardens, station masters, telephonists and others for direct parts in the war effort.

Specific war services were frequently cloaked in such phrases as "for services to the Air Ministry," the explanation for conferring knighthood upon Ernest Le Mon, vice-president of the London, Midland & Scottish Railway.

Early Says President Will Talk of Lease-lend Program in Message to Lawmakers.

JAN 1 - 1941

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt indicated today that his proposal for leasing and lending war equipment to Great Britain might embrace retail or only in a general way, leaving details for submission later. At any rate, he said, the entire proposal will go before Congress soon after the start of the session on January 3.

Mr. Early discussed Mr. Roosevelt's message at a press conference. He said that the President had not yet started writing it and that undoubtedly he would confer with congressional leaders before he personally delivers it to a joint session of the Senate and the House.

Hopes Idea Is Contagious.

Reporters at the conference asked Mr. Early for his views on an editorial in the Kansas City Journal Post suggesting that various committees interested in aid to the allies or keeping America out of war disband in the interest of national unity and reform into an agency wholeheartedly behind the President.

Mr. Early replied that he hoped that the idea was contagious.

An another aspect of defense developments the presidential secretary asserted that some newspapers and Senators "aren't confused, they are confusing" about Mr. Roosevelt's statement in a radio address Sunday night that no American expeditionary force would be sent abroad.

The remark about confusion was made when a reporter observed that some newspapers and Senators had said they were confused about the President's statement and wondered whether it meant none of the nation's armed forces, including the navy and marine corps, would be sent abroad or whether it applied only to the army.

Mr. Early did not amplify his comment.

Messages of reaction to the Sunday night speech still were pouring in, Mr. Early said. He intimated that that address might tie in with the annual message. There were some things, he said, which the Chief Executive could not crowd into his radio talk and ideas were left over that might very usefully be included in the message to Congress.

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, said today that he had received more than 1,000 telegrams about his speech last night urging a peace move by the United States and that 93 per cent of them were favorable.

The response, he said, was the greatest evoked by any speech he has made in more than seventeen years in the Senate.

The messages included one from Harry Woodring, former Secretary of War, which said: "Helen (Mrs. Woodring) and I have just listened to your powerful effective voice and speech. God preserve and bless you as well as America."

Another, from Col. Charles Lindbergh, said: "Your address excellent and timely. Believe it will have great effect."

At the State Department Secretary Hull declined to comment directly on Senator Wheeler's speech.

Mr. Hull, a former Senator, declared that he could not undertake to carry on a debate with his old congressional colleagues. He said that he had too many other things to do.

Senator Wheeler took direct issue with President Roosevelt's defense broadcast statement that the United States had "no right or reason to encourage talk of peace" under existing circumstances.

Senator Wheeler raised the peace question during a radio broadcast last night which was frankly critical of much of the general policy which the Chief Executive outlined to the nation Sunday.

"The United States," the Montana Senator further declared, "is no longer trudging along the road to war. We are running—and don't be fooled."

"I firmly believe the German people want peace just as any other people prefer peace to war—and the offer of a just, reasonable and generous peace will more quickly and effectively humble Hitlerism and break the morale of the German people than all the bombers that could be dispatched over Berlin.

"A working basis for a just peace might involve among other factors the following:

"1—Restoration of Germany's 1914 boundaries with an autonomous Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

"2—Restoration of independent France, Holland, Norway, Belgium and Denmark.

"3—Restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France.

"4—Restoration of German colonies.

"5—Protection of all racial and religious minorities in all countries.

"6—Internationalization of the Suez Canal.

"7—No indemnities or reparations.

"8—Arms limitation throughout the world."

No Comment on Wheeler.

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Authoritative quarters said today they had no comment to make on the peace proposals of Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, outlined in a radio address last night.

The press subordinated the proposals to a British news agency dispatch from Washington, which said: "It is generally felt that America now faces a moral and material war against Germany."

Great Britain's War Cost Is Set At 38 Million A Day

Total Outlay For Year Ending March 31 Is Estimated At $13,864,000,000

JAN 1 - 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 31—Great Britain expects its war expenditures to reach an average of $38,000,000 a day for the current fiscal year ending March 31.

This was indicated today in a Treasury statement estimating the total outlay for the year ending March 31 at $13,864,000,000. In the week ended December 10, Britain hit a record high daily expenditure of $62,596,764.

The statement estimated expenditures for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1941, at $13,864,000,000 and revenue at $5,440,000,000, leaving a deficit of $8,424,000,000 to be met by borrowing.

A forty per cent. revenue gain, much of it attributed to the purchase tax, helped to offset the jump in war costs during the first nine months of 1940.

RAW MATERIALS MAY PLAY ROLE IN BRITISH DEAL

Roosevelt Hints Repayment for Arms Might Be Made in Tin and Rubber.

CONGRESS WILL GET PLAN

payment in raw materials as well as in types of fighting equipment supplied.

Previously, the President had spoken of replacement in kind under a program which contemplates the taking over by this country of future British orders for such things as guns, tanks and planes and then supplying them to Britain.

But when he was asked at a press conference today whether replacement might be made in such things as tin, rubber and similar materials, he responde in the affirmative. He added th it depended on a good many c cumstances and that the p mary concern was obtaining a replacement that could be decided on by two friendly nations.

A reporter inquired whether replacements might involve British islands in the Atlantic, but the President dismissed that idea as silly.

Will Discuss Arms Loan.

The President, it was indicated at the White House earlier in the day, probably will discuss in his annual message to Congress next Monday a plan for lending and leasing war equipment to England.

Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, said it would seem logical to him for Mr. Roosevelt to talk about the proposal at that time.

He added, however, that he did not think the President had decided whether to go into it in detail.

Wells, at Lisbon, Calls U. S. Far Short of War

But Cites Virtually Unanimous Backing for Aid to Britain

LISBON, Dec. 31 (AP)—H. G. Wells, arriving here aboard the American Export liner Excalibur, said today he believed that the United States still was far short of entering the European war.

JAN 1 - 1941

"Opinion there is still sharply divided," the British writer said, but added that he had found American opinion virtually unanimously in favor of aid to England.

Mr. Wells, who expected to leave soon for London, said he intended to cable reports to the United States on the situation in England.

The Excalibur brought forty-five other passengers. Among them were five members of a Japanese trade mission and two Japanese newspaper men on their way to Berlin.

Curb Sweets for Workers

LONDON, [illegible].—A Food Ministry official said today that non-rationed supplies of such foods as jam, marmalade, chocolates and biscuits for the Air Raid Precaution and Auxiliary Fire Services would be curtailed hereafter to meet local shortages in shops serving ordinary civilians.

DUBLIN SEES FOOD PERIL

Warns of Threat to Imports—Gasoline Curbs Eased

DUBLIN, Dec. 31 (AP)—The food position of Ireland [Eire] is rapidly becoming more serious, Agriculture Minister, Dr. James Ryan, warned in a broadcast from Dublin tonight.

Stressing the danger of a shortage, Dr. Ryan said:

"I am quite positive that within a very short period supplies of imported food may be cut off entirely.

"If we are to survive the dangers that lie ahead, all essential foodstuffs must be produced at home."

The Agriculture Minister added that he had the power to take over the land of farmers who failed to make progress in tillage of 20 per cent more arable land by February.

The Eire Government, which last week ordered importing companies to halt distribution of gasoline to motorists, announced tonight that rationed supplies would be restored tomorrow, but urged abandonment of all pleasure-riding in view of the urgent need of economy.

The relaxation order came as long lines of motorists besieged garages to get gasoline by the quart from stocks already on hand. Already the price of horses had increased rapidly and Dublin traffic had been cut in half by the restrictions.

ITALIAN ARMY SUPPLY SHIP REPORTED SUNK

Belgrade Hears Craft Was Torpedoed in Adriatic by British Warship.

JAN 1 - 1941

GREEK ADVANCE SPEEDED UP

Several Persons Killed or Injured in Italian Air Raid on Salonika.

Belgrade, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Reports reaching Belgrade said that an Italian transport loaded with war materials for Albania was torpedoed by a British warship in the Adriatic Sea today and went down off the port of Bar (Antivari), which is in the southern part of Yugoslavia, about twenty miles up the coast from the Albanian border.

The transport was said to have gone down before a Yugoslav vessel could reach her.

Most of the transport's crew were reported rescued, however.

Greek Advance Is Speeded Up.

Athens, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Improved weather conditions are speeding up the Greek advances against Italian positions in Albania, dispatches from the front said today. Greek artillery and aviation were reported active, and in the north a Greek bomber was said to have blown up an Italian ammunition dump and to have attacked troop concentrations.

The dispatches said that important heights were captured in the central sector, and that many new prisoners were taken. Greek fighter planes were reported to have shot down two Italian bombers, overtaken while returning from a raid in Greece.

The fighting in the Tepeleni, Klisura and Chimara sectors was described as intense. An observer at the front said that the battle in the coastal region north of Chimara was "one of the major battles of the war." It has been going on day and night for five days, even though a heavy snowstorm raged part of the time.

Meanwhile today more than a thousand new Italian prisoners, including an entire battalion, officers and all, were reported plodding back to Greek concentration camps after strong Italian counterattacks had been smashed.

The Greek High Command declared that the Greeks had carried out successful local operations despite the recent heavy reinforcement of the Italians, who were said to be fighting with renewed intensity in an effort to recover positions wrested from them during steady Greek advances.

The communique did not identify the sectors where the Greeks had gained ground, nor did it say where the new Italian captives were taken, along with field guns and other equipment.

Kick Off Skis to Flee.

It indicated, however, that some of the prisoners were Alpine ski troopers. Such troops, the High Command said, attacked the Greek advance forces but were put to flight. The Italians were said to have kicked off their skis and scattered.

Dispatches from the front said that some Greek gains were made north of Chimara, along the coastal road toward the port of Valona; and that the Italians suffered heavy casualties in counter-attacks in the Klisura sector, northeast of Chimara.

The Ministry of Home Security said Salonika, Preveza, Ioannina and a rural district of Cozani were bombed by Italian planes yesterday with a few casualties and slight damage.

Salonica Heavily Raided.

Salonika, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Italian bombers and fighting planes raided Salonika at noon yesterday, killing and injuring a number of persons and causing some damage.

Officials said explosives fell in public squares and the sea, but did not hit any military objectives. Defending planes engaged the raiders.

Italians Claim Prisoners Too.

Rome, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The Italians have inflicted considerable losses on the Greek forces on the Albanian battle front and have captured both prisoners and war equipment in fighting, which was mostly of a local character, the Italian High Command reported today.

Fascist warplanes and naval units operating in the Adriatic were said to be co-operating, meanwhile, in an intensive bombardment of Greek troop concentrations and supply centers, with visible effects.

Listed among targets bombed with excellent results were the Ægean port of Salonika, the naval base of Prevesa on the west coast of Greece, and air fields at Ioannina and Kotzani.

During these operations, the High Command said, a patrol of British fighter planes engaged the Italians, but was beaten off and one Hurricane was shot down.

Italian fighter planes were reported to have joined dive bombers in raids over the Greek lines, swooping low to machine-gun troops and trucks.

The communique acknowledged that enemy planes—it did not identify their nationality—had flown over "some localities in Southern Italy dropping flares," but made no mention of bombings. One was reported shot down in flames.

British Attack Italian Convoy In the Adriatic

Submarine Sinks Vessel Guarded by Destroyers; Transport Also Down

By The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Dec. 31.—A British submarine attacked four Italian merchantmen convoyed by two destroyers in the sight of passengers on a Yugoslav coastal steamship today, and was said to have sunk one of the Italian commercial vessels.

Earlier, an Italian transport was reported sunk off the Yugoslav port of Bar, (Antivari), farther south in the Adriatic.

Transports Reported Sunk

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP).—Reuters (British news agency) tonight said reports had been received in Belgrade that a British warship had sunk four Italian transports in the Adriatic today. The reports said all the ships were carrying heavy guns and automobiles. The sinkings were said to have occurred near the juncture of the Yugoslav and Albanian frontiers.

Greeks Report Capture Of 500 More Italians

Athens, (Wednesday), Jan. 1 (AP)—The Greek army pounced on enemy reinforcements and captured 500 prisoners in dislodging Italians from heights near the key town of Klisura, in central Albania, a spokesman declared early today.

The reinforcements, the spokesman said, had been rushed to the Klisura sector to halt the Greek advance on that mountain junction of the road leading to Valona, Adriatic port, now the main objective of the Greek offensive.

A general headquarters communique reported the repulse of a tank attack by the Italians on an undisclosed sector.

Tanks And Guns Taken

One tank, eight guns and other material were taken, the communique said, and reported in addition that two Italian airplanes were shot down yesterday.

In the coastal sector north of Chimara, the Greek army was reported to have captured all the fortified [illegible] after a bitter five-day battle.

Capture of the 500 near Klisura brought to 1,200 the number of prisoners taken within the last few days, the spokesman pointed out.

"You read last night's communique about the Italian battalion captured with its commander and his entire staff, in all 700 men with equipment. This occurred in the Drinos river sector," he said.

500 Taken Prisoner

"Other units of our troops repulsed the enemy after stiff resistance on his part on heights near Klisura. Five hundred soldiers and officers, belonging to fresh troops Italy sent in order to strengthen her army in Albania, were taken prisoners."

Four guns, mortars, machine guns, automatic guns and other material were listed as prizes in this operation.

Better weather and widespread action by both British and Greek planes aided the whole Greek military situation in Albania, said dispatches from the front on the last day of the year.

The fighting north of Chimara, which is but thirty miles south of the Italian troopship port of Valona, was described by an observer as one of the major battles of this war, barely more than two months old.

Dump Blown Up

On the northern front the pilot of a Greek bomber reported he had blown up an Italian ammunition dump and bombed troop concentrations and, off the Ionian Island of Levkas, a British fighter was said officially to have knocked a tri-motored Italian seaplane into the water, later dropping a rubber dinghy for the floundering crew.

The Canadian pilot of the British plane told this story:

"When we saw the enemy we dived to attack and quickly silenced his rear gun. I was pumping lead into him until I wondered what was holding the aircraft up. The cant (seaplane) had its float down, but was still flying, so we decided to make a final attempt to down him.

Saw Plane Crash

"I attacked him from the front and fired until I had to break away to avoid a head-on collision. As I climbed I saw the aircraft dip a wing into the sea and then crash. We flew around for a bit and saw two of the crew, one of them waving a handkerchief. Three or four others were lying on the wing. We dropped our rubber dinghy, then returned home."

Two other Italian bombers, returning home from a raid on Greece, were said to have been shot down by Greek fighters.

Numerous Greek civilian casualties were reported in Italian "hit-and-run" raids Monday on Ioannina and Salonika, on opposite sides of Greece.

Premier John Metaxas, in a New Year's message, declared the Greek people were ready to fight to the last breath until the enemy was exterminated.

"For this strife of ours, with full confidence it is right, we pray to God to ask His help," the message said.

ROME, DEC. 31--ITALIAN WARSHIPS AND DIVE BOMBERS HAVE OPENED A FURIOUS ASSAULT ON THE GREEKS, THEIR HARBORS, AIRDROMES, SUPPLY BASES AND COMMUNICATIONS, THE HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED TODAY.

GREEK SUPPLY CENTERS ON THE COASTS OF BOTH ALBANIA AND GREECE WERE BOMBARDED INTENSIVELY YESTERDAY BY "OUR NAVAL UNITS," WITH "VISIBLE EFFECTS," A COMMUNIQUE SAID.

DIVE BOMBERS WERE TURNED LOOSE ON GREEK MILITARY PREPARATIONS, BRIDGES AND ROADS; FIGHTERS SPRAYED MARCHING COLUMNS, CONCENTRATIONS AND MOTOR CONVOYS WITH MACHINE-GUN BULLETS.

THE HIGH COMMAND LISTED SALONIKA AND PREVEZA AS PLACES WHERE HARBORS AND MILITARY OBJECTIVES WERE HIT WITH BOMBS, AND SAID AIRFIELDS AT IOANNINA AND KOTZANI WERE ATTACKED "WITH EXCELLENT RESULTS," TWO ENEMY PLANES BEING DESTROYED ON THE GROUND.

A VICTORIOUS COMBAT WITH A SQUADRON OF BRITISH HURRICANE FIGHTERS ALSO WAS REPORTED. ONE OF THE HURRICANES WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN DESTROYED.

GROUND FIGHTING, THE ITALIANS SAID, WAS LOCAL IN CHARACTER, AND ALTHOUGH THEY CLAIMED THAT GREEK PRISONERS WERE TAKEN, THERE WAS NO

INDICATION OF A FASCIST COUNTER-OFFENSIVE.

ITALIAN SHRAPNEL BOMBS AND MACHINE-GUN BULLETS FROM THE AIR WERE SAID TO HAVE TURNED BACK BRITISH ARMORED UNITS ATTEMPTING TO APPROACH FASCIST POSITIONS IN LIBYA, PRESUMABLY IN THE REGION OF BESIEGED BARDIA.

IONNINA, GREECE, DEC. 30 (DELAYED)--(AP)--HIGH-FLYING ITALIAN BOMBERS DROPPED SEVERALTONS OF EXPLOSIVES IN RAIDS HERE AND OVER A WIDE AREA OF THE GREEK-ALBANIAN BORDER TODAY.

THE ATTACKERS VANISHED WHEN GREEK FIGHTER PLANES THREW UP A STRONG DEFENSIVE PATROL. ONE GROUP OF 20 RAIDERS FLEW OVER THIS INDUSTRIAL CENTER, 30 MILES FROM THE ALBANIAN FRONTIER, AND LET LOOSE THEIR BOMBS FROM A HEIGHT OF 9,000 FEET.

I SAW THE BODIES OF FOUR MEN REMOVED FROM A YARD WHERE ONE BOMB FELL. THIRTY WOMEN AND CHILDREN HAD A CLOSE CALL WHEN ANOTHER PROJECTILE TORE OFF THE FRONT OF A TWO-STORY DWELLING BUT FAILED TO CRACK THE BASEMENT SHELTER.

IT WAS THE FIRST MAJOR RAID HERE IN THREE WEEKS, ALTHOUGH SETTLEMENTS WITHIN A RANGE OF 60 MILES HAVE BEEN ATTACKED FREQUENTLY.

TRAVELING ALONG THE GREEK WEST COAST THE LAST FOUR DAYS I SAW ITALIAN BOMBERS OVERHEAD EACH DAY.. THEY RARELY DESCENED LOWER THAN 10,000 FEET BECAUSE OF SHARPSHOOTING GREEK ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERIES.

AT ONE POINT A BOMB FELL INTO A BAY, SENDING UP A 50-FOOT GEYSER. GREEK BOYS IN ROWBOATS HAD A FIELD DAY GATHERING IN DEAD FISH.

I WAS GETTING A SHAVE WHEN THE FIRST BOMB FELL THIS MORNING A BLOCK XXXXXX AND A HALF FROM THE BARBERSHOP. AFTER WE GOT UP FROM THE FLOOR THE BARBER HELD OUT HIS HAND TO CONVINCE ME HE WAS NOT TREMBLING. THEN HE FINISHED THE SHAVE WITH A FLOURISH.

King of Greece Confident for 1941

Athens, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—In a New Year's message to the Greek nation, King George II told his people last night that "our struggle will be hard, but our reserves of morale are inexhaustible. . . ."

He praised the Greek achievement in driving the Italians from Greek soil and expressed confidence that the New Year would bring further successes.

No peasants came to market. I walked by many shops and homes which were either closed because of bomb damage or blasted to ruins. In the town's newest quarter, debris still rises in huge mounds where four or five-story apartment houses were smashed by attacks more than a month ago.

The Compiello district near the water front was littered with wreckage. I inspected a shattered concrete vault where a 200-kilogram Italian bomb interrupted a Christmas dance of twenty-two young Greeks. All were torn to bits.

Water seeps down the rock falls and turns cavern floors into bogs. Some of the islanders have only straw for beds.

But the people of Corfu retain their spirit. They told me the Italians could bomb them to kingdom come, but the Greeks would fight on.

People of Corfu Live in Caves

Greeks Driven Below Ground Into Dank Caverns by Italian Bombs.

By DANIEL DE LUCE.

Corfu, Dec. 28 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The Greek island city of Corfu is dead above ground, but in slimy tunnels 6,000 women, children and old men live in fear of Italian bombs.

I saw them today, cooking soup over charcoal fires, nursing babies and sewing clothing in odorous caverns ankle-deep in mud. They had existed like this since November 1—fifty-eight days in misery of which more than fifty were marked by Fascist air raids.

Bombs have killed about ninety persons and injured as many more. Corfu, so-called Queen of the Ionian Isles, is an easy target for Italian pilots. So far, not one anti-aircraft shell has been fired in its defense.

Today was exceptionally quiet, yet four alarms had sounded by 1 P. M.

Christmas Dance Bombed.

The authorities estimated that 40 per cent of Corfu was uninhabitable. Another 20 per cent is badly damaged, but can still afford shelter.

Medical Aid Is Rushed.

Five churches lie in ruins, but hundreds of devout Greeks worship from dawn to dark in Saint Spiridions. The hard-pressed Greek Government has dispatched medical aid and established relief agencies for a thousand impoverished families.

Funds have been set up to send 500 mothers and children to the country. Public health physicians express sharp concern over thousands of tunnel dwellers during the damp winter months.

British Content To Bide Time in Siege of Bardia

Expect Hunger and Steady Shelling to Reduce Town Without a Costly Assault

CAIRO, Dec. 31 (AP).—The British Middle East command reported today that Italian defenders of besieged Bardia, pounded relentlessly by artillery, "continue passively to await events."

Indications were still lacking of any early British attempt to storm the Libyan port, which has been under British siege for two weeks. It was believed here the British would refrain from a costly assault, preferring instead to starve out the Italians.

Elsewhere in African operations, today's brief communique reported renewed patrol activity along the border between Kenya and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Italians Say Planes Beat Back Unchanged Force.

ROME, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Italian warplanes and artillery were credited by the Italian High Command today with beating off attacks by British mechanized units on the Libyan battle front where the fighting has been centered for almost two weeks around Bardia.

The communique declared that "groups of enemy tanks and armored cars were repulsed or damaged while attempting to approach our positions."

There was no other mention of land activity on the North African front, where both sides, the Italians indicated, were holding fast to their positions.

Italian long-range artillery and bombing planes, however, were reported to have pounded the British advance base at Salum on the Egyptian side of the frontier, and it was admitted that British bombers again attacked Italian air bases in Libya.

Artillery and patrol activity was reported on the Sudanese front in East Africa. Two British planes were said to have been shot down in an attack on an unidentified Italian base and one Fascist craft was said to have been set afire on the ground.

ITALIANS APPOINT CZAR OF INDUSTRY

Ricci to Function Like Dictator of Food.

Rome, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Renato Ricci, Minister of Guilds, became virtual dictator over Italy's industry today, with absolute control over the handling and distribution of all raw materials.

A law issued last Saturday made Giuseppe Tassinari, Minister of Agriculture, dictator of food, with control over production and consumption, exports and imports, and distribution to both civilians and the armed forces alike. Both changes were made as the result of the war.

The decree giving Ricci new powers was published in the official gazette today. His Ministry will apportion raw materials among industrial concerns according to the nation's war needs and will determine which products are to be turned over to the army and which may be left for civilian consumption. He will have power to ration industrial products, excepting food, as he sees fit.

Ricci's first job will be to take an inventory of industrial stocks. Afterward he is authorized to buy or requisition products he needs. Support of the Finance Ministry's police force is assured him.

ITALY CLAMPS DICTATORSHIP OVER INDUSTRY

Another Decree Places Slaughter Of Cattle Under Drastic Control

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Dec. 31—Italy tightened her war economy another notch today by establishing a virtual dictatorship over her industry.

This all-powerful post fell to 45-year-old Renato Ricci, Minister of Guilds and veteran Fascist party stalwart. He will have the final say in the handling and distribution of all raw materials and will determine which products are to be turned over to the army and which may be left for civilian consumption.

Follows Food Measure

NEW YORK, DEC 31-(AP)-THE ROME RADIO BROADCAST TODAY A SUMMARY OF ITALIAN PRESS REACTION TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S AID-TO-BRITAIN SPEECH, THE GIST OF WHICH, IT SAID, "EMPHASIZED THAT HE IS REPEATING HIMSELF TOO FREQUENTLY."

QUOTING THE NEWSPAPER IL MESSAGERO, THE RADIO SAID:

"TO THINK THAT GERMANY AND ITALY INTENDED TO ATTACK THE UNITED STATES SHOWS SUCH NAIVETE AS CAN BE BELIEVED AND FORMULATED ONLY BY A MAN WHO WANTS TO HELP BRITAIN AT ALL COSTS."

REFERRING TO WHAT IT SAID WAS THE UNITED STATES' INTENTION TO "BREAK THE COUNTER-BLOCKADE OF THE AXIS POWERS AND SEND UNITED STATES SHIPS TO EIRE (IRELAND)," IL MESSAGERO COMMENTED "IT IS SIMPLY INADMISSABLE THAT SUCH AN INDISPUTABLE RIGHT AS THAT OF BLOCKADE COULD BE CHANGED BY THE ONE-SIDED DECISION OF WASHINGTON."

"IF THE UNITED STATES SHOULD CARRY THROUGH THIS INTENTION," IT CONTINUED, "THEN THEIR SHIPS WOULD BE EXPOSED TO SERIOUS RISKS. THE AXIS POWERS AT ANY RATE ARE NOT WILLING TO TOLERATE THAT OBSTACLES BE PUT IN THEIR WAY TO VICTORY, WHICH MUST BE TOTAL VICTORY."

LA STAMPA, ACCORDING TO THE BROADCAST, EXPRESSED "GREAT INDIGNATION AT THE AMBIGUOUS AND DARK SPIRIT OF ROOSEVELT'S SERMON," ADDING THAT "THE MASTER OF DEMOCRATIC JUSTICE, IN THE NAME OF HUMANITY AND INTERNATIONAL LAW, WANTS TO EXCLUDE THE AUTHORITARIAN STATES FROM A CIVILIZATION WHICH HAS SERVED ONLY FOR CAMOUFLAGING CRIMES AND PREROGATIVES OF PLUTOCRATIC IMPERIALISM."

"SINCE THE BRITISH EMPIRE IS THE OBSTACLE IN THE WAY OF JUSTLY DISTRIBUTING RICHES AND LABOR, GERMANY AND ITALY INEVITABLY HAD TO STORM THIS MAIN OBSTACLE X X X. IN ORDER TO BE FREE AND INDEPENDENT, AMERICANS HAD NOT TO FIGHT AGAINST GERMANY AND ITALY, BUT AGAINST THEIR BRITISH OPPRESSORS." #

There was no fighting activity last night.

VICHY, FRANCE, DEC. 31--(AP)--A NEW REGIME AND AN EMPIRE STILL INTACT ARE FRANCE'S MAIN ASSETS AND MILITARY DEFEAT IS HER GREAT LIABILITY AS SHE FACES THE NEW YEAR, AN OFFICIAL SPOKESMAN SAID IN PRESENTING A "BALANCE FOR 1940" TODAY IN A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE TO THE PRESS.

THE SPOKESMAN EMPHASIZED, HOWEVER, THAT UNTIL FINAL PEACE TERMS WERE REACHED, FRANCE COULD NOT TELL WHETHER HER POLITICAL "VICTORY" WOULD OUTWEIGH HER DISASTER IN WAR. HE SAID THE OLD REGIME WAS "RULED BY BOTH SOCIALIST AND CAPITALIST INTERNATIONAL," BUT THAT ONLY NOW WAS THE PROBLEM OF THE PROLETARIAT BEING SOLVED.

"ALSO ON THE CREDIT SIDE OF THE LEDGER," HE SAID, "IS OUR UNBEATEN NAVY AND AN EMPIRE IN OUR KEEPING."

BOTH FRANCE'S NAVY AND EMPIRE, HOWEVER, HAVE BEEN IMPAIRED BY THE WAR. SOME POSSESSIONS, PARTICULARLY EQUATORIAL AFRICA, HAVE GONE OVER TO THE FORCES OF GEN. CHARLES DE GAULLE, STILL ALLIED WITH BRITAIN. SOME FRENCH WARSHIPS ALSO ARE SERVING WITH THE BRITISH FLEET AND OTHERS HAVE BEEN SUNK OR DAMAGED BY BRITISH ACTION TO KEEP THEM FROM FALLING INTO AXIS HANDS.

FRENCH ARE URGED TO USE INGENUITY

Petain, Predicting Hard Year, Asks People to Overcome Expected Difficulties

VICHY, France, Dec. 31 (AP)—Chief of State Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain predicted in a New Year's message prepared for broadcast at midnight tonight that "the year 1941 will be hard."

"We will go hungry," he warned, because of poor crops and the war blockade. He appealed to peasants to "draw from the earth whatever she can give" and to the "ingeniousness" of the public to fill out its diet however it can.

He besought workers "not to become discouraged" if "some industries come to a dead halt" for lack of materials.

"The war and the blockade will continue," Marshal Pétain said. "That does not depend on us."

Admiral Jean Darlan, Minister of the Navy, issued a message saying his thoughts were with "those who, detained by allies of yesterday, have been and remain faithful to their prostrate country despite lies, offers and bad treatment, both moral and material."

Petain Delays Cabinet Shuffle

VICHY, Dec. 31 (AP). — Long-expected changes in Chief of State Marshal Henri Petain's Cabinet probably will be deferred until Fuehrer Adolf Hitler replies to French proposals on how France and Germany could collaborate, informed sources said today. These informants said Hitler's reply was not expected before Jan. 3. They said the Cabinet changes would involve only minor posts and not Petain's principal collaborator with Germany, Fernand de Brinon.

French Naval Minister Keeps Hitler Waiting

Fuehrer Reported Wrathful at 45-Minute Delay

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 31 (AP). —Admiral Jean Darlan, Franch Naval Minister, was reported by informed quarters here today to have incurred the ire of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler by being forty-five minutes late at a Christmas Day meeting in occupied France, somewhere north of Paris.

The meeting, at which Darlan was said to have presented Chief of State Marshal Henri Petain's proposals on how Germany and France could collaborate, was said by these informants to have taken place at a village near Beauvais and to have lasted only fifteen minutes.

These accounts said Darlan's chauffeur lost his way and that Der Fuehrer was in a bad humor when Darlan finally arrived. Hitler, however, was said to have agreed to consider Petain's proposals and reply.

(Darlan went to Paris Christmas Eve and returned the day after Christmas. Berlin sources said Hitler spent Christmas Day with his troops in the west.)

Hungary Reluctant To Give Nazis Its All

BUDAPEST, Dec. 31 (AP).—A Cabinet quarrel over alleged promises by Michael Teleki, Minister of Agriculture, to deliver to Germany and Italy nearly twice as much foodstuffs as Hungary produces was said by informed sources today to have been the reason for Teleki's resignation Sunday.

They said the controversy arose when the Minister of War demanded to know what Hungarian troops, now being mobilized, were expected to eat if the country was being drained of stores to supply the Axis powers.

Rumanian Minister To Soviet Called Home

Budapest, Dec. 31 (AP)—Diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest tonight said that Grigore Gafencu, Rumanian Minister to Moscow, had been summoned home. Gafencu has been attempting a policy of rapprochement with Russia and his return was interpreted as meaning that the Iron Guard did not approve.

An early end to Russian diplomatic representation in Bucharest was foreseen by diplomatic dispatches, which declared the Soviet Union planned to deal with Rumania in the future through the embassy in Berlin—taken to mean that Russia would thus view Rumania as a conquered country.

It was reported that Russia had protested vigorously against an increasing campaign by the Iron Guard for recovery of Bessarabia, the province annexed by Russia last summer.

At the same time, Count Istan Csaky, Hungary's Foreign Minister, was quoted in the press here as declaring that "Hungary will take an active share in building the new European order—particularly in remoulding southeastern Europe."

RUMANIAN REDS REPORTED SEIZED

Warning to Russia Seen in Antonescu Message.

BELGRADE, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Reports from Bucharest today said that many new arrests had been made in the Rumanian capital and that the authorities there had announced the discovery of several Communist organizations, especially among railway employees.

A statement by the Rumanian Premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu, declaring that Rumania was now guaranteed by the most powerful nation in the world was interpreted in diplomatic circles as an indirect warning to Soviet Russia not to attempt to carry out a reported plan of seizing the mouths of the Danube and moving into Moldavia.

German troops and war materials still moved into Rumania through Hungary. The advance guard reached the Danube on the Rumanian-Bulgarian frontier on Sunday, and these movements coincided with reports that Russian troops were concentrating in Bessarabia, in the north.

A report from Bucharest said that Gen. Nikola Marinescu, former Minister of National Health, had been deprived of his military rank.

German news reports said Nazi troops in Rumania were supplied with foodstuffs from Germany and would distribute food to the poorest of the Rumanians.

Budapest, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Dispatches from Belgrade reported today that the correspondent for Tass, the official Soviet Russian news agency, had been expelled from Yugoslavia on a charge he was a spy for a foreign power. The dispatch said that the correspondent had been put across the Yugoslav border, presumably into Bulgaria.

Balkans Regard Coming Year With Foreboding

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 31 (AP)—The increase in Germany's military forces in Rumania caused the Balkan nations generally tonight to regard 1941 with foreboding.

While many observers said the real crisis might not come soon, there were few who believed the German forces in Rumania would be withdrawn without first seeing action.

"It seems likely nothing will happen in the next two weeks and not much in the next two months," one well informed Bulgarian said. "After that anything at all might happen."

Arrests In Rumania

Reports reaching Belgrade from Bucharest today said many new arrests had been made there and the authorities had announced discovery of several Communist organizations, especially among railway employes.

Nazi troops and materials were still moving into Rumania through Hungary. Soviet units were reported concentrating in Bessarabia.

In diplomatic circles in Belgrade, a statement of Premier General Ion Antonescu of Rumania that his country now was guaranteed "by the most powerful nation" in the world was interpreted as an indirect warning to Russia not to try to seize the province of Moldavia or the Danube mouths.

Bulgaria Pessimistic

Bulgaria, facing the possibility of becoming a battleground should the German army move into action toward the south from Rumania, would like 1941 to be as satisfactory nationally as 1940, when the nation recovered southern Dubruja from Rumania. The general feeling in informed quarters, however, was one of pessimism.

The newspaper Slovo observed that Bulgaria must be prepared to face any sacrifices.

"The nation must be ready," the paper said, "because liberty and independence are the highest benefits a cultured nation can desire."

News Censored

News from Bucharest and Budapest, where strict censorship prevails, was meager. The Nazi forces in Rumania are estimated here as well over 300,000, but the Rumanian press—like the Hungarian—has steadfastly ignored their presence.

Foreign correspondents in Bucharest are occasionally forbidden to transmit even excerpts from the Rumanian newspapers.

Although many observers believe the entrance of German troops into Bulgaria would bring Turkey into the war, there is no indication here what preparations the Turks are making.

European Turkey is still under martial law and information of military activities is censored.

Kung Sees Victory Nearer

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 31 (AP)—Dr. H. H. Kung, Vice Premier and Finance Minister, told the nation in a New Year's message today that China would be nearer victory in her war with Japan in 1941. He declared that a financial, economic, military and diplomatic review of 1940 showed the nation had progressed.

Britain's temporary closing of the Burma Road to traffic in war supplies to China was the greatest blow of 1940, but, after the reopening, China's international position was better than before, he said.

The latest British and American loans have raised China's foreign exchange reserve fund by 50 per cent, he said.

Finance Minister Isao Kawata noted that Japan's budget for the 1941-42 fiscal year showed an increase of $200,000,000 from the previous fiscal period.

Sinking Of 10 Ships In Pacific Revealed As Survivors Land

500 Men, Women And Children Are Put Ashore In South Seas From Nazi Commercial Raiders

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Malay States, Wednesday, Jan. 1—Five hundred men, women and children landed by German commercial raiders December 21 on the Emaru Island of the Bismarck Archipelago, have been rescued by an Australian ship and taken to Australia, it was announced officially today.

Those rescued included British, French and Norwegians. There were seventy women and seven children in the group.

Admiral Sir Geoffrey Layton, commander-in-chief of Britain's China station, said the situation was not as alarming as it first appeared because the survivors came from ships sunk over several months and not from a sudden wave of sinkings within the last few weeks.

The passengers and crewmen were from the Rangitane, Holmwood, Notou, Ringwood, Triona, Triadic, Triaster, Vinni, Turakina and Komata, it was said.

The admiral said both the British and Australian navies were "well aware of the activities of the raiders and appropriate measures are being taken."

He said that in view of the vast expanse of ocean to be covered it might take some time to bring the raiders "to book," but that they would be accounted for eventually.

The Turakina, Notou and Holmwood previously had been reported sunk, but this was the first disclosure of the fate of the others.

Largest of the newly disclosed losses was the Rangitane, a 16,712-ton British steamer.

The others were the Triadic, 6,378 tons; Triaster, 6,032, and Triona, 4,413, all recently built ships operated by the British Phosphate Commissioners; the British Komata, 3,900 tons, and the Norwegian steamers Vinni, 5,181 tons, and Ringwood, 7,203.

The Bismack Archipelago consists of more than one hundred small islands, formerly under German protectorate, but mandated to Australia under the Versailles treaty.

U. S. Disputes Editor On Nazi Peace Offer

No 'Feasible' Proposal Tendered, Hull Aids Say of Marshall's Charge

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Assertions by Verne Marshall, Cedar Rapids (Iowa) editor and chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, that a month after the war started the Roosevelt administration had rebuffed a German offer of "honorable and just" peace terms to be negotiated by the White House, were challenged almost immediately by the State Department.

The German peace offer, Marshall said, was brought to this country by W. R. Davis, New York oil operator who, Marshall said, had sold expropriated Mexican oil to the Axis powers prior to the war. The offer, he said, was pigeonholed at the State Department.

Mr. Marshall said the terms, sponsored by Marshal Goering and other high Nazi officials, constituted "a sound economic peace."

The State Department, commenting on Mr. Marshall's narrative, said that information or suggestions, volunteered by private citizens were "always courteously received," but added that "the government can only conduct important international affairs effectively through duly authorized and official channels created for that purpose."

Marshall recounted the details at a press conference when reporters queried him as to whether Davis was giving financial support to the No Foreign War Committee. The editor said Davis had offered to assist.

Marshall also was asked whether Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was a member of the committee.

"Colonel Lindbergh warned me repeatedly," he replied, "against letting his name appear publicly in our support. I said to him, 'The sooner you walk up Fifth Ave. as an executive of our committee, the happier I'll be.'"

Marshall related that Davis went abroad by clipper in September, 1939, "after a lengthy conference at the White House with President Roosevelt and Adolf Berle of the State Department" and that "the President knew what he was going for."

Three-Day Conference.

"On Oct. 9 or thereabouts," Marshall continued, "Davis landed at Port Washington, N. Y., bringing a complete agenda as conceived and taken down in shorthand by several stenographers at a conference that lasted parts of three days. That's all I'm going to say about the conference."

"The conference was in Berlin?" a reporter inquired.

"That's all I'm going to say about the conference," Marshall reiterated.

[From Berlin, the United Press reported that Mr. Marshall's statement was published at length in the German press.]

"The document itself in plain words agreed that President Roosevelt would be the mediator at a conference in the White House. It indicated the identity of the plenipotentiaries who would be sent. Davis had it translated into English."

"From the German language?" a reporter asked.

"He had it translated into English," Marshall repeated.

Davis Mystified.

"He notified the White House he was here. They asked him to submit it to the State Department. He declined, explaining he thought it should be placed only before the President. After jockeying back and forth all of one day he finally agreed to take it to the State Department and submit it to Berle.

"Davis was so mystified by all these circumstances that he refused to give Berle the original document, initialed by all the high government officials of at least two governments who attended the conference on these peace proposals, but gave him a copy. Berle was exercised—he was mad.

"Davis didn't give him the original, but I know where it is, and I have a copy."

Nazi Agent Balked.

Marshall also related that Goering had sent Joachim Hertzlet of the Economic Bureau to accompany Davis on his return "to document" for the Nazis what Davis might tell President Roosevelt. But he said Hetzlet was stopped at Lisbon and was unable to reach the United States.

The American Consul at Lisbon, Marshall added, "cabled the State Department and the White House for Permission for Hertzlet to proceed. He didn't get it."

"Then an attempt was made to get Hertzlet through with a Swedish passport because the Germans wanted to end the war. But the validation he would have given to Davis was never taken to the State Department or the White House."

Marshall added that if peace had been proclaimed as the result of a conference here, "Hertzlet immediately would have been appointed German Ambassador to the United States."

WASHINGTON, DEC. 31(AP)-SENATOR LEE (D-OKLA) SAID IN A STATEMENT TODAY THAT THE "ANGEL" OF THE NO FOREIGN WAR COMMITTEE HEADED BY VERNE MARSHALL, CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA, EDITOR, "IS A RICH, INTERNATIONAL OIL MERCHANT" WITH A "GREAT FINANCIAL STAKE" IN A GERMAN VICTORY.

LEE IDENTIFIED THE MAN ONLY AS "THIS MAN DAV

A RICH, INTERNATIONAL OIL MERCHANT" WITH A "GREAT FINANCIAL STAKE" IN A GERMAN VICTORY.

LEE IDENTIFIED THE MAN ONLY AS "THIS MAN DAVIS" WHO HE SAID TRIED "TO PROMOTE A PHONY PEACE THROUGH THE WHITE HOUSE TO PULL GERMANY'S CHESTNUTS OUT OF THE FIRE."

MARSHALL TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE YESTERDAY THAT W.R.DAVIS, NEW YORK OIL OPERATOR, HAD BROUGHT A GERMAN PEACE OFFER TO WASHINGTON A MONTH AFTER THE WAR STARTED IN SEPTEMBER, 1939. THE OFFER, MARSHALL SAID, WAS PIGEONHOLED AT THE STATE DEPARTMENT. THE DEPARTMENT, IN REPLY, SAID IT HAD RECEIVED NO "FEASIBLE" PEACE PROPOSAL.

TO INQUIRIES AS TO WHETHER DAVIS WAS GIVING FINANCIAL SUPPORT TO THE NO FOREIGN WAR COMMITTEE, MARSHALL SAID DAVIS HAD OFFERED TO ASSIST. HE ALSO SAID DAVIS HAD SOLD EXPROPRIATED MEXICAN OIL TO THE AXIS POWERS BUT ONLY PRIOR TO THE WAR.

LEE SAID THAT "MUCH OF THE GASOLINE SENDING SHOWERS OF FIERY DEATH INTO THE DEFENSELESS HEART OF LONDON WAS SOLD TO THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT BY THIS MAN DAVIS IN THE MONTHS BEFORE THE WAR STARTED, BUT HIS TRAFFIC IN THIS GERMAN-BOUND OIL HAPPILY HAS BEEN INTERRUPTED BY THE BRITISH BLOCKADE."

"THIS IS NATURALLY INCONVENIENT TO DAVIS--WHO WOULD LIKE TO GO ON MAKING HIS MONEY OUT OF THIS OIL," LEE ADDED.

COMMENTING ON DAVIS' PEACE EFFORTS, LEE SAID THAT "JUST HOW SINCERE IS DAVIS IN HIS PATRIOTIC DEVOTION TO PEACE CAN BE SEEN FROM THE FACT THAT IN 1938 HE TRIED TO PROMOTE THE IMPORTATION OF A SQUADRON OF GERMAN BOMBING PLANES INTO MEXICO."

"THE ORIGIN AND PRACTICES OF THE MISCALLED 'NO FOREIGN WARS COMMITTEE' GIVES US A TIMELY OBJECT LESSON IN THE TECHNIQUE OF NAZI INFILTRATION INTO AMERICA," LEE CONTINUED. "THE FIRST STEP IS TO APPEAL TO THE GREED AND PROFIT HUNGER OF A CERTAIN TYPE OF BUSINESS MAN. HE THEN VOLUNTEERS TO PUT UP THE MONEY AND ASSISTS IN ORGANIZING A FINE SOUNDING COMMITTEE THAT GETS OUT FINE SOUNDING PROMOTION LITERATURE TO FOOL THE PEOPLE INTO BELIEVING IT WORKS FOR THE HOLY CAUSE OF PEACE. THE OBJECT OF THIS NAZI INSPIRED MANEUVER IS OBVIOUSLY TO SABOTAGE BOTH OUR PROGRAM OF DEFENSE PRODUCTION AND AID TO BRITAIN."

NEW YORK, DEC. 31-(AP)-FOR MORE THAN 10 YEARS THE NAME OF WILLIAM RHODES DAVIS, OIL OPERATOR, HAS APPEARED ON THE FIRST PAGES OF NEWSPAPERS--OR NOT AT ALL.

DAVIS, AS ONE ASSOCIATE SAYS, "DOESN'T LIKE PUBLICITY."

WHEN HIS NAME HAS ENTERED INTO THE NEWS, IT HAS USUALLY APPEARED IN DISPATCHES FROM SUCH PLACES AS LONDON, STOCKHOLM, MEXICO CITY OR LIMA, PERU. IN EACH CASE, THE STORY HAS CONCERNED "SOMETHING BIG."

WHEN VERNE MARSHALL, IOWA PUBLISHER AND HEAD OF THE RECENTLY ORGANIZED NO FOREIGN WAR COMMITTEE, SAID IN WASHINGTON YESTERDAY THAT DAVIS HAD ACTED AS AN EMISSARY IN PEACE NEGOTIATIONS WITH GERMANY, IT WAS ONE OF THE FEW TIMES THE OIL OPERATOR'S NAME HAD ENTERED INTO DOMESTIC NEWS.

QUIET, ALWAYS CAREFULLY GROOMED, ALWAYS EXPENSIVELY DRESSED, DAVIS NOW IS 49 YEARS OLD. HE WAS BORN IN ALABAMA OF POOR PARENTS AND

WORKED AS A BOY AS A "CANDY BUTCHER" ON RAILROAD TRAIN. LATER HE BECAME A RAILROAD ENGINEER. HE ENTERED THE ARMY IN 1917 AND, AFTER THE WAR, BECAME AN OIL BROKER IN TULSA, OKLA.

WHEN FIRST HE APPEARED IN THE NEWS, HE WAS AN ALREADY SUCCESSFUL ASSOCIATE OF JOSEPH C.TREES, MULTI-MILLIONAIRE OIL MAN, AND MICHAEL LATE BENEDUM, KNOWN IN THE OIL INDUSTRY AS THE "NO. 1 WILDCATTER." THEIR INTERESTS IN OIL EXTENDED FROM PITTSBURGH TO OKLAHOMA.

IN 1928, BENEDUM-TREES OIL CO. ACQUIRED A CONCESSION FROM THE PERUVIAN GOVERNMENT FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF MORE THAN 100,000 SQUARE MILES OF MOUNTAINS AND JUNGLES NEAR THE BORDER OF ECUADOR.

PERU REVOKED THE CONTRACT ON THE ALLEGATION THAT NO WORK WAS BEING DONE ON A PROMISED 700-MILE RAILROAD, THEN ANNOUNCED IN 1930 THE CONCESSION HAD BEEN AWARDED TO "A GROUP OF AMERICAN INVESTORS HEADED BY W.R.DAVIS," WHO WENT TO LIMA FOR THE NEGOTIATIONS.

THE AREA WAS BELIEVED RICH IN OIL, BUT THE PLANNED DEVELOPMENT NEVER WAS CARRIED THROUGH, PERHAPS BECAUSE OF A BORDER DISPUTE INVOLVING ECUADOR, PERU AND COLOMBIA. THE LATTER TWO NATIONS ACTUALLY ENGAGED IN HOSTILITIES DURING THE CONTROVERSY IN 1932.

WHEN MEXICO EXPROPRIATED FOREIGN OIL PROPERTIES IN 1938, DAVIS APPEARED IN MEXICO. HE SAID THAT HE HAD BEEN NEGOTIATING FOR THE PURCHASE OF $2,500,000 WORTH OF MEXICAN OIL BEFORE THE EXPROPRIATIONS DECREE WAS ISSUED AND THAT HE WAS READY TO TAKE ALL OF MEXICO'S EXCESS OIL OFF THE REPUBLIC'S HANDS.

DAVIS ANNOUNCED IN APRIL, 1938, HIS COMPANIES OWNED 17 TANKERS AND HAD 10 MORE UNDER CONTRACT AVAILABLE TO SHIP OIL TO EUROPE. IN JULY, THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT CONTRACTED TO SELL $10,000,000 WORTH OF OIL TO DAVIS & CO.

THEN, IN DECEMBER, IT WAS REPORTED HE HAD ARRANGED A BARTER DEAL WITH GERMANY BY WHICH THE REICH WAS TO RECEIVE $17,000,000 WORTH OF OIL IN EXCHANGE FOR GERMAN MANUFACTURED GOODS, ESPECIALLY IRON PIPE WITH WHICH TO CONSTRUCT AN OIL PIPELINE FROM MEXICAN OILFIELDS TO THE COAST.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT IN WASHINGTON ASKED AMBASSADOR JOSEPHUS DANIELS FOR A FULL REPORT ON THE SUBJECT. DANIELS REPORTED IN FEBRUARY, 1939, THAT THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT HAD REJECTED A GERMAN OFFER OF 17 AIRPLANES AS PART OF THE BARTER DEAL. IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THE AMBASSADOR HAD OBJECTED TO THE PROPOSAL.

ALL THE REST OF THE BARTER DEAL ENDED EARLY IN SEPTEMBER WHEN THE WAR BEGAN IN EUROPE.

ADVANCE ACHIEVED IN DEFENSE DRIVE

Despite Lag, Much Positive Progress Was Made in Year Toward Nation's Goal

PLANT OUTPUT IS LEAPING

New Construction Is Far Along and Man Power Expands at an Unthought-Of Rate

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—In the midst of a serious world situation, officials of the Government were able today to summarize these definite advances within a year toward the goal of total defense:

The Army has more than doubled its manpower and is on the eve of a second doubling. Some 600,000 officers and men are already in uniform, contrasted with 215,488, all regulars, in service at the end of 1939.

New tanks, rifles, motor vehicles and other arms and supplies are actually being received at a rate suggestive of the volume to come, although, like warplanes, th far behind the combined requirements of the United States and Great Britain.

The Navy in a year has expanded in personnel in uniform from 158,814 last Jan. 1 to nearly 250,000 officers and men, including the Marines and the reservists called to active duty.

21 New Warships for Fleet

The fleet has been reinforced by twenty-one new warships and several score auxiliaries. Its commanders rate it the world's strongest, although the transfer of fifty old destroyers to Britain reduced the number of combat vessels to 321. Not for four years is the projected two-ocean navy expected to be ready.

In air strength several hundred new war planes have been put into service within the year, as a prelude to the delivery of thousands which are on order.

The Army counts 500 as first line combat planes, aside from several times as many training craft and outmoded fighters and bombers. Exact numbers are confidential. A year ago virtually none was rated officially a match for the new war-tested Nazi and British craft, because of lack of such equipment as leak-proof fuel tanks and armor.

The Navy and Marine Corps air forces numbered 2,145 planes in service a year ago. Eleven months later the total was up exactly 390.

Twice as many youths as a year ago are in training as Army and Navy pilots.

Production of planes has been almost doubled, although lagging behind schedules proved to have been too optimistic for the burdened industry.

Light tanks for the Army's new armored divisions are rolling off assembly lines at the rate of four or more a day. Less than a year ago the War Department acknowledged possession of just ten of late design, aside from obsolescent models. Mass production of 25-ton medium tanks and monsters of 55 tons or more is in the make-ready stage.

Cantonments Near Completion

New camps and cantonments for an army of 1,400,000, hardly thought of a year ago as a peacetime possibility, are three-quarters or more completed.

New facilities for warship and merchant shipping have been added at almost every port. Actual work is well along on the first of a billion-dollar string of government munitions plants.

Eight new Atlantic offshore bases acquired from Britain have been surveyed, some are under construction, and troops have been ordered to the base in Newfoundland.

With the selective service system in actual operation, a basis has been laid to meet demands for manpower.

Only in wartime 1917-18 could the armed forces report such swift progress in bolstering defenses to meet any threat to American security.

Overshadowing this bright side of the defense picture loom so many deficiencies and discouraging delays, however, that the men at the top directly concerned with overcoming them are unwilling to do more than acknowledge the limited, though substantial, progress made. The other side of the picture, portraying the nation swinging into 1941 still utterly unprepared for total war, demands their full attention.

Relatively, only preliminaries have been cleared away toward realizing the national objective of attaining maximum power in two years. It is a formidable undertaking, comparing with the seven years taken by Adolf Hitler's Germany, and the four required by Great Britain, by the estimate of Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

First Steps Preceded Blitzkrieg

The 1940 advances were almost entirely the result of steps to reinforce defenses taken long before the Nazi Blitzkrieg and the collapse of France put a new face on the outlook for American safety.

Months must elapse, by official schedules, before the full impact is felt with the conversion of contracts into munitions, and of raw recruits into trained soldiers, sailors and fliers.

Regardless of the volume of aid that may be spared in the meantime to help decide the outcome of the Battle of Britain, relatively little further bolstering of American defenses may be expected before late Summer.

By then, whether the United States is still at peace or at war, it is hoped by President Roosevelt's new four-man office of production management that the monthly output of warplanes will have been stepped up to 1,500 or more, toward the rate of 3,000 a month set for early 1942, and the eventual goal of 50,000 a year fixed by Mr. Roosevelt.

By Fall, such automobile plants as Packard and Ford are scheduled to be producing airplane motors to supplement the output of the existing engine concerns.

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 31—President Roosevelt, it was reported tonight, proposes to center in William S. Knudsen all the actual powers of the new office of production management for defense which has been called the "supreme command" of the defense program.

A tentative draft of an executive order which Mr. Roosevelt was said to be considering would make Knudsen the administrator of the program and give to the other three members of the council only advisory powers.

Britain Makes Drastic Reduction In Gold Shipments To America

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Drastic curtailment of British Empire shipments, the Commerce Department said today, reduced gold imports in the week ended December 25 to $8,125,788—the lowest weekly total since July 8, 1938.

The empire, which had been sending sometimes more than $100,000,000 a week to the United States, last week sent only $3,085,021 from Canada and $4,196,321 from India. The only other shipments were cargoes of a few thousand dollars each from a score of countries scattered from Portugal to the Philippine Islands.

Foreign gold deposited under earmark in Federal Reserve banks increased during the week by $4,245,958 to a total of $1,804,597,244.

Silver imports increased slightly from recent weeks to a total of $1,161,386, of which $594,078 came from Mexico, $264,680 from Japan $218,597 from Peru, and $30,531 from Canada.

Gold exports amounted to $1,295; silver exports $3,350.

Britain Gets Flying Boats

Purchases 3 Clipper Type Planes from Pan American Airways

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP).—Morris Wilson, representing the British Ministry of Aircraft Production, announced today the purchase of three flying boats of the Atlantic Clipper type from Pan American Airways. Mr. Wilson said the planes constituted half of a Pan American order nearing completion in the Boeing plant at Seattle.

When delivered in the next few weeks, he added, the planes will be used to "maintain empire communications." He declined to amplify this statement, but others indicated that the boats would be used principally between Canada and England to ferry pilots and officials across the Atlantic.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP)—Claudius Dornier Jr., 25, son of the German airplane manufacturer, cannot extend further his visitor's permit in this country. The Department of Justice, announcing today its refusal to let Dornier stay longer, said that he had been in the United States since July 20, 1939.

ICELAND PROSPEROUS

Island Devotes Efforts to Help Feed England.

Baltimore, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—A business boom in Iceland—an island guarded now by 80,000 British and Canadian soldiers—was reported today by seaman aboard the Hekla, tiny steamship here with a cargo of fish meal and tales of war-inspired prosperity back home.

Not an able-bodied man among the estimated 130,000 native Icelanders is out of work, they said, and Reykjavik, the Hekla's home port of 30,000 persons, has taken on a metropolitan air with crowded streets and bustling traffic.

Much of the island's efforts are turned toward helping to feed England, the officers said.

Tons of fresh fish have been transported to west coast ports of England, they said, and other tons have been salted and are currently being delivered to the British.

Say Eleven Destroyers Are Still at Halifax

BOSTON, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The crew of the British freighter Dromore reported here today that eleven of the fifty American destroyers traded to England are still at Halifax, N. S., and St. Johns, N. F., for lack of trained crews to take them across the Atlantic.

The seamen said they saw seven of the four-stackers at Halifax and four at St. Johns. The others, they said, were on convoy duty in the Liverpool area.

The President's message was in reply to a greeting from the King. Its text follows:

"I greatly appreciate Your Majesty's cordial message. I extend to Your Majesty my most sincere wishes for your personal welfare and my hope that during the year to come the Italian people may be enabled to enjoy the blessings of a righteous peace."

The bulk of the relief either has been distributed or is en route to Great Britain and China. A ship is about to be loaded for Greece and further shipments for Finland will be sent at an early date.

$8,972,000 To Britain

The largest sum, $8,972,000, including commitments for January shipment, went to Great Britain.

Finland received $1,879,000; France, $1,838,000; Greece, $1,069,000; Poland, $996,000; China, $923,000; Canada, $70,000 for a Canadian hospital in England; Belgian refugees, $57,000; Norway, $45,000; the Netherlands, $25,000; Switzerland, $11,272, and the International Committee of the Red Cross and the League of Red Cross Societies in Geneva, $53,000.

$11,887,000 In Red Cross Funds

Of the $16,690,000 disbursed, $11,887,000 represented Red Cross funds and 1,944,387 sweaters, socks, layettes, and 16,861,505 surgical dressings, and $4,803,000 represented expenditures and commitments from a $50,000,000 Congressional appropriation for purchase of surplus foods for refugees.

When Germany invaded the Low Countries last May the American Red Cross campaigned for $20,000,000. A total of $21,789,000 was raised.

Greek Minister Visits President Roosevelt

Asserts He Stressed Deep Impression Recent Speech Made In Athens

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Cimon P. Diamontopoulas, the Greek Minister to the United States, called on President Roosevelt today and said afterward he had emphasized to the Chief Executive "the deep impression he produced in Athens by his speech Sunday night."

The Minister said he visited the White House because he had been unable a fortnight ago to present to Mr. Roosevelt in person a message from King George of Greece appealing for aid.

NEW YORK, DEC 31-(AP)-SENATOR BRIDGES (R-N.H.) TODAY URGED THAT THE UNITED STATES EXPEDITE SALE OF MERCHANT SHIPS TO GREAT BRITAIN.

IN A STATEMENT ISSUED BY THE COMMITTEE TO DEFEND AMERICA BY AIDING THE ALLIES, HE SAID THAT PRIVATE AND GOVERNMENT-OWNED AMERICAN FREIGHTERS NUMBERED 359 WITH A TOTAL GROSS TONNAGE OF 2,253,827.

"ACCORDING TO FIGURES COMPILED BY ALFRED HAAG, U.S. MARITIME COMMISSION STATISTICIAN," BRIDGES SAID, "THERE ARE NOW MORE THAN FOUR TIMES AS MANY BIG FREIGHTERS, FIT FOR TRANS-ATLANTIC SERVICE, AS THERE WERE IN 1914."

IN ADDITION, HE SAID, THERE WERE 143 FOREIGN FLAG CARGO VESSELS TIED UP IN AMERICAN PORTS AND THE COMMISSION'S SHIP CONSTRUCTIONS PROGRAM WOULD PUT 117 MORE SHIPS, OF MORE THAN 4,000 GROSS TONS EACH,

30,24 - 6715 30.24 — 6715

ON THE SEAS WITHIN 24 MONTHS.

FREIGHTERS OF THE TYPE WHICH BRITAIN NEEDS CAN BE BUILT IN FIVE MONTHS, HE DECLARED, ADDING THAT TRANSFER OR SALE OF 48 SERVICEABLE FREIGHTERS BUILT BY THE U.S. SHIPPING BOARD DURING THE WORLD WAR WOULD BE A "BOON" TO BRITISH DEFENSE.

LOS ANGELES, DEC.31-(AP)-IRISHMEN EVERYWHERE MUST STAND WITH ENGLAND FOR THE SAFETY OF CIVILIZATION, DUDLEY FIELD MALONE, NEW YORK LAWYER, TODAY CABLED EAMON DE VALERA, PRIME MINISTER OF EIRE.

MALONE, A CLOSE COLLEAGUE OF THE IRISH LEADER, ANSWERED DE VALERA'S APPEAL TO IRISH-AMERICANS TO HELP PROTECT IRELAND, BY POINTING OUT THAT "IF HITLER THINKS HE CAN INVADE ENGLAND MORE EASILY THROUGH IRELAND, HE WILL AS RUTHLESSLY INVADE IRELAND AS HE DID FRIENDLY NORWAY AND DENMARK."

"THERE WILL BE LITTLE IRISH FREEDOM LEFT, IF UNDER THE GUISE OF 'PROTECTIVE FRIENDSHIP' YOU HAVE ONE OF HITLER'S PRUSSIAN GOVERNORS STRUTTING DOWN THE STREETS OF DUBLIN WITH A SHILLELAGH IN HIS RIGHT HAND AND A SHAMROCK IN HIS LEFT LAPEL," MALONE TOLD DE VALERA.

"IRISHMEN EVERYWHERE, TRUE TO THEIR GALLANTRY AND HISTORY MUST TODAY STAND WITH THE SUBJECT PEOPLES OF FRANCE, HOLLAND, BELGIUM, POLAND, CZECHOSLOVAKIA, NORWAY, DENMARK, ALBANIA AND FOR THE GLORY THAT IS GREECE."

WASHINGTON,DEC.31-(AP)-JAPAN FACES INCREASINGLY SEVERE DIFFICULTIES IN PURCHASING VITALLY NEEDED RAW MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES ABROAD IN 1941, ACCORDING TO A SURVEY OF ITS FINANCIAL STATUS AFTER THE STRAIN OF 43 MONTHS WAR IN CHINA.

JAPANESE PURCHASING POWER IN THE UNITED STATES, THE SURVEY INDICATED TODAY, ALREADY HAS BEEN RESTRICTED TO ABOUT $200,000,000 ANNUALLY -- A SUM WHICH REPRESENTS MOST OF THE MONEY DERIVED FROM SALES OF JAPANESE GOODS HERE AND THEIR NEWLY MINED GOLD.

THE EXTENT OF FUTURE JAPANESE BUYING IN THE UNITED STATES WILL DEPEND, TRADE EXPERTS HERE BELIEVE, ON THE VOLUME OF JAPANESE-MADE GOODS SOLD TO THE AMERICAN MARKET AND ALSO ON THE EXTENT JAPAN IS ABLE TO INCREASE ITS GOLD PRODUCTION.

COMMERCE DEPARTMENT FIGURES FOR THE FIRST TEN MONTHS OF 1940 SHOW IMPORTS FROM JAPAN AMOUNTED TO $122,667,000, A SLIGHT DECREASE FROM THE $123,312,000 WORTH OF SILK AND OTHER PRODUCTS PURCHASED BY AMERICANS IN THE EQUIVALENT PERIOD IN 1939.

FROM TIME TO TIME PROPOSALS HAVE BEEN MADE THAT THE UNITED STATES EMBARGO THE IMPORT OF JAPANESE SILK--A MAJOR COMMODITY IN JAPANESE SALES HERE--AS A RETALIATORY MEASURE AGAINST JAPANESE ACTS CONSIDERED DETRIMENTAL TO AMERICAN INTERESTS IN THE FAR EAST. NO SUCH ACTION, HOWEVER, IS BELIEVED IMMINENT AT THE MOMENT.

DURING THE FIRST TEN MONTHS OF 1940 JAPAN PURCHASED AMERICAN GOODS VALUED AT $191,413,000, BUYING HEAVILY IN IRON AND STEEL, SCRAP METAL, AND OTHER VITALLY NEEDED SUPPLIES WHICH NOW REQUIRE EXPORT LICENSES BEFORE THEY CAN BE SHIPPED TO JAPAN.

WITH SALES TO THE UNITED STATES INSUFFICIENT TO MEET THIS BILL, JAPAN SHIPPED GOLD VALUED AT $86,291,000 TO THIS COUNTRY DURING THE FIRST TEN MONTHS OF THE YEAR, AND IS CONTINUING TO MAKE MONTHLY SHIPMENTS.

WHEN THE SINO-JAPANESE WAR STARTED IN JULY, 1937, THE BANK

OF JAPAN REPORTED ITS GOLD RESERVE AT $463,000,000. SINCE THAT TIME JAPAN HAS SHIPPED GOLD WORTH $675,000,000 HERE, BUT STILL CLAIMS A RESERVE OF $164,000,000.

JAPAN'S INVOLVED FINANCIAL POLICY AND THE SECRECY IMPOSED ON GOLD PRODUCTION FIGURES MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE, OFFICIALS HERE EXPLAINED, TO DO MORE THAN ESTIMATE JAPANESE GOLD RESERVES, WITH MANY UNKNOWN FACTORS PROVIDING WIDE MARGINS FOR ERROR.

JAPAN HAS NOT DISCLOSED ITS ANNUAL GOLD PRODUCTION SINCE 1937 WHEN IT WAS ESTIMATED AT $60,000,000 YEARLY.

PLANE ENGINES (AMS BUDGET-NEW)

BY HOWARD W.BLAKESLEE

ASSOCIATED PRESS SCIENCE EDITOR

PHILADELPHIA,DEC 31--THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE WAS TOLD TODAY THAT AMERICAN EXPERTS HAVE BEEN "BADLY MISLED" ABOUT THE SPEED OF EUROPEAN TYPE ENGINES THE UNITED STATES IS NOW PUTTING INTO QUANTITY PRODUCTION FOR FIGHTING PLANES.

DR. JEROME C.HUNSAKER, HEAD OF MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY'S AERONAUTICS DEPARTMENT, SAID AN AMERICAN-DESIGNED, AIR-COOLED ENGINE IS JUST AS FAST AND MUCH MORE POWERFUL.

THE EUROPEAN ENGINES ARE LIQUID-COOLED.

THE AMERICAN ENGINE, HE EXPLAINED, HAS 2,000 HORSEPOWER COMPARED WITH THE 1,200 PRODUCED BY THE ENGINES NOW USED IN GERMAN AND ENGLISH FIGHTING PLANES AND BEGINNING TO COME OFF AMERICAN PRODUCTION LINES.

THIS AMERICAN ENGINE, HE SAID, CAN MAKE OBSOLETE ALL PRESENT FIGHTER PLANES OF THE WORLD, INCLUDING OUR OWN. ALTHOUGH IN PRODUCTION IN SMALL NUMBERS, IT IS NOT GOING ON FIGHTING PLANES, BUT IS PLANNED FOR BOMBERS.

THE LIQUID-COOLED ENGINE MADE PLANES FASTER BECAUSE THEY COULD BE BETTER STREAMLINED, THAN WITH AMERICA'S AIR-COOLED TYPE. BUT THE LATTER, DR. HUNSAKER SAID, NOW CAN DRIVE PLANES EQUALLY FAST THROUGH A NEW DESIGN.

THE AMERICAN TYPE, MOREOVER, HAS 25 PER CENT LESS WEIGHT, COSTS HALF AS MUCH.

"THE DEMAND FOR ARMOR AND HEAVIER ARMAMENT," DR. HUNSAKER ADDED, "CAN SAFELY BE PREDICTED TO MAKE THE 1200 HORSEPOWER ENGINE INADEQUATE IN THE NEAR FUTURE ON ACCOUNT OF THE INCREASED WEIGHT INVOLVED."

AS TO HOW EXPERTS WERE "MISLED", HE EXPLAINED:

"SINCE EUROPEAN ENGINES ARE LIQUID-COOLED AND ARE USED IN [illegible]H SPEED PURSUIT MACHINES--LIKE THE BRITISH SPITFIRE AND HURRICANE AND GERMAN MESSERSCHMITT--THERE HAS BEEN WIDE ACCEPTANCE OF THE IDEA THAT THIS COUNTRY CANNOT BUILD HIGH SPEED FIGHTING AIRPLANES UNTIL IT HAS LIQUID-COOLED ENGINES OF THE EUROPEAN TYPE.

"FURTHERMORE, SINCE CERTAIN STRIPPED GERMAN PLANES BROKE THE WORLD'S SPEED RECORDS TWICE IN 1939--A HEINKEL IN MARCH AT 464 MILES PER HOUR AND A MESSERSCHMITT IN APRIL AT 481.4 MILES--THE MOMENTARY SPEEDS DEVELOPED HAVE BEEN ACCEPTED AS INHERENT IN THE LIQUID-COOLED ENGINE USED. THIS IS AN ENTIRELY FALSE INFERENCE.

"AT THE TIME THE GERMANS WERE CLAIMING THE WORLD'S SPEED RECORD, MOREOVER, AMERICAN PLANES EQUIPPED WITH AMERICAN AIR-COOLED ENGINES OF SIMILAR RATED POWER WERE MAKING A HIGH SPEED IN NORMAL FLIGHT OF ABOUT 330 MILES AN HOUR, WHILE BRITISH PLANES WITH LIQUID-COOLED ENGINES OF THE SAME POWER WERE CREDITED WITH 360 OR MORE MILES PER HOUR.

"THE CASE FOR THE LIQUID-COOLED ENGINE SEEMED TO BE VERY CONVINCING. YET IT WAS BASED ON A FALSE CONCEPTION OF THE AERODYRAMICS OF THE MATTER. THERE WAS ALSO AN ELEMENT OF PROPAGANDA IN IT." #

Frightfulness of Nazi Air Attacks Raises Speculation on Poison Gas

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The British Government's charge that the fierce Nazi attack on London yesterday with incendiary bombs was a deliberate attempt to destroy the city by fire gives an altogether terrifying preview of the hell which the war still holds in reserve.

It is increasingly clear that as this life and death conflict among empires becomes more and more critical, we may easily witness acts of desperation beside which the effort to burn the metropolis is mild.

One of the ghastly possibilities is the use of poison gas.

It is with considerable hesitation that I raise the subject of chemical warfare. The world has been praying that this horror might be averted and has avoided discussion of the subject.

There has been no report of the use of gas thus far in the present war. This probably has been because the mechanized war of motion has been too fast to permit of its employment, and from fear of reprisals.

World War Experience.

Many experts have been watching for the use of gas from the air against mobilization and manufacturing centers—and even against civilian populations to break morale.

The Germans introduced gas as a weapon in April of 1915. They used chlorine against the French on a four-mile front and, because of the surprise, paralyzed resistance to a depth of several miles. The Allies were quick to reply in kind. Gas accounted for 800,000 casualties in the world war. Most of these, however, were among the fighting forces. The world is still awaiting the use of this frightful weapon against civilians.

England is prepared for gas both defensively and for reprisals. Germany hasn't expressed any view publicly.

However, while civilians in belligerent countries are supposed to carry gas masks constantly, and there are gas detectors in public places, experts have small doubt that here would be great loss of life if gas were employed against big cities.

Nazis Have Advantage.

Were gas warfare to ensue between Germany and Britain, the likelihood is that the latter would get the worst of the exchange. Britain is small and her industrial population is concentrated. Also the Nazis are able to work from airdromes in occupied territory, but a short flight from their objectives. The British, on the other hand, have a vast area to cover and the flying distance to Germany is great.

Gas could be used effectively against airdromes and industries to immobilize them. Even if there were no loss of life, there might be a serious holdup of operations.

One is inclined to believe that gas will be employed only as a last resort. It may be used by a country which is on the verge of defeat and therefore desperate. Or it might be tried by a country which seemed about to achieve victory, and wanted to stupify the enemy so as to permit the delivery of the final blow.

(WX)-INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

BY KIRKE L.SIMPSON

THE SEVENTEENTH MONTH OF THE WAR IN EUROPE OPENS THIS NEW YEAR'S DAY WITH GRIM PORTENTS FROM BOTH LONDON AND BERLIN THAT IT WILL BE FOUGHT TO A FINISH; THAT 1941 WILL SEE THE CRISIS, THE BEGINNING OF THE END.

THE ARCH FOES WHO PERSONIFY THE BRITISH-AXIS STRUGGLE, PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL AND ADOLF HITLER, HAVE GIVEN VICTORY PLEDGES TO THEIR PEOPLE AND ANNOUNCED THAT THERE WILL BE NO PEACE WITHOUT VICTORY, WITHOUT UTTER DESTRUCTION OF ONE OR THE OTHER AND ALL HE STANDS FOR.

"'PEACE?'" SAID CHURCHILL, GLOWERING AT THE WRECKAGE LEFT BY GERMAN BOMBS IN THE CITY OF LONDON. "WHEN WE HAVE BEATEN THEM."

"NOW THIS WAR WILL BE CARRIED ON TO ITS ULTIMATE CONSEQUENCE —", HITLER THUNDERED IN A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE TO THE NAZI PARTY FAITHFUL. "THAT IS, UNTIL THE RESPONSIBLE CRIMINALS ARE ELIMINATED."

FOR WEEKS BRITISH LEADERSHIP HAS SEETHED WITH EFFORTS TO INDUCE AMERICAN WAR HELP ON A SCALE TO INSURE BRITISH VICTORY, PERHAPS IN 1941. ASSISTANCE HAS BEEN PROMISED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IN TERMS THAT REPUDIATED PEACE WITHOUT VICTORY - A BRITISH VICTORY.

THUS THE 1941 WAR STAGE HAS BEEN SET FOR THE ULTIMATE CLASH. HITLER HAS SAID THE NEXT TWELVEMONTH WILL SEE "COMPLETION OF THE GREATEST VICTORY IN OUR HISTORY," BUT HE DENIED AS "INFAMOUS" AND "STUPID LIES" THE CHARGES REITERATED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT THAT THE GERMAN-ITALIAN AXIS "INTENDS TO CONQUER THE WORLD." HE SAID THAT FOR EVERY BRITISH BOMB THAT FALLS "ON US TEN OR, IF NECESSARY, A HUNDRED WILL BE RETURNED."

"WE'LL GIVE THEM SOMETHING BACK," CHURCHILL TOLD RESIDENTS OF SMOULDERING LONDON CITY.

TO WHAT EXTENT HITLER'S NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE TO THE NAZI PARTY IS HIS REPLY TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S FIRE-SIDE CHAT IS NOT CLEAR. IT DOES SWEEP ASIDE DEFINITELY, HOWEVER, AS DOES CHURCHILL'S ATTITUDE AND THAT OF THE PRESIDENT, ANY POSSIBILITY OF PEACE TALKS UNTIL THE SUPREME MILITARY TEST HAS COME.

WHERE THAT WILL COME, WHETHER IN A NAZI ATTACK BY AIR, SEA AND LAND UPON ENGLAND OR IN THE EASTERN THEATER WHERE GERMANY IS REPORTED MOBILIZING A VAST NAZI-RUMANIAN ARMY, IS STILL KNOWN ONLY IN GERMANY. YET BY EVERY SIGN, IT WILL BE AGAINST ENGLAND THAT HITLER LOOSES THE "STRENGTHENED AND VASTLY BETTER ARMED" NAZI FORCES WHICH HE SAID WOULD BRING FINAL VICTORY IN 1941.

HOWEVER, THE "EVEN BETTER" GERMAN ARMY TO WHICH HITLER REFERRED FACES A MORE TERRIFIC TASK THAN DID THE LEGIONS WHICH SWIFTLY CRUSHED NORWAY, THE LOW COUNTRIES AND FRANCE. IT IS A WELL ARMED ENGLAND THAT NOW AWAITS ATTACK; AND EVERY MONTH OF 1941 WILL FIND AMERICAN AID-SHORT-OF-WAR GATHERING MOMENTUM.

IF THE GREAT NAZI ATTACK AT WHICH HITLER HINTS IS TO COME AT ALL, IT MUST COME SOON, ELSE BRITAIN MAY ACHIEVE AIR EQUALITY OR EVEN SUPERIORITY WITH AMERICAN HELP. DESPITE ALL ODDS, THE BRITISH AIR FORCE HAS RETAINED CONTROL OF THE DAYLIGHT AIR OVER ENGLAND FOR NEARLY SEVEN MONTHS. BRITISH AIR FIGHTERS INTERVENED EVEN AT NIGHT TO CHECK THE LAST SAVAGE NAZI BOMBING OF THE OLD CITY OF LONDON, A TARGET VIRTUALLY WITHOUT MILITARY SIGNIFICANCE UNLESS SHEER TERRORISM WAS THE PURPOSE.

HITLER ALSO IGNORED IN HIS ADDRESS TO THE NAZI PARTY, AS IN HIS NEW YEAR'S PEP ORDERS TO HIS ARMY, THE SERIOUS PLIGHT OF HIS AXIS MATE, ITALY, THIS NEW YEAR'S DAY. HE BRUSHED GREEK AND BRITISH VICTORIES IN THE EAST ASIDE AS "INCIDENTAL ACTIONS, FAR REMOVED FROM THE CENTRAL OPERATIONS OF THE WAR."

NAZI TROOP MOVEMENTS IN RUMANIA CONTRADICT THAT INTERPRETATION ON THEIR FACE. IF GERMAN FORCES ARE NOT BEING MASSED THERE TO AID ITALY, THEIR MISSION MUST BE DEFENSIVE. ITALIAN SETBACKS HAVE IMPERILLED GERMAN OIL AND OTHER RESOURCES IN THE BALKANS -- RESOURCES WHICH ALONE WOULD MAKE POSSIBLE AN ALL-OUT NAZI WAR ON ENGLAND.

THUS EVERY CIRCUMSTANCE URGES GERMANY TO STRIKE NOW AT ENGLAND, NOT TO WAIT. DELAY COULD BE FATAL TO NAZIDOM. HITLER'S THREATS CAN BE APPRAISED ONLY IN THAT LIGHT. HIS EXPRESSED CONFIDENCE COULD BE BORN OF DESPERATION.

The Changing Map: 1940's Conquests

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 31—To Adolf Hitler, self-proclaimed master of Europe's 'new order," went the lion's share of territory in the 1940 revision of the continent's perennially changing map.

The changes came in many ways—by out-and-out conquest, by peace-at-any-price submission, by the dictate of big powers to squabbling little ones, by sheer disintegration.

Germany:

By occupation of subjugated nations, Nazi rule spread over roughly 237,000 more square miles of Europe's surface—an area about equal to that of all New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana combined.

Most of this was telescoped into less than three months.

On April 9, Denmark, small and defenseless, submitted almost without a shot to German occupation. On June 22, France, beaten to her knees, signed an armistice which turned over about two-thirds of her homeland territory to German occupation.

Between those geographic markers, the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg disappeared under German occupation; the defenses of Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands were crushed and they, too, were occupied.

Germany also sampled British soil, taking the tiny Channel islands off the French coast.

Soviet Russia:

The U. S. S. R. was the second largest gainer, and only the strips of territory taken from Finland were at the said, it probably would be necessary to issue about $20,000,000,000 of such defense bonds.

the World War-born republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania melted into the Soviet Union after the red army had won the right to station troops there. Under ultimatum, Bessarabia and northern Bucovina were wrested from Rumania late in June.

Italy:

Only leavings so far have fallen to Italy in Europe: A strip of the Riviera from France. In Africa, however, her forces have driven the British from Somaliland, tacking roughly 68,000 square miles onto Italian East Africa.

Bulgaria And Hungary:

By the Axis-dictated Vienna settlement of August 30, more slices were carved out of Rumania: Southern Dobruja went to Bulgaria and northern Transylvania to Hungary.

Besides actual transfers of sovereignty, the changing map left France's empire split into three parts—Continental territory divided between Germany and the Vichy Government; and colonial possessions, particularly a wedge of Equatorial Africa stretching inland from the Atlantic coast to the border of Italian Libya, divided in loyalty between Vichy and the "free French" leadership of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

(ADVANCE FOR AMS OF WEDNESDAY, JAN.1)

(ADVANCE)..LONDON, DEC.31--(AP)--THE BRITISH MINISTRY OF INFORMATION IN A YEAREND REVIEW OF THE WAR AT SEA DECLARED TONIGHT THAT THE PRESSURE OF BRITISH SEAPOWER IS "SLOWLY SAPPING THE STRENGTH OF GERMANY."

IT DECLARED OF THE YEAR WHICH HAS COST BRITAIN AND HER ALLIES MORE THAN 3,000,000 TONS OF MERCHANT SHIPS THAT THERE WAS NO CAUSE FOR DESPONDENCY, "UNPALATABLE AS FACTS MAY BE."

IT CONTINUED, "APART FROM HELP FROM AMERICA, DESTROYERS AND ESCORT CRAFT ARE RAPIDLY BEING ADDED TO THE FLEET, WHILE THANKS TO NEW CONSTRUCTION AND TO NEUTRAL VESSELS NOW RUNNING IN ALLIED INTERESTS, OUR MERCANTILE TONNAGE IS NOT SO VERY MUCH LESS THAN IT WAS AT THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR. ... IN SPITE OF OUR HEAVY LOSSES THE GREAT BULK OF SHIPS IN OUR CONVOYS CONTINUE TO ARRIVE.

"THERE IS NO GREAT SHORTAGE OF FOOD IN THIS COUNTRY, NO CESSATION IN THE FLOW OF RAW MATERIALS, NO STOPPAGE OF THE MUNITIONS COMING ACROSS THE ATLANTIC FROM AMERICA."

THE LAST HALF OF 1940, THE REVIEW SAID, "SAW THE NAVY FACING A STUPENDOUS TASK, THE GREATEST THAT HAS EVER CONFRONTED IT IN THE WHOLE OF ITS LONG HISTORY."

IT SAID, "THE BRITISH FLEET IN THE MEDITERRANEAN HAS BEEN EMPLOYED IN A VIGOROUS OFFENSIVE WHICH HAS COMPLETELY CHANGED THE SITUATION IN EASTERN EUROPE IF NOT IN THE WHOLE WORLD. IT PROBABLY HAS ALTERED THE WHOLE BALANCE OF NAVAL POWER AND DIRECTLY AFFECTED THE EVENTUAL OUTCOME OF THE WAR."

DECLARING THAT THE "UNREMITTING ACTIVITY" OF THE MEDITERRANEAN

FLEET HAS "LARGELY PARALYZED" ITALIAN SEAPOWER, THE REVIEW DECLARED THE BRITISH NOW HAD "THE FULL MEASURE" OF THE ITALIANS.

ITALY, IT SAID, HAS BEEN "TIMID AND FEARFUL" IN THE USE OF HER FLEET AND THE MEDITERRANEAN WAS "ANYTHING BUT ITALIAN."

CONTINUING, THE REVIEW SAID, "IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO CALCULATE THE EFFECT OF BRITISH SEAPOWER UPON THE PROGRESS OF THE GREEK CAMPAIGN IN ALBANIA OR THE RECENT VICTORIES OF THE BRITISH ARMY ADVANCING INTO LIBYA.

"BUT FOR THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, WHICH HAS DETACHMENTS IN BOTH THE EASTERN AND WESTERN BASINS, THE ITALIAN FLEET WOULD HAVE HAD COMPLETE CONTROL OF THE MEDITERRANEAN . . . THE FRENCH NAVAL BASES IN NORTH AFRICA MIGHT HAVE FALLEN INTO ITALIAN HANDS ... ITALY COULD HAVE OCCUPIED THE IONIAN ISLANDS, CRETE, THE GULF OF CORINTH, PATRAS, ATHENS AND SALONIKA THROUGH DIPLOMATIC PRESSURE. . .

"ITALY COULD HAVE SENT STRONG EXPEDITIONARY FORCES TO SYRIA AND HAVE ISOLATED TURKEY. ... EVERY NATION IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE WOULD HAVE BEEN AT THE MERCY OF THE COMBINED STRENGTH OF THE AXIS."

NOW, SAID THE REVIEW, ITALY IS CUT OFF FROM THE OUTSIDE WORLD, LIBYA IS MORE A RESPONSIBILITY THAN AN ASSET, THE DODECANESE ISLANDS ARE "VULNERABLE," AND ISOLATED ITALIAN POSSESSIONS IN EAST AFRICA WOULD EVENTUALLY BE "OURS FOR THE ASKING" AND WOULD BE DELIVERED OVER TO THEIR RIGHTFUL OCCUPANTS.

STATING THAT 50 DESTROYERS CAME TO BRITAIN FROM THE UNITED STATES AT AN OPPORTUNE TIME, THE REVIEW COMMENTED THAT BRITAIN STILL WAS "VERY SHORT" OF DESTROYERS AND ESCORT SHIPS FOR WORK THAT HAS TO BE DONE "EVERYWHERE."

EVEN WITH THE COOPERATION OF THE FRENCH, IT ASSERTED, THE ALLIES HAD INSUFFICIENT DESTROYERS AND ESCORT CRAFT FOR THEIR "MANIFOLD NEEDS."

SEAPOWER WAS THE HUB UPON WHICH THE WHOLE OF THE ALLIED CAUSE REVOLVED DURING THE YEAR, THE MINISTRY SAID, AND ADDED THAT IF BRITISH COMMUNICATIONS WERE CUT BRITAIN COULD NOT CARRY ON THE WAR FOR MORE THAN A FEW WEEKS.

Bardia Area Raided—Ground Patrols Go 75 Miles Inside Libya, Near Tobruk

By The Associated Press.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 1—In a series of raids over a vast area extending from lower Italy to Libya and to the southern gate of the Red Sea, British pilots have bombed half a dozen points vital to the Fascist war machine, the Royal Air Force announced today.

This aerial offensive, one of the biggest in scope yet carried out in the Mediterranean theatre of war, got under way Monday night and went on into yesterday morning and throughout the day, the British said. They added that all during yesterday "no contact with the enemy was made."

At Taranto, the Italian naval base where the British claimed to have crippled three of Italy's six battleships as well as four other warships on Armistice Day, eleven bombs were seen to burst around the units of the Italian fleet anchored there, the British reported.

Palermo harbor, in Sicily, also was attacked, as were Naples and the suburb of Torre Annunziata. Bombs were dropped on a chemical factory at Crotone, in Southern Italy, according to the British.

Fascist troops and motor truck concentrations in Libya were "heavily attacked," the R. A. F. communiqué stated. Fires were set in a Fascist military camp near Gubbi, Eritrea, and stores and warehouses were bombed at Assab, Eritrea, the British said. "Numerous fires" were left at Danghela, Ethiopia.

British land forces continued today to shell the besieged Italian base of Bardia, Libya, and general headquarters reported that there had been patrolling and artillery activity on the frontiers of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Kenya Colony.

From headquarters at the siege lines before Bardia the British announced that their patrols were operating regularly more than seventy miles inside Libya and said that one British armored-car unit had spent all Christmas Day in an abandoned Italian airdrome south of the port of Tobruk. Full control was claimed over parts of the coast between Bardia and Tobruk.

In air raids in the Bardia area yesterday, the British reported, Italian troops and motor transports concentrating military stores in the port and to the west were heavily blasted.

DAWN LONDON RAID FOLLOWS NIGHT ATTACKS

"Fire Planes" Strike In East England After Bombless New Year

Nazis Drop Explosives On Liverpool, Other Merseyside Cities

London, Thursday, Jan. 2—German warplanes renewed their attack upon London about dawn today after a night marked by scattered bombings in London, East England, Liverpool and other Merseyside cities.

The air-raid sirens sounded in the London area about 5 A. M., some three hours after the second all clear of the night had been given. It was the third warning signal of the new year in London.

Nazi "fire planes" dropped incendiary bombs in several East England sectors last night after a bombless British New Year.

Two Earlier London Alarms

London had its first two alarms of 1941 during the night hours, the first, a short one, breaking a calm undisturbed since the city's bath of fire Sunday night. During the second alert, which followed quickly after the first "all-clear" signal, gunfire rumbled in one London area.

No damage was reported immediately from the fire bombs in the eastern England localities, and they were dealt with promptly by the fire-fighting services.

Two high-explosive bombs dropped in one London district, causing damage and some casualties.

After a long period of quiet the second clear signal sounded about 2 A. M.

Raiders Over Liverpool Area

Raiders cruised over Liverpool and other Merseyside cities for several hours, dropping some bombs.

No anti-aircraft gunfire was heard, but night fighting planes were believed to have operated against the Germans.

It was the first night raid in that area since December 27.

Dover Strait—over which many German raiders must fly—was lashed by a bitterly cold northeast wind. A
